Irving W. Larimore, physical director of Y. M. C. A., Des Moines, Iowa, says he can conscientiously recommend Chamberlain's Pain Balm to athletes, gymnasts, bicyclists, football players and the profession in general for bruises, sprains and dislocations; also for soreness and stiffness of the muscles. When applied before the parts become swollen it will effect a cure in one half the time usually required. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

BEST RACES OF THE SEASON.

BICYCLE EVENTS BY CALCIUM LIGHT PROVE A GREAT SUCCESS.

Starbuck Smashes the Track Competitive Record—No Loafing Allowed—Benner Brothers Make a Great Hit—Summary.

A clear sky, a luminous moon and delightful weather should have filled the grand stand at the Crescent oval on Tuesday to overflowing with those who came to see the night races given under the management of O. S. Bunnell, but they did not. Those who did not come missed the best racing that has been given on the oval since it was built. The time was remarkably fast, the finishes, except in one case, were very close, and the races followed each other in very rapid succession, a great contrast to the ordinary meet. The handicaps were so arranged that the men were just bunched at the tape, adding greatly to the interest.

The hero of the night was Starbuck, who, in the one-mile open, smashed the one-mile track competitive record of 2:17 made by Charles Brown from scratch in a handicap race. Starbuck's time was 2:15 3-5. He also won the five-mile handicap by very hard riding, most of the time having to ride alone. The riders were well bunched in the last lap and Starbuck spurted the entire lap to keep from being pocketed. His riding was certainly superb. In fact, all the professionals rode as if their life depended on it, and there was an entire absence of that bane of amateur racing, loafing. The Class A men seemed to catch the spirit and kept up a hot pace. Mr. Bunnell had much to do with it, however, as he placed a time limit on each race, and if the racers did not ride under it they had to try again.

In the final of the 2.40 class A mile race, no one would pace at first and the men loafed for half a lap, then they got down to business. McCutchen won by the prettiest kind of a spurt with his opponents right at his rear wheel. The time was 2.46 and Bunnell said no race. They tried again and still no one would pace. When the time for the final spurt came McCutchen dropped out as he saw the time limit had been exceeded. Again the referee announced no race and said that the riders would try again this evening, when it is expected there will be no loafing.

T. A. Cuming had a cinch in his heat of the one mile handicap class A and won, setting up by a sixty yards. There was a close fight for second and third, however. At the last moment McCutchen agreed to ride from scratch in the second heat of the same race and qualified. The final heat will be ridden this evening and from the racing in the heats, an exciting contest is promised.

The special attraction of the Benner Brothers was greatly appreciated by all those present and the tiny riders in their little red and white racing suits reminded one strongly of Palmer Cox's Brownies.

The six-year-old lad gave his four-year-old brother 100 yards start in a one-third of a mile race. The little boys rode like veterans, and when they neared the finish line with the larger brother a little in the rear the crowd went wild. Some of the older portion of the audience who are not usually very mirthful, laughed until the tears ran down their cheeks to see the little lads put down their heads and spurt like old-timers.

The fifty bright gasoline lamps, aided by the moon, made the track almost as light as day, and the spectators had no trouble in watching the racing all through its length.

The announcing was very good, every item of interest to the audience being announced without delay. All the officials were, in fact, very satisfactory, and not an unfair decision or unsatisfactory ruling was made during the evening. The meet was, as far as management and racing could make it, a grand success, and if there is not a large attendance this evening it will not be the fault of the promoters.

The Wail of One Far Gone.

Of course, the sewer will be nice,
When it is in its little bed,
But ten to one before 'tis there
You and I will both be dead.
There may have been an awful row,
Before the pyramids were made,
But I will back our sewer men
To put the pharaohs in the shade.
The trolley folk were slow enough,
With all the months they used to take,
But when it comes to artistic languor, procrastination, sluggishness, torpidity, somnolence, ecstancy, lethargy, inertia, lotus-eating, dawdling, drawling, lagging, loafing, lolling, lounging and dead-to-the-world-ness,
The sewer people take the cake!

—The Human Being.

An Unhealthy Place.

The people of North Plainfield are still complaining of the terrible condition of Green brook. The odor arising from it is very bad and the foul air formed is very unhealthy. Last year the brook was flushed and the same remedy would be of great benefit this year.

A Rarity.

The piazza of Wm. VanDeventer's house on East Fifth street was the centre of attraction Sunday evening, when a night-blooming cereus was in full bloom. Another one will open in a few days.

A Big Delegation Wanted.

The local union of the Christian Endeavor is desirous of taking 100 delegates to the State Convention in October to be held at Atlantic City.

While in Chicago, Mr. Charles L. Kahler, a prominent shoe merchant of Des Moines, Iowa, had quite a serious time of it. He took such a severe cold that he could hardly talk or navigate, but the prompt use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cured him of his cold so quickly that others at the hotel who had bad colds followed his example and half a dozen persons ordered it from the nearest drug store. They were profuse in their thanks to Mr. Kahler for telling them how to cure a bad cold so quickly. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

PLAINFIELDERS ABROAD.

Some Are in Bonny Scotland, While Others Are Preparing to Sail.

Mrs. and Miss Clapp, of Mercer avenue, who went abroad in July with one of Cook's parties, traveled with them through Ireland and Scotland, and since the return of that party to this country, have journeyed in England, visiting old Cathedral towns like Winchester and Salisbury. They will return at the end of October.

Miss Kate Biglow, daughter of F. H. Biglow of Central avenue, who sailed in June, has been sojourning at Naples, Genoa, Rome and Florence, has glided through the streets of Venice, climbed Vesuvius, visited Nuremburg and Heidelburg, taken the trip of the Rhine as far as Cologne, getting glimpses of Belgium and Holland, and after a visit to Paris, is planning to sail for America September 6th.

TWO OF THEM CAUGHT.

Borough Scrappers Leave $22 for the Labor Day Melee.

Constable Taynor, of the borough, succeeded in capturing James Burke and Michael Motley, the men who were engaged in a fight Monday afternoon on Somerset street, as exclusively reported in The Daily Press.

Burke was found in Anderson's restaurant on Somerset street last night and Motley was caught at his place of employment at the Climax bottle stopper factory this morning.

They were both given a hearing by Justice Crosley, this morning. Burke was fined $15 and Motley $7. The fines were paid and the men released.

Ed. Thompson, the third party in the fight is still at large, but there is good prospect of a speedy capture.

AUTUMN WORK BEGUN.

Justice Newcorn's Court the Scene of Several Cases.

Justice Newcorn's court was quite lively this morning. Two cases of French vs. Bindenburger and others, on contract, came up. Judgment was rendered for the plaintiff and execution issued in both cases. In the suit of Schummel vs. Verete, on contract, a suit for wages, judgment was rendered for the plaintiff. Judgment was also rendered for the plaintiff in the case of Miller vs. Verete, on contract.

Summons was issued in the case of Steinhart Brothers & Company vs. Wallace V. Miller, on contract, returnable on the 9th.

Asleep in a Wagon.

Wm. Hadley, a former resident of Plainfield, but late of Brooklyn, was found by Marshal Doud last night asleep in a wagon on Vine street. The man evidently had been drinking and was a little troublesome. He was locked up and this morning Justice Crosley suspended sentence. Hadley is suffering from a broken arm caused by falling from a ladder recently and was on his way to see his sister in Easton, Pa., when he got in trouble here. He started for his destination when released.

A Social on the Lawn.

Friendship Degree, Lodge of Rebecca, gave a festival on the lawn of C. H. Rugg, East Second street, last evening. Chinese lanterns were tastefully arranged about the grounds, while the lemonade well in the centre was prettily decorated with bunting, flags and greens. A charming evening was enjoyed by all present.

Dr. Carroll's Talent Recognized.

It is rumored on good authority that Dr. Carroll, of North Plainfield, has just signed a three years contract to furnish and compile the religious department of a new encyclopedia, for which plans for publication are now being arranged.

Struck by Lightning.

The house occupied by E. Messerschmidt on Jackson avenue was struck by lightning last Saturday afternoon, and a small piece of wood was torn from the peak of the dwelling. There was no other damage.

WHEN STUDIES WILL RESUME

HIGH SCHOOL REPAIRS DELAY THE OPENING A WEEK.

Date Set for September 16th—Janitors Appointed for the Ensuing Year—Talk of Teaching Stenography—Other Business.

Owing to the work of repairs at the High School building the regular monthly meeting of the Board of Education was held Tuesday at the home of the clerk, Frank B. Clark, on Central avenue. After the usual budget of monthly bills were presented and ordered paid, Tax Collector John Johnson reported that $233.38 school money had been collected for the month of August and deposited to the credit of the Board in the bank.

County Superintendent B. Holmes in a letter stated that proportionate share for Plainfield of State school money for 1895-96 was $1,882.39, which is over $41 more than last year. Both reports were received and filed.

A letter from C. B. Harris accepting the position of janitor of the Washington School at $40 a month on trial was received and filed.

Mr. Lounsbury read a letter from the Board of Health which asked the Board whether they were going to place fire-escapes on the school buildings.

Mr. Lounsbury answered the letter by stating that he did not know what they had to do with it.

The matter of papering the assembly room and the Stillman building was referred to the building committee with power.

Mr. Lounsbury brought up the subject of placing corrugated rubber matting on the steps and landings in the Stillman building, on trial, at a cost of about $40, and if satisfactory to do the same with the other buildings. The work was ordered done.

Mr. Lounsbury stated that there was yet considerable work to be done on the High School building, and that it would not be ready for the opening on September 9th. The time of opening the High School was, in consequence, postponed till Monday, September 16th.

A communication was received from G. B. Serrell, of Plainfield avenue, asking that his son, Fred, who has been attending the Washington school, be allowed this year to attend the Franklin school. The reason given was that he desired to have his son and daughter attend the same school for company. The matter was referred with power to Superintendent Maxson.

The Board then went into executive session and reappointed the janitors of the schools as follows:

J. Clarkson and assistant, Stillman and Franklin buildings, $75 and $35 per month respectively; S. Hope, Bryant school, $70 per month; H. Pugh, Irving, $65 per month; J. M. Scull, Wadsworth, $12 per month. The latter was formerly paid $10 and the Board increased the salary to $12.

John Whiting, a former student and graduate of the High School, was present at the meeting and presented to the Board the advisability of introducing stenography in the schools. He stated that it would strengthen the memory and be useful in a business way to the students, and that he would give lessons for the sum of $1 each, with twelve to fifteen sessions a week. The matter was laid over for further consideration. The Board then adjourned subject to the call of the president.

A Big Time.

The Red Men are preparing for one of their grand jollifications tonight when a reception is to be given to the Poambo Tribe, No. 65, of Perth Amboy, by the Paugh-Caugh-Naugh-Sinque Tribe, No. 193, in their hall in the Elkwood building. All Red Men are cordially invited to be present.

"Plainfield, '96."

Miss Emily Coriell, of Church street, has composed a hymn entitled "Plainfield, '96" which will be sung at the State convention at Atlantic City.

John G. Mauger Editor of the Sunbeam, Seligman, Mo., who named Grover Cleveland for the Presidency in November 1882, while he was Mayor of Buffalo, N. Y., is enthusiastic in his praise of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. He says: "I have used it for the past five years and consider it the best preparation of the kind in the market. It is as staple as sugar and coffee in this section. It is an article of merit and should be used in every household. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

HOW OGLESBY FREED THE SLAVE.

An Incident That Reads Like a Chapter of "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

Somebody once asked Oglesby how it happened that he, though a Kentuckian, had grown up an abolitionist, says a Chicago correspondent of the Boston Advertiser.

"One of the principal causes," he answered, "was a negro whom we called Uncle Tim. He was a slave who had descended from my grandfather to my father and was the only one in my family. My father died when I was a small boy and we became embarrassed, and in order to divide up what little there was left Uncle Tim had to be sold. I well remember him as he stood up on a box ready for the sale. He was a powerful man, far above the average height, with a manly bearing, a fine face and a skin as black as ebony. He had always been very fond of us children, and I thought almost as much of him as if he had been my own father. As he stood waiting he implored, with tears streaming from his eyes, a brother of my father to buy him. That was impossible, and observing his dejection and surmising its cause, I said:

"'Uncle Tim, I am going to work to earn money, and when I get enough I will buy you and set you free.'

"His face lighted up with pride and pleasure as I said this, but it was immediately followed by a look of despair. He came down, lifted me up in his arms and said sadly: 'Thanks, Marse Dick; you are a poor orphan and won't never be rich enough to buy Uncle Tim.' He was sold, and, being past his prime, only brought some $400.

"I moved to Illinois in time; I struggled; I went back to Kentucky and grew no richer. I used to see Uncle Tim occasionally, and I always assured him that some day I would buy him. He always seemed to listen to me gratefully, but apparently had no hope of success. In 1849 I went to California, and after much effort I made a few thousand dollars and then returned to fulfill my promise. I sent the money to my brother, and Uncle Tim was purchased and freed.

"I was standing in front of the porch of my brother's house some days later, when Uncle Tim came out of a piece of woods a little distance away and approached along the pathway. It was a striking picture, such as I never before witnessed. He was a giant in stature; his abundant gray hair was thrown back on his shoulders, his face was ashen, reminding one of the statue of Moses by Michael Angelo. His countenance was aglow, and shown as if lighted by the very presence of the Holy Ghost. When he caught sight of me he stopped, threw back his head, raised his arms far above him and exclaimed:

"'My God! My God! Has the little orphan boy lived to buy and set me free?'

"Then he put his arms about me and tried to lift me as in the old days, but he had grown too weak and I had grown too large.

"'You can't lift me any more, Uncle Tim,' I said.

"'No,' he answered, in a sad tone, and then, with an exulting air, he shouted, as he turned his face toward the sky:

"'Hallelujah! Hallelujah! I'se free!'"

The Day of Electricity.

The recent combination between the Westinghouse Electric Company and the Baldwin Locomotive Works, the largest in the world, affords a practical demonstration of the fact that the use of electricity as a motor in transportation is to be greatly increased and extended.

It means that in the judgment of the men best informed as to the subject the time has come when their business interests require that in the manufacture of engines they must make ready their construction with reference to the employment of steam only. They foresee a revolution in railway locomotion as a consequence of the successful experiments with electric locomotives, and they are combining their resources to be prepared to meet the new and great demand it will create.

Thus the problem of the use of electricity for such a purpose may now be regarded as solved, after many years of experiment and investigation. The solution has opened up a new field for mechanical activity which the largest interests engaged in locomotive construction have speedily undertaken to cultivate.

The managers of both the companies combined for that end declare that so far they have no expectation that steam will be supplanted by electricity on the great railway lines, but they recognize that the extensive use of electricity as an aid and supplement to steam has become inevitable; and they have united to assist in its forthcoming development by the more economical and improved manufacture of electrical locomotives.

Gen. Lew Wallace Believes in Bloomers.

"If the use of wheels were confined to the men," says Gen. Lew Wallace, "the fad might spend itself in a season. But when the women take hold of the bicycle its future is secure."

Ladies who ride will be interested to to know that Gen. Wallace is an enthusiastic advocate of the fair cycler, and that he approves of bloomers, "about which there is nothing immodest, it being merely their present oddity of appearance that now excites comment. Why, in the Tyrol the women wear skirts coming just below the knee, and no one, not even an entire stranger, looks askance."—Boston Journal.

Triumph.

For five days he had been on the trail and had neither eaten nor slept.

He had done nothing but drink.

Under the circumstances his joyous assertion that he had 'em bore the similitude of verity.—Detroit Tribune.

NUTRITIVE VALUE OF FOODS.

The United States Department of Agriculture has undertaken the task of teaching the people of this country the nutritive value of foods, with a view to encouraging wisdom and economy in the purchase of materials for the table. Prof. Atwater of Wesleyan University, acting for the department, has made experiments to prove the value of different foods. He has proved by practical as well as theoretical experiment that what is regarded by many as false economy in the purchase of food is in truth real economy, and that apparent economy is often of no real value, if, indeed, it is not a positive source of loss.

"The best is the cheapest" does not apply to food, if by the best is meant that which commands the highest price in the market. A case in point is that of the workingman who spends $156 a year for meat alone, because he would have none but the choicest cuts, while the clothing for his family of five costs only $108 a year, and the rent of the tenement in which they live only $6 a month. The costly meat which he considered so essential to health and strength really contained less nutriment than food which would have cost a great deal less. So the economy of his life was a mistake.

Not only is there injudicious selection of food, but there is waste in the handling of the food selected. The saying that what an American family wastes would keep a French family alive is not literally true; but in one boarding house in Middletown, Conn., Prof. Atwater proved that the waste was nine per cent. of the nutritive value of the food handled, and the mistress of the house was considered a very good housekeeper. This was kitchen waste, but another source of waste was demonstrated at the butcher's. It was found that where the "trimmings" were removed by the butcher in one instance half a pound of tendon, which would have made an excellent soup, and 1 3-4 pounds of meat were cut away with the bone from a sixteen-pound cut of roast beef. The price of the beef was $2.24, and the amount trimmed off by the butcher was worth 28 cents. So more than 10 per cent. of the purchase was wasted at the butcher shop.

As a guide to those who wish to know the nutritive value of various food products Prof. Atwater has prepared elaborate tables on the subject, which will probably reach the eyes of very few and receive intelligent consideration from but a small proportion of these. One or two statements which he makes in connection with these tables, however, are easily comprehended and easily adopted as a guide in the purchase of food. A quart of milk, three-quarters of a pound of moderately fat beef, and five ounces of wheat flour, he says, contain about the same amount of nutritive material; but this material has different values as nutriment. Milk comes nearest to being a perfect food. It contains all the nutritive materials which the body needs. Bread made from wheat flour will support life, but its ingredients are not mingled in a way that best adapts it for ordinary use. A man might live on beef alone, but the ideal nutriment for man is found in a combination diet of beef and bread. Experience seems to have taught this to the world long before science undertook to demonstrate it.

The chief flesh formers are the protein compounds in food. In meat, the removal of the fat (not alone that which is apparent, but that which mingles imperfectly with the lean) and of the small amount of mineral substance leaves only protein compounds. The albumen of eggs, the casein of milk and cheese, the gluten of wheat, the myosin of lean meat, and other albuminoids form the muscle, tendon and cartilage in the human body.

These albuminoids also furnish fuel. But the fats of food supply most of the fuel which keeps the body active, and they store away with the flesh superfluous fat, which serves as a reserve of fuel in the most concentrated form. The starch of bread and potatoes and sugar are burned in the body to furnish fuel to it.

In fuel value a pound of fat is worth more than double as much as a pound of protein or a pound of carbohydrates. Vegetable foods are rich in carbohydrates, while meats have none worth mentioning. Meats abound in protein and fats, of which vegetable foods usually have but little. Beans and oatmeal, however, have a great deal of protein, while fat pork has very little. Wheat is richer in protein than any other of the cereals.

After examining the dietaries of a great many classes of people, Prof. Atwater has come to the conclusion that the diet of the American people is one-sided and that we eat too much. He quotes an eminent English authority, who says the habit of overeating among the well-to-do in that country is responsible for more ill-health and, indirectly, for more vice than can be traced to alcohol. The food which Americans eat contains relatively too little protein and too much fat, starch and sugar. This is due partly to our heavy consumption of sugar, and to our use of large quantities of fat meats. Well-to-do professional men in Germany consume 3 to 4 1-2 ounces of fat a day, while Americans in similar conditions consume 5 to 7 1-2 ounces. The rejection of so much of the fat of the meat both at market and on our tables, Prof. Atwater says, is not willfulness, but an obedience to nature's protest.

Some Advantage.

"They tell me your wife is a new woman," said the lean man with the yellow vest. "Of course, I suppose it is a rather tender subject——"

"Oh, I ain't worrying," said the fat man. "She's all right. She licked the hired girl yesterday for burning the steak."—Indianapolis Journal.

SMITHS, SMITHS, SMITHS.

YOUNG AND OLD, SHORT AND TALL, WERE ALL THERE.

Peapack, N. J., August 28th, 1895.—Going to the Smith picnic? This is the great question that has been asked for the past week by everybody in this locality of everybody else. With old and young, men and women, boys and girls, the first question in greeting has been "Going to the Smith picnic?"

Early in the morning the village took on a holiday appearance. The horses and wagons were bedecked with flags and bunting. Stages, carriages, and all sorts of conveyances were pressed into the service of the Smiths and their friends in order to reach the historic apple orchard on the farm of the original Peter Z. Smith (who came from Holland in 1686) where the twentieth annual reunion of the family was held today.

The people began to gather at the grove at ten o'clock and before evening probably 5,000 persons had attended the reunion. The scene at the grove was very bright and animating. A banner was hung in the grove bearing the likenesses of the original Peter Z. Smith and his wife and the picture of an old Dutch ship labeled "Arrived 1686." Above these were the words "Welcome to the Smith Family and Friends Reunion" and underneath "In Memory of Our Ancesters—Organized 1876." The speakers and bandstands and trees were gaily decorated with flags and bunting. There was a book in which all the Smiths register at each reunion.

The Bartley brass band furnished music for the occasion, and a little after two o'clock the formal exercises began, by singing and a prayer by Rev. N. Bowers. Rev. C. R. Kaubler, of Hackensack, delivered the principal address. It was intensely patriotic, eulogizing the Nation, and exhorting his hearers to maintain the integrity of home and extend the influence of the church which would best foster and sustain the national character. The Smiths certainly ought to be better citizens after listening to the splendid address. Short addresses followed by Rev. N. Bowers, Rev. Isaac Thomas, of Bernardsville, and Howard C. Hasbrouck, of Peapack.

At the close of the exercises, Mr. Abraham Smith, who presided, assured the great family and its numerous friends that notwithstanding a part of the original Smith farm had been sold to a syndicate of capitalists there yet remained 100 acres on which the great picnic would continue to be held. This was received with applause by the assembled Smiths.

While the speaking was in progress a bench gave way, and Mrs. P. C. Henry, of Basking Ridge, met with a serious accident, fracturing her right leg. Drs. Farrow, of Peapack, and Sutphen, of Liberty Corner, gave her surgical attendance, and she was removed to the house of J. D. Smith.

The crowd formed in groups and talked politics.

The band played airs in a sort of go-as-you-please fashion, and the younger element gloried in baseball and watermelons.

It certainly is astonishing what a universal holiday the Smith picnic day has become in these parts. The stores in the village closed, the farmers ceased work and nearly all gathered at the grounds. One of the chief attractions of the picnic undoubtedly is the opportunity it affords for the meeting of friends from far and near, and this reason alone will doubtless maintain its great popularity with the country folk. Some people drove great distances to attend it, and among those present from Plainfield were noticed H. O. Hance and wife, Miss Emma F. Gillem, Mrs. E. S. Robinson, J. A. Robinson, Geo. DeMeza and Miss Berg.

ABOUT BRISTOW ALDRIDGE.

A Sketch of the Man Who Will Furnish Amusement for Plainfield.

Bristow Aldridge, the resident manager, made his "debut" as an Elizabethian, and was repeatedly congratulated concerning the good-sized audience, and the pretty appearance of the theatre, as well as the smooth manner in which the working force of the theatre co-operated with the managers. Mr. Aldridge is of southern birth, and enjoys all the chivalric propensities of the southern born. He has been an actor and manager for twelve years, making his debut at New Brunswick, New Jersey, with John E. Owens, of Esmeralda fame. When he began the battle of life it was as a salesman. Later he studied law, and then studied for the stage, making many conquests in character acting. So great was his desire to attain greater brilliancy in the parts he assumed before the footlights that he refused an appointment at West Point. Mr. Aldridge's friendship could be sought and attained as valuable, if the means secured were honorable and sincere. Mr. Aldridge is studious, and a strict tactician in business, not to the injury of anyone, but for the sake of discipline. His wife is a lady of much culture and theatrical attainments. Mr. Aldridge in his law studies was with the partner of the late Governor A. H. Garland, of Arkansas, while his father was a lawyer in Memphis, Tenn.

WHERE REPUBLICANS STAND.

POLITICAL GOSSIP ABOUT UNION COUNTY STATESMEN.

Foster Voorhees Says He Is in the Race to Stay, But Says It is a Friendly Contest—The Plainfield End.

The fact that Union county has two candidates for Governor has the effect of fixing public gaze on it, and gives the political gossips more or less food for small talk. Reports have been flying fast and thick during the past few days. The drift of the current stories is that Voorhees has given up the fight; that Kean's chance has been reduced to a minimum; that Griggs has captured the county and that the nomination has been generally conceded to the last named.

Voorhees is still in the fight, sharply contesting every inch of ground. John Kean declares he will have the delegates, or at least a majority of them, and there is not a Griggs delegate in the county that is known.

The go-as-you-please pace at which the campaign has been run so far, has led to the statements that Voorhees has dropped out and has lost heart, but he is in it as much as he ever was and he declares that he will be in it until the convention names the candidate.

Union county is full of Quaker politicians. There is no working organization on either side. There are county committees, of course, but it is generally conceded that they are like organizations of dead bones, that rattle only when somebody shakes the earth under them.

In Elizabeth and Rahway, more than in Plainfield, the present contest between Voorhees and Kean interests the citizens. It will be in these localities that the real fight will be made at the primaries, but out in the townships the question arises whether the county voters are enough interested and will turn out.

There is a difference of opinion as to the relative strength of the two favorite candidates. The near friends of Voorhees say it is still a neck and neck fight and that the finish will be made in Elizabeth. Others think that Kean has gained on him somewhat during the recent weeks, but Voorhees himself, depending of course, on advices, thinks he has gained strength.

Sheriff George Kyte and Thomas Belknap, who was the bill clerk of the House of Assembly last year, are looking after John Kean's fences, while Mayor Gilbert, of Plainfield; Mayor Rankin, of Elizabeth, and Mayor Daly, of Rahway, are looking after Senator Voorhees' interest. A few weeks ago it was possible to poll the townships, but now there is a contest in every one, and this makes the final result somewhat doubtful.

There is no foundation for the talk that Mayor Rankin and Congressman Fowler would turn the delegation over to some outside candidate before they would allow it to go to John Kean. Such a course would not be tolerated even if it were part of their plan. The delegation must support a Union county man. It is admitted that there is no compact, but that the friends of both candidates, urge such a course and neither Kean nor Voorhees have discouraged it.

Assemblyman Codding is quoted as being a Voorhees lieutenant. He has not declared himself, and talks from a disinterested standpoint.

Senator Voorhees was in excellent humor when The Daily Advertiser correspondent called on him. He answered the first question with an inflection so marked that it indicated that he meant what he said.

"I have not withdrawn," said the Senator, "notwithstanding the statements of half a dozen newspapers to that effect. It would not be justice to the many friends that I have in the State who are working for me. I shall stay in the contest until the nomination is made, and then I shall begin work again by giving him my cordial support and doing all that I can to elect him.

"The fight in Union goes along about the same. I am trying to get the majority of the delegates, and I still hope to do so, and I think I will, unless I am misinformed.

"Both John and myself are in the hands of our friends, and we prefer to let them decide, both using every honorable means to get our friends to make an expression.

"I do not think that either Mayor Rankin or Congressman Fowler mean to do anything that would bring about any trouble in the party, if they do not succeed in getting delegates, for me. I do not believe that they would turn them over to some candidate from another county, rather than give them to John Kean. That would not be fair, and would be against the spirit of our party in Union County. I think I know what is going on, and I can safely state they have no such desperate scheme in contemplation."

Shipbuilding in Elizabeth.

Business is improving at the Crescent Shipyard, in Elizabethport. Orders have been received for several new vessels, and this will necessitate the employment of additional hands. A new stern-wheel steamer is being built for parties in Venezuela, and the yacht Free Land will be finished in a few days.

THE ROGERS' ASSEMBLE.

The Rogers' reunion was held at the home of W. J. Davis, at New Market, yesterday. Forty people took dinner. They also had music and speaking and a general good time throughout.

The Rogers family trace their ancestry direct from the martyr John Rogers, who was born in Smithfield, England, in 1500, amd was burned at the stake by Queen Mary in 1555. His great grandson, James Rogers came to this country on the ship Increase in 1635 and settled in Rhode Island. The old Bible that was used by John Rogers was brought to this country by the former and is now in the Seventh-Day Baptist Library at Alfred Centre, N. Y.

We love the Rogers' line and name.
We love the Rogers' knightly fame.
We love the Rogers' martyr blood,
It reaches downward toward the flood.

And glad we are for maid and man
To meet so many of the clan,
And hope we all that now and then
The Rogers' folk may meet again.

He Bravely Jumped In and Danced on It, But Still It Lived.

One resident of West Fifth street is still chuckling over a good joke that was played upon him last evening. He was returning to his home and when he reached the corner of West Fifth and Liberty streets he saw several standing by the gutter apparently greatly excited over something. He went to investigate and was told that there was some kind of an animal crawling in the gutter. He looked and, although it was very dark, he could see a dark body slowly moving along. With a shout that he would kill it, he jumped on the supposed animal and danced upon it until any decent animal would have died, but this one did not. He then looked closer and saw that it was a bundle of rags moved by a string which a boy held further up the street.

SURPRISED THEIR CAMPMATE.

A jolly party of young people arranged a surprise for Harry Fulper last night, most of them being comrades in the recent camping expedition.

Dancing, singing and games made the evening pass quickly and pleasantly, while an elaborate collation interrupted the enjoyment only to add to it. The party was held at the residence of Wilson Fulper, of East Second street which was appropriately bedecked for the occasion.

The gay party consisted of Louis Neidemyer and Miss Annie Bowers, of New York, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Johnson, of Plainfield, Mrs. C. I. Nash, Miss Beatrix Nash, Mrs. F. A. Paddock, Miss Emily Paddock, Miss Eleanor Paddock, Miss Alice McDermott, Miss May Elliott, and Elston Lowrie, of Brooklyn, Clarence Thorne, William Thorne, Percy McVoy, Harry Deucklau, Miller Atchison, Frank Smalley, and Albert Wyckoff, of Plainfield.

Suing to Recover an Old Claim.

A suit was brought yesterday in the Union County Court against Henrietta H. Jouet, widow of Chevalier Hargrove Juet, to recover an old judgement of $3 209 obtained by the National State Bank of Elizabeth against Chevalier Jouet on July 31, 1875.

Castoria is truly a marvelous thing for children. Doctors prescribe it, medical journals recommend it and more than a million mothers are using it in place of Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, so-called soothing syrups and other narcotic and stupefying remedies. Castoria is the quickest thing to regulate the stomach and bowels and give healthy sleep the world has ever seen. It is pleasant to the taste and absolutely harmless. It relieves constipation, quiets pain, cures diarrhœa and wind colic, allays feverishness, destroys worms, and prevents convulsions, soothes the child and gives it refreshing and natural sleep. Castoria is the children's panacea—the mother's friend.

Castoria is put up in one-size bottles only. It is not sold in bulk. Don't allow any one to sell you anything else on the plea or promise that it is "just as good" and "will answer every purpose." See that you get C-A-S-T-O-R-I-A.

MARRIED A HALF CENTURY.

MR. AND MRS. KLENCK CELEBRATE THEIR GOLDEN WEDDING.

A happy gathering assembled at the residence of Mrs. A. DeBaud, at 323 East Front street, last evening, to celebrate the golden wedding of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Klenck, who were married just fifty years ago last night. Friends from New York, Brooklyn and this city were in attendance. The house was beautifully illuminated and the unalloyed hospitality tendered the guests was out of the ordinary. Many presents were received by the aged couple.

Rev. E. Kionka, pastor of the German Lutheran church, spoke very feelingly and his remarks were attentively listened to.

The young parson made many warm friends and his youthful appearance and general good fellowship was noted by all present. Vocal music was indulged in and Mrs. DeBaud's young niece furnished excellent music on the piano in a manner that was greatly admired. A bountiful lunch was spread before the guests. Roman punch, ice-cream, bon bons, handsomely ornamented boxes containing wedding cake was passed to each person present in commemoration of the happy affair.

The gathering dispersed at a late hour and many were the expressions sincerely expressed that such a social evening as the one passed that a person could not help but regret to part from it. Well wishes to the aged couple, good bye's all around, and the affair was over a few moments after midnight.

Among those present were: Rev. Mr. Kionka, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Blatz, Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin, Mrs. DeBaud, Mr. and Mrs. Wedemeyer, Mr. and Mrs. Biter, Frank Vosseller, of Plainfield; Mrs. Marsh, Scotch Plains; Mrs. Hugot, son and daughter, Staten Island; Miss V. Meyer, Miss M. J. Corr, A. Carney, Fred Kick, Paul Horst, Mrs. C. L. Bolton, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Quincy and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Plummer, of New York.

A pretty feature of the event was the handsome illuminations in front of the house, for which credit is due Mrs. Plummer.

WORLD AFTER DARLING.

The Big Paper Has Reporter Campbell on His Track.

Mr. Campbell, though not yet twenty one years of age, is one of the brightest and most successful gatherers of difficult news on the metropolitan press. His assignments are almost exclusively on cases where detective ability is required. He is the right hand man of Ike White, the World reporter who won fame by tracing out the identity of Norcross, who dropped a bomb in the office of Russell Sage. Mr. Campbell is the reporter who formed the chain of evidence that resulted in the proof of guilt of Caeser, the colored murderer. He is at present working on clues looking to the capture of William Darling, the murderer of Harry Dunham.

THE TINGLEYS GET TOGETHER

A FAMILY REUNION HELD ON A SOUTH PLAINFIELD FARM.

Uncle John Was There in All His Glory—The Band Played and the People Talked—Names of Those Present.

It is a good thing for families to meet once in a while and enjoy a reunion. That is why the Tingley family meet on David Blackford's farm at South Plainfield every year and have a general good time.

Yesterday the third reunion was held and like the other two was a genuine success in every respect. The people arrived early in the day, and at once entered into a social time.

Uncle John Tingley and his family were among the first to reach the farm, and they at once prepared to receive the guests. They were assisted by Mrs Blackford and son David.

The New Market brass band also made its appearance and discoursed lively and patriotic music that filled with enthusiasm the heart of everyone present.

Each family brought their own dinner and when the noon hour arrived the long tables presented a tempting appearance. There was plenty to eat, and no one complained of not having enough. After dinner sociability was continued among the Tingleys and their friends. Each one had something of interest to tell the other. In this way a very enjoyable time was passed beneath the large shade trees, where the cooling breeze kept all in the best of humor.

During the afternoon "Uncle John" introduced Dr. Jeremiah Tingley, who was present for the purpose of securing a history of the Tingley family. He spoke in an interesting manner, telling many things about the family that those present did not know. He said that instead of there being a small number of Tingleys there was many of them all over the country.

Rev. Mr. Thomas, pastor of the South Plainfield Baptist church, followed with a stiring address along the lines of patriotism. The band played at intervals giving life and amusement to the crowd.

The picnic came to an end about six o'clock when the guests departed for home thoroughly pleased with their days outing.

Those present were:

Ebeneza Tingley and family, of Boycefield; Louis Tingley and family, Gilbert Johnson and family, G. M. Tingley and family, of Summit; Walter Tingley and wife, of South Branch; U. G. Tingley and wife, of Bound Brook; Mrs. Blackford, David Blackford, William Clawson and family, Mr. and Mrs. W. Smally, Sr., Mrs. Hall, S. Pyatt, J. Dayton, Charles Conger, G. Jordan, of South Plainfield; Uncle John Tingley and family, J. Duer Randolph, Mrs. Voorhees, Mrs. Eugene Runyon, S. B. Merrill and wife, Mrs. Randolph Runyon, Russell Runyon, Mrs. E. Randolph, William Vail and family, of Dunellen; Ephraim Boice and family, Luther Boice and family, Delbert Taffen, William Drake and family, the Misses Powers, Miss Edith Bassett, Mr. and Mrs. Conover, Miss Eliza Ten-Eyck, P. Laut and family, of Piscataway; Mrs. E. G. GaNun and son, Abram Bennett and family, Miss Nellie Bittell, Miss Emily Coriell, Mrs. J. C. MET, FOUGHT AND DEPARTED.

Two Bicyclists See Stars of a Rather Forcible Kind.

Last Saturday evening was cloudy and a young man who resides on East Front street was hurrying up that thoroughfare soon after eight o'clock trying to reach the home of a friend on North avenue, near the water tower, before it should rain. He rode his wheel but had no lantern. Riding as fast as he could, he turned into Leland avenue, his head bowed over the handles.

Then something happened that made him think that it had cleared off, as there were plenty of stars in sight. The next he knew someone was kicking him on the head. Seeing a tall fellow standing over him, he grabbed the offending foot and gave its owner a push that sent him rolling on his back. An exciting scrap was the next thing, until both drew off for breath. Then the stranger suggested that they look at their wheels, for the cause of the whole affair was that they had met in the dark and both gone down. The stranger had a lamp but it had gone out.

The examination showed the front forks of the wheel of the Front street young man badly hurt, while his opponent's lamp was smashed and his wheel generally crippled.

The ardor of both had now cooled down so they said good night and departed.

One of the young men promises that there will be an interesting sequel to the smashup.

A SAD BEREAVEMENT.

The Sudden Death of Warren Wright at Clinton, Conn.

The first week in August, Mr. Abram Wright, of this city, went to Clinton, Conn., to spend several weeks, and with him were his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Webster Wright, and her daughter Edith, a bright child of thirteen years, of Plainfield, N. J. Miss Edith was enjoying her usual health, was gay and joyous, and in the best of spirits, during the stay, until last Thursday morning, when she was taken with peritonitis; but the disease did not assume a dangerous form until Saturday night, when it became serious. The best medical attendance obtainable was procured, but without avail, and on Sunday afternoon about half-past four the child died, the grief-stricken mother, and no less grief-stricken grandfather, being with her when she breathed her last.

Her father was in Brielle, N. J., and the dispatch did not reach him until Monday morning. The sad news was a great shock to him, when he reached Clinton.

The funeral took place Wednesday afternoon, the interment being in the Wright plot in the cemetery. Her pastor at Plainfield, Rev. C. E. Herring, officiated. Mr. Wright was very fond of the child, and he is greatly affected by the sad and sudden death. Miss Edith was a general favorite among her relatives, and to all the blow is a terrible one. The young lady was of a most lovable and amiable disposition, very thoughtful of others, and her beautiful Christian character was reflected in all of her acts, and of her it may truly be said the good die young. The family have the sincere sympathy of all in this sad bereavement.—Poughkeepsie Eagle.

SHE HAD A SHARP TONGUE.

And Ramsberger Fled To Parts Unknown But Is Expected Back.

There has been another disappearance and this time it is a husband, Charles Ramsberger, a resident of Essex street. Mr. Ramsberger has been driving the Plainfield delivery wagon for an Elizabeth brewing company for the last three or four weeks, but has not seemed satisfied with his work. Several days ago Mr. and Mrs. Ramsberger had a little spat and then the husband disappeared.

When Mrs. Ramsberger was seen by a Daily Press reporter this morning she said that she did not worry about her better half as he had acted in a similar manner before and would be back in a few days. When asked if he had any reasons financial or otherwise, for leaving town, she said.

"No, his accounts were all right with the company. It was all my fault, I scolded him and he went away to make me mad."

A representative of the company sent down to take Ramsberger's place, confirmed Mrs. Ramsberger's statement that there had been no trouble between the missing man and the company.

Sentimental Girls.

May Blanche Tucker and Stella Harmer, the two Rahway girls who called at the county jail in Elizabeth and presented handsome bouquets of flowers to Frank Freehill, the slayer of Health Inspector Alfred E. Jewell, of Rahway, and Theopolis Henderson, Jr., who killed Farmer Miller, of Union township, by hitting him with a brick, promised to call at the jail on Friday and take more flowers to these two prisoners. Miss Tucker and Miss Harmer are quite good-looking and are great bicycle riders. They rode on their wheels to the county jail.

Still Another Lawyer.

Counselor H. C. Suydam will open a law office in the Babcock building in Plainfield on September 3d, still retaining his office in this place as heretofore. He will be in Plainfield during the forenoons of each day and at his Bound Brook office every afternoon. A representative will be in his Plainfield office throughout the day and probably in Bound Brook also.—Bound Brook Democrat.

Farm At Auction.

WAY BACK IN THE FORTIES.

WHAT A PLAINFIELD PAPER CONTAINED AT THAT TIME.

The Merchants of a Half Century Ago—Four Trains Passed Through the Town at That Time—What a Difference Now.

A copy of the Plainfield Union dated Monday, December 4th, 1843, was found recently by John Morton, of West Front street, while overhauling some papers. The paper at that time was edited by Milton F. Cushing, and this copy contains many facts of interest. Thanksgiving that year was on Thursday, December 7th. It publishes the dissolution of partnership between J. C. Ayers, Job Meeker, Nathan Laing, Joseph Runyon, and Thomas B. Boylan, which occured December 1st, 1843.

A time table is published of trains running between Elizabethtown and Somerville. It states that the freight train will run every day. There were four trains each way and the time was exceedingly slow.

Among the merchants in town at that time were, Webster & Marsh, J. R. Dunn, H. A. Cory, D. Bullman, dry goods; Jotham D. Frazee, harness maker; Jesse Vail, stoves and hardware; Berry & Dunham, druggist; A. Mundy, boots and shoes.

The paper states that Congress met on the fourth of December and if no difficulty was experienced the president's message would probably reach Plainfield by Wednesday or Thursday.

The rates of postage at that time were very high. It cost 18¾ cents to send a letter weighing one-quarter ounce 150 miles, and twenty-five cents to send one of the same weight 400 miles.

It speaks of a mass meeting being held in New York to secure a reduction in the rates.

The paper altogether is a creditable one and no doubt fully represented the interests of the town at that time.

ON THE BANKS OF THE PASSAIC.

The Harvest Home Attracts Its Usual Throng of Visitors.

By wagon, bicycles and on foot they poured into the grove of Israel Coon at Smalleytown from far and near, town and country, until the throng looked like some mighty army of pleasure goers, for the Harvest Home of the Union Village, M. E. Church was as great a success as in past years All day the fun lasted without intermission and far into the night. Gatt man's band gave concerts in the morning, afternoon and evening. Rev. Mr. Randall made a few remarks on the great harvest of the past year. Rev. Mr. Rhinow was then introduced by the committee and spoke in the same line. Rev. Mr. Gibb, of the Millington Baptist church also made a few interesting remarks.

The bicycle races came next, under the direction of Frank L. C. Martin, of this city. The roads were heavy with dust which prevented many from entering. In the mile open, two of Plainfield's cracks, Thomas A. Cuming and S. Clinton Crane, secured first and second place, respectively. Harry Smith, of Washingtonville, was the winner of the one-half mile handicap and Harry Cuming took second place from his brother, the scratch leaving T. A. Cuming for third.

The officials were: Referee, F. L. C. Martin; judges, John V. Reilmeyer, of New York, C. C. Pearson, and L. H. Van Buren; starter, E. W. Mertz, of Millington; scorer, J. E. S. Petrie; timer, P. B. Macintyre.

The speakers during the evening were Fred Page, of Somerville, and the Rev. Mr. Randolph. An excellent supper was furnished by the women of the church. The affair closed as the moon went to bed at midnight.

VOORHEES FRIENDS BUSY.

They Are Trying to Get the Union County Delegates for Him.

The supporters of Senator Voorhees are quietly hustling throughout Union County. They count on capturing the entire delegation from Rahway, a majority of the Elizabeth delegation, and claim that in the townships they will secure five out of nine delegates. In Plainfield both the Voorhees and Kean men claim they will come out on top, says The World.

Assemblyman Codding, who seems to be Senator Voorhees's most active lieutenant, was in Elizabeth yesterday comparing notes with his chief and making reports of how things are working in the townships.

Great Hustlers of the Present "Age."

Arrangements are under way to have the wall paper removed from the walls on the interior of Music Hall in order to accomodate the immenee audience that will want to see the young and favorite soubrette, Miss Lillian Kennedy, in "A Midnight Frolic." Hundreds of applications have already been made for reserved seats, and E. Dane Smith, the advance agent, formerly connected with one of the leading Chicago newspapers, is momentarily expected to arrive.

CAHILL CAUGHT.

Held to Await the Action of the Grand Jury—In Jail.

John Cahill, who was implicated with Joseph Green recently in a racket at Washingtonville, was captured yesterday by Marshal Doud and Constable Stewart. The former heard that Cahill was working at Washingtonville, and secured a warrant from Justice Crosley for his arrest. The two officers went to Washingtonville and found the man they were after.

He was kept in the borough lockup until last night, when at seven o'clock he was given a hearing before Justice Crosley. The latter placed him under $300 bonds to await the action of the Grand Jury. Constable Stewart took Cahill to Somerville on the 8:21 train last evening.

Mr. Robinson who lives in the house where the disturbance occurred was present at the hearing and testified against Cahill.

A HOT BOX.

One Of The Somerset Street Trolley Cars Delayed By It.

While West Front street is being torn up for the sewers, the cars at the east end of the line have to remain out on the track all night, and consequently cannot be examined as thoroughly as when they are in the car-house. Car No. 6, of the Somerset street line, when returning to the North Avenue station this morning a few minutes before eight o'clock had to be laid up on account of a hot armature box. The box was allowed to cool off and word sent to the car-house for grease. This accident would not have occurred had a thorough examination been made.

Clark's Funeral.

Samuel Clark, of Murray Hill, who was run over and killed at Scotch Plains on Sunday evening last, was buried in the M. E. church cemetery at New Providence, on Wednesday afternoon. The funeral was in charge of U. S. Grant Post, G. A. R., of Summit, of which he had been a member.

What Is He?

A man has been seen hanging around the corner of East Fifth street and Franklin place for some time and from his apparent wish to avoid observation it looks as if he had no good purpose in remaining in that vicinity.

The Defender must be more than her name implies to be popular. She must be a winner.

UNIMAGINATIVE BEGGARS.

Novelist Howells Says They Never Tell a Good Story.

The first of two chatty papers, "Tribulations of a Cheerful Giver," by W. D. Howells, is printed in the Century for June. Mr. Howells gives the following experiences with the begging fraternity:

I must say that his statement of his own case is usually incoherent and sometimes seems even a little fabulous. The poor fellows have very little imagination or invention; they might almost as well be realistic novelists. I find that those who strike me for a night's lodging, when they stop me in the street at night, come as a rule from Pittsburg and are ironworkers of some sort; the last one said he was a puddler, "A skilled mechanic," he explained—"what is called a skilled mechanic"; and, of course, he was only watching for some chance to get back to Pittsburg, though there was no chance of work, from what he told me, after he got there. On the other hand, I find that most of those who ask by day for money to get a dinner are from Philadelphia, or the rural parts of eastern Pennsylvania, though within six months I have extended hospitality (I think that is the right phrase) to two architectural draftsmen from Boston. They were both entirely decent looking, sober looking young men, who spoke like men of education, and they each gratefully accepted a quarter from me. I do not attempt to account for them, for they made no attempt to account for themselves; and I think the effect was more artistic so.

I am rarely approached by any professed New Yorker, which is perhaps a proof of the superior industry or prosperity of our city; but now and then a fellow citizen who has fallen out asks me for money in the street, and perhaps goes straight and spends it for drink. Drink, however, is as necessary in some forms as food itself, and a rich, generous port wine is often prescribed for invalids. These men, without exception, look like invalids, and I have no doubt that they would prefer to buy a rich, generous port wine if I gave them money enough. I never do that, though I have a means of making my alms seem greater, to myself at least, by practicing a little cordiality with the poor fellows. I do not give grudgingly or silently, but I say, if I give at all, when they ask me, "Why, of course!" or "Yes, certainly"; and sometimes I invite them to use their feeble powers of invention in my behalf, and tell how they wish me to think they have come to the sad pass of beggary. This seems to flatter them, and it makes me feel much better, which is really my motive for doing it.

Now and then they will offer me some apology for begging, in a tone that says, "I know how it is myself;" and once there was one who began by saying "I know it's a shame for a strong man like me to be begging, but—" They seldom have any devices for working me, beyond the simple statement of their destitution; though there was a case in which I helped a poor fellow raise a quarter upon a postal order, which he then kept as a pledge of my good faith. Their main reliance seems to be lead pencils, which they have in all inferior varieties. I find that they will take it kindly if you do not want any change back when you have given them a coin worth more than they asked for the pencil, and that they will even let you off without taking the pencil after you have bought it. In the end you have to use some means to save yourself from the accumulation of pencils, unless you are willing to burn them for kindling wood, and I find the simplest way is not to take them after you have paid for them. It is amusing how quickly you can establish a comity with these pencil people: they will not only let you leave your pencils with them, but they will sometimes excuse you from buying if you remind them that you have bought of them lately. Then, if they do not remember you, they at least smile politely, and pretend to do so.

Wilhelmina, Queen of Holland.

The sweet girlish face which accompanies this paragraph might belong to almost any little American school girl, but it is the latest picture of Holland's young queen, Wilhelmina. She is a most winsome and loveable girl, just past her fourteenth birthday, and is adored by her loyal subjects. With all her childishness she is conscious of her coming responsibilities, and that gives her manners a little touch of reserve and dignity that seem almost out of place with the fresh simplicity of her youth. She has just been over to England with her mother, to visit her aunt, the Duchess of Albany, and in the grounds at Clermont, where her aunt's fine palace stands, with her cousins, a boy and a girl near her own age, she has had as merry a romp as if she were not burdened with the coming cares of a kingdom. Everybody will wish this pleasant-faced child, who is both amiable and intelligent, a happy life and a long and prosperous reign.

Mr. Edison believes that the lowest temperature which can be obtained is 459 degrees below zero. He has succeeded in getting down to 382 degrees below zero.

IN SUMMER DRESS.

THOSE USEFUL WRAPS FOR COOL EVENINGS.

Elaborate Capes and Collarettes. Tan Gray and Colors Are Allowable in Some Styles. Suggestions as to the Children's Dress for Warm Weather.

A light wrap of some sort is a necessary addition to a summer outfit, and as yet nothing so convenient and altogether so useful as the little cape has been invented. It is capable of great variety in material and decoration, if not in shape, and the prettiest of airy trifles is simply a yoke of silk covered with jet, to which are attached deep frills of point d'esprit lace and gracefully arranged loops and bows of ribbon. Around the neck is the ruche of ribbon and lace which is a part of every dressy cape.

All capes, if they are fashionable, are very short and show the waist line below, unless they are made in a later style, which is fitted down to the waist at the back and front, with long stole ends reaching to the knee. Some of the nattiest little capes are full back and front and open over the sleeves, with only a fall of lace or some loops of ribbon to cover them, but the most general shape is cut circular to fall in full godet plaits on the edge. Other little collarettes which reach only a little below the shoulder have long stole ends in front. A simple but showy cape is made of black satin in a short circular, which is shimmered with moonlight sequins and finished on the edge with a ruche of black chiffon. This, with satin rosettes, forms the neck ruche, and on the shoulders are bows of black satin ribbon embroidered with spangles. Another pretty trimming for this style of cape is jet vandykes from the neck well down toward the edge, where it is finished with a tiny ruche of black lace, which is also used to finish the neck.

Collars and revers of cream white open work embroidered batiste over white satin are a novel and showy trimming for black satin capes. Some of the latest importations show a tendency toward longer mantles and a fancy for colors. They are made of shot glace silks in shades of green or violet, and plaited full in the back, where they are fitted down to the waist and bloused a little in front with stole ends hanging below. The sleeve arrangement is a full short cape and the trimming an elaboration of lace.

The latest thing for a cloth cape comes in light gray, tan and dark blue, and is trimmed with inch wide bands of the cloth, stitched on in rows of varying lengths from the neck down, and lined with bright and very large plaid silk, which forms double bias frills down the front, made wide at the top and graduated to nothing at the edge. Transparent black crepon is used for wraps and is usually lined with a color and trimmed with black satin ribbon.

Children's gowns do not admit of such variety in style and decoration as those for their elders, but any little change is an acceptable hint for mothers who cannot buy the little dresses ready made. Challies, in both dark and light colors, make very sensible and pretty dresses for girls of all ages, and they are made simply with box plaited blouse waists and satin ribbon collar and belt, or in a fashion more dressy, like the model, with a pointed yoke and epaulettes of lace over plain color and trimmed with rows of inch wide satin ribbon of which predominates in the —New York Sun

Democratic State Convention.

The Democratic voters of New Jersey are requested to meet at such times and places as may be designated by their local committees to elect delegates to a State Convention, to be held at Taylor Opera House, in the city of Trenton, on

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 26th, 1895,

The basis of representation will be one delegate for each two hundred Democratic votes cast at the Gubernatorial election of 1892, and one for each fraction of the same over one hundred; but each ward and township shall be entitled to at least one delegate.

ALLAN L. McDERMOTT,
Chairman State Democratic Committee.

Augustus W. Cutler is after the Gubernatorial nomination in earnest.

Plainfield politicians are remarkably quiet. Is it "the calm before the tempest?"

The best, fullest and most accurate account of the Dunham murder in New Market was published in the Plainfield Press.—Dunellen Call.

What has caused the News editor to take a reef in his attack on the city administration? The Daily Press congratulates Plainfield on the effect.

Newark has got to be wicked enough to be investigated. The Jersey metropolis will be pounced upon and all her badness laid open by the Voorhees committee next week.

The Somerville Unionist-Gazette announces that Frank W. Somers, of Somerville, is a candidate for the Republican nomination of county clerk in Somerset county.

A recent death notice in Birmingham, England, contained the following: "He was never known to utter a wicked word, or be the worse for beer, though not an abstainer."

The two years and two months sentence which John Rogers, of Morristown, received for abandoning his five-year-old son in the Continental Hotel in New York, was none too severe.

Democratic harmony does not seem to be near at hand in New York. Tammany Hall invited the State Democracy to come into their caucuses and take a share of the delegates, but the latter refused and intend sending delegates to the State convention regardless of Tammany men.

The Unionist-Gazette says that the name of Elston French, of North Plainfield, is spoken of for the Assembly by the Democrats of Somerset. Mr. French is young, popular and bright, and with him as their nominee the Democrats would have a strong candidate.

It was only a short time ago that a Rochester man survived 2,000 volts of electricity. And now the report comes that another Rochester man has survived 1,800 volts. Rochester men must be different from the variety that try the experiment in Sing Sing.

A New York saloonkeeper evidently does not intend to give Commissioner Roosevelt any more credit than necessary, and to that end last Sunday tacked a placard bearing the following inscription on his place of business:

This saloon has been closed by the order of the Liquor Dealers Association and not by the orders of Mr. "Teddy" Roosevelt.

A society is being organized whose aim is to teach purity of accent, and to do away with brogues, foreign dialects and the Yankee nasal twang. What would this country seem like if all this conglomeration of tongues should eventually be evolved into one euphonious strain? It can never be so as long as we have a government by the people.

The fourth constitutional amendment proposed by the last Legislature, which will be submitted to a vote at the polls if adopted by the next Legislature, gives to female citizens, of the age of twenty-one years, who shall have been a resident of the State one year, and of the county five months, the right to vote at any school meeting for members of the Board of Education and upon all school questions.

It is not generally known that the original "Ben Bolt," of whose sweet heart Trilby sings, was a Jerseyman. Yet he lived among the Jersey meadows about forty years ago, in the midst of the district usually given over to mosquitoes and cranberry gatherers. The earlier copies of Mr. English's celebrated song bore this inscription on the cover: "Dedicated to my friend, Mr. Benjamin Bolt, of Matawan, N. J."—New York Evening World.

WALZ STILL HOLDS THE CUP.

RESULT OF THE LAST TENNIS TOURNAMENT OF THE HILLSIDE CLUB.

Brilliant Gathering of Society People Who Witnessed Exceptionally Fine Playing—The Scores—Those Who Entertained.

Not in a long time has there been such a briliant assemblage of Plainfield society people present at the favorite home of the Hillside Lawn Tennis Club as there was Monday.

The wealth and beauty of this fair city was resplendent in such a beautiful opening of autumnal weather which was simply perfect.

There was an activity on the part of those present that gave life to the charming event. Some old-time tennis players, who have witnessed scores of games, were present yesterday and said that the playing was unusually fine throughout.

The first part was the tournament, and, of course, there was great interest in the results. In the first round Goddard beat Bogart, 6-2, 4-6, 6-2; Beebe beat Moore by default, and Fish drew a bye; Pfeiffer beat McClure, 6-3, 6-4. In the second round Fish beat Pfeiffer, 6-1, 7-5; Goddard beat Beebe, 6-4, 3-6, 6-3. In the final Fish beat Goddard, 7-5, 3-6, 6-1.

Then came the contest for the cup that was won by Carl Walz in 1894.

The match was between Walz and F. K. Fish, Jr. Throughout the playing was superb, and frequently the enthusiastic friends of both players were very much in evidence by their hearty applause as an excellent play was made. After much excitement Walz captured the cup, beating Fish, 6-0, 6-2, 6-1.

The day was complete through the efforts of the ladies, who so gallantly looked after the social portion of the event.

Mrs. J. B. Dumont received, and was assisted by Miss Marion Dumont, Mrs. Marion Ackerman, Miss Wood, Miss Margaret Yates, and Mrs. D. F. Ginna. The refreshments, which were all to be desired, were in charge of the above-named ladies, and the service was a pleasure to all who accepted the generous hospitality bestowed.

SHE LOVED THE MAN.

Colonel Waring's French Secretary Once Grew Sentimental.

Colonel Charles K. Moore was in this city today calling on old friends, and was all smiles over the trouble that Colonel Waring and his French secretary, Mrs. Carre had become involved in, and which is to result in the retirement of the snappy Frenchwoman. It was she that assumed to be boss of the street cleaning department when the doughty Colonel was away, but in the person of Colonel Moore she found some one who was not there to be bossed by a woman.

Waring at first supported her in her dictorial methods towards other employes of the department, and it was this action that caused Colonel Moore to resign his position as Deputy Commissioner of the Street Cleaning Department. Colonel Moore says that Mrs. Carre once said to him:

"I love that man Colonel Waring so that anything he asks me to do, I would do, no matter what. Any friends of yours must go, even Mr. Corsa."

Now the madam goes.

The Netherwood Closes.

The Hotel Netherwood closed today for the season. While the patronage of the house has not been sufficient to make the season a very profitable one, the management of John Spitler has been such as to make the resort a popular one with those that have visited it, and should Mr. Spitler again assume control next season the reputation which he has made ought to be sufficient to make a successful one. Mr. Spitler will probably remain in Plainfield this fall and possibly all winter.

THOMPSON WOULD NOT BUY.

COLORED MAN USES AN EXPRESSIVE TERM AND A FIGHT RESULTS.

Marshal Moore Chases One Man Who Escapes as Do the Other Two in the Meantime—After the Scrappers Now.

There was a genuine free fight on Somerset street, near Manning avenue, Monday afternoon about one o'clock, but there were not many witnesses. Two whith men named Motley and Burke had evidently been effected by the flowing bowl and were walking along Somerset street, with a dinner pail, in which they were anxious to secure some beer. A colored man named Ede Thompson happened along, and they tried to persuade him to do this errand for them. He was willing but the money was not in evidence. The two were persistent, and wanted Thompson to put up the money. This made the latter mad and he used a term that was more expressive than elegant. Motley then told Thompson if he wished to repeat it he could come around the corner on Manning avenue and he would do him up. Marshal Moore then made his appearance and Burke seeing the officer started to run. The latter was fully a half block away from the marshal, but the latter instead of capturing the two that were fighting started after Burke. The runaway went through a yard next to Borough Clerk Arnold's residence and escaped. When the Marshal came back to get the two fighting members of the crowd he found they had skipped. Chief Van Horn was made acquainted with the affair and an attempt will be made to capture them. While Motley and Thompson were fighting the former drew a knife and cut the latter severely. Marshal Moore succeeded in capturing a hat, coat and the knife which were placed in the lockup.

A Touching Incident.

In the Trinity Reformed church on Sunday morning, just before service commenced, as the prstor Rev. Cornelius Schenck was seated on the pulpit platform, organist A. L. Titsworth softly and sweetly rendered a stanza of "Home, Sweet Home." This was followed by the choir singing, very low, a stanza of the same familiar song. The pastor and congregation were visibly affected at the tender thoughts contained in the hymn, and tears of rejoicing at the return of their beloved pastor, restored to health, were noticeable all over the church.

Christening.

The infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. McIntyre, of North avenue, was christened at St. Mary's church Sunday afternoon at three o'clock by Rev. Father Smyth. The name given was Charlotte, and the sponsers were Miss Kate Carty, of this city, and Wm. King, of New York.

An Option for a Wigwam.

Miantonomah Tribe, No. 118, I. O. R. M., will meet on Friday evening to take final action on the report of the committee of co-operation in regard to securing the new wigwam. They have the option of a desirable building.

To Be Continued.

Four hundred baskets of peaches were on sale at Neuman Brothers this morning and they went like the wind. The sale will be continued tomorrow, with canning peaches from sixty cents to $1. Another specialty will be 100 baskets of choice canning Bartlett pears.

Borough Disturbers.

Grover Cashin, Joseph Cashin and Albert Frieze were taken before Justice Crosley this morning by Marshal Wilson for throwing stones and making a disturbance. The Justice severely reprimanded them and let them go on their promise to do better.

A. BARRY, THE KING SHOOTER

SPORT OF THE GERMANS WITH GUNS AT HYDE'S GROVE.

Fourth Annual King Shoot of the Independent Gun Club—An Eagle for a Target—Women Who Have Good Aim.

One of the enjoyable events of yesterday was the fourth annual king shoot of the Independent Gun Club at Hyde's Grove. There was a good attendance of members and the shooting was excellent. There were four prizes, of which the first three were $10 gold pieces and the fourth a gold medal valued at $15.

The target shot at was an eagle. L. Kuntz was given the flag and figure, and won first prize; A. Barry was given the head of the eagle and captured second prize. He also won the king prize, which was the medal. The last shoot was by M. Weber who had the right wing and took the remaining prize.

Mrs. Henry Wedemeyer then shot for the queen prize, a silver cup. She scored thirty-five points out of a possible fifty-four, and will hold the cup another year. Miss Yaeger made the presentation in a few well-chosen words.

The Gesang and Turn Verein were present as guests and pleased the audience with some choice vocal music. The balance of the afternoon was devoted to trap shooting for sweepstakes. This was in charge of Lewis VanDyke. Excellent refreshments were served during the afternoon.

THE LEAGUE GAMES.

Hope Chapel Athletes Contest at Various Sports, with Good Showings.

The athletic games of the Young Men's League of Hope Chapel took place Saturday afternoon at Maltby's track, before a good sized crowd. OYSTERS OF THE RIGHT KIND.

Rogers, the Sea Food Man, Handles Them Direct From the Beds.

Plainfield being an inland town, it is not sometimes surprising if persons doubt the quantity of the fish which arrives here, but those who deal with Rogers, the sea food man, on West Second street, never have any doubts as to the quality of his goods, for it is only the one thing—first-class—as thousands can testify.

He delivers your order at your home as early in the day as desirable.

A prominent feature of this place is the oyster department. Now, those who know anything about oysters are satisfied that that there is a big difference in them.

This year Rogers intends making a specialty of them, and has made arrangements with four of the largest shippers in the business to supply him with nothing but the finest fancy stock of oysters to be had, commencing today. The prices, as usual, will be right on oysters as well as on all kinds of sea food.

A Nest of Them Now.

The rattlesnake that has attracted so much attention in Harry Dreier's show window on West Front street surprised its owners this morning by presenting them with eight young rattlers.

Band Concert Saturday Night.

The next band concert will be given Saturday evening at the corner of Franklin place and LaGrande avenue. This one is given by Councilman Frost.

IN DESPAIR.

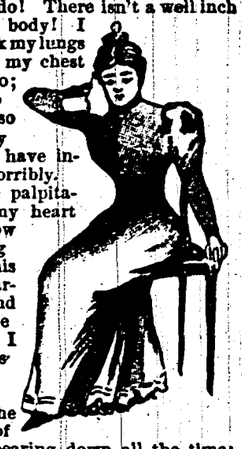
Many Women Will Recognize It.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]



"Oh, I am so nervous! No one ever suffered as I do! There isn't a well inch in my whole body! I honestly think my lungs are diseased, my chest pains me so; but I've no cough. I'm so weak at my stomach, and have indigestion horribly. Then I have palpitation, and my heart hurts me. How I am losing flesh! and this headache nearly kills me; and the backache—Heavens! I had hysterics yesterday. There is a weight in the lower part of my bowels, bearing down all the time; and there are pains in my groins and thighs. I can't sleep, walk, or sit. I'm diseased all over. The doctor? Oh! he tells me to keep quiet. Such mockery!

Inflammatory and ulcerative conditions at the neck of the womb can produce all the above symptoms in the same person. In fact, there is hardly a part of the body that can escape those sympathetic pains and aches.

No woman should allow herself to reach such a perfection of misery when there is positively no need of it.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound acts promptly and thoroughly in such cases; strengthens the muscles of the womb, heals all inflammation, and restores that unruly organ to its normal condition. Druggists are selling carloads of it. Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., will gladly and freely answer all letters asking for advice.

Mrs. E. Bishop, 787 Halsey Street, Brooklyn, N.Y., suffered all the above described horrors. Now she is well. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured her. Write her about it.

CAUGHT IN A SQUALL.

The four Plainfield young men, who went on the boating expedition of the New Jersey Naval Reserve Saturday, had quite an exciting time. The boat was caught in the squall in the afternoon and broke loose from the tug that was pulling them. Only by dint and hard bailing were the boats saved from sinking.

Sunday there was a boat race and the boat containing the Plainfield boys defeated their opponent. A game of base ball was also played and the Plainfielders were again in the victorious nine. The Plainfield representatives in the party were Edward Tomilson, Edward Mackey, William Boyd and Victor Christofferson.

A NIGHT OF MUSIC.

Councilman Fisk's Open Air Concert Appreciated by a Large Audience.

Councilman Fisk made no mistake when he postponed the open air concert from Saturday evening until last night. He could not have had a better night had he waited a year; not a cloud in the sky, the moon at full and the temperature simply ideal.

The people of Plainfield appreciated it too, for they turned out until the city park was comfortably full.

The concert concluded with the Honeymoon March which, although not on the programme, was too great a favorite to be left out. After all was over the throng still waited, like Oliver Twist, wanting more. Then the band played a few strains from "Home, Sweet Home" and their listeners took the hint.

"Nothing Venture, Nothing Have."

Rev. John Reid, Jr., of Great Falls, Mon., recommended Ely's Cream Balm to me. I can emphasize his statement, "It is a positive cure for catarrh if used as directed."—Rev. Francis W. Poole, Pastor Central Pres. Church, Helen, Mon.

It is the medicine above all others for catarrh, and is worth its weight in gold. I can use Ely's Cream Balm with safety and it does all that is claimed for it.—B. W. Sperry, Hartford, Conn.

THAT TERRIFYING QUAKE.

IT WAS FELT IN PLAINFIELD IN THE MOST PERCEPTIBLE MANNER.

Frightening People Was About the Worse Damage Done—Small Bric-a-Brac Dashed to the Floor—Other Incidents.

Plainfield was startled Sunday morning by being in the seismic area. You don't know what the seismic area is? Look in the dictionary. There you will see it is pertaining to an earthquake. Ah yes, the earthquake, you did hear something about that, eh? Well, did you feel it, that is the most interesting question. Some people did and some did not.

Those that felt it assert that the vibration of this great planet on which we exist occurred at about six o'clock in the morning. It was a funny sensation, so say those who felt it. It was so funny that numerous people found that they could not stop shaking after the real shake was over. That was because they were frightened.

The earthquake reporter of The Press had fallen victim to King Morpheus by the time the disturbance came from the direction of where China is supposed to be located, and not a thing did he know of this sample of Amazon life until interrogated in the morning: "Did you feel the earthquake?" So long as the reporter has no personal acquaintance with the great disturbance all that he can do is to record what he has heard.

A great many people were awakened from sound sleep to find themselves shaking as though they had the St. Vitus dance, and hearing ornaments on mantels clanking together in a truly sepulchral way. Several citizens of veracity assert that the vibration was such as to precipitate frail things from shelves and dash them to smithereens on the floor. Others proclaim that the demonstration jarred clocks so that they struck. In a number of instances men stated that they thought some one had crawled under their beds, and on the part of the brave they immediately investigated, only to become more and more perplexed. The less fearless stuck their heads under the bed clothes while their hearts went pitty-pat and they drew long breaths. A few people were heard from who claimed that the quaking was hard enough to jar them out of bed.

The queerest sensation of all was to the people on the streets, who, for the time being, seemed to move about in the most promiscuous way. And for them to see trees, big brick buildings and other substantial and immovable objects join in the unpremeditated act of a reckless dance was a terrifying sight.

This was the fourth shock that has been felt in this part of the country in the past eleven years.

Justice Newcorn was among the large number who felt the earthquake. He says he was dreaming at the time that he was being arrested by Sergeant Kiely, for fighting. He sent for one of the city officials, but before he arrived he awakened to hear the dishes railing in the closet. He also felt his bed shake.

Parade, Banquet, and General Good Time.

The first day of the convention of Letter Carriers at Philadelphia was a grand success. Yesterday morning the Plainfield carriers marched down to the North avenue station headed by Messenger Frisby bearing the handsome silk banner presented by Mrs. John M. Hetfield. The special train from Newark carried them to Philadelphia where they marched up Broad street to the starting point of the parade and fell into line. After the parade they attended a monster banquet given to the Letter Carriers and then saw the sights returning at about midnight.

A Party On the Lawn.

Although it rained Saturday it could not spoil the pleasure of those who were present at the lawn party given that afternoon in honor of David and Isabella Scott, by their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Scott, of East Front street. Most of the afternoon was spent in playing games while an elaborate collation was served on the lawn. Among those present were: The Misses Agnes Minford, Clara Woodward, Blossom Randolph, Bessie Bond, Tom Minford, Malcolm Barnes, Harold Chandor, Walter Scott, Jr., Lester Bond, Lewis Minford and Richard Minford.

Music in the First Baptist Church.

Organist E. J. Fitzbugh, of the First Baptist church, has returned from his vacation and officiated on Sunday last. Those who composed the choir were Mrs. Harold Serrell, Miss Bessie Blair, Miss Bertha Needham, Mr. Smith, B. T. Barnes, George Snediker. The balance of the choir will return in a short time.

Death of Mrs. Ackerman.

Mrs. C. J. Ackerman, Sr., died at her home on Clinton avenue last evening, after an extended illness. She was the wife of ex Chief-of-Police Ackerman, of this city, and was a favorite among those with whom she was acquainted for her kindly disposition. She leaves several children.

A DAY MADE FOR RACING.

THOUGH NO FAST TIME WAS MADE AT THE OVAL MONDAY.

A Thousand Enthusiastic Cyclists Applaud the Efforts of the Flying Wheelmen —Elizabeth Won the County Team Race.

If all the cyclists in New Jersey had gone to Farmer Dunn and demanded perfect weather for Labor Day, they could not have had a day more suited to the wheeling fraternity than yesterday. About 1,000 of the cycling enthusiasts took advantage of this perfect September day to attend the race meet of the Crescent Wheelmen at their oval yesterday. Long pants, short pants, golf suits and bloomers were there in profusion and, although the grandstand was not filled, what the crowd lost in numbers was made up in enthusiasm. The contingent from the Harlem Wheelmen was especially noticeable in their demonstrations. There were a number of their racing men on the track and when one managed to get a place all the light blue bedecked band set up a cheer. The attendance consisted mostly of cyclists who partially filled the grandstand, while the bleachers were about covered.

The track was in perfect condition, Saturday evening's rain giving it a through and much needed wetting. A gentle breeze came from the northwest and aided the riders on the home stretch, although hindering them on the other side. The tumbles were many, R. Kissam, of Fanwood, seeming the most unlucky as he fell in every race he rode. No one was seriously hurt however.

An attempt was made to prevent loafing by placing a time limit on all the events but as most of the riders rode in several races they were allowed to set a slower pace then they would have been otherwise. The time of the races was, in consequence, rather slow, but as most of the finishes were exciting it made up for the slow time.

The management of the meet was very good and Clerk-of-the-course F. L. C. Martin and his assistants, E. I. Serrell, L. H. VanBuren and Roger Erickson, deserve great credit for the rapid manner in which they got the starters out for each race. The races were, in that respect, a great improvement over the last ones as there was no delay in starting. The other officials also performed their duties excellently.

With one exception there was no apparent foul riding during all the afternoon and that exception was in the team race for the championship of Union county and the Saltonstall Cup between the Elizabeth Athletic Club and the Crescent Wheelmen. On the last lap at the short term, one of the E. A. C. men shot out and McCutchen attempted to follow but was driven clear up on the bank by one of the other team who had been angry at him for not setting the pace. The referee did not see it, however, and the Plainfield team would not protest.

The races were for Class A riders only, but the cracks turned out and plenty of pretty riding resulted. The prettiest of which to Plainfield eyes was the two-mile handicap, which T. A. Cuming, of the Crescent Wheelmen, won through a splendid exhibition of team work and good judgement.

One-mile novice. First prize, gold medal, donated by J. H. McVey; second prize, silver medal, donated by George B. DeRevere; third prize, bronze medal, donated by John Rickert. The first heat was won by O. B. Mitchell, of East Orange Roadsters; H. Nichols, Jr., of the Bushwick Wheelmen, second, and F. Fellgrall, Jr., unattached, of Jersey City, third. The time was 2.34 3-5. Seven starters. C. E. Coombs, of the Crescent Wheelmen, lost his pedal at the start, but chased after the bunch. P. A. Richards, of the Nassau Wheelmen, pacing. The pace began to grow hotter and A. Garigues, of New York city, took the lead at a rattling speed. H. Nichols, Jr., of the Bushwick Wheelmen, took the lead at the far turn in the last lap, but Mitchell spurted prettily and won sitting up. Coombs finished sixth. The second heat was won by O. J. Gette, of the Bushwick Wheelmen, Brooklyn; H. H. Hirsh, unattached, of New York, second, and H. F. Ricca, of the Riverside Wheelmen, New York, third. The time was 2.59. Eight starters.

The second heat was not as exciting as the previous one, the riders remaining bunched until the last lap. The pace was slow until this lap, and then Gette won with ease in a long spurt. Hirsch took second after a fight.

Third heat was won by A. J. Forney, A. P. Jr. A. C., of Asbury Park; second, M. C. Tattan, Cyclone C. C., of Brooklyn; third, A. S. Ellis, Century C. C., of Newark. The time was 3:08. Eight starters.

The men loafed and kept going slower until they almost stopped. R. Kissam fell in the second lap, but pluckily remounted his wheel and started after the rest of the entries, but the final spurt soon began, Ellis trying to run away from his field. Forney and Tattan caught him before he reached the tape, and took first and second by a length each.

The final of the one mile novice was won by O. B. Mitchell; second, H. Nicholls, Jr.; third, O. J. Gette.

The winners in the third heat did not start in the final as they had far exceeded their time limit. Ricca paced and kept going faster all time until Mithell, Nicholls and Gette shot ahead. Nicholls led on the far turn and pushed well, but Mitchell passed him on the stretch, while Gette was only a wheel behind.

The first heat of the two-third mile scratch was won by E. C. Johnson, Harlem Wheelmen, of Rahway; second, B. L. Johnson, Harlem Wheelmen Wheelmen, of Somerville; third, C. K. Granger, Riverside Wheelmen, of New York city. The time was 1:44 4-5. Nine starters.

"Pop" Granger set a hot pace while the rest followed in a bunch, with Combs well up in front. At the second lap the two Harlem Wheelmen, E. C. and B. L. Johnson shot out with Granger close behind, but was unable to catch them. They kept the same positions to the tape.

The second heat was won by W. M. McCutchen, Crescent Wheelmen; second, W. L. Darmer, N. J. A. C., of Jersey City; third, J. Johnson, of Red Bank Wheelmen. The time was 1:50. Five starters.

McCutchen refused to pace and the men loafed awhile, but coming in on the long turn Darmer jumped out and obtained a big lead. McCutchen, however, overhauled him by a magnificent spurt and crossed the tape a length ahead.

The third heat was won by Bert Ripley, Harlem Wheelmen, of Red Bank; second, W. D. McGurn, Harlem Wheelmen, of Brooklyn; third, Joe Harrison, of Harlem Wheelmen. The time was 1.49 1-5. Nine starters.

The first part of the race was a loaf and the last a contest between the Harlem Wheelmen who had everything their own way.

The final of the two-third mile scratch was won by Joe Harrison; secood, Bert Ripley; third, C. K. Granger. The time was 1:52.

The Harlem boys did about as they pleased in this race, loafing at first and then running away from the rest of the riders. Granger refused to be run away from, however, and made the finish a close one.

One mile handicap. The first heat was won by F. F. Turner, 70 yards, of Wilmington, Delaware. Second, J. F. Beam, sixty yards, Riverside Wheelman, of New York. Third, L. R. Lefferson, eighty yards, H. W. Ocean Grove. Time, 2.13 1-5. Eleven starters. Beam, from the sixty yard mark was rear man and chased after the rest at a lively gait. Cuming led for a time but the riders bunched about him and he was unable to finish better than fifth. Beam caught the rest and took second place by a wheel.

The second heat was won J. G. Johnson, 160 yards, Harlem Wheelmen Brooklyn. Second, R. Weir of Wilmington, Delaware. Third, O. J. Walker, 100 yards, unattached, of Bayonne. Time, 2.14 3-5. Thirteen starters. Granger ran after his field from the thirty yard line and finally caught them but the effort was too much and he only finished sixth. Crane set the pace for a time but fell back and at the finish spurted up in fine form and took fourth.

The third heat was won by L. Hunter, ninety yards, N. J. A. C., Bayonne. Second, C. J. Bird, ninety yards, Elizabeth A. C. Third, C. S. Norris, 120 yards, unattached, of New Brunswick. The time was 2.16 3-5. Ten starters. Darner started from scratch but fell out after two laps. The pace was hot and the limit men bunched. Hunter left them at the finish, however, and won without trouble. Bird won second by several feet.

The final heat was won by J. T. Beam. Second, J. Lindley. Third, L. R. Lefferson. The time was 2.14 3-5. The riders bunched in the first lap while Crane and Norris paced them. On the second lap Kissam took another fall on the long stretch while Walker and Hunter tumbled over each other on the turn. Turner had his choice of running over them or off the track into the grass. He chose the last and lost his chances of winning among the weeds. Beam won by several lengths.

The two-mile team race was won by the Elizabeth Athletic Club. The teams were composed of the following men: Charles Appley, H. F. Loehrs, and C. J. Bird, of Elizabeth Athletic Club, and W. W. McCutchen, T. A. Cuming, and S. C. Crane of the Crescent Wheelmen. The men finished as follows: H. F. Loehrs, first; W. W. McCutchen, second; C. J. Bird, third; T. A. Cuming, fourth; Chas. Appley, fifth; and S. C. Crane, sixth, Elizabeth winning the championship of Union County by the score of twelve to nine.

Two-mile lap race, won by Joe Harrison, Harlem Wheelmen, eighteen points. Second, Bert Ripley, Harlem Wheelmen, thirteen points. Third, C. K. Granger, Riverside Wheelmen, New York city, six points. Four starters. Darmer started but the continual spurt was too much and he fell out. Harrison won first in all the laps except the first.

One-mile scratch race, 2:30 class. First heat, won by A. Kluge, Bushwick Wheelmen, Brooklyn. Second, Louis Hunter, N. J. A. C., Bayonne. Third, J. T. Beam, Riverside Wheelmen. The time was 3.05. Six starters. They loafed around for two laps when Hunter shot ahead. The rest followed and caught him but Kluge was the only one able to pass.

The second heat was won by Geo. A. Robertson, unattached, New York city. Second, Bert Ripley, Harlem Wheelmen. Third, C. H. Appley, Elizabeth A. C. Time 3.11 1-5. Seven starters. A regular funeral until the last quarter when Robertson jumped the bunch and won by three lengths. There was a lively race for second and third.

The final heat was won by Burt Ripley. Second. J. T. Beam. Third, Louis Hunter. Time, 2.51 1-5. Cluge led a liely procession which remained well together to the far turn, when Ripley and Beam sailed by and Ripley took first by three-quarters of a length.

Two-mile handicap. The first heat was won by R. Wier, Wilmington. Second, J. T. Beam, 110 yards, Riverside Wheelmen. Third, S. C. Crane, 260 yards, Crescent Wheelmen. Fourth, T. A. Cuming, 240 yards, Crescent Wheelmen. Fifth, A. I. Walker, 180 yards, unattached, Bayonne. The time was 4.41 4-5. Eleven starters. The limit men, under the lead of Crane and Cuming, hustled along while E. C. Johnson paced the back men. The pace was a fast one but a few of the rear bunch caught up and made a lively finish, Beam getting second by half a wheel, and Crane third by about the same distance.

The second heat was won by Sam W. Johnson, Jr., 280 yards, Bushwick Wheelmen. Second, O. B. Mitchell, 240 yards, East Orange Roadsters. Third, C. V. A. Walsh, 220 yards, Clio Wheelmen, Jersey City. Fourth, L. R. Lefferson, 150 yards, Harlem Wheelmen. Fifth, C. K. Granger, 60 yards, Riverside Wheelmen. Time, 4.59 4-5. Johnson started 40 yards in front of anyone else and had the race all to himself, finishing half a lap in advance of the rest. The back riders caught the limit men and bunched, then somebody rode too close and Joe Johnson, Cobb and Kissam tumbled in a heap. Mitchell took second place after a fine spurt, while Walsh and Lefferson fought for third down to the tope.

The final heat was won by T. A. Cuming. Second, R. Weir. Third, S. C. Crane. The time was 4.47 1-5. If Johnson expected to win this as easily as he did his heat he was much mistaken. Cuming and Crane soon caught him, passed him and started off together, pacing alternately. "Pop" Granger, who was virtually scratch man, gave up trying to catch those ahead, while the rest of the riders bunched and went after the Crescent pair. Weir was the only man to catch them which he did on the far turn in the last lap. He had been working too hard, however, for a spurt with Cuming who shot out and won by a length. Crane hugged Weir's wheel as he crossed the finish line.

Mr. Leggett's Move.

J. H. Leggett, who has leased the handsome corner store in the Y. M. C. A. building, will probably remove his drug business to that location during the early winter. He proposes fitting the store with the most modern fixtures which will make his place of business an attraction to that part of the city. He also has in view the leasing of the adjoining store on Front street and throwing the two stores into one.

CITY COURT BUSY.

Judge Coddington Renders Judgement in a Number of Cases.

While most of Plainfield was enjoying a day of rest and recreation yesterday, the city court had more than its usual share of work. The first to come up before Judge Coddington was Ferdinand Bader, who was arrested Saturday evening by Officer Totten, on complaint of his wife, for being drunk and disorderly. He was fined $5, and paid it.

Martin Long and Frank Buck had a gay time on Washington street Sunday morning, and each had to pay $10 for quarreling and fighting.

An individual who called himself Albert Tibbo was the next prisoner, and he was charged with trespassing on the cars. Judge Coddington suspended sentence on him.

The next examination was of Annie Staton, who James Donahue complained, had been using profane language. She called him a number of pleasing names, and pleaded not guilty. The trial was set down for next Saturday morning at nine o'clock. Both are denizens of the Dayton block on East Front street, and it was there that the little affair took place. The trial Saturday promises to be a lively one.

Michael Watson paid $5 for being drunk and disorderly on Cottage place Saturday evening.

'TWAS THEIR FIRST GAME.

But They Laid Out The Arlingtons in Fine Style.

The Ridgewoods, were a team of stars, or else they could not have defeated the heretofore victorious Arlingtons at base-ball yesterday. The game was played at Boynton Beach early in the afternoon, and resulted in a general slaughter, the Ridgewoods winning by a score of 26 to 7. They all played well, but salt air and the cool breeze seemed to disarrange the eye-sight of the Arlingtons, and they muffed flies and threw wild, while their opponents knocked the ball all over the field.

The Fair Lillian Coming.

Miss Lillian Kennedy, supported by an exceptional strong company, will play a two nights engagement at Music Hall commencing Wednesday, September 4th, in two entirely new plays, "A Midnight Frolic" and "The Little Rebel." Notwithstanding that this is a very expensive attraction the prices will remain the same as before, viz: 10, 20, 30 and 50 cents.

HOT WATER AND SNOW

THE TWO ARE CLOSE TOGETHER IN THE YELLOWSTONE VALLEY.

A spring, or springs, whose boiling waters appear as clear as though distilled, but from which minute particles of lime and silica have been deposited until in the valley they have built up a snow-white mountain covering 170 acres and 1,200 feet high deserves the name of mammoth, and should not have any age claimed questioned, but the geologists call the Mammoth Hot Springs the youngest of the wonders in the Yellowstone National Park.

How many ages these springs have been boiling cannot be estimated except by those who keep tab on the ages of worlds as a mother keeps track of her children's ages. If the Hot Springs are the beginning of geysers, as some of the geologists say, their youth may account for their beauty, for they are most beautiful, with the richest, and, at the same time, the most delicate colorings that can be found in the water formations.

No architect could design, no sculptor adorn, and no artist color terraces more beautifully than the hot water which boils up out of the depths of the earth have builded, ornamented and colored the terraces that rise up above the Gardiner River, one above the other, until the magnificent Jupiter Terrace crowns the mountain as the throne of the greatest of the gods.

In starting out to view these terraces one must walk over the graveyard of other springs long since dead, and past the mountains built by giant geysers that must have ceased playing when the world was young. The whole valley is filled with the formation from dead springs and geysers, and the Mammoth Springs Hotel is built on this substance which once boiled up with the clear water and was slowly deposited here, and then deserted by the water that gave it life and beauty, decayed and became a dull gray formation like the limestone rock in the lower strata of the earth in Illinois, and began to gather a dry, dusty soil, where the palm trees again took root and began to grow, just as had pine trees grown under this formation down in the valley before the springs covered them up in a grave of lime rock.

There are thirteen distinct terraces and over fifty active springs on what is called the hot water formation. You walk out from the hotel over a dull gray plain of dead formation in which are several yawning chasms where the springs once bubbled in great pools to the "Liberty Cap," cone of a dead geyser, 52 feet high and 20 feet in diameter at its base, also of a dull gray, like a great pile of limestone, and past the "Devil's Thumb," a smaller cone built in the same way and of like appearance in color and material.

Then you leave the graveyard of dead geysers and come face to face with the living terraces, which glisten in the brilliant sunlight and change their colors as the water changes with the currents of the air, flowing over one side and then over the other, making the coral-like formation brilliant with color when fed by the hot water, or white as Carrara marble when exposed to the dry atmosphere.

The hot water is the river of life to those beautiful terraces, and by its changes it keeps them all fresh and beautiful, in strong comparison with the dull, gray waste below, which was once as beautiful until the water climbed higher and built new formations, to leave the old to die and crumble to a desert waste.

The Minerva and the Jupiter terraces are the central and supreme features of the whole formation, not alone because of their great size, but also because in these terraces the water god combined all his delicacy of tracing, and laid on all the colors of his pallet to make them the supreme creations of his genius.

The Minerva terrace is a mass of deposit forty feet in height, covering an area of nearly three-fourths of an acre, with a hot spring in its summit about twenty feet in diameter, the temperature of which is, at the edge, 154 degrees Fahrenheit.

At times the spring disappears entirely, says the guide, and the terrace remains inactive and uninteresting for months, with the promise of early decay, but the water boils out again, revives the terrace, restores its delicate coloring, from the lightest cream on top to the deepest shades of red at the base, the predominating color being bright orange, while the pools or basins are filled with apparent blue water. This terrace is about seventy feet higher than the Liberty Cap, and about ninety feet below the main springs.

The Jupiter terrace is higher, and commands the summit of the hill. It is nearly 100 feet high and covers an area of five acres, with the two Mammoth Springs boiling and bubbling with gas on the top, and the water pouring over the sides to paint the snow-white surface with all the colors of creation. Looking up at this wonderful terrace from below, its artistic tracings are even more inspiring than its enormous size. Its sublimity commands the worship of the least artistic temperament.

So massive and so varied is it that it has been subdivided, and to different parts have been given different names, such as "The Pulpit Terrace," "The Organ," and other names as efforts to describe particular features, but it is all one grand terrace, dedicated to Jupiter, and under its west side is located a beautiful formation, designated as Cupid's Cave.

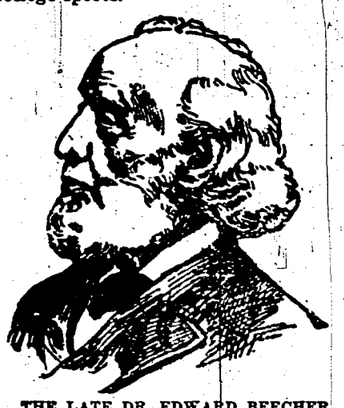
DR. EDWARD BEECHER.

He Was the Associate of His Brother, the Great Plymouth Divine.

The Rev. Dr. Edward Beecher was when he died in his ninety-second year. The venerable clergyman had enjoyed good health all his life and sank gradually into a state of coma, which continued for ten hours before his death, as in the case of his more distinguished brother, Henry Ward Beecher.

Edward Beecher was the third son of the famous Dr. Lyman Beecher by his first wife, and was born at Easthampton, L. I., on Aug. 27, 1803. He was prepared for college under his father's care, and was graduated from Yale in 1822. For the four following years he was a tutor in the Hartford High School and at Yale.

All through his life he was an ardent advocate of physical culture and healthy athletics, and while a tutor at Yale he incurred the criticism of his superiors by engaging in a game of quoits with the pupils. Later on an article from his pen in the Christian Spectator on "The Duty of an Equitable Culture of All the Powers," in which he made a strong plea for healthy physical culture, attracted wide attention and gave a marked stimulus to the cultivation of college sports.



THE LATE DR. EDWARD BEECHER.

Dr. Beecher began his career as a minister in 1826 as Pastor of the Park Street Congregational Church in Boston. He retired from this charge in 1830 to become the President of the Illinois College at Jacksonville, where he remained for fourteen years. In 1844 he accepted a call to the Salem Church in Boston. His second Boston pastorage terminated in 1856, when he took charge of the Congregational Church at Galesburg, Ill. He remained there until 1862, when he came to Brooklyn to assist his brother, Henry Ward Beecher, in the editorial management of the Christian Union.

He was closely associated with the latter all through the famous Tilton scandal, and was seldom absent from his side in the court room during the exciting days of the protracted trial. While engaged on the Christian Union he organized several Congregationalist churches in New Jersey. In 1885 he again put on the ministerial harness, and took charge of the little Congregational Church at Parkville, L. I. From the time of his arrival in Brooklyn in 1872 his home was in the Mason street house in Brooklyn, and in spite of his advanced age he made almost daily trips to Parkville to attend to his pastoral duties.

One night in April, 1889, while returning from Parkville after prayer meeting services, he was run over by a train at the Culver station at Ninth avenue and Twentieth street, and had one leg so badly crushed that it had to be amputated. To the surprise of the doctors he survived his injuries, and within a few months was restored apparently to his usual robust health.

His widow was a Miss Jones, and they celebrated their sixty-fifth wedding anniversary on Oct. 27, 1894. Their two sons are the Rev. Fred W. Beecher, of Angelica, N. Y., and Eugene F. Beecher, of Brooklyn.

He Loved Watermelon.

He was one of the rich coal black species of negro, and he was walking along with a huge slice of watermelon pressed into the horizontal gash in his face.

The rich juice trickled down over his shiny, ebon hued skin and ran in little rivulets over his protruding lips. It poured down his chin and dropped off in little shiny beads that fell like big rain drops in a gathering storm.

He was the cynosure of all eyes, yet he heeded them not.

"Cuffee," said a curious bystander, "you must like watermelon."

"Deed I does, boss," he blubbered. "I was raised on watermelon."

"Where did you get that nice, big piece, Cuffee?"

"Dis piece, bress yuh heart, I done gone traded de old shoes for it," he responded, as he imbedded his face again in the succulent slice.

He was, indeed, barefooted. He had made the novel and somewhat unusual exchange of the shoes on his feet for a slice of watermelon.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Curiosities of Wheeling.

The Boston Journal gives 500,000 as the number of bicycles marketed during the past twelve months. Another inquiry fixed at 560,000 the annual capacity of existing factories. Assuming these figures to be anywhere near the truth, some curious consequences appear to flow. If 500,000 bicycles have been sold at the average price of $70 each, it follows that the surprising total of $37,500,000 has been invested by the public in these interesting vehicles. The cost of producing a bicycle, according to quality and completeness of manufacturing equipment, has been reported as varying from $25 to $35. Taking the average at $30, it appears that an average profit of $40 on each machine has been divided between manufacturer and middlemen. This represents the respectable total of more than $20,000,000.

BY THE LIGHT OF THE MOON.

They Played Games, Conversed and Ate Watermelons Until Morning.

Watermelons are in season and there fore watermelon parties are, and last evening a party of that kind was given by Miss Laura Holder and A. K. Holder, at their home at the corner of West Seventh and Liberty streets, in honor of their cousin, Miss Reba DeCamp. As the name implies part of the evening was spent in feasting on delicious watermelons and muskmelons, the rest of the time games or conversation kept the young people busy. Most of the evening was spent on the lawn which was very prettily decorated with Chinese lanterns. After an evening of enjoyment the party broke up in the wee small hours of the morning.

Among those who were present were: The Misses Ida Johnson, May Johnson, Lizzie Johnson, Emily Coriell, Margaret Coriell and Abbott, of Plainfield; Lilly Gaskill and Milly Gaskill, of Dunellen; William Monfort, John S. Johnson, A. R. Johnson, Ephraim Vail, Bert Bodine and Will Cooke.

RANG BOX EIGHTY-ONE.

A Careless Lineman Astonishes the Whole Fire Department.

The fire-alarm whistle was not on a spree yesterday afternoon shortly after five o'clock, neither was it the fault of the system that made the whistle blow in such an insane manner. The whole cause of it all was the carelessness of a lineman who, in searching for a ground, made a bridle on the line and did not make a secure connection. As the wire vibrated the circuit was made and broken very rapidly and a number of rapid blows sounded. The whistle blew 42 very plainly but the gong in the engine house first registered 81 and then 95, completely mystifying the firemen. Chief Doane and Assistant Chief Martin soon found the cause of the alarm and rectified it.

RACING AT NIGHT.

The Bicycle Events Will Be Contested for Under Novel Conditions.

Novel, indeed, will be the bicycle racing events at the Crescent Oval on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, under the management of O. S. Bonnell, of Philadelphia. Mr. Bonnell has conducted twelve of these meets with great success and there is every indication that the Plainfield affair will attract big crowds and provide sport that has never been witnessed in this city before.

The track will be illuminated with fifty powerful calcium lights, which are powerful enough for the audience to distinguish the riders at all points on the track.

The admission price is twenty-five cents.

All the Big Men Will Be There.

All the Union county politicians will turn out at the State Fair next week. The fact that the county has two prominent candidates for the Republican nomination for Governor, something that was never known before, will have a tendency to bring every crossroads politician to the fair on Big Thursday to mingle with the statesmen to be assembled on President's Hill, and learn from them the latest phases of the situation. More news will be picked up at that gathering about the chances of the various aspirants than has been known before, and it is not unlikely that the fate of some of them will be settled by this meeting of the party leaders around President Gaddis's hospitable tent on the hilltop.

Senator Rogers Own Boom.

Senator M. A. Rogers yesterday declared that his candidacy for Governor was bona fide and in the interest of no one else. He says his show of strength in the convention will surprise some people. He says he will get delegates not only from Camden county, but from all points of the State. Ex-Sheriff David Baird, the county leader, says Camden's delegation will be solid for Rogers, and that it will do all it can to secure his nomination. If it seen to be impossible to win, then Camden's vote will go to Kean.

Somerset Sunday-School Convention.

Another big Sunday-school convention is to be held soon. It is the thirty-sixth annual convention of the Somerset County Sunday-school Association, which is dated for September 10th in the Methodist Episcopal church of Bernardsville. There are two sessions with a recess at noon intervening. The programme for the day contains some new and interesting features.

To be Built at Rahway.

An important meeting was held in Jersey City on Thursday by the commission appointed to supervise the erection of the State Reformatory. Mayor Daly, of Rahway, who attended the meeting, says there is no longer any doubt that the reformatory will be built on the Edgar farm, just outside the limits of Rahway. This question was practically settled, the Mayor says, at the meeting.

NATURALIZATION LAW UPHELD

TO VOTE, A PERSON MUST BE A CITIZEN 30 DAYS BEFORE ELECTION.

Judge VanSyckel Declares that the State Legislature Can Prescribe Its Own Electoral Qualifications—Points.

In the case of Albert Rushworth against the Common Pleas Court of Hudson county, to test the constitutionality of the naturalization law passed at the last session of the Legislature, Justice VanSyckel, of the Supreme Court, yesterday filed an opinion in which the act is held to be constitutional.

The act in question provides that "No person shall hereafter be naturalized or admitted to be a citizen of the United States by any court of this State within the thirty days next preceding any national, State, municipal, general, special, local or charter election."

The relator, Rushworth, was refused naturalization by the Hudson County Common Pleas upon the ground that his application was made within thirty days next preceding the election for municipal officers in the town of West Hoboken.

1. Congress is without power to interfere with or control State courts except in so far as the Federal courts have appellate jurisdiction.

2. Congress cannot without the consent of the State constrain the State courts to entertain or act upon applications for naturalization.

3 It is competent for the State Legislature to prescribe and limit the times when and during which such applications may be heard in the State courts.

Mr. Perry's Joke.

Ex-Mayor Perry, of Bound Brook, and J. P. Laire, of this city, are great friends and when an opportunity offers they like to play jokes on one another. Mr. Perry hearing that Mr. Loire was ill, thought probably he would like to have a nurse, so he prevailed upon Hugh McLoughlin, a resident of Bound Brook who has more time than money to come to Plainfield and offer his services. He gave him a recommendation as an incentive. When the man arrived in Plainfield, he secured the services of a policeman who directed him to Mr. Laire's store, where he met Mr. Dunham the genial clerk. The latter understood the joke and thoroughly enjoyed it. Word was sent to Mr. Laire and he also enjoyed the trick that had been played on him. The man did't get the job, but found his way home again.

New Fire Company at Roselle.

A meeting was held at Nelson Bonnel's office in Roselle and a new fire company was organized. Nelson Bonnell was elected foreman. An attempt had been made earlier in the evening to organize a company, but owing to a factional split among those attending the meeting the project fell through. A majority of those present then repaired to Bonnell's place, where another conference was held and an organization effected.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

SCHOMP WALKS A FREE MAN.

CORONER'S JURY EXONERATE HIM FROM CAUSING CLARK'S DEATH.

The Murray Hill Farmer Died By His Own Carelessness, Says the Law—Incidents Observed at the Inquest.

Farmer Samuel Clark was accidentally killed and Fred Schomp is in no way to blame for his death. So said the coroner's jury that met at Emory's hotel in Scotch Plains yesterday afternoon. The inquest was called for two o'clock, but Coroner George H. Horning did not appear until about twenty minutes after that time. Then the Prosecutor, Fred R. Marsh, and the court stenographer, Herbert Knight, failed to put in an appearance. But just as the inquest was about to commence the officers appeared. Constable Walpole, of Scotch Plains, had charge of the arrangements for the inquest. County Detective Keron was also present. The jury consisted of James A. Baker, foreman; Rev. Dr. Parks, T. E. Cleaver, Stites M. Parse, Robert Jahn and George Lyons.

The inquest began at 2:45, and Dr. Victor Mravlag, the expert from Elizabeth, who made the autopsy, was the first witness. He testified that he had found no wounds on Clark's body except a hole in the back of the head about an inch in diameter. The skull was also fractured in two places. He found a hemorrhage between the bone of the skull and the brain, which brought on paralysis of the brain and caused death.

Dr. Frank W. Westcott was the next to testify. He said that he was called to attend Clark last Sunday evening at 10:20, but when he arrived he found Clark dead.

The next witness sworn was Fred Tombs, of Murray Hill, a nephew of the deceased, and his companion on the night of the accident. He told the story of the evening, how they had gone to Lee's hotel, and had both drank a little. Clark, he said, had had only two full glasses. They then left the hotel on a slow trot, and just as the corner was turned the collision occurred. The men in the carriage, he said, had suggested that a new wheel be got or the old one paid for. Clark was on the right hand side of the horse when he started and tried to catch the bridle but failed and fell full length backward. Tombs then volunteered the information that he "thought the wheel passed over some part of the body." He was certain, however, that the body was dragged a short distance.

Joseph Tombs, his brother, was another of the party and told his story, but it was about the same as that by his brother except that he took the broken buggy to the shed and did not see the death of his uncle. Both of the nephews said that Schomp agreed to Clark's demand to settle the matter under the shed.

Miss Lucy Westphal, Schomp's companion on the ride, told her story. They rode to Bayonne in the morning and were returning when the Clark rig rounded the corner. Schomp went as far to the right as possible, but the other wheel came too near. When asked whether she heard any loud talking, she said she heard some, but as her back was toward them she did hot hear what was said. She, however, heard Schomp say, "I don't want any trouble. I don't want to fight." Schomp then started for Walpole's blacksmith shop, but Miss Westphal said, "Why, Fred, you're not going to leave me all alone are you?" and he returned. A young man nearby then said, "The best thing you can do is to whip up and drive on."

Finally Fred took the advice. Miss Westphal did not see or hear Clark fall, and had no idea any one was hurt till the next morning. The strain began to tell on her, and while Prosecutor Marsh was questioning, she burst into tears and was led from the room.

Mike Donalen, Alexander Messeller and Harry Dickson, were sworn in succession and each added their little bit to the already well known story.

The last witness, Miss Marier Classen, was, perhaps, the most important one, as she sat on George Marsh's piazza and saw Clark meet his death. She did not think Clark had hold of the bridle but saw the whip come down and the horse spring forward. Clark made a fut l attempt to catch the bridle and then fell, supposedly in front of the horse.

The jury was locked in the parlor of Emery's hotel where the inquest was held and after about twenty minutes gave a verdict exonerating Schomp from all blame in causing the death, and stating that Clark was killed through an accident.

Lawyer George W. DeMeza, of this city, was present to represent the two young women in the case and Lawyer Anderson, of Somerville, came to look after Schomp's interest.

As soon as the verdict had been rendered Lawyer Anderson and Geo. H. Rockafellow, of West Fifth street, secured a writ of release from Justice Nash and went to Elizabeth to bring Schomp home. The warden would not release him, however, until a note was received from Prosecutor Marsh and it was not until 7:30 that the now vindicated young man left the jail. They arrived in Plainfield at 8:16 and this morning Schomp returned to his duties at Wilson's grocery store.

WALKED INTO A HORNET'S NEST.

Then Ran All the Way Home, But He Could Not Escape.

It is not a pleasant thing to be in the close vicinity of a hornets nest when the little insects are angry, but yesterday afternoon little Halloway Titus, of Central avenue, walked right into one. He had been fishing with some of his comrades in Greenbrook between Sanford and Westervelt avenue and was returning. When the hornets were thus wantonly invaded, they turned out to fight the intruder. The lad ran as fast as his legs could carry him, but that was not fast enough, for the hornets lit in swarms on every exposed portion of his person. At last he reached home in an almost exhausted condition. Most of his tormentors had left, but there were several who had worked their way inside his clothes, and kept stinging him repeatedly. He was at last freed from the last hornet and his badly swollen head and hands looked after.

SUCKERS WILL ALWAYS LIVE.

Chief Grant Finds a Green Goods Box in Plainfield.

It is rather an uncouth saying that "a sucker is born every minute," but it is as true as it is vulgar. Chief Grant has an article in his possession which proves it. It is a little japanned tin box, six by twelve inches, such as are used by green goods men to dupe the country gawks who go to the nietropolis to buy $5,000 for $500 to return and do their unsuspecting neighbors. The victim is always cautioned by the sharpers not to open the box until he gets home and to that end they lock it. But the Georgia cracker who got this box did not follow the instructions. His curiosity to know what kind of money he had received got the best of the advice of the green goods men, and so he evidently took a big jack-knife and cut open the end. After he found nothing but the pile of blank paper and one dollar on top, he doubtless concluded that a fool and his money soon part, and threw the box out of the car window as the train passed through Plainfield.

The box was found laying along the railroad track near Rheaume's coal shed by the Chief, who now has it at his office.

A LITTLE FELLOW BURNED.

Playing With Matches and Ignited His Clothes—Nothing Serious.

The four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. James Keating, of 523 West Fourth street, met with a serious accident in front of the house yesterday afternoon.

There was a quantity of paper and rags in the street and the little fellow had some matches that he was playing with. In lighting one of them the paper caught fire. The boy stood near the flames which ignited his clothes. He stood still for a moment with fright, but presently began to scream. This attracted the attention of a young man nearby. The latter quickly took off his coat and throwing it around the boy extinguished the flames. He was taken in the house and Dr. Boone called. On examination it was found that he was severely burned about the face and chest. However, the doctor does not apprehend any serious results.

MOON AND LANTERNS OUTSIDE.

And A Throng of Young and Old Buyers Inside.

A peach festival is a novel kind of an entertainment and the one held at Marconnier Chapel last evening was largely attended. The outside of the chapel and the lawn were gaily decorated with lighted Chinese lanterns while bunting, flowers and greens made the interior look like a different place. Booths were arranged around the sides and in them, cake, candy, fruit and ice cream were sold to the eager throng of buyers. At one time the crush was so great that those who wished admission to the building had to wait. Quite a number of Plainfield young people attended and greatly enjoyed themselves and the delicacies.

A Barnstorming Editor.

A. J. Perrine is to play a match on the violin with P. J. McAndrews of Plainfield, says the Westfield Leader.—News.

This item appeared in The Daily Press a week or more ago. It was copied by The Leader and then by the sweatshop and slowpoke sheet in this city, whose editor's newspaper experience seems to have been gained while he was the featured member of a barnstorming theatrical company, who were stranded in the west.

A Fine Piece of Mechanism.

The Scott Printing Machine Company are just finishing up a web perfecting press which will be sent to Atlanta for display at the exposition this winter. It is a valuable and fine piece of machinery.

H. C. CORSA IS OUSTED AGAIN.

COLONEL WARING ONLY REINSTATES TO DISCHARGE A SECOND TIME.

Commissioner Claims That the Plainfield Man Did Not Report for Duty When Told to Come Back—Case in Court.

Street Cleaning Commissioner Waring has made a move upon H. C. Corsa by which he believes that he has got Mr. Cora out of his Department for good, says The Tribune. Mr. Corsa was dismissed from the Department again yesterday, and this is said to be final.

Mr. Corsa held the position of District Superintendent in the Street Cleaning Department of New York, the salary of which is $1,800. He and Col. Waring did not get along well together, and on August 8th Mr. Corsa received a private letter from the Commissioner asking for his immediate resignation from the position which he held. Mr. Corsa stood upon his rights as a veteran and declined to resign, and later was dismissed, after charges had been made against him. He declined to remain at the hearing as witnesses against him were not sworn.

Mr. Corsa, through counsel, obtained an order from the Supreme Court directing the Commissioner to show cause why a peremptory mandamus should not issue to compel him to reinstate him to his old position. This proceeding came up before Judge Beekman, in Supreme Court Chambers, yesterday. Assistant Corporation Counsel Ward represented Col. Waring. The latter has taken such a personal interest in this fight of Corsa that he was in court himself.

As soon as the case had been stated by Mr. Olcott Assistant Corporation Counsel Ward sprang a surprise by declaring that only yesterday Mr. Corsa had again been dismissed from the position of district superintendent, and that it was a final dismissal. Colonel Waring had been instructed that the original dismissal of Mr. Corsa was not legal, and that he should be reinstated.

Mr. Corsa did not see fit to take advantags of this restoration, inasmuch as his case was before the Supreme Court, and his counsel advised him that he would better get the Court to issue a mandamus to compel Colonel Waring to reinstate him. It is now contended that as Mr. Corsa has refused to accept this restoration, and having absented himself from the Department for five consecutive days his place is deemed vacant, just as if he had resigned, and yesterday morning the Commissioner dismissed him again from the Department: An affidavit of Commissioner Waring setting forth these circumstances was presented.

MUSIC HALL OPENS.

The Playhouse Management Has a Bright Season in Prospect.

As the saying goes, Music Hall presented an inviting appearance last night. After months of work at repairing, cleaning and decorating, the playhouse looks bright and spick as a brand new dollar, and though the first night did not open to a large business in the way of an audience, it did start with a management and condition of affairs that promises to make the season the most successful of any yet conducted.

The slim audience can be accounted for by the simple statement, "It was a hot night." People sweltered out of doors and few evinced any inclination to go inside. But what the audience lacked in numbers it made up in enthusiasm for the production of "The Captain's Mate" by the Florence Bindley company. As for the play, it is enough to say that it was popular with the orchestra circle and gallery alike. They laughed at the comedians' jokes, applauded the hero's manliness, detested the methods of the villain and sympathized with the star soubrette's trials and tribulations, and her righteous victories over conspiracies. And incidentally enjoyed the singing and dancing specialties interspersed through the play.

A WASHINGTON PARK RECEPTION.

An Informal Affair Given By Mrs. Charles W. Smith of Willow Avenue.

A very pleasant evening was enjoyed by all who attended the informal reception given in honor of Mrs. F. E. Buckingham by her sister, Mrs. Charles W. Smith, of Willow avenue, last evening. Part of the evening was spent in dancing and music, after which progressive euchre entertained the party. The first prizes in it were won by Mrs. William Brett and W. Hull Western. The winners of the second prizes were Miss Annie Murphy and George Taggart. Dainty refreshments were served and brought to a close an enjoyable evening.

Among those present, besides Mr. and Mrs. Smith, were: Mr. and Mrs. William Brett, Mr. and Mrs. J. Dobbs, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Western, Miss Annie Murphy, Miss Warman, Miss Emma Hall, Clarence Murphy, George Taggart, C. Richey, of Brooklyn, W. Hull Western and Charles Western.

SCRAMBLING IN SOMERSET.

MANY STATESMEN WANT RECOGNITION IN THE ADJOINING COUNTY.

Judge Bartine Has No Desire to Retire from the Bench—Lawyer Reed in the Field—Numerous Other Candidates.

There is going to be some lively scrambling among the local politicians in Somerset County this fall, says a Somerville correspondent in the Newark News. The pace was set a month ago, and the dog-day weather has not caused it to slaken. There are three desirable offices to be filled in the county this year, besides the election of a member of Assembly. A county Judge is to be elected under the new law in place of Judge John D. Bartine, who has occupied the bench for ten years, and the terms of Sheriff George A. Dilts and County Clerk Matthew H. Van Derveer expire. The former is a Republican and the latter a Democrat. So close is the county politically that it is frequently the case that half the offices are held by each party. This is what makes the contest so interesting.

Judge John Bartine has no disposition to retire from the bench, but is seeking the nomination for Judge. He led one of the Democratic factions for years and has always exerted a strong influence in the party. The records show that he has had few of his decisions reversed by the upper court. It is asserted by the temperance people that he has favored the hotel-keepers in all their demands. The latter's influence will undoubtedly be cast for him in this contest.

The only Democratic opponent of Judge Bartine is William V. Steele, formerly Prosecutor of the Pleas. Mr. Steele comes from one of the oldest families in the county and is the son of the late Congressman Steele, who represented the old Fourth District. Steele belongs to the younger element of the party and is regarded as a formidable candidate. His chances of securing the nomination appear equal with Judge Bartine's, and in some respects he is stronger.

On the Republican side there is a kind of three-cornered fight going on for the Judgeship. Lewis H. Schenck was the only candidate for a time. He is a son of ex-Senator Schenck, has been counsel for the Board of Freeholders and has an office in Newark, where he spends a portion of his time. He had it all his own way for a time, but James L. Griggs, another young lawyer of Somerville, has become a formidable opponent. Griggs is connected with one of the wealthiest families at the county seat.

More recently Charles A. Reed, of North Plainfield, has entered the arena, and he is working for delegates in that section of the county. Up to the present Schenck seems to have the lead, and will probably get the nomination, unless some combination is formed against him, which is not improbable.

Augustus Vanderveer, who is now acting as Deputy County Clerk, is the only candidate for the nomination for County Clerk at the present time on the Democratic side. He has been effcient in the office, and the powerful influence of the present Clerk, W. H. Vanderveer, has been thrown in his favor. His greatest danger comes from the fact that Calvin D. McMurtry, who resides in Somerville, also wants to be the nominee for Sheriff. It is hardly probable that all three candidates can come from one township with safety to the ticket. McMurtry would like to see a man from Bernarde Township, possibly Dr. Voorhees, named for Clerk, as that would help his canvass. It is probable that another candidate will be brought out soon. The Republicans are yet at sea about their nominee. The names of H. U. Spencer and ex-Assemblyman Frank W. Somers are talked about.

Calvin McMurtry has little opposition thus far for the Shrievalty nomination. He is the son of an ex-Sheriff and is a member of Somerville's "Four Hundred." He has long wanted office, but has been pushed aside by his party leaders. On the Republican side W. H. H. Wyckoff, Jacob M. Vreeland, a former director of the Board of Freeholders, ex-Assemblyman Frank W. Somers and Rynear W. Staats are all mentioned in connection with this nomination. There promises to be quite a lively scrimmage on this side for the Republican leaders feel quite confident of victory.

Very little gossip has been heard about the Assembly nominations as yet. The greatest interest just now is in the selection of delegates for the State conventions. It looks as though the Republicans would send a solid delegation to Trenton for John W. Griggs. Senator L. A. Thompson is throwing all his influence in that direction. Augbstus W. Cutler is gaining favor among the Democrats.

Better Talking Facilities.

HOUSE BUILDING PAST AND PRESENT

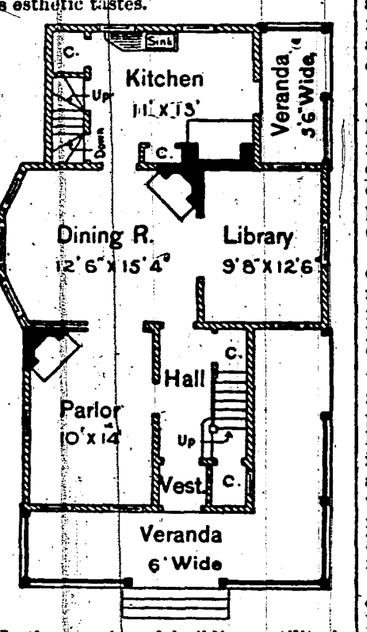
Whenever a house that has stood for many years is finally demolished there are many cries that "our forefathers built better than we." It is undoubtedly a fact that there was greater honesty of construction in the old days than at present, and that the materials used were generally better. The mortar in the old buildings is so hard that it seems almost a part of the stone or brick; it was not made with a plentitude of sand and a modicum of cement, and so it has never crumbled under wet weather as does the modern mixture. The old bricks were better burned and seemed more flinty than porous; the beams were hewn out of the heart of the tree and were not slender joints sawed like planks—the hewn beams having twice the length of life that sawed timber has, the ax leaving a glaze on the surface of the wood, closing the pores.

The essential matter of all receives far more attention now than ever before—that is sanitary condition. Solidity of masonry and joinery cannot take the place of sealed drains, perfect ventilation, good lighting and heating. In the old days every builder was left to his own devices, with conscience as his sole mentor—now the most rigid laws prescribe the things that are essential for health and safety, and leave the builder perfect freedom only to gratify his esthetic tastes.

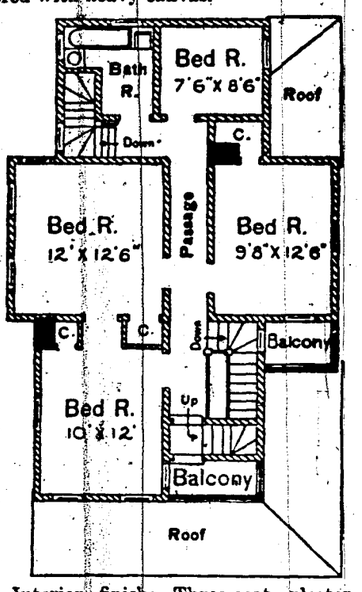


In the exertion of buildings utility is our chief object, and to this tendency we can trace the popularity of the modern low cost houses, and would refer to the design illustrating this article as a type. A somewhat detailed description is appended.

Width throughout dining room and library, 26 ft. 6 in.; depth, including veranda, 45 ft. 10 in.

Heights of stories: Cellar, 7 ft.; first story, 9 ft. 6 in.; second story, 9 ft.

Exterior materials: Foundations, stone to grade and brick above grade; first story, clapboards; second story and roof, shingles; floors of balconies covered with heavy canvas.



Interior finish: Three-coat plaster, hard white finish; soft wood flooring and trim; main staircase, ash; picture moldings in principal rooms and hall, first story; kitchen and bathroom wainscoted. All interior woodwork grain filled and finished with hard oil varnish.

Colors: All clapboards and spindle work of balconies, fawn; trim, including water table, corner boards, casings, cornices, bands, veranda posts, rails, etc., Tuscan yellow; outside doors, blinds, sashes, stiles and rails of panels, dark green; brickwork pointed dark red. Shingling on side walls and gables, stained sienna; roof shingles stained dark brown.

This house may be built as described for $2,700, not including mantels, range and heater, the estimate being based on New York prices for materials and labor, though in many cases the cost [illegible].

NOT A COMMONPLACE EULOGY.

The following unusual, not to say remarkable, funeral oration was recently pronounced by Mrs. Turner, of Grand Rapids, Mich., over the body of her husband, the Hon. Isaac M. Turner, who died of consumption after a lingering illness. There were no other funeral exercises:

"I feel that I must say a word here above the bier of my dead hero, for all that is best in life I owe to him. While living he was for all, but, being dead, he is mine alone. Then I would speak, for many of you here were friends of his, and, through him only, friends of mine.

"You who knew him in his professional or public life, knew him to love and esteem. I know from your presence here; but I think that it must have been that he was at his best in his private life. In his home, with his friends, in his library, was certainly where he found life's fullest meaning and highest enjoyment. And if in public life he ever found it necessary to be stern and appear harsh, yet it was his nature to be kind and gentle; for he was ever a lover of children, a lover and protector of all domestic pets, a lover of flowers and forests, and of that gentle mystic mood of nature of which his favorite poets sang so eloquently.

"Perhaps he did not possess the technicalities of exact scholarship, yet he was a profound student in many departments of research, he was familiar with the wide sweep and tendencies of history, as well as with its more particular phases. He was a lover of the literature of all ages and nations. It was a maxim with him that in a knowledge of universal literature was to be found the widest culture.

"His Anglo-Saxon blood made him a fearless lover of the truth and a fearless advocate of the rights of the individual. With him the human soul in its full integrity should acknowledge no authority either to Church or State, except indeed in so far as had been mutually agreed upon for the good of all. Yet, claiming this pre-eminent position for himself, you would not find a man more modest and more considerate for others.

"His life was cast upon a generous mold, his love and sympathy were as wide as humanity, his interest as wide as nature. The less fortunate in life found in him a true friend and helper, and he was the peer of many upon their own more limited platform.

"He was made from the stuff from which heroes are made. It was ever his lot to struggle, it was his to endure, and it was his to attain. To struggle, to endure, to attain; that makes the cycle of human life, and his was not incomplete, though his forty-three years seemed all too short.

"During the fifteen years of our wedded life there has never been a winter nor a summer gone by but at the turning of the season I have heard the rustling of the robes of the angel of death. The shadow of her wing has been over us at all times. There has never been a fond ambition for this world's fair prospects but has been gently shrouded on her breast. My sorrow is great, but it is without bitterness, except in so far as contrition and remorse will come with the recollection that I might have been more tender and loving, to one whose life was so unequally matched with fate.

"I cannot stand here above the wreck of so much promise and say that I believe that it is the will of Providence, for I do not. God does not will such heartbreaking things. I can take no comfort in the platitude that the mysteries of Providence are past human understanding. Humanity itself has been intrusted with the high problem of working out its own salvation, and it is humanity's part to see that such inconsolable things do not happen. Humanity, by investigation, research and effort must fulfill the destiny stamped upon its brow. To base my faith upon the postulate that somewhere at some time in the universe this must be compensated is an unsubstantial position, for there is no compensation. There can be none, except in so far as human effort can prevent the happening of such untimely occurrences.

"But weep not for him, for all has ended in peace; weep for me and mine, if you will, but not for him, for his life went out upon triumphant lines. No imperial guard ever died at his post of duty more nobly than did our hero, and I pray that his life may still be a hope and inspiration to me, and not a mere memory, however sweet and sacred that will always be. Weep not for him. Chant no funeral dirge. Let no minor strains of woe accompany the flight of his spirit. We will not say dust to dust and ashes to ashes, but life to life and spirit to spirit. Weep not for him, for I say his life has gone out upon triumphant lines, and let dominant triumphant chords weave the harmony that would echo the flight of his soul."

Unsatisfactory.

A well-known vicar gives a curious experience which is well worth relating.

It was his custom to point his sermons with either, "Dearly beloved brethren," or "Now, my brothers," until one day a lady member of the congregation took exception to this and asked him why he always preached to the gentlemen and never to the ladies.

"My dear lady," said the beaming vicar, "one embraces the other."

"But not in the church!" was the reply of the astonished lady.—Tit Bits.

A Theory of a Broken Devil.

The story goes that when the devil was cast out of heaven he fell to earth and broke into several pieces. His head rolled into Spain, his heart into Italy, his stomach into Germany and his feet into France. This is why, says the legend, the Spaniards are so haughty, the Italians so amorous, the Germans so gluttonous and the French so fond of running after women.—Chips.

RELIES ON THE VETERAN ACT.

Principal Warner Expects to Be Reinstated.

Principal W. W. Warner, of Public School No. 2, in Perth Amboy, was removed at the annual election of the Board of Education in July. Thursday he created surprise by announcing that his attorney, George L. Record, of Jersey City, has secured from Chief Justice Beasley a writ of certiorari directing the Board of Education to show cause why Warner should not be reinstated.

Warner is an old soldier, and he claims that he cannot be removed unless charges be made and proven against him. He was not removed, the board simply failing to reappoint him when his term expired. He claims that successive appointments to the office entitle him to be considered as holding office during his good behavior. Those opposed to him contend that his term was only from year to year, and as he was not reappointed he has no cause for action.

The board engaged E. S. Shull, of South Easton, and he moved his family there this week. The writ has not yet been served on the board.

A LEGAL AUTHORITY DEAD.

ROWLAND M. STOVER PASSES AWAY THIS MORNING.

Was Editor of Several Recognized Legal Works and a Prominent and Active Democrat—Had Been Ill Several Months.

Plainfield lost a valued and highly respected citizen Wednesday in the death of Rowland M. Stover. For the past four years Mr. Stover had been ill, but at times he seemed better and hopes were entertained that he would recover his full strength and health, but there was a gradual giving away of the vital forces. From December 1, 1894, his illness became serious and since that time he was confined to the house.

Mr. Stover leaves a wife and five sons, Alfred E., Charles Arthur, Frank E., Louis M., and Herbert W.

The funeral will be held from his late residence on East Ninth street at four o'clock Friday afternoon. The interment will be at Greenwood cemetery in Brooklyn on Saturday.

Rowland M. Stover was born in Pittstown, Rensellaer county, N. Y., in 1830. In 1856 he married the eldest daughter of Nathan Howard, Jr., then editor and publisher of Howard's Practice Reports, which began in 1848 on the adoption of the old code of procedure, and has continued its even way as the acknowledged authority of the State of New York on questions of practice. In 1860 to a certain extent he gave up the practice of law and connected himself with Mr. Howard in the editorship and publication of that series of reports. In 1876 Mr. Stover moved from New York to Plainfield, N. J., since which time he has continued to edit "Howard's Practice Reports," which publication in 1884 had reached sixty-seven volumes, when he considered it advisable to commence a new series which still continues as the recognized authority on questions of practice.

Mr. Stover at this time made a digest of "Howard's Practice Reports," consisting of two volumes of 1,000 pages each. In 1886 Mr. Stover began the publication of the New York State Reporter, which he continued to edit up to and including the twenty-fifth volume. He is the present editor of a work entitled "Stover's Annotated Code of Civil Procedure," which consists of three volumes of 1,000 pages each.

Mr. Stover was a life-long Democrat, and when he took up his residence in Plainfield became actively identified in politics. He was elected to the Common Council of Plainfield in 1878, taking a prominent part in that body's deliberations. He twice received the nomination for Assembly at the hands of his party. Though defeated he so reduced the Republican majority that he was only beaten by less than 100.

In 1879 he was elected to the Board of Chosen Freeholders, the first and only Democratic freeholder ever elected from the city of Plainfield. Mr. Stover was nominated for Surrogate on the Democratic ticket in 1894, being the unanimous choice of the convention, no other name being presented as a candidate. He was a most respected citizen, a warm-hearted and genial friend and kind neighbor, well equipped in mental capacity for the responsible duties which he performed in a private and public way.

ACTIVE WINTER IN ATHLETICS.

Y. M. C. A. MEMBERS PREPARING FOR ALL SORTS OF GAMES.

Baseball Will Resume This Week, Then Football, Basketball and All Other Manly Sports—Good Material for Teams.

The Young Men's Christian Association has been very prominent in many cities in a physical and mental line, as well as moral. And now that the Y. M. C. A. of this city is so well provided for in its new building, this coming year promises to be a red-letter year in more directions than one. Until the time when the Y. M. C. A. fair was held last Thanksgiving week, the Y. M. C. A. took no part in athletics, but this season Physical Director MacPhie expects to place three teams in the field, beside the regular classes in the gymnasium.

The baseball nine played most of the early part of the summer, until the majority of the players left town on their vacations. Next Saturday the baseball season reopens with a game with the nine from Scotch Plains, and play will be continued up to the last of October, if the weather permits. The players of the club have returned now, and the previous good record of the club will be equalled or excelled.

With the beginning of cool weather the football appears and holds sway over the hearts of the athletically inclined until the snow comes. Plainfield has in it the material for a crack football team, and it will be one object of the athletic department to get it together and organize a team, composed of only Y. M. C. A. members, that will be a credit to Plainfield. The league that is to be formed among the surrounding towns will offer a splendid opportunity to secure plenty of exciting games.

When the snow comes and the football enthusiasm dies out, then the game of basket ball, which found such favor among the young men of Plainfield last winter, will come into prominence. Two teams will be selected from the Y. M. C. A. to play against each other. A team will be formed from the best players of the other two and Y. M. C. A. teams from other cities challenged. These games will furnish plenty of excellent sport during the winter months. The bowling alleys will be another source of enjoyment for the members. A team will be selected and games rolled with outside clubs.

Beside the different special branches of athletics, the regular classes in gymnastics will commence on October first and continue through the rest of the winter. Supplementary contests will take place all through the season, but in the spring another general athletic tournament will close the season. On or near Christmas and New Year's Day, special features will be presented. There will be a prize given for the best attendance at classes during the year and another for the best general improvement, besides the prizes in the special events.

Want Dr. Riggs to Talk.

The Ladies Aid Society of Trinity Reformed church are planning to have Prof. Riggs, of New Brunswick, deliver a lecture in the church at an early date. Prof. Riggs is a thoroughly interesting speaker and those who heard him preach in Trinity Reformed church, recently will be glad of the opportunity of hearing him again.

A Farewell Surprise.

Miss Anna Larkin, of New Market, who leaves this week for Alfred, N. Y., to attend the University, was given a pleasant surprise Sunday evening at her home by a number of the young people from the Seventh-Day Baptist church. It was a thoroughly enjoyable occasion and all wished Miss Larkin God-speed in her new field of labor.

While in Chicago, Mr. Charles L. Kahler, a prominent shoe merchant of Des Moines, Iowa, had quite a serious time of it. He took such a severe cold that he could hardly talk or navigate, but the prompt use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cured him of his cold so quickly that others at the hotel who had bad colds followed his example and half a dozen persons ordered it from the nearest drug store. They were profuse in their thanks to Mr. Kahler for telling them how to cure a bad cold so quickly. For sale at Reynolds's pharmrey, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

McGILL SAID TO BE WILLING.

THE CHANCELLOR WOULD PROBABLY ACCEPT A NOMINATION.

He Realizes the Importance of His Declaration, and He Will Therefore Give a Decisive Answer in a Few Days.

Chancellor McGill, who returned from Europe Monday, appeared at his chambers in Trenton Tuesday, and was plied with all manner of questions by local politicians as to the use of his name in connection with the Democratic Gubernatorial nomination.

He told an interviewer that the situation was one of much embarrassment to him. His position as Chancellor, he said, was to his taste; for political life he had no disposition or inclination. To answer off hand or lightly without due consideration whether he would be willing to change from a judicial to a political life and thus change its whole course, might commit him to a stand which later on he should wish to alter.

The Chancellor said he realized the importance of an early declaration of his intention, and he would therefore make a public announcement of it in the course of a very few days. He intimated in the mildest sort of way, and it was more in his manner than in his words, that if the better elements of the Democratic party demanded that he should stand for the party he would do so.

A special meeting of the Common Council will be held on Friday evening, September 13th, at eight o'clock, to reconsider or rescind the resolution adopted September 5th, directing the advertisement for the construction of disposal beds and appurtenances and fixing time for receiving and opening said bids, and also to adopt a new resolution directing the advertisement for bids for construction of disposal beds and appurtenances and fixing time for opening bids, and to take other action in reference to said resolution of September 5th, or in reference to the proposed new resolution, as to the Council shall desire, and to transact such other business as may come before the meeting.

The necessity for calling this special meeting and rescinding the ordinance and repassing it again is on account of the failure of the News to publish the ordinance last Saturday, which was doubtless caused by the sweat-shop methods of paying Chinese wages to the compositors employed thereon.

Cheap labor cannot be expected to do much, and the ex-featured-member-of-a-barn-storming-stranded-theatrical-troupe editor would evidently rather have the Common Council hold a special meeting, and delay local legislation, than be compelled to employ an extra compositor, whom he would have to pay at the decent rates which The Daily Press pays, and publish the ordinance within the limit of the time which the law says he shall do as one of the official papers.

Is there any man in Plainfield to whom a dollar looks bigger than to the man who runs his office on the sweat shop principle.

INJURED BY FALLING GLASS.

A Young Man Receives a Broken Window Pane in the Face.

Glass is a dangerous thing to run against some times, and Monday evening in the Y. M. C. A. building one of the members came very near being seriously injured by falling glass from a broken window.

The young man was in the swimming tank and started to lower the window. In some way it was jarred, and the glass was broken, falling directly into the lad's face. Some of the falling pieces struck the young man's feet, cutting them quite severely.

It Will Do No Good.

It is said that Westfield Republicans are out strong for Foster M. Voorhees for Governor. Assemblyman Codding and ex-Postmaster Whittaker are among those who are hustling in the interests of the Senator.

John G. Mauger Editor of the Sunbeam, Seligman, Mo., who named Grover Cleveland for the Presidency in November 1882, while he was Mayor of Buffalo, N. Y., is enthusiastic in his praise of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. He says: "I have used it for the past five years and consider it the best preparation of the kind in the market. It is as staple as sugar and coffee in this section. It is an article of merit and should be used in every household. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

A MURDER AT WESTFIELD.

AN ITALIAN FOUND DEAD IN A LOT THIS NOON.

No One Knows Who Committed the Deed, But Wholesale Arrests Will Be Made This Afternoon—Found By a Boy.

A murder was committed in Westfield yesterday, but who either of the parties are it has been impossible to learn up to the time of going to press, other than that the murdered man was an Italian and it is supposed that his assailant was of the same nationality. Shortly after twelve o'clock Edward Frazee, a fourteen-year-old boy, was crossing a vacant lot at the corner of Park street and Central avenue, when his eyes fell upon the prostrate body of a man lying obscured from the road by the high grass and weeds. He hurried out into the road and met Judge Collins driving from the depot, after getting off the train from New York.

The lad told the Judge that a drunken man lay asleep in the lot, and the latter immediately got out of his wagon to investigate. As soon as he stooped over the man's body he saw that his coat was covered with blood, which was still oozing from a wound directly over the heart, doubtless made by a keen-bladed knife. The man was dead, though his body was still warm, so that he could not have been laying there but a few minutes. There is no trace of who the murderer was. It is thought that the assailant is one of the gang of Italians employed by Contractor Marsden on the Westfield sewers.

The place where the man lay is only two hundred feet from the house occupied by Mr. Russell and family, but the occupants say that they saw no men or heard any cries that would indicate that any murder had been committed. The Italian camp is aslo located near the lot.

The County Prosecutor was notified at Elizabeth, and Judge Collins told a Daily Press reporter at half-past one o'clock that every Italian who was in the shanty during the dinner hour will be put under arrest in order to find out who committed the deed.

THE BEST NEWS SERVICE.

The Daily Press Gave the Best Account of the Yacht Race in This City.

The international yacht races for America's cup have been of paramount interest to the American people during the last few days, and every item of news regarding them was eagerly read by Plainfielders as well as the rest. The Daily Press was the only paper in this city, however, that thought enough of the citizens of Plainfield to issue bulletins of the race yesterday. Soon after one o'clock, when the first bulletins were received, up to six o'clock, the sidewalk in front of the Daily Press office was thronged with interested spectators who eagerly watched the bulletins as they were continuously posted to learn the latest details of the race.

The Daily Press was also the first to publish the account of the victory of the Valkyrie. A detailed account of the race, a column and a quarter in length, appeared in yesterday's paper and the readers of the Daily Press were enabled to learn all the circumstances of the accident and the position of the yachts throughout the the race, not very long after the race itself had been finished. The Daily Press has to thank both the Western Union and the Postal Telegraph companies for their superb service in transmitting the news of the race so rapidly, for through their aid the Daily Press was enabled to display the bulletins as promptly as it did, and to be the first paper in Plainfield to publish the result of the race.

TOWNSHIP BOARD OF HEALTH.

Physicians Appointed to Seek Out Unhealthy Places.

The North Plainfield Township Committee met last evening at Washingtonville for the purpose of organizing a Board of Health.

Elias Allen was made chairman and Frank Mobus secretary and treasurer. Drs. Cooley and Carman were appointed a committee on ordinances, and Constable Stewart was appointed inspector. His duty shall be to hunt up the various nuisances and report them to the board.

After auditing the bill of $4.75, which pays for the handcuffs that were ordered at the last meeting, the committee adjourned.

No Business Transacted.

The Colored Republican Association met last evening but, as many of the members were absent, the meeting was immediately adjourned. A number of the members will attend the meeting of the county association this evening at Elizabeth.

FLACK TAPPED THE TILL.

ALSO APPROPRIATED EAST THIRD STREET MISSION MONEY.

A Young Man Could Not Stand Temptation, Though Surrounded By the Best of Influences—Left Town Under a Cloud.

Young men are often peculiarly tempted and led to do things that affect their whole life. Such was the case of James Flack, a well-known young man in Plainfield. James was a Christian, a member of the First Baptist church and East Third Street mission. He worked at different places in town and the utmost confidence was placed in him by his many friends. He was a regular and active attendant at the East Third Street mission and for about a year past has been the treasurer.

The last place at which he was employed was the meat market formerly conducted by G. H. VanNest on Park avenue, and now in charge of Sylvester Randolph, who recently purchased it. At different times money was missed from the shop, until finally James was caught in the act and admitted the deed. He was discharged from the place of business immediately. About that time it was thought best to have a settlement of accounts at the East Third Street Mission, and accordingly those in charge set a night when a report should be made by the treasurer. When the time arrived there was no report and Flack stated that he had no money and was unable to make it good.

Upon inquiry it was impossible to learn the amount missing from either the meat market or mission, but it is understood that the discrepancies have been going on for some time.

There is a feeling of regret evidenced by his friends, and they are unable to solve the question of why he should do such a thing. At the mission everyone had the highest regard for him, and his activity in the work won him many friends.

To Extend the Almshouse.

Plans are being prepared to erect two two-story brick wings on the northwest and southwest ends of the Elizabeth almshouse. The additions will have a deep basement, and each will have one large room, or dormitory, to be used, it is said, for indigent sick cases, also for convalescent patients. The work will be commenced as soon as the plans are completed and bidders advertised for.—Contractor.

Good Players to Meet.

The Crescents of this city will try their skill at baseball against the strong team from the Raritan Athletic Club at Raritan on Saturday. The Raritan team has the reputation of being a very strong team, having defeated the famous West Ends, of Somerville, and a good game is expected. Moran and Fleming will be the battery for the Plainfield team. T. Lyons will play short stop, and E. Connors, formerly of the Westfield Athletic Club, will cover first.

With the approach of cool weather the picnic has to be given up, but a party of young people from this city and the borough started this morning for their last picnic of the season at Washington Rock. Among those who started for the Rock were the Misses May Woodruff, Ada Woodruff, Florence Smith, and Amy Burt, and Charles H. Angleman, Raymond A. McGee, and E. Maxwell Honeyman.

Nearly Outraged.

Last Saturday John H. Moore, of Summit, met Mabel Giront, nine years old, a daughter of Andrew Giront, of Summit, and tried to entice her with candy to go with him. She refused, when he forcibly took her in an outhouse and had nearly succeeded in outraging her when she was rescued. Moore was arrested and committed by Judge Kelly to the county jail in Elizabeth.

HOT WATER AND SNOW

A spring, or springs, whose boiling waters appear as clear as though distilled, but from which minute particles of lime and silica have been deposited until in the valley they have built up a snow-white mountain covering 170 acres and 1,200 feet high deserves the name of mammoth, and should not have any age claimed questioned, but the geologists call the Mammoth Hot Springs the youngest of the wonders in the Yellowstone National Park.

How many ages these springs have been boiling cannot be estimated except by those who keep tab on the ages of worlds as a mother keeps track of her children's ages. If the Hot Springs are the beginning of geysers as some of the geologists say, their youth may account for their beauty, for they are most beautiful, with the richest, and, at the same time, the most delicate colorings that can be found in the water formations.

No architect could design, no sculptor adorn, and no artist color terraces more beautifully than the hot water which boils up out of the depths of the earth have builded, ornamented and colored the terraces that rise up above the Gardiner River, one above the other, until the magnificent Jupiter Terrace crowns the mountain as the throne of the greatest of the gods.

In starting out to view these terraces one must walk over the graveyard of other springs long since dead, and past the mountains built by giant geysers that must have ceased playing when the world was young. The whole valley is filled with the formation from dead springs and geysers, and the Mammoth Springs Hotel is built on this substance which once boiled up with the clear water and was slowly deposited here, and then deserted by the water that gave it life and beauty, decayed and became a dull gray formation like the limestone rock in the lower strata of the earth in Illinois, and began to gather a dry, dusty soil, where the palm trees again took root and began to grow, just as had pine trees grown under this formation down in the valley before the springs covered them up in a grave of lime rock.

There are thirteen distinct terraces and over fifty active springs on what is called the hot water formation. You walk out from the hotel over a dull gray plain of dead formation in which are several yawning chasms where the springs once bubbled in great pools to the "Liberty Cap," cone of a dead geyser, 52 feet high and 20 feet in diameter at its base, also of a dull gray, like a great pile of limestone, and past the "Devil's Thumb," a smaller cone built in the same way and of like appearance in color and material.

Then you leave the graveyard of dead geysers and come face to face with the living terraces, which glisten in the brilliant sunlight and change their colors as the water changes with the currents of the air, flowing over one side and then over the other, making the coral-like formation brilliant with color when fed by the hot water, or white as Carrara marble when exposed to the dry atmosphere.

The hot water is the river of life to those beautiful terraces, and by its changes it keeps them all fresh and beautiful, in strong comparison with the dull, gray waste below, which was once as beautiful until the water climbed higher and built new formations, to leave the old to die and crumble to a desert waste.

The Minerva and the Jupiter terraces are the central and supreme features of the whole formation, not alone because of their great size, but also because in these terraces the water god combined all his delicacy of tracing, and laid on all the colors of his pallet to make them the supreme creations of his genius.

The Minerva terrace is a mass of deposit forty feet in height, covering an area of nearly three-fourths of an acre, with a hot spring in its summit about twenty feet in diameter, the temperature of which is, at the edge, 154 degrees Fahrenheit.

At times the spring disappears entirely, says the guide, and the terrace remains inactive and uninteresting for months, with the promise of early decay, but the water boils out again, revives the terrace, restores its delicate coloring, from the lightest cream on top to the deepest shades of red at the base, the predominating color being bright orange, while the pools or basins are filled with apparent blue water. This terrace is about seventy feet higher than the Liberty Cap, and about ninety feet below the main springs.

The Jupiter terrace is higher, and commands the summit of the hill. It is nearly 100 feet high and covers an area of five acres, with the two Mammoth Springs boiling and bubbling with gas on the top, and the water pouring over the sides to paint the snow-white surface with all the colors of creation. Looking up at this wonderful terrace from below, its artistic tracings are even more inspiring than its enormous size, its sublimity commands the worship of the least artistic temperament.

So massive and so varied is it that it has been subdivided, and to different parts have been given different names, such as "The Pulpit Terrace, "The Organ," and other names as efforts to describe particular features, but it is all one grand terrace, dedicated to Jupiter, and under its west side is located a beautiful formation, designated as Cupid's Cave.

ROMANCE OF PASSAIC VALLEY

A MARCH ELOPEMENT PROVIDES AN AUGUST SCANDAL.

Old Standing Love Match—Two Families Meet at the Harvest Home and the Wife of One and Husband of the Other Depart.

The sequel to an old standing love affair comes rumbling down over the hills and dales of Watchung spur from the usually queit Passaic Valley that is as romantic as the fiction of Rider Haggard. It is an elopement, and odd as it seems the fair one of the eloping pair herself eloped only a short time ago with the man whom she now leaves behind.

Last winter a traveling artist by the name of Schofield came strolling along the quiet lanes that hedge the Passaic. Like all artists he was poor in a financial way. It was cold and the wintry blasts blew with great frigidity through the clothes of the artist. The field for occupation at his easel was not large in the rural community and so the man of the pencil and brush was obliged to seek a livelihood at the first thing that turned up. He applied to Daniel Walding, a substantial farmer of the Valley, for something to do. The agriculturist took the wandering man in. In the family was a pretty, vivacious young girl of sixteen summers, the daughter of farmer Walding. The maiden's name was Etta. The artist had been in the family but a short time when a friendship sprang up between the stranger and Miss Etta that was something more than acquaintance of meeting one another and casually passing the time of day.

The love affair between the two finally became so pronounced that the parents frowned with no degree of uncertain displeasure on the proceedings. The stern parents insisted on the daughter breaking off her match with the artist, but the artist was persistent, and with the idea that "all is fair in love and war," he failed to heed the admonitions of the people who had taken him in from the wintry blasts and made a place for him in the family circle.

One day in March Miss Etta went to New Providence, ostensibly on business, but shortly after was joined by the beau artist. The couple had evidently planned the affair nicely, for the coup d'eat was a ceremony performed by Rev. Mr. Bice that made two hearts beat as one. The groom, of course, was financially depressed, and to the reverend gentleman he told his tale of woe at the moment he was supposed to be happiest. In plain words he was broke and could not pay the accustomed fee. But his intentions were good, and after a brief conference the minister, it is said, broached the proposition to him that when harvest time came he should assist him to dig his crop of potatoes, which had just been planted.

Now this sort of work is not the most desirable for a man of artistic inclinations, but what could the poor man do.

He agreed to the proposition. With his bride on his arm and joy in his heart the artist started for the home of Farmer Walding.

The reception the couple received was not such as to make the matrimonial sea as calm as they had anticipated. The parents, so it is said, refused to permit them to reside under the parental roof.

The couple rented a house in the neighborhood and have managed to live nicely together, the husband earning a living by making sketches and disposing of them to rural inhabitants and city boarders.

The first ruffle that appeared in their apparently happy life was a wave so big, startling and unexpected that it has disrupted two homes, and set the Passaic Valley in the throes of excitement.

Thursday of last week the Harvest Home was held at Smalleytown, and in common with the rest of the people of that section Mrs. Schofield went to enjoy the festivities. There she met James Van Osten, who had also come with his wife and child. Jim, as all the country folks called him, was an old time beau of the now artist's wife. Since the marriage of the Passaic girl and traveling artist the two couples have visited one another frequently but between Mrs. Schofield and Van Osten no particular intimacy was observed, though they were considered fast friends in the sense that they had known each other a long time.

The two met at the picnic grounds on the Harvest Home day, and while they were friendly towards one another, nothing was observed out of the way in their actions.

Early in the day Mrs. Van Osten went home with her child, and retired early in the evening, not expecting her husband in until quite late at night. The next morning she awoke to find her husband was not at home.

She did not remain long in doubt, for a shot time after, Schofield was around inquiring after his young wife, who had not returned home the night previous from the picnic.

An investigation quickly followed, when it was discovered that Van Osten had drawn his money from Israel Coon, for whom he was foreman, and had left for parts unknown with the artist's wife.

Mrs. Van Osten is left without means of support, but declares that she can support herself, and that the perfidy of her husband is sufficient for her to have nothing further to do with him, even if he should come back.

Schofield looks at the action of his wife with more charitableness and says that he will take her back if she only will return, but with Van Osten, he declares he will invoke the law to punish him for destroying his home.

The minister's potatoes are now ready to dig, but the artist says that he must first find his wife, or else the potatoes will have to be dug by someone else.

In a word the neighborhood has not been in such a turmoil since the days of Dominee Dill's episodes.

THE CHIEF'S RIG IN THE SEWER

MIRACULOUS ESCAPE OF MR. DOANE AND DRIVER WOOD.

Driving to the Fire When the Horse Ran Into the Sewer Excavation Throwing Both from the Wagon—Mixed-up Affair.

"A midnight alarm" disturbed the quietude of the city last night and brought any quantity of people out on the streets. It was just about twelve o'clock when a Daily Press reporter approached Policeman Jos. Cooney at the corner of Front street and Park avenue. Philip Zimmer came running up Somerset street toward the officer and asked him to send in an alarm. He said that a lamp had exploded in his rooms on Somerset street and he could not extinguish the flames. Box 12 was immediately pulled and the department responded quickly.

On examination it was learned that an extinguisher would be sufficient to put out the fire. The damage was slight, as only a portion of a bureau and some carpet was burned.

Phillip Zimmer told a Daily Press reporter this morning that his loss would amount to $50, as there were several things burned up including bedding, clothes and laces. His goods were insured in the Home Insurance Company with Van Buren & Timpson, for $350.

Chief Doane met the wagon at the corner of Central avenue and Fifth street. They then drove up Central avenue toward Front street. The Chief cautioned Wood to be careful as there were excavations on that street, and in consequence the horse was driven along at a slow canter.

As they approached the railroad bridge the two men noticed the lights ahead near Second street, where sewer excavations had been made, but did not see one open near the bridge which was about six feet deep.

An immense quantity of dirt had been piled nearby on which was a lantern giving a very dim light.

The horse mounted the pile of dirt and slid into the opening. Wood was thrown out and severely bruised about the legs and back. The Chief also left the wagon very uncermoniously, but was not injured.

The horse fell in the narrow excavation, and how he was to be rescued was the question.

After the fire the Chief returned with First Assistant James Martin, Dr. Herbert, Councilman Fisk, and several others. They worked hard for about a half hour when they succeeded in pulling the horse out of the hole with the aid of a long heavy rope, a pulley and a blanket.

The horse was taken to Roberts's livery where Dr. Herbert found that a bone under the left eye was broken. He removed the bone and took several stitches in the opening, and the animal will come through all right.

The wagon was not damaged at all. That someone was not killed is a miracle.

Chief Doane and Councilman Fisk summoned Dr. Endicott who went to Roberts's livery stable and examined Driver Wood. No serious injuries were discovered, though he was somewhat bruised.

WHO'LL BE CITY JUDGE?

Four, Possibly Five, Republicans in the Field Thus Far.

The contest for the Republican nomination for City Judge promise to be a lively one. Ex-Judge W. R. Coddington has, by far, it is said, the best chance, but he is trying for the county circuit court judgeship. The candidates in the field at present for the City Judge nomination are Winfield S. Angleman and Geoge W. De Meza, of the Fourth Ward, Harry C. Runyon, of the Third Ward, and James P. Powers, of the First Ward. Powers, although in the race, has done no active work as yet. The other three are working after the nomination and an exciting fight for it is likely to result unless there is a sudden change in their plans.

THE AVENUE TO BE OPENED.

BOROUGH COUNCIL ADOPT THE WATCHUNG EXTENSION ORDINANCE.

To Go Into Effect September 23d—Discussion Over the Macadamizing—Delinquent Tax Warrants to Be Issued.

In spite of the fact that there was little business of great importance to come before the Borough Council last night, there was considerable activity shown by the members present, which included Councilmen Lounsbury, Peck, Valiant, Smith and Schutt.

After the minutes of the last regular and adjourned meetings were read and approved, a communication was received and filed from the Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company which stated that they had purchased the Edison Electric Light Company's plant, were increasing their facilities and intended to give the borough first-class service.

The following statement of Clerk Arnold was read:

	Balance.	Deficit.
Borough	$1,712.50
Fire department		$ 537.42
Light account		697.19
Roads	1,831.97
Poor		200.00
	$3,544.47	$1,434.61
Total balance	$2,109.86

He also reported that $142.83 had been collected during the past month as fines, license money, etc. The report was received and filed.

Warrants were ordered drawn for the payment of the monthly bills, after they had taken the usual course.

Mr. Smith, from the street committee, said that the street commissioner had been busily engaged trimming the trees in the borough and had covered every street. A great many residents, he said, objected to the work, but it had been done in order to have better street lighting. He also stated that the work of macadamizing Prospect place would be started in a few days.

Mr. Peck informed Mr. Smith that he did not blame residents for objecting to the trimming of the trees, judging from the way some of the work had been done. He thought the street committee should authorize the work performed, instead of the street commissioner taking the responsibility to do it.

Mr. Valiant called up the Watchung avenue extension ordinance and on his motion it was placed on its second reading and adopted by sections.

Mr. Lounsbury offered an amendment to the latter part in regard to the matter of macadamizing the avenue, that it be done the same as other borough streets had been macadamized, that is, the residents along the avenue pay their proportionate share for the work. The ordinance was drawn up by Borough Counsel C. A. Reed, and on Mr. Valiant's suggestion Mr. Reed spoke in its behalf on that point. He said that it was the idea, he thought, to make the avenue one of the finest, and as it was the first street to be opened by the borough they should macadamize it. It ought to have a top dressing to make it passable. Mr. Valiant thought the borough as a whole should stand the expense. The idea expressed by Mr. Lounsbury was that it would establish a bad precedent. He said he would oppose the work being done by the borough. Mr. Smith said that it would cost more to macadamize Harrison street than it would Watchung avenue. He thought the borough should do the work.

Mr. Loundsbury's amendment was lost by vote, and on motion of Mr. Valiant the ordinance as a whole was adopted. It will take effect Monday, September 23d. Mr. Smith made a motion that when Council adjourn it be to meet Tuesday evening, September 17th. It was so ordered. A resolution was offered by Mr. Schutt to the effect that the tax collector draw tax warrants for the sale of borough property on which the taxes were now delinquent. It was adopted,

A motion by Mr. Peck that was carried was that $600 of the money received from the township be transferred to the fire department fund. Mr. Schutt offered a resolution that was tabled to the effect that Mercer avenue between Duer and Grove streets be macadamized. It was thought that the funds would not stand the pressure at present. The Mayor suggested that the Finance committee meet the Clerk at an early date, go over the books and present a comprehensive statement of the borough finances at the next meeting. An adjournment was then made to Tuesday evening September 17th.

UGH, MUCH GOOD FELLOWS.

PAUGH-CAUGH-NAUGH-SINQUE TRIBE ENTERTAIN IN ROYAL STYLE.

Visitors from Perth Amboy and New Brunswick Have a Jolly Time With Local Red Men—Happy Remarks Made.

Paugh-Caugh-Naugh-Sinque Tribe, No. 193, I. O. R. M., entertained fifteen members from Poambo Tribe, of Perth Amboy, and four members from Ahanda Tribe, of New Brunswick, last evening in royal style. It was Red Men's night and the way it was celebrated gave evidence of true redmanship. John Carney was master of ceremonies, and a better one could not have been chosen.

After the visitors had arrived Chas. Conover, Sachem of the home tribe, in a few well-chosen words, welcomed them to the wigwam. Deputy Great Sachem John Ulrich was then called on and gave a few excellent remarks for the good of the order. He told many things of interest to the members. He was followed by Lawyer H. C. Runyon, who made one of the best addresses of the evening. He impressed upon the minds of all what it meant to be a Red man. Brother Haberman, of Ahanda Tribe, rendered a cornet solo that was indeed creditable.

Among the visitors who made remarks were: Brethren Erkeson, Schuck, John Hansen, Emil Eskelsen, Fred Slater and Gorgen Martginson, of Poambo Tribe, and N. C. Mague, of Miantonomah Tribe. M. F. Elderton, of the home tribe, pleased all with a few remarks.

After a social time had been spent in this way, all were invited to the banquet hall where a sumptuous supper was served. Vocal solos were rendered by A. D. Pope, Harry Drier, and Brother Haberman, of Ahanda Tribe. Refreshments were served and it was early this morning when the visitors left for home, thoroughly pleased with the entertainment given.

SIGNS THAT LIE.

An Official Needed to Make Signboards More Truthful.

There is a signboard down on the Springfield road just this side of Locust Grove, which points innocently to a northward lane and says: "New Providence, 3½ miles." Up over the brow of the mountain, a mile or two along the same lane, another more truthful board gives the lie with "New Providence, 3 miles." Beside the latter board is one which has it that Summit is but two miles northeastward, and this also does't know what it is talking about. It should be someone's business to make the signs more truthful.

CASH REGISTERS, BUT NO MONEY.

A Traveling Agent Leaves the City Hotel in the Lurch.

Harry Decker, of Stroudsburg, Pa., came to Plainfield a short time ago as an agent for a cash-register concern. He stopped at the City Hotel while in the city, running up a board bill of about $35. After he had covered the town seeking purchasers, and meeting with poor success, he took French leave.

On a complaint, Justice Newcorn issued a warrant for his arrest to satisfy the board bill, but the man was very clever and made his escape. Since then he has not been seen, and is not likely to be as he will probably give Plainfield a wide berth.

President Murphy opened the meeting and fourteen societies of Jersey City, Newark, Belleville, Elizabeth, Orange, Orange Valley, Harrison, Plainfield, Rahway, West Hoboken, and Chaltham responded to the roll call. The Field Day Committee reported the Field Day held on August 10th a large success and the prospects for next year's events brighter than ever.

The annual reports of the officers show the Union to have twenty associations on their roll, with a total membership of about 3,500. The treasurer's report showed a balance of $135. The Union donated $10 to be forwarded to the Army and Navy Committee of National Union to further their work of furnishing the soldiers and salors of the United States with periodicals and other literary publications. A communication was read from the National President relating to the arrangements being made for the convention to be held in St. Louis on September 24th, 25th, and 26th, and urged the Diocesan Union to be sure to send representatives.

SPECIAL ELECTION FOR A BOROUGH.

Judge McCormick Grants the Application of the Fanwood Petitioners.

Application was made yesterday by the inhabitants of the central part of Fanwood township to Judge McCormick, in the Union county Court of Common Pleas, for the erection of that portion of the township into an independent borough, the same as Roselle. Several important improvements, including sewers, are wanted by the residents of the more thickly built up part of the township that surrounds the railroad station, and they cannot have these things, because of the opposition of the residents of the other or agricultural part. Judge McCormick ordered a special election for October 1st, when the question will be decided.

An Autumn Dance.

The cool evening's of autumn are just the thing for dancing and the Young Men's Social Club of the Revere House believe it. They are now making great preparations for a grand autumn ball to be held in Central Hall on Monday evening, September 16th. The committee in charge consists of Howard Grobs, R. B. Norwood, E. W. Carr, S. A. Abrams, H. A. Gause, J. Bailey, G. H. H. Henderson and W. J. Davis. Music will be furnished by Guttman's orchestra.

Plainfield wants the State convention of the Christian Endeavor in 1896, and what is more Plainfield can take care of it.

It is good for people to dwell in harmony, so they say. Then let the trolley people harmonize with the city officials and extend the street railway.

New Jersey must look to her laurels for the champion big hail stones. Missouri reports that stones weighing half a pound have fallen in that section. But they say that that the further a lie travels the bigger it gets, and this, of course, accounts for the eight ounce stones.

"Good roads appear to be one of the investments that pay from the start. The first county in New Jersey to thoroughly improve its roads is Union, and the increased valuation of its property in a single year is $1,359,609. At Summit, N. J., the increased valuation is $419,000, or over 25 per cent. The Telford roads going down in New Jersey are pronounced excellent by all who drive and also by bicyclers."—St. Louis Globe-Demecrat.

"There are two classes of men in the American Protective Association movement," says the Boston Herald. "The first are those who act from sectarian religious feelings, and desire to overthrow the Roman Catholic religion in this country. They are ages behind the times in their intolerance, and their effort is as futile as it would be to attempt to rend a rock by pelting it with feathers. The second are more strictly political in their motive, and they feel that foreigners have taken to themselves too many of the offices in this country."

The Sentry, Elizabeth's new paper whose editorials are written with terseness, has this to say about the candidacy of Speaker Cross for County Judge:

We are not of those who question the "special aptitude or fitness" of Judge Cross. We will concede, for the sake of argument, that he is qualified to fill the office. The point we make now, the point we have made all along, is that the Elective Judiciary Law is unjust inasmuch as for reasons that are strictly political it seeks to deprive judges of their offices during the term of office for which they were appointed and because it would change the method of selecting judges from the appointive, which has worked admirably to the elective, which would make seats on the bench, prizes to be contended for by men whose principal claim to consideration, is not their knowledge of the law nor their impartiality, but their service to the party.

RESCUED FROM DROWNING.

WILL LOIZEAUX SAVES THE LIFE OF A YOUNG BOY.

A Family Attempt to Cross Demler's Dam, When the Child Fell In—Loizeaux Offered a Reward But Modestly Refuses.

Presence of mind is a great thing to have in time of accident, and Will Loizeaux showed yesterday that he had plenty of it. A family, consisting of father, mother and little boy, came out from New York yesterday and drove all over this section. In the afternoon they rode up Somerset street to the Notch and stopped near Demler's pond. They started to walk across the dam and had passed half way across when, for some reason, the little lad tumbled into the water. The parents were paralyzed with fear and terror, but just at this moment Will Loizeaux rode by on a wheel. He took in the situation at a glance, jumped off the wheel and pulled off his coat and shoes.

Then he bravely plunged in after the drowning child and soon brought him safe to his terror stricken mother's arm. The now happy father insisted on presenting the rescuer of his son with a reward but young Loizeaux utterly refused to take any. A firm friendship was then established between them and the rescued boy and his parents promised to visit their brave Plainfield friend, after which Will Loizeaux started for home in a rather moist condition.

SAMUEL DALLY'S WILL FILED.

No Provision for the Widow, But She Gets Dower Rights.

New Brunswick, Sept, 5.—The will of the late Samuel Dally, of Woodbridge, who left a fortune to William Dally, his grandson of Plainfield has been filed with Surrogate Furman. Mr. Dally has been estimated to be worth about $500,000. The will was dated Dec. 22, 1887, and was witnessed by Warren Drummond and Charles Drake, of Woodbridge.

Mr. Dally figuered before the public during the past four years owing to his family relations. Upon the death of his first wife he married again. His second wife was a young woman. Soon afterwards his children made application to have a commission appointed to inquire into his sanity. They adjudged the man sane. A second commission was secured by the family, and this time the man was adjudged insane, and a guardian was appointed.

The will which Mr. Dally left was dated previous to the time that he was adjudged insane. In it he leaves his valuable city lands to his daughters and their children. The will provides for the sale of his property, and contains a clause providing that if any of the heirs protest against the will they shall get nothing of the estate. It does not make any provision for the widow, but she will be entitled to her dower right, which is one-third of the income from the real estate. The executors are Ephraim Cutter and Charles W. Drummond.

AN UNPROVOKED ASSAULT.

It is not an uncommon sight to see two ragamuffins pounce upon a smaller boy and give him a thrashing in a large city like New York, but it is certainly a very unusual circumstance for Plainfield streets.

Yesterday afternoon as John Loizeaux, a nine-year-old lad living on Putnam avenue, was walking down LaGrande avenue and had almost reached Watchung avenue, when two young toughs crossed over from the other side of the street and struck him in the face and chest. Then the two ran away leaving their victim bleeding at the nose and mouth. Two older boys, seeing young Loizeaux in trouble, came over, but could not find the two toughs. Their reason for attacking him is unknown, as the lad said he did not know them, or did not speak or do anything to them as they passed.

A Desirable Improvement.

One of the best and most desirable improvements which has been made under the management of Rich & Maeder at Music Hall, is the seperation of the gallery box office and entrance from those of the orchestra and dress circle.

Seventeen New Members.

There was a general meeting of the congregation of the German Lutheran church Wednesday evening and fourteen new members joined the church, making a total of about seventy. Messrs. Eber and Yaeger were elected trustees.

FAKING WITH CASTILE SOAP.

A SWINDLE BEING WORKED ON UNSUSPECTING HOUSEWIVES.

Two Individuals Who Talk Smoothly and Claim to Represent a Local Druggist—Promises That Fail to Materialize.

Another big swindle is being worked on Plainfield householders and castile soap is the excuse. Two young men have been visiting many of the residences in town, representing themselves as either from Hebard's Crescent pharmacy or New York dealers. They had with them what they claim to be a superior quality of castile soap which they wished to introduce. They offered a box of twelve cakes for a dollar, but said if one dozen were bought they would make the buyer a present. They had learned the names of a number of Plainfield people, and used those of several prominent physicians and citizens who, they said, highly recommended the soap. In some cases they left the soap as agreed, and in others promised to bring the other dozen next day.

When The Daily Press reporter called at Hebard's pharmacy this afternoon, he found Mr. Hebard out investigating the case, but the clerk said that a number of inquiries had been made, but that they had not sent out or thought of sending out any agents, and that the affair was a swindle from beginning to end.

When Mr. Hebard arrived he said that he had seen the soap and that it was not castile soap at all, but was as far as he could judge, a common white hard soap, scented with sassafras, but perfectly harmless. The description of the swindlers could not be obtained except that both were young men and one wore a white straw hat and the other a brown derby. The men have been at work all the morning and managed to cover the greater part of the city.

The number and amount lost by their victims is not known, but it is supposed to be quite extensive.

A DASH FOR LIBERTY.

A Prisoner Escapes on West Front Street, But is Finally Captured.

If he had been some American explorer, captured by a heathen tribe, that made such a brave fight for freedom on West Front street yesterday afternoon, his story would have furnished material for many newspaper and magazine articles, and would have been spoken of as a brave dash for liberty and worthy of success. But as it was only a rooster that escaped from Ulrich & Blatz's market, no one thought anything of it. The plucky fowl in some manner escaped into the street under the blue sky and thought he was safe but, alas, he was not. A crowd of yelling men and boys chased him up and down the street until he saw the door of the store of the Grand Union Tea Company standing invitingly open. There was a flutter of wings, a smashing of glassware as the frightened rooster dashed into the street leaving a wreck, valued at $3.38, behind him. Again he flew this way and that with his pursuers still close behind. There being no other tea store to reach he tried T. E. Morgan's news stand, and tried to hide behind a copy of The News that lay there. The News was too thin, however, and Joseph Blatz soon captured the escaped prisoner.

A Strong Company.

The elements that go to make a successful theatrical company are numerous and varied. The members must be artists of ability; the plays must be bright and catchy; there must be a mixture of sparkling vaudeville, which will turn out as satisfactory evening's entertainment as one should want to see. This is just what the Bubb company is. It has been carefully put together and long seasons of success have whipped the organization into one of the best shows on the road. The company includes the Elmore children which will be pleasing news to all the little ones throughout the city. Dime matinees will be given daily. Stillman Music Hall all next week.

Miss Smith to Resume Instruction.

Miss Alice O. Smith, a former resident of this city, will resume teaching on the piano and organ in the W. C. T. U. rooms Saturday, September 14th. Those who desire instruction in the above will find it to their advantage to call on Miss Smith any Saturday at the W. C. T. U. rooms on Watchung avenue. Her advertisement appears in another column.

CHICAGO FAST MAIL.

PLANS FOR DISTRIBUTING THE MAIL OF CHICAGO A MILE A MINUTE.

An Underground Trolley System to Be Worked by Electricity. Advantages Over the Pneumatic Tubes of Philadelphia or the Overhead Trolley.

The Chicago Tribune says: Chicago will have the finest mail distributing system in the world. Think of mail coursing through subterranean passageways at the rate of a mile a minute! Yet that is what Postmaster Hesing, Superintendent John A. Montgomery, and Electrician Richard E. Sherman declare to be a demonstrated reality. Nothing like it exists in the world, and without doubt Chicago will be the first city to give the new scheme a practical trial.

Last fall John A. Montgomery, Superintendent of Malls, made a trip to Philadelphia to investigate the pneumatic tube mail service in that city. Upon his return he said to Electrician R. E. Sherman:

"Sherman, why can't you invent an underground apparatus which will carry all our mails? Maybe you don't know it, but we handle from 275 to 300 tons of mail a day. Why not get up an underground electrical car system by which all this stuff can be transmitted from the sub-stations to the central office and thence to the depots?"

That was enough. Sherman caught the idea, returned to his laboratory, and soon perfected the system. The details were forwarded to Washington and a patent secured June 27. An ordinance was introduced in the City Council granting to Sherman, his successors or assigns, permission and authority to operate electrical tubes and electrical conduits, with all suitable switches, branches, turnouts, connections and stations along, under, and upon any of the streets, alleys, avenues, tunnels, viaducts, and under the Chicago River and its various branches for the purpose of collecting, receiving, conveying, carrying and transmitting United States mail packages and all other suitable commodities. The ordinance further provides that the construction work shall be under the direction of the Commissioner of Public Works, and that a deposit of $10,000 shall be made. Provision is also made that in the construction of the system a sum not less than $50,000 shall be expended the first three years. The company is also to pay into the city treasury 3 per cent. per annum of the gross receipts.

"The system will cost $300,000," said Electrician Sherman. "Conduits will be run from the postoffice to all the substations, depots and newspaper offices. These conduits will have to go below the cables and gas pipes—probably from eight to twelve feet below the surface. Steel motor cars weighing about 170 pounds each will be run between T rails, and will carry from 50 to 100 pounds.

"Both the speed and distance can be regulated by dial. The maximum speed is over a mile a minute. Four trailers can be attached to each car. When the car approaches within 500 feet of its destination a bell is sounded at the receiving office and rings until the mail is removed.

"The underground system of mail transmission has the advantage over the midair system in that rails can be used instead of wires, thus permitting of heavier burdens, and there is perfect safety in transmission."

She Understood the Trick.

"A short time ago," said Deputy United States Marshal Harris, "an old rancher up in the mountains of Lake County grew tired of walking five miles over the hills to get the county paper from his mail box, so he felled a big tree across the road so that the stage would be compelled to travel a longer route that led past his house. A warrant was issued for his arrest for obstructing the United States mails, and I went up to serve it.

"I found the old man sitting on his back porch smoking his corncob pipe, and commenced reading the warrant: 'The President of the United States sends greeting.' Just then the long barrel of a muzzle loading rifle was shoved out the kitchen door and aimed at my head. I saw a nervous little gray-headed woman at the other end of the gun with her finger on the trigger. I could see a bright gray eye twinkling through the buckhorn sight as she remarked:

"You git, and don't you come snoopin' roun' hyur ag'in. The President sent his greetin's onct before when the ole man cut some timber on Government land, an' it cost him 'bout a hundred dollars and nighty nigh a month in jail. Then he found out that the President didn't know nuthin' about it. If the President wants to be friendly with the ole man he'll have to come right hyur without sendin' no greetin's. Git!"—San Francisco Post.

A Member of the Force.

"A good many amusing incidents came out in our first examination of the police," says Col. John W. Ela, the apostle of local civil service reform in Chicago. "I recall one incident which struck me as being particularly funny. We were putting one of the patrolmen through, and the big fellow fumed and fretted and perspired as if he were actually in the sweat box. At last I asked him this question: 'What is a felony?'

"The poor fellow looked stunned for a moment or two, but finally there came an expression of returning reason into his eyes, and in a triumphant tone he answered, 'A thing in the t'umb!'"

To Each His Part.

Mrs. Snaggs—What do you think of the inference that Marc Anthony was an undertaker, because he said his mission was to bury Cæsar and not to praise him.

Mr. Snaggs—That is a very fair inference. The man who carved the tombstone would attend to the praising part.—Pittsburg Chronicle Telegraph.

Senator Hill says that there is too much law making. And the Senator comes pretty near hitting the mark with a truth that is self-evident.

It would puzzle an angel to make out what the man who pays two bits a year for missions, means, when he prays, "Thy kingdom come."—Rams Horn.

Mrs. McArthur, the woman who jumped from the Brooklyn bridge on her second attempt, was one woman who made up her mind and did not change it.

With the street railway extension and the Watchung avenue opening decided favorably by the city and borough councils, Plainfield is getting along quite well, thank you.

New Jersey has led all the States in the Union in the good roads movement. It has more miles of improved roads than any other State, and we regret much to see that some of these roads are not giving satisfaction. There are improved roads in fact and improved roads in name. The former have a good foundation and a well-rolled smooth top of small stones. The New Jersey improved roads that are proving rocky and rutty have in their construction some of the elements that go to make an improved road, but not all. A stone road where large and small stones are mixed together indiscriminately and left to the wear and tear of travel to pack down and render smooth may keep teams from miring in winter, but cannot possibly make smooth and agreeable summer roads. To insure good roads there is need first of a good road law, and then of a body of men in authority able and willing to carry out the law thoroughly and intelligently.—Philadelphia Press.

There seems to be a disposition among certain Republican newspapers to ridicule the candidacy of Hon. Augustus W. Cutler. In our opinion Mr. Cutler is about the most formidable candidate the Democrats could name and his strength should not be underestimated.—New Brunswick Fredonian.

The statements made by a local liquor dealer to a Daily Press reporter last night, as recorded in the news columns of the paper, are, indeed, startling, if true. A crusade of licensed liquor dealers against unlicensed will be a novel movement, and if carried out as intended may become sort of a dog-eat-dog affair.

The impression gains ground that there will be no international money conference and consequently, that there will be no independent action by the United States relative to the fixing of the ratio between the two metals used as currency. News comes from Berlin that owing to the recent declaration of Mr. Balfour indicating the improbality of such a conference the German government is reconsidering its plan and it is now expected that the result of its deliberations will be adverse to the movement. This would seem to settle the question, for without the co-operation of England and Germany, international action is regarded as absolutely impracticable.—Trenton True American.

"Forbearance has ceased to be a virtue" with the wide-awake editors of the Plainfield dailies. The News complains about the filching tactics of the New Brunswick Home News in appropriating editorials from it without credit, and The Daily Press has the same complaint against the New Brunswick Times. "New Brunswick evidently has editors who are editors only because they have gall and scissors," is the very incisive comment of The Press, which comes none too sharply nor too soon. Laziness is not admirable, even in hot weather; but when it makes pretense of industry by stealing the work of the toiler, it is entitled to no toleration, and ought to be pilloried oftener that it is.—Clinton Democrat.

The utterances of Senator Hill to the New York State Democrats on the question of personal liberty as applied to the present condition of excise matters in New York were clear and concise enough for anyone to understand. While they contained many poignant truths, peculiarly applicable to the present age, the idea advanced by the Senator that the present excise law was framed with the understanding that a liberal construction was to be placed upon it by the officials enforcing it, showed a fatal conception of duty on the part of those who were instrumental in placing it upon the statute books. There are too "many men of many minds" in this world to admit of making legislation on the principle of tacit understandings. The letter of the law must be explicit in prescribing what can be done without violating it.

What is the matter with our State, that she is so tardy in exhibiting before the world her resources, her wealth and the industries of her populace? The news comes that the State Commissioners to the Atlanta Exposition have offered to advance funds for the erection of a small building at the great fair to represent New Jersey. Note the irony of the offer. Jersey must play second fiddle to her sister States, and must make of herself the butt of the ridicule by receiving almost as a gift, a tiny domicile. No funds have been provided to defray even railroad expenses for these men, and they will probably have to pay their expenses from their own pockets, and trust for an appropriation of next winter's Legislature to reimburse them. New Jersey loses dignity and the Commissioners gain credit by these conditions.—New Brunswick Home News.

The progress of the ordinance looking to the extension of the street railway in this city is one of the most important acts of the Common Council in years. This extension matter has been hanging fire so long that it became a bane to every man who desired Plainfield to grow as it should and will with the electric cars permeating its thoroughfares. As the trolley road in Plainfield is today no one receives benefit sufficient to call it a benefit—it is merely an aggravation that we have not more of it. But the advancement of the ordinance, published elsewhere in the Daily Press of today, by the Common Council last night, and the announcement that the railway officials agree to its provisions, is something that looks like business. The work of making the extension as soon as the Council grants the franchise, which it seems probable will be done in a short time, cannot be commenced too soon. The benefits to be derived from its completion are manifold, and Plainfielders may well congratulate themselves on the bright outlook.

Some men are counting upon getting to heaven because they have never been in jail—Ram's Horn.

Ex Speaker Crisp sets his foot down on the third term talk and declares himself to be for William C. Whitney.

State Senator Voorhees, chairman of the Senate Investigating Committee, has issued a call for a meeting of the Senate Committee at Trenton next Tuesday, to take action on a public investigation by the committee.

On September 17th the Liquor Dealers' Association of New Jersey will hold a convention in Paterson. The association boasts a membership of 1,000. One of the matters to be considered is what course the association will take in the coming campaign. The Elective County Judiciary law is regarded by the saloon keepers as inimical to their interests, since under it judges might be elected who would refuse to grant licenses. It is said the deliberations of the liquor dealers may have much influence on the action of both State conventions.

The opening of the public schools this morning and the knowledge that there are many children who are not at the desks that should be there, brings forcibly to the mind the admirable truant law which was passed by a recent New York Legislature, and which school officials all through the State are endeavoring to enforce. According to the new law, a boy over fourteen may leave school, but it must be shown satisfactorily that from that time until he is sixteen years old he is engaged in some business; otherwise he will be obliged to go to school. Under the old law he could leave school at fourteen unconditionally.

THE FIGHT FOR DELEGATES.

Voorhees Still in the Field, But His Prospects Poor.

The fight in Union county for the delegates runs about the same. Voorhees is still a candidate against John Kean and whichever candidate survives the primaries in Union county will receive the entire support of the Union county delegation, and it is probably on account of this that the impression goes abroad that Voorhees is not a bona-fide candidate. He is willing to concede all the delegates to Kean should he get the majority, but Voorhees and his friends claim that he stands a very good chance of getting the majority himself.

Others reason it out that such an arrangement is favorable to John Kean, and ultimately means that Kean will get the delegation, which is very important to Kean just now.

It has been stated that Voorhees had so far dropped out of the fight as to promise to make the nominating speech for John Kean, but things have not progressed as far as that, for Voorhees reiterates with much positiveness that he is a candidate and will continue to be one until he is defeated, and that he would not in consideration of the friends he has throughout the State, take any other course.—Newark Advertiser.

Painless Teeth Extracting.

Dr. C. H. Clark, the dentist, of 212 West Front street, has purchased the right to use "Euchirisma," a newly-discovered anæsthetic for extracting teeth without pain, and is meeting with unparalleled success. The doctor considers it the best anæsthetic known. Last week a lady called at his office to have fourteen teeth extracted, intending to take gas. The doctor saw at a glance that she was a fit subject for heart trouble and prevailed upon her to try "Euchirisma" on one tooth and if it was not painless to have only the one extracted. She was so well pleased that she had the fourteen extracted at one sitting, with "Euchirisma." A fact.

Another Handsome Residence.

Ground is to be broken on Central avenue this week for a handsome residence to be erected for D. M. Moore, of East Fifth street. The property was formerly owned by Frank Raymond, and the house to be built upon it is to be a very fine one with all modern improvements.

Well Deserved Punishment.

Two well-known colored men of Plainfield were driving a handsome sorrel horse about town Saturday evening. They tied him to a post and began to abuse him. He broke away at last and dragged one of the men for almost two blocks, badly cutting and bruising him.

THE CAR STARTED TOO QUICK

AND THE DEATH OF MRS. P. L. PORR'S CHILD IS THE RESULT.

Mrs. Porr Jerked From a New York Street Car While on Her Way to this City and Her Baby Struck the Pavement.

On Saturday, Aug. 24th, Mrs. P. L. Porr, of New York, left her home at 244 West Sixteenth street, and boarded a Tenth avenue belt line car to go to Liberty street ferry. She had her seven-months-old daughter with her, also a small satchel, and was coming to Plainfield to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Grollwisch, on East Front street. When she reached Liberty street she arose in the car with her baby and satchel and got off, but while she had one foot on the pavements and one on the car step the conductor rang the bell and the car started. Mrs. Porr was thrown from the car and her baby fell from her arms in the street. In a few minutes she was assisted by a policeman and several other people standing near. The former ran after the car, stopped it, and secured the conductor's and the driver's names.

Mrs. Porr succeeded in getting to Plainfield with her child, but ever since the latter has been unwell. The mother did not think that her baby had received any serious injuries. As she continued to grow worse it was thought advisable to call a physician. Saturday afternoon there was a turn for the worse and Dr. Hallock was summoned, but before he arrived the child died.

County Physician O'Reilly was called yesterday. After examination and hearing the story he decided that the matter should be referred to the New York authorities.

Mr. and Mrs. Porr took their little babe into the city last evening and their will be a coroner's inquest held probably today.

The impression is that the child died from the effects of the accident. Mrs. Porr has several witnesses who saw the affair and they will be summoned in her behalf.

STRUCK THE MINISTER.

A New Providence Barber Makes an Unwarranted Attack on Rev. Mr. Bice.

John Metri, a barber at New Providence, was arrested yesterday on complaint of Rev. Henry Bice, pastor of the Methodist church in that village, who charged him with assault and battery. Dr. Bice visited Metri's shop about one week ago and after the barber had shaved him, the pastor spoke pleasantly to him and was preparing to hand him some money when without the least provocation the barber struck him in the face. The attack was so unwarranted and outrageous that the pastor was amazed, but, when he demanded an explanation the barber talked in unintelligible language for several moments. The man has given no reason for his remarkable attack and Dr. Bice cannot understand it, but thinks it may have been the result of a grudge Metri held against him for stopping the illegal work of some of Metri friends.—Summit Record.

Talk About the Fair Grounds.

The success of the State Fair at Waverly this year will, it is expected, result in the making of important improvements on the fair grounds. The trolley has brought the grounds into close communication with Newark, Elizabeth, Rahway, Plainfield, Orange and other towns, and suggests the use of the property for other purposes during the other fifty-one weeks of the year when it is not wanted for the State Fair. With some alterations and improvements, the grounds could be used for different forms of out-of-door entertainment and be rented to circuses. There has been some talk of its purchase by the Essex Park Commission, but the approaches to the ground from Newark are uninviting, and the commission has no idea of making a public park in that locality.

Fiction and Travel.

Fiction and travel are the strong points of the September Cosmopolitan, which, by the way, illustrates better than any previous number the perfection of its plant for printing a magazine of the highest class. Conan Doyle, H. H. Boyesen and Clark Russell are among the story-tellers. A well-known New York lawyer relates the story of a "A Famous Crime," the murder of Doctor Parkman by Professor Webster. A delightful sketch of "An English Country House Party" is from the pen of Nina Larne Smith, the house at which she visited being no less than the historic Abbotsford, still occupied by the direct descendants of Sir Walter Scott.

Garwood Wants a School House.

Committees from the Boards of Education of Westfield and Cranford will meet at Westfield this week to arrange some plan whereby the children of Garwood will have better facilities for attending school. The Garwood people want a school house erected.

THE GAMES OF HOPE CHAPEL.

B. EDDY AVERAGES THE MOST POINTS IN THE CONTEST.

The Events Held at Maltby's Track, Where They Were Witnessed by a Crowd—The Winners and Their Records.

There was a good-sized crowd present at Maltby's track Saturday afternoon when the Young Men's League of Hope chapel concluded their athletic games. The events were all good and some excellent records were made. Owing to some difference a week ago the one-mile event was run over again. Below will be found the results of the events:

Three-mile run—First, W. Stewart, time 23 minutes, 32 seconds.

Throwing twelve-pound hammer—First, Neil Head, distance 72 feet, 3 inches; second, Alex Muir; third, W. Stewart.

Running hop, step and jump—First, Alex Muir, distance, 31 feet, 3½ inches; second, B. Eddy; third, Neil Head.

Four-mile bicycle race—First, F. Marsh, time, 14 minutes, 30 seconds, second, Neil Head; third, B. Eddy.

B. Eddy averaged the greatest number of points, being 24; Alex Muir was next with 21; and F. Walz was last with 16.

Arthur Leland was referee and timekeeper.

A meeting of the league will be held this evening at which time the matter of prizes will be discussed and decided.

A Pleasure Palace.

Proctor's new Pleasure Palace in New York is equipped with every convenience that ingenuity and skill can suggest to enhance the comfort of its patrons. The aisles are broad and the seats so arranged that anybody can come in or go out without disturbing others, while the upholstering and decorations are exceedingly artistic. Elevators run continually from basement to roof. The bill for this week is an excellent one, including Professor Lockhart's trained elephants, a most remarkable and altogether novel entertainment. After the regular stage performance, which ends at eleven o'clock, a musical entertainment is given in the German cafe until midnight.

UNDER THE GLINTING STARS.

THE WEATHER CLEARED AND THE BAND CONCERT TOOK PLACE.

Councilman Frost's Efforts Prove a Popular Feature of Local Life—The Attendants Clothed in Fall Costumes.

All Plainfield was pleased because the Defender won the first of the international yacht races and all Plainfield was also pleased because it cleared off in time for the open air concert Saturday evening. When the music began at half past seven, the crowd that gathered there was scarcely large enough to line the sidewalks, but as the stars one by one peeped out from behind the fast receding clouds, the people came, and in goodly numbers, too, until all the available standing room was filled.

The throng that lined Franklin place and La Grande avenue was very different in one respect from the previous concerts. With the passing away of summer, the white duck pants of the men and the white dresses of the women disappeared and those who attended Saturday evening's affair thought of the cool autumn weather and donned their heavier clothing. The cyclists were there in numbers.

The music sounded prettier than ever and the animated throng surrounding the square with its brilliantly lighted center and picturesque looking land formed a most pleasing picture. Guttman's band was at its best and the different selections were loudly applauded. "The Russian Carriage Song" was encored again and again and by special request the Honeymoon March closed the evening's programme. Councilman Frost will hold one more concert this fall.

Crescents Important Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Crescent Wheelmen will be held on Wednesday evening of this week. This is the most important meeting of the year, as the new Board of Governors will be elected, reports of the work done for the past year will be made, and plans for the coming year discussed.

Its Third Reading.

The Watchung avenue extension was passed on its third reading at the Borough Council meeting last Friday evening, instead of the second reading as stated in Saturday's Daily Press. It was a typographical error.

A PRESIDENT IS LACKING.

W. C. T. U. ARE UNABLE TO GET A MEMBER TO SERVE.

Other Officers Are Elected, However, and the Annual Reports of Committees Made —$1,971.96 Raised, But a Deficit Remains.

The W. C. T. U. held their annual business meeting yesterday afternoon in their rooms on Watchung avenue and there was a good attendance of members. The service opened with devotional exercises conducted by the president, Miss Carra Peck. This was followed with the secretary's report by Miss Mineola Tomlinson, and the treasurer's report by Mrs. R. K. Case. This report showed that for the past year the receipts had been $1,971.96 and the expenditures $1,929.23, leaving a balance in the treasury of $42.73. On account of some smaller expenses there is a deficit of $205.50.

Miss Lugar reported on the Temple Work and gave evidence of much that had been done in this department. The work of the soldiers and sailors was reported by the superintendent of the work, Mrs. M. C. Dobbins. It showed that during the year several receptions had been given to the G. A. R., Sons of Veterans, Woman's Relief Corps, firemen, etc., and that barrels of literature, clothing and comfort bags had been sent to the Life Saving Station at Seabright for which acknowledgement had been received.

Miss Susie Berg then followed with an interesting report on Kitchen Garden Work, of which she is the superintendant. A large amount of good had been done in this department with the children.

Mrs. Krom, as Superintendent of the Literature Committee, reported that 8,020 pages of literature had been distributed during the year, that the Union had a small circulating library and the financial part was in excellent condition.

Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson reported for the Franchise Committee in an interesting manner and the work of the flower committee showed excellent results being accomplished.

Then followed a short testimony service in which several took part. Mrs. Coard gave a short talk on narcotics and hygine that was very interesting.

An account of the public meetings held was prepared by Miss Anna Boice and read by Eiss Minneola Tomlinson. Miss Peck then read the articles of incorporation of the Union that had been furnished gratuitously by County Clerk Howard and a vote of thanks was ordered sent to him.

The members then went into election of officers.

After much consideration and discussion it was decided to defer the election of a president until a future time, as it was impossible to get one of the women to serve. In consequence it was decided that the vice-presidents should serve till a president was elected.

The balance of the officers were then chosen as follows: Corresponding-secretary, Miss Carra Peck; recording-secretary, Mrs. E. French; treasurer, Mrs. R. K. Case.

The following are the delegates to the State Convention to be held in Paterson, October 8th, 9th and 10th: Mrs. O. B. Leonard, Mrs. Parse, Mrs. Case; alternates, Mrs. Nelson Runyon and Mrs. M. C. Dobbins.

It was stated that the County Convention would be held in the Baptist church at Roselle, Thursday, September 26th, and it was hoped all who could would go.

The following vice-presidents were chosen from the various churches: Park Avenue Baptist—Mrs. Johnson, Mrs. Seely Edsall; Congregationalist—Miss Beekman, Mrs. Gambling; Seventh-Day Baptist—Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, Mrs. H. M. Maxson; Trinity—Mrs. Parse, Mrs. Dunlap; First Methodist—Mrs. McNaughton, Mrs. Jackson; Grace P. E.—Miss Green, Mrs. Lowry; First Baptist—Miss Anna Boice, Mrs. S. B. Joseph; First Presbyterian—Mrs. Shotwell; Friends—Mrs. Harper, Mrs. Bogert; Unitarian—Mrs. Krom; Warren Chapel—Miss Mary Maire, Mrs. Randolph; Crescent Avenue—Mrs. Yates, Mrs. Cahoone.

ENDS A FIGHT IN SOMERSET.

The news of the decision of the Supreme Court at Trenton that the Elective Judiciary law is unconstitutional has created quite a panic among the politicians of Somerset county, says the Somerville correspondent of The World. The most vigorous fight in the local campaign was over the judgeship, and the decision of the court brings it to a sudden close.

The Democratic candidates were the present judge, John D. Bartine and ex-Prosecutor of the Pleas William V. Steele. The Republican lawyers who had an eye on the berth were Louis H. Schenck and James L. Griggs. On the Democratic side the contest was especially vigorous, and it was taking a turn which the leaders feared might have made trouble. Many of them feel glad that this danger has been eliminated from the canvass.

Judge Bartine, who was reappointed by Governor Werts last winter, will continue on the bench, so the Democrats lose nothing. The fight for the nomination on the Republican side was not so intense, but it was believed by the Republican leaders that they nominated, and they feel disappointed. It seems likely that no nominations will be made for these offices pending the possible reversal of this decision by the Court of Errors and Appeals.

NEEDS TO BE FIXED.

The Condition of the Borough Fire Gong is Very Poor.

Chief Engineer Fairchild, of the borough fire department, is very much concerned about the condition of the fire gong, which for the last few months has scarcely once blew an alarm so that the firemen could tell where the fire might be located. The apparatus cost the borough the tidy sum of $2,600, and with such an expenditure there should be no defects such as have been in evidence for some time, and which are serious enough to make the alarm worthless for all practical purposes.

For instance, yesterday when Box 141 was pulled for the Thorn fire only one blow of the whistle responded, but luckily there were enough men near at hand to get the hose cart to the fire without much difficulty and the flames were extinguished with a little effort. But the possibilities of what such a fire in a more insolated part of the borough would be if the alarm failed to work are not pleasant to contemplate. The difficulty with the alarm yesterday was that its mechanism was out of order, and the armature responded only once to the currents.

The question of where the alarm will be placed after the Edison plant is abandoned is another question that is agitating borough people. Some think that it will be brought to the city electric light plant, but a vigorous protest will be made to this by the residents living in the neighborhood, and it is not likely that such an arrangement can be made.

A Pastor's Resignation.

Rev. J. B. Cleaver, of Bound Brook, and Rev. W. F. Brown, of Newark, will in the near future fill the pulpit of the Liberty Street mission; also Rev. J. Lagerbintz, a woman evangelist, who has been successful in paying off debts in Disciple circles, may be sent here. Rev. B. W. Hand's resignation, as pastor, has been received at last and accepted, but he is elder and considered pastor by the Disciple Brotherhood until his successor is appointed.

LAY JUDGES WILL STAY IN.

A PARTISAN LAW DECLARED UNCONSTITUTIONAL YESTERDAY.

The Case Will Not be Appealed—The Legislature Cannot Acquire the Right to Appoint County Officers at Will.

The Daily Press Monday exclusively announced in a brief item in Plainfield the decision of Judge VanSyckle declaring unconstitutional the law legislating the Lay Judges out of office. The law was passed by the Republican Legislature last winter, and it removed from office the forty-five lay judges in the counties, and provided for the election of a single law judge in each county to transact the business of the Common Pleas courts.

Every one of the nineteen county courts is composed of a law judge and two lay judges. All of them were appointed by the Governor, and, as New Jersey's Governors since 1869 have been Democrats, the courts have been Democratic also.

It was to secure control of these courts, with their powers in naturalization and license cases, that the Voorhees law was introduced and passed at the dictation of the Republican caucus. Although it bears the name of Senator Voorhees, one of the candidates for the Republican Gubernatorial nomination, and was introduced by him as Republican leader, he was opposed to it, and several Republican Assemblymen bolted the caucus decision and voted against the bill. An attempt was made to make a similar law in the closing hours of the Legislature of 1894, when the session was prolonged until five o'clock in the morning in order that absent members might be brought there to vote for the bill. It was passed, but Gov. Werts killed it. He vetoed the bill last winter, but the Republicans repassed it over the veto.

The case decided today is that of Lay Judge Herman Schalk, of Essex County, on manadamus proceedings brought against County Clerk James T. Wrighston to have him restrained from having printed on the official ballots the the names of candidates for County Judges, nominated in pursuance of the Voorhees law. The case was argued at the June term, before Justices Van Syckel and Lippincott, Democrats, and Justice Magie, Republican. Justice Lippincott concurs in Van Syckel's opinion that the law is unconstitutional. Justice Magie dissents, and will file an opinion giving his views. In the syllabus summarizing the opinion Justice Van Syckel says:

"The Legislature may reduce the number of Judges of the Common Pleas to any number less than five, and may prescribe the qualifications of the Judges. The Legislature cannot abolish the Court of Common Pleas, but if it is conceded that it has such power, then so long as the jurisdiction which resides in that court is exercised for the benefit of the people, it must be exercised by Judges appointed as heretofore. It cannot bodily be transferred to be exercised by Judges not appointed as the Constitution prescribes. The Legislature cannot, by adding to or subtracting from the duties of a given office, by uniting one office to another, acquire the right to appoint the officer in a manner other than that prescribed by the supreme law.

The case will not be appealed to the Court of Errors and Appeals, as there is no time to obtain a decision in that court, even if it were desirable. The decision will have considerable effect in the approaching election, particularly in some of the southern counties, where there is a strong anti-saloon sentiment, and the liquor dealers were preparing to oppose such nominees as were suspected of promises to refuse or decrease the licenses in the townships or towns. Now there will be no reason for saloon keepers' activity. There has been a lively contest in every county for the Judgeship nomination, no county having had fewer than half a dozen candidates.

TROLLEY COMPETITION.

The Jersey Central Has to Meet the Rates of the Trolley.

The Central Railroad of New Jersey has issued a new passenger tariff between Roselle, Elizabeth and Newark. The fare between Roselle and Newark, which has been 35 cents for excursion tickets, has been reduced to 33 cents, single fare 21 cents; Elizabeth to Newark and return excursion from 25 to 20 cents, single ticket 12 cents. The new schedule of rates will take effect on September 15. The cause of the reduction in fare is due to the trolley system between Elizabethport and Newark, which has been doing nearly all the business between the two cities at a fare of 20 cents for the round trip. It is said that the trolley company will reduce the round trip to 10 cents, or 5 cents each way. The distance is about the same as between Newark and Orange, where only 5 cents is charged for a single trip. It is said that the Central Railroad will make a like reduction in fare from Bergen Point to Jersey City, where a like competition with the trolley cars is encountered.

A CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR RECEPTION.

The Westfield Societies Will Give One to the Camp Wolf Workers.

The Christian Endeavor societies of Westfield will give a reception to Miss Curry, the matron, and all the helpers at Camp Wolf, the fresh air fund camp, at Westfield. The reception is to be held in the Presbyterian chapel on next Monday evening. The two Plainfield societies, those from the Park Avenue Baptist and the Congregational churches, who contributed to the support of the camp, have been invited to attend, and also to furnish one number for the programme.

Both societies accepted the invitation, and the Park Avenue Baptist society selected Miss Emma V. Fish to give a recitation as their share in the programme. The Congregational society have not definitely settled on their part of the programme as yet.

MRS. COX GETS THE EMBLEM.

She Has Brought the Largest Number of Odd Ladies Members.

Mizpah Lodge, No. 1, U. O. of I. O. L., met last night for the first, in their new rooms in Red Men's Hall. Three applications for membership were acted upon and one received. It was decided to hold the anniversary exercises Monday, September 23d, with an entertainment and supper. As a mark of distinction Mrs. Andrew Cox was presented by the lodge with a gold emblem for bringing in the most members during the past three months. Mrs. Mattis made the presentation with a few excellent remarks and Mrs. Cox accepted it in her usual happy manner.

A Saturday Runaway.

Saturday afternoon about four o'clock Mason W. Tyler's team and wagon were standing in front of Charles F. Abbott's residence, 966 Central avenue, when they became frightened. They ran through Central avenue to Sixth street and down the latter street to Liberty street, where they were stopped by George J. Tobin, the North avenue plumber, and returned to the owner. The wagon was upset and completely wrecked. There was no other damage.

Nearly Drove Mrs. Martin Hale Wild. How She Obtained Relief.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

"Nearly all last winter I was sick in bed, and was attended by different physicians; none cured me, none helped me very much. When I attempted to get up, it was always the same story; my back would ache, I was dizzy and faint, the bearing-down pains were terrible. I also had kidney trouble badly.

"I knew I must have help right away. I resolved to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. The results were marvellous. I have gained in every way, and am entirely cured." — MRS. MARTIN HALE, Oakdale, Mass. Every druggist has it.

UNIMAGINATIVE BEGGARS.

Novelist Howells Says They Never Tell a Good Story.

The first of two chatty papers, "Tribulations of a Cheerful Giver," by W. D. Howells, is printed in the Century for June. Mr. Howells gives the following experiences with the begging fraternity:

I must say that his statement of his own case is usually incoherent and sometimes seems even a little fabulous. The poor fellows have very little imagination or invention; they might almost as well be realistic novelists. I find that those who strike me for a night's lodging, when they stop me in the street at night, come as a rule from Pittsburg and are ironworkers of some sort; the last one said he was a puddler, "A skilled mechanic," he explained—"what is called a skilled mechanic"; and, of course, he was only watching for some chance to get back to Pittsburg, though there was no chance of work, from what he told me, after he got there. On the other hand, I find that most of those who ask by day for money to get a dinner are from Philadelphia, or the rural parts of eastern Pennsylvania, though within six months I have extended hospitality (I think that is the right phrase) to two architectural draftsmen from Boston. They were both entirely decent looking, sober looking young men, who spoke like men of education, and they each gratefully accepted a quarter from me. I do not attempt to account for them, for they made no attempt to account for themselves; and I think the effect was more artistic so.

I am rarely approached by any professed New Yorker, which is perhaps a proof of the superior industry or prosperity of our city; but now and then a fellow citizen who has fallen out asks me for money in the street, and perhaps goes straight and spends it for drink. Drink, however, is as necessary in some forms as food itself, and a rich, generous port wine is often prescribed for invalids. These men, without exception, look like invalids, and I have no doubt that they would prefer to buy a rich, generous port wine if I gave them money enough. I never do that, though I have a means of making my alms seem greater, to myself at least, by practicing a little cordiality with the poor fellows. I do not give grudgingly or silently, but I say, if I give at all, when they ask me, "Why, of course!" or "Yes, certainly"; and sometimes I invite them to use their feeble powers of invention in my behalf, and tell how they wish me to think they have come to the sad pass of beggary. This seems to flatter them, and it makes me feel much better, which is really my motive for doing it.

Now and then they will offer me some apology for begging, in a tone that says, "I know how it is myself;" and once there was one who began by saying "I know it's a shame for a strong man like me to be begging, but—" They seldom have any devices for working me, beyond the simple statement of their destitution; though there was a case in which I helped a poor fellow raise a quarter upon a postal order, which he then kept as a pledge of my good faith. Their main reliance seems to be lead pencils, which they have in all inferior varieties. I find that they will take it kindly if you do not want any change back when you have given them a coin worth more than they asked for the pencil, and that they will even let you off without taking the pencil after you have bought it. In the end you have to use some means to save yourself from the accumulation of pencils, unless you are willing to burn them for kindling wood, and I find the simplest way is not to take them after you have paid for them. It is amusing how quickly you can establish a comity with these pencil people; they will not only let you leave your pencils with them, but they will sometimes excuse you from buying if you remind them that you have bought of them lately. Then, if they do not remember you, they at least smile politely, and pretend to do so.

Wilhelmina, Queen of Holland.

The sweet girlish face which accompanies this paragraph might belong to almost any little American school girl, but it is the latest picture of Holland's young queen, Wilhelmina. She is a most winsome and loveable girl, just past her fourteenth birthday, and is adored by her loyal subjects. With all her childishness she is conscious of her coming responsibilities, and that gives her manners a little touch of reserve and dignity that seem almost out of place with the fresh simplicity of her youth. She has just been over to England with her mother, to visit her aunt, the Duchess of Albany, and in the grounds at Clermont, where her aunt's fine palace stands, with her cousins, a boy and a girl near her own age, she has had as merry a romp as if she were not burdened with the coming cares of a kingdom. Everybody will wish this pleasant-faced child, who is both amiable and intelligent, a happy life and a long and prosperous reign.

BUSINESS COLLEGE COMING.

Rev. A. A. Phelps Will Soon Establish Another Educational Institution.

Very few towns in the east, as large and lively as Plainfield, are without a business college. Such a school is to be opened in this city on the first day of October. Rev. A. A. Phelps, A. M., an alumnus of Syracuse University, has just come to inaugurate the enterprise. He has had considerable experience as a speaker, writer, and educator, and comes with the very best indorsements from many parts and parties.

Mr. Phelps is now searching for suitable rooms, which will be neatly furnished with every convenience. Competent teachers will be secured, and the best systems of book-keeping and shorthand will be adopted. The English branches will also be thoroughly taught, for the benefit of young men and women of neglected education. The instruction will be mainly personal, thus saving the student all embarrassment. The college will be run five days and four nights a week.

PLAINFIELD AN AUTUMN RESORT.

Many Guests Gather at The Revere House to Spend the Autumn.

As a summer resort Plainfield does not attract a large crowd, but during the autumn and spring it would be hard to find a nicer place at which to stay. Already the fall visitors have begun to arrive and the Revere House is almost entirely filled. And those who do come are perfectly satisfied, both with the city and the management of the hotel.

George B. De Revere, the enterprising proprietor, has added music to the many other attractions, and every evening Miss Helen Hasbrook lends her aid at the piano. Last evening almost all the guests gathered in the parlors and spent the evening in singing and dancing. The winter promises to be a most successful one in the hotel.

SOMERSET'S SMOKER.

The members of Somerset Council, No 102, J. O. U. A. M., at their regular meeting last evening enjoyed a smoker and a good time in general. There was a good sized crowd present and excellent speeches were made by different ones. One new member was initiated during the evening, Emil Closs, of Newark, was present and delighted the members with funny and amusing sketches.

Refreshments consisting of watermelon and cake were served, and all present were furnished with corncob pipes and excellent smoking tobacco. The affair broke up at a late hour all being well pleased with the entertainment.

Too Late to Take the Stratford.

SUNDAY DRINKING.

Father McMillan Defines the Attitude of the Catholic Church Thereon.

The Rev. Father McMillan, of New York, recently preached on the subject of "The Sunday Closing of Saloons and Sabbath Observance Generally." He strongly condemned not only the selling of liquor on Sunday, but the patronizing of saloons on that day, and supported his position by quoting from the pastoral letter and decrees of the Third Plenary Council of Baltimore. Father McMillan said:

"I maintain that every body or group of Christians must take into consideration the external observance of the Sunday in order that this important matter may not be left to the priests as individuals. This has always been among Catholics a recognized usage having the force of law. The so-called continental Sunday is a product of infidelity, and has been forced upon Catholics in Europe by the civil power. This applies especially to Paris, where the workmen are beginning to demand the privilege of giving up work on Sunday.

"After careful delibegation at the Third Plenary Council of Baltimore in 1884, the Bishops of the United States decided to remove all doubt concerning Catholic Church teaching regarding intemperance and the proper observance of the Sunday by the publication of a pastoral letter, from which these extracts are taken:

"'There is one way of profaning the Lord's Day, which is so prolific of evil results that we consider it our duty to utter against it a special condemnation. This is the practice of selling beer or other liquors on Sunday, or of frequenting places where they are sold. This practice tends more than any other to turn the Day of the Lord into a day of dissipation—to use it as an occasion for breeding intemperance.

"'While we hope that Sunday laws on this point will not be relaxed, but even more rigidly enforced, we implore all Catholics, for the love of God and of country, never to take part in such Sunday traffic, nor to patronize or countenance it. And we not only direct the attention of all pastors to the repression of this abuse, but we also call upon them to induce all of their flocks that may be engaged in the sale of liquors to abandon as soon as they can the dangerous traffic, and to embrace a more becoming way of making a living.'"

ANOTHER NIGHT OF RACING.

SEVERAL LIVELY BICYCLE EVENTS AT THE CRESCENT OVAL.

Spectators More Interested in the Amateurs Than Professionals—McCutchen's Finishing Spurts Admired—Summary.

The beautiful weather still continued last evening for the second and last of the night meets at the Crescent oval. The attendance was much better than at the previous night but nowhere near as large as it should have been. The races were all very good, but the amateurs seemed to interest the people more than the professionals. Starbuck rode in the two-mile handicap and won that after an exhibition of very pretty riding. The favorite of the evening, however, was Will McCutchen who won both races he started in, which were the 2:40 class and the 2:50 class. In the former, he made the fastest time made in an open race during the evening. His spurt was grand, for although he was riding against very fast men, he won the both races by over a length.

McCutchen was also entered for the one-mile handicap, but he did not ride. Cuming led in the first part of the race, but the bunch soon caught him, and as he was unable to duplicate his riding of Monday he finished in the sixth or seventh place.

The five-mile handicap for Class A riders started in at a very hot pace.

The limit men, bunched together, while Ertz and Leffersen from scratch and Brown from the 120 yard line chased after them. The three rear riders alternated in setting the pace and spurted steadily for nine laps; then, seeing they could not catch the limit men, they fell out. The advance bunch stopped the hot scorch and went along at a steady gait, ending with the usual spurt on the last lap.

The special feature of the evening was an unpaced one-third of a mile by Messrs. Appley and Bird, of Elizabeth, on a tandem. Their time was 38 3-5.

The last race on the programe was the consolation for Class A riders, and this race was the occasion for the first kick of the meet. A time limit was placed on the race, but the riders loafed and finished in about three minutes. Referee Bunnell declared it no race, and the riders refused to ride. The man who finished fourth finally agreed to ride and was given first prize.

Stratford Not Yet Opened.

The negotiations which have been going on between Miss Elizabeth Bartholomew, of Jeansville, Pa., and James E. Martine, looking to the opening of the Stratford have not yet been consummated. If Miss Bartholomew opens the school she will be assisted by Miss Audobond of Boston.

SOME BASEBALL GOSSIP.

Deitrich, formerly of the Ironsides of Newark, is now playing centrefield for the Torontos of the Eastern League.

The Sporting Life says: "Turner uses poor judgement in returning balls hit into his territory. He hasn't the knack of quickly sizing up a situation.

Leo Smith is playing shortstop for the Atlanta's, who are in second place in the Southern League. He is fielding good but not hitting the ball hard, which was his great fault while he played with the Crescents.

The many friends of Joe Bonner, formerly of the Crescents, will be glad to know he is playing good ball for the Wilkesbarres of the Eastern League, both at the bat and at second base. He recently made four two-baggers in a game against Springfield.

The National League batting average up to date shows Turner is fourth with an average of 333 and Keeler ninth with an average of 309, which makes each second highest batter in their respective clubs. Burkett, of the Clevelands, leads the League with a percentage of 414.

As Champion Jim Corbett was billed to play firstbase for the Ironsides of Newark Sunday, against the Hoboken A. C., a number of Plainfielders went to see the game. As Corbett made so many errors in the first inning he retired from the game much to the satisfaction of the 7,000 spectators.

A LIVELY LITTLE BLAZE.

Prompt Action Saves Westphal's Grocery From a Disastrous Conflagration.

A little blaze started in the cellar of Westphal's grocery at the corner of Liberty and West Fourth street this morning shortly after half-past seven. The fire caught in a large pile of paper bags through the carelessness, it is supposed, of a boy who works in the store and who had been down cellar with a candle a few minutes before. Smoke was seen pouring out of the cellar windows and the garden hose was stretched down the cellar stairs. It kept kinking, however, and no water could be obtained. A bucket brigade was formed under the command of Councilman Westphal who had in the mean time bravely jumped in and scattered the blazing bags. An alarm was sent in from box 34 and the fire department responded very promptly. Two extinguishers were used to put out what fire remained.

AT HYMEN'S ALTAR.

Marriage of Miss Dena Anderson to Percevial Davis, Both of This City.

The marriage of Miss Dena Anderson, of 346 Munson place, to Percevial Davis, of Elmwood place, took place yesterday afternoon at 5:30 at the home of the bride's parents. Rev. C. R. Barnes, pastor of the First M. E. church, performed the ceremony in the presence of only the parents and near relatives.

The bridemaid was Miss Jennie Anderson, sister of the bride, and the best man Thomas Randall. The bride was becoming in a gown of light gray cloth trimmed with white lace, and the bridemaid wore a gown of brown cloth. After the ceremony an informal reception was held and refreshments served.

Mr. and Mrs. Davis were the recipients of a large number of useful presents. They will reside for the present at the home of the bride.

Bound Brook to Have Good Roads.

The citizens of Bound Brook have taken hold with great vigor of the subject of macadamizing the streets of their town, and a number of the streets have already been put in excellent order by the Commissioners. They have recently taken proceedings to compel the Freeholders to macadamize under the State law the road from North Plainfield through the entire township to Somerville.

Under the State law only one-tenth of this expense is to be put upon the adjoining property owners. The county will be called upon for a small portion of the expenses, the State paying the larger amount. Mandamus proceedings have been begun against the Board of Freeholders to take action on this matter.

Will Soon Be Out.

Augustus M. Frazee, who has been at the hospital for the past six weeks and who was obliged to have the lower part of his right leg amputated, is improving steadily. He will leave the hospital on Saturday and his friends will be glad to see him out again.

Ninth Anniversary.

The ninth anniversary of Franklin Council, No. 41, J. O. U. A. M., will be celebrated during the week, commencing October 6th.

WEDDING AT HIGH NOON.

PRETTY NUPTIAL EVENT OF TWO SCOTCH PLAINS YOUNG PEOPLE.

Marriage of Ada Josephine Miller to George L. Dunn—Both Popular With Church Workers, Who Present a Gift.

The home of Mrs. F. A. Miller at Scotch Plains was the scene of a very pretty wedding yesterday at twelve o'clock noon when her daughter, Miss Ada Josephine Miller, was united in marriage to George L. Dunn, also of Scotch Plains. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Braker, pastor of the Scotch Plains Baptist church.

Miss Wooster, of Rahway, was bridesmaid, and Nelson Dunn, of New Market, uncle of the groom, was best man. The bride wore a becoming gown of gray silk, with steel trimmings and satin ribbon, while the bridesmaid was gowned in white.

A reception followed the ceremony, when hearty congratulations were extended the bride and groom, who are exceedingly popular among a large circle of acquaintances.

They received many handsome and useful presents, among which was a three-sided mirror from the Young People's Christian Association of the Baptist church, of which society both were members.

A wedding dinner was served by Stephenson, the caterer of this city. Mr. and Mrs Dunn left Fanwood on the two o'clock train for New York, and will spend two weeks on Long Island and Connecticut visiting. As they left the house their friends showered rice on them.

Among the guests present were Mrs. Joseph Wooster and family, of Rahway; W. H. Davis, Fred Alyea, Miss Alyea, Henry Broadwell and family, of Newark; Miss Kate Heral, Tottenville, S. I.; Wm. Banks and family, of Netherwood; Miss Mary Dunn, New Market; Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Parks, Scotch Plains; Mrs. DeMott, Gladstone; Miss Henrietta Parse, Trenton. A pleasant feature was the presence of Miss Eliza Dunn, of Millington, an aunt of the groom. She is eighty-six years old and is especially young in her actions. Mr. and Mrs. Dunn will reside in Scotch Plains on their return.

CLAIMS HE TREATED HER RIGHT.

Deckertown Man Says He Did Not Turn the Girl Out of Home.

The Daily Press some time ago published an item concerning an unfortunate colored girl who applied to Rev. P. W. Gibson for help. The girl claimed to have been sent to this city by L. J. Loomis, of Deckertown, N. J., with only enough money to get here. The Deckertown Recorder publishes the following communication from Mr. Loomis:

I noticed the little item in last week's Recorder in regard to a colored girl being stranded at Plainfield, without money or home, helpless, and having worked for me a few weeks, having been recommended to us by Mrs. John Roy, and by the agent for colored people of this town, W. S. Vandruff. She was in my family for four weeks, the last week entirely unable to do anything, my wife and daughter doing the work and caring for the colored girl. We also told her she was perfectly welcome to stay with us until she could collect sufficient money with which to go to her home in the south. But she declined doing that. We then went to the agent, W. S. Vandruff, and asked him what we should do. He told us there was a colony of colored people living in Plainfield, and advised sending her there. How much money she had when she reached the latter place I, of course, do not know. But I do know this; every dollar due her from me was paid and paid in the presence of my daughter. My wife provided a lunch for her on her trip and my horse and wagon took her and her baggage to the train. There all my responsibilities ended. The agent directed her to the agency at Plainfield. I am not their agent, and therefore not responsible for their coming and going or any happenings to them. I treat my servants humanely and kindly, pay them what is due them, and there all my obligations end, whether or not they become stranded in strange cities or towns.

UP-TO-DATE.

A Kindergarten Where French is Practically Taught.

In the kindergarten school of the Misses Scribner, Newton and Hellwig, Plainfield parents have an opportunity of having their children learn French in the most practical manner.

Abroad it is realized that languages must be studied in early childhood, when a correct pronunciation and fluency in speaking are so easily acquired, but studied practically without books, by conversation and object teaching.

Miss Hellwig's wonderful capacity of adopting her instruction to the age and individual requirements of her pupils is widely known. She possesses the happy gift of not only making her lessons all that could be desired for adults, but likewise of teaching young children in such a fascinating way that they are not aware of actually being instructed.

The English department of the kindergarten will be in charge of Miss Fuller, who will conduct it according to the latest methods.

If the devil ever stays away from church, it is when he knows the preaching will be done by a man who only knows God by hearsay.—Ram's Horn.

ANOTHER CASE OF MYSTERY.

A Plainfielder Who Has Been Missing Since Tuesday.

Plainfild may soon again be startled by a disappearance case that will set the town in a furore that will equal that caused by the wandering of Lucretia Clark.

A well known and prominent citizen has been missing since Tuesday and no trace can be secured of his whereabouts, though a search is being made to locate him. He made a visit to Asbury Park a few days ago and from there went to his place of business in New York on Tuesday. He left ostensibly for Plainfield at closing hours, but did not come home.

It was known that he had quite a sum of money with him, and whether he has been waylaid, robbed and forcibly held or has left for parts unknown of his own volition remains a deep mystery. The Daily Press withholds the man's identity in order that he may be given ample chance to return or make his whereabouts known before the publication of his name, and thus avoid the subsequent damaging gossip which would follow.

MUST PAY THE RACE-TRACK MEN.

Linden Township Must Return the $5,000 License Fee—Decided This Morning.

In court at Elizabeth this morning Judge VanSyckle rendered a decision in the case of the Linden Race-Track Association against James W. Hope, as treasurer of Linden township, in favor of the plaintiffs for $5,475. A great deal of interest centred in the decision as the case was an important one. The race-track association paid a license fee of $5,000 to the township for the privilege of conducting horse races. Then shortly after the Legislature passed the bill prohibiting the selling of pools on races in New Jersey, and when it became a law the township officials refused to return the license fee. Suit was brought for the recovery of the money, and at the May term of court a decision was made in favor of the track association. The case was appealed and now Judge VanSyckel reaffirms the first decision.

LAST OF THE TRIO CAPTURED.

The speedy capture of Ede Thompson, the colored man, who was implicated in the fight on Somerset street, Monday afternoon, as predicted in The Daily Press of last night, was fulfilled yesterday afternoon.

Sergeant Kiely saw the man on a wagon coming up Somerset street toward Front street. He at once took charge of the culprit and placed him in the rookery. Word was then sent to Chief VanHorn of the borough and he sent Marshal Doud after him.

He was taken back to the borough again and placed under lock and key.

Thompson was given a hearing by Justice Crosley last night at seven o'clock and was fined $10. Not possessing the cash he will remain in the borough lockup that many days.

HUM OF THE TROLLEY.

Council Takes Action That Will Bring the Extension.

TROLLEY ORDINANCE PROGRESSED.

There is Hope That the Electric Road Will Soon Spread Out Over The Town—Councilman Fisk Says in a Few Months—Sewer Matters Occupy Considerable Attention—License for a Woman—Many Other Important Matters Decided.

Noted progress was made along several important lines at last night's regular September meeting of the City Council, and although it was nearly 8:45 when Clerk MacMurray, in the absence of President See, called the members to order, a considerable amount of business was transacted.

On motion of Councilman Fisk, Councilman Erickson was chosen president pro-tem.

Mr. See came in later, but did not take the chair.

Councilmen Stockton, Fisk, Erickson, Dumont, Frost, Moore, Frazee and Westphal answered to the roll call, after which the minutes of the last two meetings were read and approved.

The following petitions and communications were then presented:

From A. Vanderbeek and others, residents of Park avenue, asking that Park avenue be put in same condition that it was before the sewers were put in. It was referred to the Sewer committee; from Woolston & Buckle and others, asking that two electric lights be placed on Martine avenue. Referred to the Police and Public Light committee; E. C. Mulford and others petitioned Council for crosswalk at East Fifth street and Richmond, and South avenue and Berckman street. The matter was referred to Street committee.

D. S. Dunavan asked for permission to erect a corrugated covered wagon house in the rear of 242 East Second street. It was referred to the Building committee.

Mrs. E. T. DeForest asked that something be done with her request to erect a memorial fountain on West Second street. On motion of Mr. Fisk the request was granted with the proviso that it be done under the direction of the Street Commissioner.

C. E. Harris, janitor of Washington school, applied for the appointment of special policeman. The matter was referred to the Mayor.

Thomas Callahan objected to the street railway running from Richmond street through Third street to Watchung avenue. The objection was placed in the hands of the street committee.

The city clerk's and city treasurer's reports were read and referred to the finance committee.

Mr. Dumont, from the finance committee, offered resolutions to the effect that the three months note of $1,500 now due, charged to the fire department fund, be renewed; that $4,000 be borrowed in anticipation of taxes to be placed in the general fund; and that $8,500 be borrowed to be used on sewer work. They were all adopted.

On Mr. Fisk's motion the clerk read the corporation notice in regard to the street railway extension. An opportunity was then given for anyone to offer objections. Mr. Callahan was present and stated his objection as given above. That being the only objection, the sewer committee, through Mr. Frost, made a report.

The specifications and bonds for the construction of the sewage beds were on his resolution filed, and they were ordered published in the Plainfield papers, also The Engineering News, of New York, and Monday, September 23d, set as the time to receive bids for the work.

Mr. Frost also offered a resolution that 150 copies of the specifications be printed by the printing committee, which was carried.

On both of the above resolutions Councilmen Moore and Frazee voted in the negative.

Mr. Fisk moved that the matter of releasing Cook & Co's bondsmen be referred to the corporation counsel and that he prepare the necessary paper for release. It was so ordered.

A letter was then read by the clerk from Engineer A. J. Gavett, which stated that the outfall sewer contracted for by John Marsden was commenced July 10th, 1895, and since that time the average number of feet of pipe laid each day was about 65½ feet. He thought, as did also Mr. Frost, that the work was progressing too slowly. The latter thought more men should be employed and felt that the city should take steps to push the work. On Mr. Dumont's motion the city clerk was authorized to send Mr. Marsden a copy of Mr. Gavett's report and instruct him that the Council would take proceedings if the work was not pushed faster.

Mr. Marsden was present and stated that he could and would get the work done. That he had one gang of men now at work but expected another gang in a few days. He said that 1,900 feet of pipe had been laid, leaving 6,500 feet yet to be put down. There was no reason to fear that the work would not be done.

Mr. Fisk then presented the street railway matter, offering a map of routes to be filed. He also offered an ordinance, that will be found in another column, in regard to the proposed extension.

The ordinance was adopted on its first and second readings and ordered engrossed and duly advertised. It is the intention of Mr. Fisk, after two years of hard work, to put the extensions through this fall, which the company is willing to do. The ordinance will probably be adopted on third reading at the next meeting Monday evening, September 23d. Street Commissioner Meeker then reported through Councilman Fisk on a steam roller. He stated that after a thorough examination of the principal rollers he thought the Springfield, Ohio, roller made by Kelly & Co., was the best and suited to Plainfield. Mr. Fisk then offered a resolution that the Finance Committee be authorized to purchase the roller at the lowest figure and that they arrange for the extension of time on the payments for the same. It was so ordered.

Mr. Westphal called for the Sunday closing ordinance and moved that it be adopted on its third reading which was so ordered. The ordinance granting Mrs. Conneeley permission to conduct the liquor business formerly owned by her husband, now deceased, was called for by Mr. Moore, and on his motion was adopted on third reading. This gives Mrs. Conneeley the priviledge till the expiration of the license.

After Mr. Frazee reported the bills correct the council adjourned till Monday evening, September 23d.

ANXIOUS TO KICK THE PIGSKIN

A FOOT-BALL LEAGUE FOR THIS SECTION, OF JERSEY.

The Matter Informally Discussed at Westfield Last Night—Plainfield Could Put a Crack Team in the Field.

From all appearances it looks as if Plainfield was going to see some good football playing this fall. The Westfield enthusiasts have been thinking for some time time of forming a league with teams from the surrounding towns and play for the championship of this district.

Last evening the Westfield Football Association invited delegates from Roselle, Cranford, Scotch Plains, Dunellen and the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. to meet in the Y. M. C. A. rooms at Westfield to discuss the question informally. All those invited, except Scotch Plains, either sent a delegate or sent word. Charles B. Morse acted as the Plainfield delegate.

The sentiment of the meeting seemed to be heartily in favor of a league, modeled something on the plan of the Inter-collegiate Football Association and to allow no one to play on the teams except members of the society to which the team belonged.

As Plainfield is much larger than any of the other places the Westfield committee wanted a Y. M. C. A. and not an all-Plainfield eleven.

It was thought that the games should begin about October 1st. It was finally decided that each of the six clubs invited should, if possible, send three delegates to meet at the Westfield Y. M. C. A. rooms at eight o'clock next Thursday evening fully empowered to organize the league so that the schedule and rules could be decided upon at once.

SAID HE WAS STRUCK.

A New Market Man Makes a Serious Charge Against Honan's Men.

A man by the name of Hallet, of New Market, was driving towards Plainfield on West Front street yesterday afternoon in company with his son. He came where the work on the sewer trench had begun, but as the street was not blocked off, he went on. According to his statement, when he got inside the contractor's men would not let him out again and struck him repeatedly, he alleges, before he could escape which he finally did. He complained to the police and steps will be taken to punish the offenders. A resident of the neighborhood stated to a Daily Press reporter this morning that a similar occurence took place yesterday morning.

CHARMING NUPTIAL EVENT.

A SOMERVILLE YOUNG YOUNG MAN CARRIES OFF A PLAINFIELD BRIDE.

Miss Maud Safford and Louis P. Gaston the Contracting Parties—The Unitarian Service Used—Who the Guests Were.

A very pretty wedding took place at the Unitarian church yesterday afternoon at three o'clock when the marriage of Miss Maud Safford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Safford, of Grove street, and Louis P. Gaston, of Somerville, was solemnized. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Hobart Clark.

From the church the newly-married couple and the guests were driven to the home of the bride's parents, very prettily decorated for the occasion, where the dinner was served.

The bride was charmingly attired in a wedding gown of white satin, trimmed with silk lace. She carried a bouquet of white roses. The bridemaid was her sister, Miss Beatrice C. Safford, who wore a becoming gown of white figured silk, trimmed with blue ribbon. Her bouquet was of pink roses. Miss Marion Safford, the youngest sister of the bride, prettily gowned in white, was the maid of honor. The other two young ladies who completed the bridal party were Miss Helen G. Hopkins, of Arlington, Mass., whose gown was of white organdie over green satin, and Miss Annie Baston, of the same place, who was attired in white and pale green silk. G. Tayloe Gwathmey, of Norfolk, Va., was the best man. The ushers were Frederick W. Ancona and George C. Davies, both of Philadelphia.

The guests at the wedding beside the bridal party and the parents of the bride, were Mrs. Hugh M. Gaston, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh K. Gaston, Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Vanderveer, Dr. Mary Gaston, and Miss Francis Gaston, of Somerville, Miss Mary Evans, of Philadelphia, R. H. McCutchen, Miss Howland, Miss Marion McCutchen, and Miss Verna McCutchen, of Ellisdale Manor, South Branch, Miss Maria L. Barney, and Rev. and Mrs. Hobart Clark.

THE FROEBEL IDEA.

A Practical System of Instruction to Be Used by Miss Demarest.

The prevalent impression that a kindergarten is a school, is erroneous. Each has different objects in view and is conducted after different methods. According to Froebel, in the kindergarten the essential thing is the child, its growth and development. In the school it is the opposite, the essential thing being the objects taught and the understanding of its nature and properties. In the work of the kindergarten, there is more of the freedom of the nursery than the restrictions of school. It is with this object in view, thus to prepare the child for a higher education, that Miss Eleanor Demarest will turn her attention to kindergarten work only. She has had much experience with little children, has a thorough understanding of the child nature, and a faculty of keeping them happy and interested. Children as young as three years will be received.

Father Szymanowski Seeks Court.

Rev. Father Stephen Szymanowski, the Perth Amboy priest against whom charges were made last week, is about to seek vindication in the civil courts. He says that sufficient evidence has been secured to make it comparatively easy to prosecute the leaders in their alleged attempt to destroy his reputation. They will be charged with conspiracy and criminal libel, and Counselor C. C. Homann, who will represent the accused clergyman, says that the evidence known is sufficient to procure a conviction.

A BRONZE PRESENTATION.

Dr. Coles, of Scotch Plains, Makes Newark a Valuable Gift.

Dr. Jonathan Ackerman Coles, of Scotch Plains, has purchased for presentation to Newark a group in bronze. Its character and significance and the wishes of the donor are explained in letter, which he sent to Mayor Lentkuecher, a portion of which follows:

As a gift to Newark, my native city, in whose educational, scientific and religious advancement my father, the late Dr. Abraham Coles, always took a deep and active interest, I have, through the agency of Messrs. Sypher & Co., of New York city, bought one of the most characteristic and beautiful groups in real bronze to be seen in this country or in Europe. It consists of three figures—an American Indian, his wife and her mother, each life-size. The pedestal is of rare dark Italian marble. The whole was executed at Rome, Italy, in 1886, by the distinguished American sculptor, the late C. B. Ives.

A Clever Dancer.

One of the most prominent players in the cast of "A Happy Little Home," the new comedy satire in which the comedian George W. Monroe is the star this season, Miss Dorothy Drew is the dancer. Mr. Monroe has entrusted Miss Drew with one of the most important parts in the comedy, in the third act of which she will introduce her dancing specialty. Patrons of Roof Garden entertainments were afforded an opportunity to witness the work of this exceptionally talented little lady at the Casino, where she played a protracted engagement this summer. The attraction will soon appear in Music Hall.

LIQUOR DEALERS UP IN ARMS

THE LICENSED MEN ARE AFTER THE UNLICENSED ONES.

A Crusade to Be Instituted that Will Set the Town Agog With Excitement—Startling Statements Made to a Reporter.

If the present intentions of the licensed liquor dealers of this city are carried out Plainfield will shortly be the scene of a crusade that will raise high jinks with a good many people and incidentally set the town agog with excitement that will be alleviated only when a number of merchants are brought before the bar of justice, charged with selling liquor without a license, and cleared or convicted as the case may be.

The men who deal in liquor over bars by paying the city $700 per year for the privilege have got their dander up, figuratively speaking, and will soon be hot on the trail of those who sell with a license that principally consists in a wink of the eye and the knowledge that the patron knows a good thing without heralding it among his neighbors.

"Why," said a prominent liquor dealer to a Daily Press reporter last night, "there are fifty, yes sixty, places in this city who are selling liquor without a license. Do you call that a fair deal when we are paying $700 a year for that privilege? We do not and we are going to put a stop to it if possible."

That is the reason that the Retail Liquor Dealers Association was organized here a few days ago. By banding together in organization they propose to institute a crusade, gather evidence and prosecute those who are dealing illegally in liquor. As an organization they feel that they will accomplish results where as individuals they would fail.

The members of the Association are in conference this afternoon discussing the movement with the idea of formulating the general line of attack.

BOOM PLAINFIELD FOR '96.

This City Has Amply Demonstrated That It Can Take Care of Delegates.

Perhaps everyone is not aware of the fact that a strong effort is being made by the executive committee of the Local Union to secure the '96 State Convention of Christian Endeavor for Plainfield. The chances of success are good. Plainfield has so many advantages to offer in the way of railroad facilities, large churches, etc. There would not be the least trouble in providing accommodations for the hundreds of delegates, and the religious feast, lasting not only during the convention but long into the winter, would amply repay all the efforts put forth to make the convention a success. Not long ago Plainfield was the scene of the State convention of the Y. M. C. A., and only a few weeks have passed since the conference of the Seventh-Day Baptists took place; and to have the State Christian Endeavor convention would be grand, indeed. A company of consecrated young people such as would be present from every county of the State cannot fail to have a good influence wherever they go, and leave that influence behind them when they depart. Shall we not endeavor to bring this blessing to Plainfield? B.

FROM WAIST LINE UP.

SKIRTS DON'T BOTHER MUCH SO LONG AS THEY ARE COPIOUS.

It Is the Waist, the Collar, the Hair and Incidentally the Face that Lovely Woman Must Depend Upon for Her Artistic Attractiveness.

The original fancy for the novel in waist decoration is deepening into widespread anxiety. No one minds much about her skirts, if they are moderately wide and have the braid on them, but a new waist involves labor of body and mind.

The sailor collar is rampant. It has grown to be the madness of the hour. We see it not only in the duck, gingham and humble fabrics, but in satin, and the finest; in black and white colors, particularly linen color.

Some seek to vary the simple collar effect by adding fichu ends. In which case the whole arrangement is often adjustable. The most popular of these finishing touches is made of fine grass linen, with trimmings of black or white lace. But they may be fashioned from any other material at hand.

Ruffle effects are the latest and perhaps the prettiest. At the back they fit perfectly, extend in epaulete fashion over the sleeves and down the front in long ends, finishing just at the waist line, where, after their own sweet will, they may flop about a bit.

Stoles are made from the dress fabric, grass linen or net. Some particularly smart ones have been so made of black Brussels, ornamented with appliqued jet pieces. They have, in the latter case, jet borders.

A gown of white glace taffeta with lines of black and small flowers of yellow, has a vest of yellow chiffon and a modified stole trimming of white Russian lace or yellow silk. Yellow chiffon ends, which make a pretty decoration if kept out of ice cream, finish the sleeve. A hat of black and parasol of white, gloves of pale yellow with white stitchings, add the necessary garden party touches.

a jaunty evening waist, intended, oddly enough, for half mourning. The body of the waist is of dull white gros grain silk, ornamented with black corded chiffon insertings. The sleeves are of fine black and white striped silk, not glace, and the tab ends are of dull black gros grain, held in place by buckles of unpolished blackness.

It has always seemed a little curious that conventional mourning should insist upon certain somber standard colors, though permitting, even requiring, that the mode be of the latest.

But why quarrel with the mode? One may refuse to adopt it if she likes. But why differ excitedly with it or anything?

The improvements in modern surgery have been very great and very many lives have been saved through its efficiency. The changes, although less noted, have been as great in canine surgery. Dr. Tomlinson was called, set the broken bone and now the little dog carries a plaster cast on his leg which will remain there for a month.

VOORHEES' WORK IN NEWARK.

Senator Voorhees, of Elizabeth, chairman of New Jersey's Lexow committee, spent several days in Newark last week preparing for a resumption of the investigation begun at Trenton. He had several secret consultations with ex-Alderman Tyler Parmly, James Martin, of the State Board of Arbitration, and some of the local newspaper men. Detective Gregory was employed, and is at work for the Senator.

Most of the time was spent in inquiring into the making of the water contract by a Republican Common Council in 1889. Senator Ketcham, who was a member of that Council and also a member of the committee, did not attend the consultations with Senator Voorhees. Neither did any of the other members of the committee.

Senator Voorhees promised the local politicians who tendered him their assistance that James E. Howell, local counsel for the committee, should be replaced by Mr. Corbin if the committee made a visit to Newark. Mr. Howell is the law partner of Joseph Coult, who, as City Counsel, drew the water contract.

Senator Voorhees admitted very cheerfully that he could not find much to begin work upon, and expressed doubt as to whether anything further would be done. He appointed an expert to examine the Essex road board's accounts, and it is said found that they had been very carelessly kept.

The committee will hold a meeting at Trenton tomorrow, and it will then be decided whether work shall be resumed. Senator Ketcham, E. B. Gadd's, George M. Ballard and other well-known Republicans framed and voted for the Newark water contract. It was afterwards approved by the old Newark Aqueduct Board.

DEATH OF MRS. W. G. RUNYON.

Four Weeks of Serious Illness Results in the Death of an Estimable Woman.

The death of Mrs. Walter G. Runyon occurred Sunday morning at 3:45 at her home, 1201 East Broad street, Elizabeth.

Mrs. Runyon, who was well known in this city, was taken seriously ill about four weeks ago and since that time has been a great sufferer. For the past two weeks she was unconscious and remained so until she died. Decedent was the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Moses D. Brown, of 404 East Fourth street, and a twin sister to Mrs. L. J. Denton. She was born in New Market November 5, 1850, and was therefore forty-four years, nine months and four days old. For the past twenty-five years she has lived in Plainfield, Dunellen and Elizabeth. She was a thorough Christian and in health an active member of the Methodist church. A husband, three sons, father, mother, four sisters and four brothers survive her.

The funeral services will be held Wednesday afternoon at one o'clock from her late home, in Elizabeth, and interment in Hillside Cemetery the same day.

There is a probability that the casket will be opened at the grave so as to give those who so desire an opportunity to view the remains.

Had to Postpone His Trip.

Robinson Pound, who had made preparations to accompany J. T. Vail, of Des Moines, Iowa, home next Sunday, has been obliged to forego the pleasure of the trip, owing to his inability to have the will contest, in which he is the defendant as being the recipient of the disputed property, postponed to a later date than next month, when it is set down for a hearing in the courts. Mr. Pound was left a small property by his foster mother, who was a Quakeress, and the other relatives of the deceased woman are endeavoring to set aside the will.

The Mother Wanted Her Boy Punished.

Edward Reilley, a young man of Summit, was arraigned in the Union Court on Friday for ill-treating his mother. She sent word to the Court that her son was a worthless fellow who did not want to work, and when she tried to reason with him he beat her. She wished the Court to give him all the punishment the law allowed for his conduct. Judge McCormick sentenced the prisoner to six months, less one day, in the county jail.

Had Too Much Curiosity.

A man, fifty-six years old, who gave the name of Peter Benson and said he lived at Reading, Pa., was arrested at Elmora, near Elizabeth, on Saturday night. He was stopping women and girls on the street and questioning them as to where they were going. He stopped trolley cars and questioned the conductors as well. His appearance indicated mental derangement. He was sent to jail for thirty days for disorderly conduct.

Declared Unconstitutional.

The law passed by the last Legislature legislating out of office all Law Judges in the State was declared unconstitutional at eleven o'clock this morning by Judge VanSyckle at Trenton.

Rev. John Reid, Jr., of Great Falls, Mon., recommended Ely's Cream Balm to me. I can emphasize his statement. "It is a positive cure for catarrh, if used as directed."—Rev. Francis W. Poole, Pastor Central Pres. Church, Helen, Mon.

It is the medicine above all others for catarrh, and is worth its weight in gold. I can use Ely's Cream Balm with safety and it does all that is claimed for it.—B. W. Sperry, Hartford, Conn.

A MURDER IN SOMERSET.

ANOTHER MYSTERIOUS NEW JERSEY TRAGEDY RECORDED SUNDAY.

A Colored Girl Found Dead in the Bushes Along a Highway—Supposed to Have Been Murdered For Her Money.

About 8 o'clock Sunday morning Peter N. Dow found the body of a young mulatto woman lying in a clump of bushes twenty feet from the river road in Somerville. Dow at once informed County Physician Wagoner and a large crowd went to the scene of the tragedy. An examination showed that the woman was about twenty-two years of age. She was well dressed and wore earrings and a gold wedding ring. She had been choked to death, as finger marks were plainly discernible on her throat. Her clothing was torn and soiled, and she had been assaulted. Mrs. Catherine Johnson, a colored woman, who lives with her husband on the Elmendorf farm, identified the murdered woman as Annie Beekman, of Newark, who had been visiting her. The girl was a servant at the farm of W.W. Horner, of Neshanic, until two years ago when she went to Newark.

Early this week Annie came back to Somerville to visit the fair. On Thursday night she went to the home of Mrs. Johnson and remained there until yesterday morning, when she said she was going to Neshanic to see Calvit Corte, to collect $48, which she said he had held in trust for her. She did so, and A. Jacob Johnson, the husband of Catherine, went with her.

Johnson and the woman arrived at the Somerville depot at eight o'clock last night. From there they went to several beer saloons where, it is alleged, they imbibed freely. About nine o'clock they came back to the depot, and when Johnson saw the woman engage in conversation with two "fakirs" from the fair grounds he became disgusted and left her. He says the two men were smooth-shaven and one was short in statue and wore black clothes. Johnson says he did not see the woman again until he saw her dead this morning. An examination of the road near where the body was found shows that a terrible struggle took place, after the woman had been pursued for some distance by one or two men.

ANXIOUS FOR FENDERS.

Rev. Mr. Schenck Thinks the Street Railway Should Adopt Them Now.

In the preliminary remarks to his sermon yesterday morning Rev. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, made allusions to the absense of fenders on the trolley cars in this city, and urged that it was important that such an apparatus should be provided without delay by the street railway company. He thought that the company should run no risk in this direction, waiting until the city ordinance recently passed should become a law. The Daily Press joins with Rev. Mr. Schenck that now is the proper time to adopt the fender. There is just as much risk now as there will be six months or a year hence.

VOORHEES WAS HERE.

The Senator Talked Over the Situation in This City Saturday Fight.

Senator Foster M. Voorhees, of Elizabeth, was in town Saturday night and had a conference in the city clerk's office with a number of local Republicans regarding his chances for securing delegates to the State convention. The result of the primaries held Friday night were so favorable to his canvass that he is making an extra hustle now to make as good a showing in this city. The primaries in Plainfield will be held tomorrow evening, but Kean will doubtless capture a portion of the delegates.

A Progressive Plainfielder.

James Conroy, of Somerset street, has given up his position in his brother Will's blacksmith shop on Somerset street and started one of his own at Roselle.

A New Teacher.

Mr. Slocum has taken the position formerly held by Mr. Wentworth as teacher in Leal's School.

Irving W. Larimore, physical director of Y. M. C.A., Des Moines, Iowa, says he can conscientiously recommend Chamberlain's Pain Balm to athletes, gymnasts, bicyclists, football players and the profession in general for bruises, sprains and dislocations; also for soreness and stiffness of the muscles. When applied before the parts become swollen it will effect a cure in one half the time usually required. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

CHANGED THEIR OWN NAME.

NORWOOD ATHLETIC CLUB BECOMES THE NORWOOD ASSOCIATION.

Officers Elected for Three Months and Several Changes Made—A Boxing Bout and a Mock Trial Follow.

A number of the young men of the eastern end of Plainfield, who have formed themselves into an organization called the Norwood Athletic Club, met on Tuesday to elect officers and transact other business.

The officers were chosen as follows: President, Wyatt Barnes; Vice-president, Harry. Fulper; Secretary and Treasurer, Clarence Thorn; Captain, Walter Thorn.

The name of the society was changed to the Norwood Athletic Association, and the following, besides the officers, enrolled as charter members of the new organization: Harry Dencklau, Percy McVoy, Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., Albert Wyckoff, Wm. VanDeventer and A. Marsh.

Thursday was settled upon as the night for the regular weekly meeting, and Tuesday night the time when visitors should be allowed.

The entertainment followed the business and began with a three round boxing match for points betweem Harry Fulper and Wm. Thorn. Thorn was given the decision, after which a mock trial followed. Clarence Thorn was judge, Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., lawyer for the plaintiff, while Wyatt Barnes argued the case for the defendant. Percy McVoy was the prisoner, and was charged with stealing some lead pipe. After a most exciting trial the judge decided that the prisoner's witnesses had prevaricated enough to free him and therefore discharged the alleged culprit as not guilty.

The members then talked over the work for the coming winter and made plans for what they should do.

Property Well Located.

The sale of lots that Hand & McIntyre are going to have next Saturday afternoon, on South avenue near Berckman street, is going to be the place for anybody to buy a lot who wants to be within a few minutes' walk of a depot, with good flag sidewalks and a good neighborhood. Now that the Netherwood Hotel is sold property ought to advance in price in that section.

Ran Away With an Ice Wagon.

A team of large grey horses, attached to an ice wagon belonging to the Plainfield Ice and Cold Storage Company, tried to run away Saturday afternoon. They started from in front of Griffin's hardware store on Front street and trotted down Somerset street. A man run out of the side entrance to Smith's saloon and caught them. No damage was done.

To Greet the President.

The regular meeting of the Exempt Firemans' Association will be held tomorrow evning, when an entertainment will be given in honor of the president, Auguste Saltzman, on his return from Europe.

Smashed His Hand.

More Stone Walks.

H. C. N. Johnston has the contract for laying a stone walk in front of the various properties along Richmond street. When completed there will be a substantial walk between Watchung and Putnam avenues.

Amateur Theatricals.

The same cast that played "Hick'ry Farm" so successfully last May in the entertainment given by the St. Mary's Dramatic Association will reproduce it next Monday evening at Chatham.

A Watchung Park Residence.

Work has been begun on a new house on Summit avenue for Walter Mundy. John H. Kitchen is the builder.

While in Chicago, Mr. Charles L Kahler, a prominent shoe merchant of Des Moines, Iowa, had quite a serious time of it. He took such a severe cold that he could hardly talk or navigate, but the prompt use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cured him of his cold so quickly that others at the hotel who had bad colds followed his example and half a dozen persons ordered it from the nearest drug store. They were profuse in their thanks to Mr. Kahler for telling them how to cure a bad cold so quickly. For sale at Reynolds's pharmrcy, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

NOT A CACKLE WAS HEARD.

BUT THE CHICKEN THIEF WAS SEEN AND CAUGHT.

Tried to Climb a Picket Fence and Got Stuck—Chickens Bear Silent Witness Against Him.—Held for the Grand Jury.

The proverbial chicken thief is colored, but, in the case that came up before Justice Nash this morning, the thief was a white man. His name was William Henry Ritter, and he was charged by Officer Hartpence with stealing chickens belonging to Mrs. J. D. Brown, of South Second street, near Grant avenue.

Last Monday Frank Burke and his brother James, sons of Mrs. Brown, saw someone near the chicken coop, and started out to investigate. They found the ground surrounding the coop littered with feathers, and saw an truder, who dropped two dead fowls and started on a run. Both of the young men went after him and James Burke found him caught on a picket fence which he had tried to climb. The brothers then kindly escorted him to Grant avenue station, and there Officer Hartpence gave him a night's lodging.

This morning the two murdered victims were brought to court to bear silent witness against their murderer. Ritter pleaded non vult, saying he was drunk at the time and had no idea what he was doing. He persisted in denying any knowledge of being near the coop, so Justice Nash held him in $100 bail to await the action of the grand jury.

THE FATHER SETTLED.

Two Boys in City Court for Breaking Windows With Stones.

In City Court this morning William Drake and David McGernon came before Judge Coddington charged with throwing stones, and breaking windows in the house of Mr. Nelson, on South avenue. Both of the boys owned up that they had been in Mr. Nelson's orchard getting apples, but did not know that they had broken any windows. They admitted, however, that they might have done so in trying to knock down apples. The father of young McGernon appeared and agreed to pay for the broken windows. Nelson was satisfied with that so the Judge suspended sentence on the lads.

A WEEK'S CRUISE.

Four Young Men to Start for a Week of Sailing.

To those that love the water nothing can be more enjoyable than a cruise on a small yacht, and that is the way that four young men of Plainfield intend to spend a week's vacation. The party consists of Louis Mohring, of Linden avenue, E. L. Chargois, of West Front street, T. S. Howard, of Liberty street, and M. Rogers, of Linden avenue. They will start from Perth Amboy on September 28th in the sloop yacht, "Mamie Meade," hired for the occasion. They will spend their week in cruising all through that region, while duck shooting and fishing will add to the pleasure.

Released Only to Be Arrested Again.

George T. Lyons, of Cranford, was arrested Thursday morning on a charge of assault and battery on his brother, and was committed to the Union county jail. Judge McCormick yesterday afternoon released him on his own recognizance. Lyons had hardly obtained his liberty, however, when he was seized by a New York detective, who had a requisition for his body on a charge of grand larceny. He was taken on a train a prisoner to New York.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The marriage of Miss Ruth Fenner to Harry Swackhamer, one of Dunellen's popular young men, took place at the home of the bride at Pluckamin at 5 o'clock last Tuesday. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Parry, pastor of the Presbyterian church of that place.

The Century.

One of the most novel yachting experiences the enthusiast can enjoy, "A Cruise on the Norfold Broads," is described by Mrs. Anna Bowman Dodd in the October number of The Century. Here one exchanges views of the sea for glimpses of English meadows; hedge-rows brush against the sails, boats dart out from behind barns, and the waving grain stretches almost to the gunwale. Then there are the sleepy old English villages, with their wealth of romance, on every side. It is like yachting on dry land. Joseph Pennell furnishes characteristic drawing for the article.

Democratic Primaries.

The Democrats of Plainfield, will hold the primaries to elect delegates to the State convention next Tuesday evening. They will meet in the following places: The First ward at Hoaglands office on North avenue, one delegate to be elected. The Fourth ward at Sebring's store on West Front street, two delegates to be elected.

Good Prospects for an Eleven.

Those interested in football must not forget the meeting in the Y. M. C. A. building Friday evening to organize the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. Football Association. Already a number of Plainfield's cracks have decided to join, and the team promises to be the best this city has seen for many years. Some of the old veteran players will coach the team and Friday evening a live man will be chosen to manage the eleven.

No Open-Air Concert at Present.

From the present outlook Plainfield is not likely to have an open-air concert Saturday evening, at least not at the corner of LaGrand avenue and Franklin place. This morning a gang of Honan's men made the square their headquarters while work on the sewer on LaGrande and Putnam avenues will soon be commenced. The pipes are all ready and the work of locating the line of the sewer trench begun.

Rallying Day.

The Crescent Avenue church will observe next Sunday afternoon as rallying day. Miss Edith Marshall of the Salvation Army will deliver an address on the occasion.

ORCHETTA HELD FOR MURDER

CORONER'S JURY FASTENS THE CRIME OF THE TRAGEDY.

Evidence Pointed to the Italian Boarding House Keeper as the Principal—Several Italians Held as Accomplices.

The coroner's jury in the case of the Italian, known as "Jack No. 29," who was murdered between Westfield and Cranford on Wednesday last, heard the testimony of the witnesses of the tragedy Monday afternoon, and by their verdict charge Nicoli Orchetta with the murder.

The inquest was held at Westfield, Coroner Horning presided, and Prosecutor Marsh conducted the examination of the witnesses in behalf of the State.

The Italians who have been under arrest as accomplices or witnesses of the killing were examined, and the stories they told gave the details of the tragedy substantially as they were printed the day following the killing.

The evidence pointed to Orchetta as the principal, and one witness, an Italian known as 34, testified positively to seeing Orchetta strike the fatal blow with the knife, which was subsequently found and identified as the property of the accused Italian.

The jury gave a verdict finding that the Italian died of a stab wound received from the hand of Orchetta.

Orchetta has been formally committed by Coroner Horning, and his associates are also held as witnesses and may possibly be indicted as accomplices in the crime.

There are now three men in the county jail awaiting trial for murder.—Elizabeth Journal.

OVER ONE HUNDRED YEARS OLD.

One of the most valuable collections of old letters in the State is now in the possession of Mrs Clotworthy, of Westfield, who is quite well known in this city. She has letters dated as far back as 1792, when stamps and postmarks were not thought of, the cost of sending the letter being written on the letter in ink. There were no envelopes used in those times, but the sheet was folded over and sealed with wax. One letter bore as its cost of sending the rather strange amount of 18¾ cents. The collection almost fills an entire trunk and is very interesting in showing the progress of the American postal department.

TO SEE WHAT IT WILL COST.

The Borough Council Act on the Watchung Avenue Extension Matter.

An adjourned meeting of the Borough Council was held last night, with Mayor Hegeman presiding. The only important business transacted was the passage of a resolution empowering the street committee to proceed among the property owners whose land in along the proposed line of the Watchung avenue extension, and get an approximate estimate of what amount of money will be needed to purchase right of ways in order that the street may be put through. The list of those who will be effected by the extension was published exclusively in The Daily Press of yesterday.

The Year for Farmers.

This is essentially the farmers' year at the great Inter-State Fair. The Eastern Farmers' Carnival advertised by the association is no idle boast. In the cattle and horse shows, in the display of farm and orchard products, in the mammoth exhibition of agricultural and farming machinery and in the thousand and one things that go to make up a successful country fair, the management have given special attention to the farmer. This is his fair. Ideas will be on tap at every turn. If he wants to keep up with the procession, he can't afford to remain away this year. Remember, Trenton, Sept. 30th to Oct. 4th.

SYNOPSIS OF THE GAME LAWS.

MATTERS OF IMPORTANCE TO THOSE OF SPORTING INCLINATIONS.

Rules Laid Down by the State Solons With Reference to the Liberties Which Hunters May Take—Read Them Over.

A handy little pamphlet has been compiled which contains the fish and game laws of the State of New Jersey up to May 1st, 1895. It contains 113 pages and is full of information valuable to the hunter and fisherman.

Part one gives the law as to gunning and trapping game other than fish, throughout the State. The first section declares it to be unlawful for any person at any time, either on his own property or that of others, to pursue with intent to kill, or in any manner to take or injure any hare or rabbit, quail, ruffed grouse, European pheasant, European grouse, European partridge, wild deer, buck, doe or fawn, gray snipe, duck, brant, goose, dove, swan, gray, black or fox squirrel, woodcock, reed bird, rail bird, marsh hen, grass or upland plover, or other game bird or game animal, excepting in the manner usually known as hunting with gun, or with dog and gun, the gun being such as may be held at arm's length and fired from the shoulder, without other rest, under a penalty of $50.

Wild deer, buck, doe or fawn, may be taken between October 25th and November 5th, inclusive, in each and every year. The penalty for violation of this regulation is $100 for each and every such animal so unlawfully taken or had in possession.

The State is divided into two game sections. The northern section includes the counties of Sussex, Warren, Hunterdon, Morris, Passaic, Bergen, Hudson, Essex, Union, Middlesex and Mercer.

The southern section comprises all the other counties of the State.

In the northern section hare, rabbit, quail (partridge), ruffed grouse (partridge or pheasant), gray, black or fox squirrel, European pheasant, European partridge, European grouse or woodcock may be taken in the manner prescribed by law between October 25th and December 10th, inclusive.

It is also unlawful, under a penalty of $20, to rob or destroy the eggs or nests of any wild bird whatsoever.

In hunting geese, duck or brant or other web-footed wild fowl the hunter must place his boat or sink-box or other floating vessel in which he lies in wait at a distance of no more than one hundred feet from ice or marsh or meadow, bar or bank, or heaped seaweed not covered with water at highitide, the said boat or other vessel to be attached to said marsh or meadow by a line. And it shall be unlawful to hunt such water fowl except between one hour before sunrise and one hour after sunset, under a penalty of $25. The boat so used to be propelled only by oars or paddles.

Any police officer, fish and game warden, or fish and game protector, or any officer or detective of any incorporated game protective society may arrest without warrants offenders against the provisions of the game and fish law, and proceedings may be instituted on any day of the week. Sunday to be no bar to the successful prosecution of the same.

Captain McGee.

There was a meeting of the boys of Leal's School yesterday afternoon to organize a football eleven. The only business transacted was the organization of the team and the election of Raymond A. McGee as captain.

John G. Mauger Editor of the Sunbeam, Seligman, Mo., who named Grover Cleveland for the Presidency in November 1882, while he was Mayor of Buffalo, N. Y., is enthusiastic in his praise of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. He says: "I have used it for the past five years and consider it the best preparation of the kind in the market. It is as staple as sugar and coffee in this section. It is an article of merit and should be used in every household. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

DUMAS'S GOLDEN RULES.

The Author's Prescription for Health, Wealth and Wisdom.

"Walk two hours every day; sleep seven hours every night; go to bed always alone, if you need to sleep; get up as soon as you wake; work as soon as you get up; eat only when you are hungry, and drink only when you are thirsty; eat and drink always slowly.

"Never speak except when it is necessary, and never say more than half of what you think. Never write anything that you cannot sign, and never do anything that you cannot avow. Never forget that others will count upon you, and that you must never count upon them. Value money at its real worth, neither more nor less. It is a good servant, but a bad master.

"Keep away from women until you are 20, and avoid them when you are 40. Never attempt to produce anything without a thorough understanding of that which you undertake, and destroy as little as possible. Pardon everybody beforehand, to be on the safe side. Do not despise men; do not hate them; and do not laugh at them beyond measure. Pity them.

"Think of death every morning when you see the light, and every evening on the approach of darkness. When your sufferings are great look your grief in the face; it will console you itself and teach you something. Try to be simple, to become useful, to remain free, and before denying God wait until somebody proves to you that he does not exist.

"For a man and for a woman there is a succession of duties to be fulfilled which enables them always to look ahead and to become accustomed to the absence of the objects of their most dear affections. The world would finish too quickly if the first child was not able to survive the death of the first mother.

"Misfortunes and trials attack noble souls without hurting them. They are like the rocks of granite that the sea covers in times of tempest with its furious waves, fancying that it is drowning them, while it is merely washing them, so that they reappear again in the sunlight more polished and more shining than ever.

"Adversity embellishes those whom it cannot cast down. By the law of nature a man should have many children. He should raise them well, so that they may be useful; and he should love them so that they may be happy. To get married when a man is young is healthy; to choose, in no matter what class, a good, honest girl, to love her with all his heart and soul, and to make her a reliable companion and a prolific mother; to work to raise his children, and to leave them when dying the example of his life—that is the true meaning and object of life; the rest is only error, crime or folly.

"In truth, the average man is only above ambient humanity on one single plane, virtue; and, as there can be no virtue without humility, those alone have the right to consider themselves the superiors of others to whom the knowledge that they are superior is denied.

"Talent, and especially its higher form called genius, is involuntary. It is not the result of the efforts of man; it is, like beauty, the gift of God. That is why it is of secondary order; and posterity will only remember it for its virtue, its sincerity, and its communion in universal progress. Glory for glory's sake is a shameful speculation.

"There is one thing that is especially beautiful in the great and pure affections, and that is that, after the pleasure which they afford has passed away, there remains the happiness of their recollection.

"Very often an unexpected grief or an unmerited misfortune gives to a man an energy and a perseverance which he would never find in happiness. And after such trials a man often becomes superior who would have remained simple and vulgar if he had always been happy. He who is without energy when young will never have it; grit is not a winter fruit: it never grows in the snow.

"One may expect everything from a man of energy to whom misfortune has given courage and ambition.

"ALEXANDRE DUMAS, fils."

She Got Rid of the Burglar.

Here is one way of "shooing" of a burglar:

The heroine was a woman living in the Central part of the State, whose husband had been exceedingly ill. At last the crisis of the disease was safely past, and late one night the patient dropped off into a quiet doze—his first slumber for weeks. His wife sat there watching him anxiously, afraid to move a muscle for fear of disturbing him. Suddenly the figure of a perfectly strange man appeared in the open doorway.

With thoughts only for her sleeping husband, the woman tiptoed toward the door and with fingers on lip demanded in a scarcely audible whisper:

"How did you get in?"

Utterly taken back, the burglar, in the same whisper, replied:

"By the dining-room window."

"Well," proceeded the woman, "go right out by the same way you came, and just as quietly as possible."

And the burglar obeyed.

THREE WAR STORIES.

A Surprised Private. One Bridge Cosby Couldn't Burn. Ready to Drink.

Jeff Sterrett was a Confederate soldier who served as a private, and who is one of the two or three privates who survived the war. He was somewhat sentimental, and naturally fell in love with any good looking girl he might see. He fell in love with a young woman of Murfreesboro and slipped off to see her at every opportunity. One day his feelings so overwhelmed him that he suddenly found himself proposing marriage to her.

"No," she replied, her eyes filling, "I can never marry you."

Sterrett was surprised.

"Why not?" he asked.

"Oh, my heart is gone. It's in the grave. It was buried when they buried Capt. —— five months ago."

That was too much for Sterrett. He at once became angry.

"Very well, miss. If you can love a dead captain better than a live private you can scratch for it."

Gen. Cosby had a mania for burning down bridges. Whenever he heard there was a bridge in his neighborhood he promptly had it laid low. His continual destruction of bridges several times got himself and his men in tight places, where a bridge would have come in mighty handy, and resulted in an uneasy feeling among his men.

He moved into Virginia in the neighborhood of the Natural Bridge, and one day gave his men permission to inspect the great natural wonder. Two cavalrymen, one of a poetic turn and the other of a worldly, practical turn, happened to go there together.

"Isn't this the most stupendous, magnificent, grand view you ever saw?" exclaimed the poetic man, grandiloquently. "Gaze upon that landscape. See how beautiful are the works of nature."

"I don't know much about its bein' stupendous, nor any o' that sort o' thing, but I'm d——d glad we've found one bridge that Cosby can't burn up."

In the regiment with Gen. Duke was a soldier named Jack Skillman, who was a great hand at telling yarns. His yarns were about great acts which he said he did, but which he never performed, ignoring completely several astonishing deeds of bravery he really did and which really were more remarkable than any alleged act he told about. The scene of one of his yarns was a strip along the bank of the Tennessee River lying between Chattanooga and Knoxville. At the point mentioned the river flowed in a deep canon and appeared from above to be a thread winding about, hundreds of feet below. It was a dizzy height.

"I was a-going 'long here one day all by myself," said he, "an' when I came to this p'int I see a blamed Yankee all by hissel' a comin' toward me. I says to mysel', says I, 'It ain't no use o' your fighting here, where no one ain't lookin' and where we'd like as not fall down the cliff.'

"I told the Yankee we needn't fight.

"'Yes, we will,' says he

"I said no.

"'Our fightin' wouldn't decide the war,' says I, 'an' we mought as well be friends.'

"An' I told him to come along an' have a drink.

"The blamed Yankee kept on a-tellin' me we was a-goin' to fight, an' 'fore I knowed it he jumped onto me. Well, sah, how we did fight! We knocked each other down an' wallowed an' scratched and tore round, an' I see more stars than you can think of. Oh, we did fight.

"Pretty soon I saw we were a-goin' over to the edge of the precipice. In another minute I see we was lost. Over we went a-whirlin' an' a-whizzin', a-fightin' an' a-scratchin'. We bumped into the rocks as we went down and knocked lots of them loose. I thought we was never goin' to reach bottom. After what seemed two hours we struck. Kerplank! Whew! We was knocked apart by the lick, an' I thought the Yankee would be dead. I raised up an' looked. Just as I raised the Yankee raised, too.

A Great Linguist Baffled.

The late Professor Stephen J. Young, of Bowdoin, was an accomplished linguist. One day he was on a train bound from Bangor to Brunswick, when a conductor who knew him entered his car to ask him to come out to the second class coach to find out where a certain stupid foreigner was going.

The conductor had attacked him in all the foreign lingo he could muster, and could get no other response than a stupid stare.

Prof. Young went back to the rear of the train. The passenger sat there looking very much disturbed and bewildered. The Professor went at him in Canadian French, then in German, then in the languages of Scandinavia, Egypt, Italy, Spain, and every other country on the face of the green earth. Still the passenger sat mum as an owl while the look of bewilderment deepened on his face. The Professor was nonplussed and was about turing in defeat to his own car when the man looked wearily out of the window and remarked sadly to himself:

"Be gosh, I wish I was ter hum."

He was an Aroostook Yankee and he could speak nothing but English.—Daily Eastern Argus.

An Offhand Definition.

"Can you tell me, Professor," asked Grigsby, "what an 'extempore pianist' is? I see that the performances of such a pianist are advertised."

"Certainly," said the Professor. "Ex, out of it; tempo, time; an extempore pianist is one that plays out of time!"—Boston Transcript.

AN OPEN-AIR CONCERT.

A Van of Calves Entertain West Front Street People All Night.

Plainfield people like open-air concerts as a usual thing, but they look upon it as too much of a good thing when they had one last all night. A large cattle van, drawn by two horses, came along West Front street toward Plainfield last evening at about seven o'clock, with a load of calves. After passing Washington avenue, the driver tried to get his load out of the car tracks and in doing so the left hand rear wheel was dished and there was a fall in veal. The wagon was drawn to one side of the road, and the men in charge set down to wait until morning.

There was a little music when the collapse occurred, but it was not until eleven o'clock that the calves began to tune up. The residents who had managed to get to sleep were suddenly awakened by a tremendous bellowing. Heads appeared at the upper windows of the houses in the vicinity to see what was the matter, but the driver and his companion sat there talking of the weather, the crops, and an early fall, utterly unconscious of the music nearby. And from that time until six o'clock in the morning the neighbors had no rest, for when one lot of calves had sung as long as they could another band chimed in and took up the good old tune. In the morning a new wheel was procured and the musical party started forth, and the strong language, that had heretofore filled the air in that vicinity, ceased.

SUPERIOR SERVICE

The superiority of The Daily Press over any other paper published in Plainfield in furnishing news of any great event in or out of this city, was evidenced again last week in the posting of bulletins concerning the yacht races. Fifteen minutes after the boats had crossed the starting line on the course the position and time of the start was posted in front of The Press office, and from that time the bulletins were posted until twelve o'clock, when it was announced that the Valkyrie had abandoned the contest and that the Judges were after the Defender to bring her back, and then again later that they were unable to catch her.

Plainfielders knew from experience where they could first get the news, and in consequence a vast number wended their way to North avenue where the gazed on the bulletins, passed comments on the situation, got into arguments with bystanders, and went away convinced of the fact that The Daily Press is the only paper in Plainfield that is willing to spend money to provide intelligence that is as much sought after as the yacht race.

The Daily Press does not make a bluff at gathering news by issuing a second edition and stealing the "exclusives" of contemporaries. It is the first and most reliable paper in Plainfield.

WHEEL FELL OFF.

A sudden drop in the direction of Mother Earth was a rather surprising sensation to the occupants of DeMott's stage, which runs between Plainfield and Scotch Plains, yesterday afternoon. The stage was just approaching Plainfield and had crossed Richmond street when one of the rear wheels came off. Investigation showed that the nut had worked loose and dropped off, allowing the wheel to follow suit. Wyatt Barnes, of Norwood avenue, rode back on a bicycle and found the missing nut in front of the John Taylor Johnston residence. The wheel was put on again and the stage continued on its journey.

Promenade Concerts Considered.

There is some talk of holding a series of promenade concerts this fall and winter in the Crescent Rink. Only a small admission fee would be charged, the money to go for expenses and to provide a series of open-air concerts next summer. The concerts would be a continuation of the open-air concerts first proposed by Councilman Frost.

The Sweat Shop Sheet.

A city councilman this morning confirmed the statement made by The Daily Press of last evening in regard to the penurious methods adopted by the News editor about the publishing of the sewer ordinance, and said that he must either be short of help or else employs cheap labor that is not able to do the work. He said it was for that alone that a special meeting of the council had to be called.

Suing the Street Car Company.

Mr. and Mrs. Porr, of New York, whose seven-months-old child died last Saturday through the carelessness of a street car conductor in New York two weeks ago, have brought suit against the company in the New York courts. The verdict rendered at the coroner's inquest was that there was a clot on the brain which was caused by the fall and resulted in death.

BAD RUNAWAY THURSDAY.

A SCOTCH PLAINS PARTY SCATTERED INTO FRONT STREET.

The Horse Became Frightened, Bolted and Threw the Occupants in Different Directions, Badly Injuring Them—Details.

A surrey with both right wheels dished and a general assortment of things strewn across East Front street was all there was to show for an exciting runaway and smashup at the corner of Watchung avenue and East Front street, this afternoon at about quarter to one.

George Stone had driven Mrs. Sowden and Miss Beech, who are spending the summer at Fanwood, down town to do some shopping. They went in the two seated surrey, drawn by a spirited grey horse, which belongs to the house at which they are boarding. They had turned into Watchung avenue when the horse threw her tail over the left line.

Stone tried to release the line and kept saying "whoa," but the horse became frightened and started to run. The wheels grazed the curb on the left hand side of Watchung avenue and then the horse plunged to the right into Front street to Scotch Plains. The curve had just been rounded safely when the frightened animal gave another spring to the right and sent the driver flying through the air to strike on his head on the sidewalk. The surrey went over on its left side and both women thrown out. John Arnold caught the horse then and prevented further damage. Mrs. Bowden's dress was caught in some manner in the carriage but otherwise she was free. Her companion was imprisoned inside the upset vehicle and received the worst injuries of the two.

Stone lay listless on the sidewalk and was carried into a neighboring house by Letter-carrier Bob Loughlin and another man who stood near by. Dr. Jenkins was called and the ambulance sent for. He soon recovered and sat on the piazza in a half-dazed condition. His injuries consisted of a bad cut on the head and numerous bruises; he also bled at the ears from the shock. Miss Beech had one wrist sprained and sundry black and blue spots on her face. Mrs. Bowden's injuries were not as great, her finger being the only injured part.

As soon as the women had been released from their unvoluntary imprisonment they were taken into a house nearby and then carried home in one of Roberts' carriages. Dr. Jenkins attended them.

The carriage had both left wheels badly dished and was placed on one side of the road. The runaway horse was brought to Roberts' stable and the ambulance sent back as its aid was not required.

A large crowd gathered as soon as the accident happened and remained around the scene of disaster for some time.

FUNERAL OF MRS. RUNYON.

Beautiful Tributes of Flowers—Interment Made in This City.

The funeral services of the late Mrs. Walter G. Runyon were held day afternoon at the house in Elizabeth at one o'clock. They were in charge of the pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church, assisted by Rev. Mr. Bennett. The floral tributes were beautiful and consisted of a background of palms, a pillow from the family with the word "Mizpah" thereon, a cross from two sons, bearing the word "Mother," a wreath from the sisters. The W. C. T. U. sent a choice piece of cut flowers, as did also a number of friends. At the house a quartette rendered two favorite hymns of the decedent: "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," and "God Be With You." A special car brought the relatives and friends to this city, where the interment was made. At the grave the casket was opened to allow friends who were unable to go to Elizabeth an opportunity to view the remains.

WRECKED IN THE CAR TRACK.

Kelly Loses a Black Wheel and Borrows a Yellow One.

The trolley car tracks brought another carriage to grief yesterday afternoon. H. H. Kelly, of South Plainfield, who keeps a wagon repair shop on East Third street, was driving down West Front street in the car track accompanied by his wife. In front of Voehl's bakery he started to turn out when the spokes in the left rear wheel snapped. The buggy was driven to the side of the street and a new wheel procured at Homan's. The running gear of the injured buggy was painted black, while the borrowed wheel was yellow, but Mr. Kelly said to a Daily Press reporter, "I don't care as long as we get home," and they started out in the rather odd looking rig.

It is a sad criterion on the boasted enterprise of the News when they are compelled to use The Daily Press posted bulletins of the yacht race to make a story of that big event for the readers of that paper.

ALL SOMERSET AT THE FAIR.

The Exhibition This Year Declared Better Than Usual.

The Somerset County fair held at Somerville, was attended Thursday by about 6,000 people, and the managers expect double that many today. Yesterday was children's day, and most of the schools in the county were closed, so the scholars supplied with free tickets could attend. The exhibits are much more elaborate than thay have been for several ye ars. The display of fruits and vegetables is magnificent. The parade of show horses yesterday morning was a striking display of horseflesh. The cattle pens are filled with valuable herds, including a World's Fair prize bull, which is exhibited by J. B. Duke, who has a stock farm near Somerville. The display ladies' fancy goods, too, is of unusual merit. Today is politician's day. The Governor was invited to be present.

In the two-mile novice bicycle race Thursday Louie Stevens of Somerville, won in 5m. 47½s., with C. W. Leonard, of South Bound Brook, second. There were eight starters from the county. Today there will be a two-mile open race. In the three-minute trotting Alpa, J. F. Gibson, New York, won in three straight heats. Captain, Belle Meade Stock Farm, was second. Ambulator, of the Belle Meade Stock Farm, won the 2.21 pacing event; John Sprague, J. V. D. Beeklan, Hightstown, second.

The 2.34 trotting class was marred by an accident, which resulted fatally for Jefferson, owned by M. Darcy, of Hartford, Conn. The horse fell and broke his ankle. The race was won by May K., Jacob Klotz, Somerville, in three straight heats. Little Dick, Richard Carr, Keansbury, was second.

AN IMPRESSIVE SERVICE.

The Funeral of the Late Father Freeman Took Place Yesterday.

One of the most impressive services ever seen in the neighborhood was held in the church of St. Francis at Metuchen Thursday, on the occasion of the funeral of Father Nicholas Freeman, late priest in charge of that church, who died Monday morning. Bishop McFaul, of Trenton, assisted by sixty-four priests, took part in the ceremonies. Father Campbell, of Long Branch, who had been a firm friend of the deceased since childhood, preached the funeral sermon. Father Detrick, of New Brunswick, and Father Miller, of North Plainfield, were the chanters.

The singing was very fine, being furnished by a double quartette of priests, among whom was Father Miller, of North Plainfield.

There was a very large attendance at the funeral from all the neighboring towns. Plainfield was represented by over forty.

After the services were concluded, the remains were carried to New Brunswick and laid to rest in St. Peter's cemetery.

Those who went from Plainfield said it was the most impressive service they ever beheld.

Kean Wins in New Brunswick.

The Republican primaries to elect delegates to the Gubernatorial convention were held throughout Middlesex county on Tuesday night. The result, as announced, is strongly in favor of John Kean, who will get nearly the entire vote of the Middlesex delegation. Senator Voorhees is the second choice of some of the delegates, while Griggs will probably receive five or six votes if his name comes before the convention on the first ballot. Kean, however, is the favorite with the Middlesex delegates. The county sends thirty-two delegates to the convention and from the reports received, by the leaders in New Brunswick, it is estimated that twenty-five will cast their ballots for Kean.

To Enter the Training School.

William H. Jessup, formerly of the Y. M. C. A. of this city, arrived in Plainfield yesterday from Europe. Owing to the large crowd coming over he was obliged to take the American Line steamer Ohio, which goes to Philadelphia. From the latter place he came to Plainfield. He left last night for Springfield, Mass., where he will enter the Y. M. C. A. Training School.

SHAKE-UP IN THE CRESCENTS

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE WHEELMEN A LIVELY ONE.

Members Who Want the Executive Committee Sessions Public—By-laws to Be Revised by a Special Committee.

There was a general shaking-up at the annual meeting of the Crescent Wheelmen last Friday that bids fair to change the entire aspect of the club. For some time there has been a number of members who have objected to the action of the executive board in keeping all their actions secret. Last evening, when the meeting began, it was proposed that the election of officers take place at once. A. M. Franklin arose and made a speech that brought down the house. The reports were not entirely ready and it was decided that they should be made at a special meeting to be held next Wednesday evening.

A number of remarks were made, and it seemed to be the general opinion that an entire change should be made. The present bylaws, which keep the actions of the executive board so secret, came under the general criticism, and a committee, consisting of Alexander M. Franklin, Vincent W. Nash and Samuel P. T. Wilbur, was appointed to revise them and report at next Wednesday evening's meeting. The election of captain next took place, and Charles C. Lister was chosen to fill that position.

Then followed the election of the executive board which resulted as follows:

H. C. Coward, Samuel P. T. Wilbur, Vincent W. Nash, Louis G. Timpson, J. F. Buckle, Fred J. Pope, J. W. VanSickle, W. J. Stephenson, Clarence E. Teel, Alexander M. Franklin and Charles M. Runyon.

The board meets tomorrow night to elect officers and decide upon the winter campaign. The new board intends to hustle affairs right along and to have no privacy in anything they do.

Captain Lister will appoint his lieutenants and other assistants after tomorrow's meeting. He has already decided to call a run for next week, probably on Thursday.

A Sunstroke This Morning.

An Italian employed by Wm. D. Johnston, the mason, was overcome by the heat this morning while digging a drainhole in the yard of James A. Baker at Scotch Plains. The Italian, whose name is Dominick, started to go to the pump in front of Emery's Hotel for a drink. When he had gone about half the distance he was seen to stagger and fall by Edward Johnston, who was working with him. Johnston started and ran to his assistance and with the help of others he was carried in the shade and the usual remedies applied, but it was some time before he was able to go to his home on Front street.

By the withdrawals of gold from the Treasury for export, on Monday, the reserve was reduced a trifle below the limit, but it was understood, yesterday, that the bond syndicate would at once make a deposit which would again make the reserve intact. Since July 13th, the beginning of the gold export movement, about $21,700,000 has been sent from this country to Europe, and within that time, it is stated, the Belmont-Morgan syndicate has paid into the Treasury in excess of their bond requirement about $11,000,000 in gold.—True American.

A QUARREL OVER THE CARDS.

THE WESTFIELD MURDER WAS BROUGHT ON BY THIS.

The Murdered Man Only Known as No. 29—His Assailant an Italian Boarding House Keeper—Several Arrests.

There is a considerable settlement of Italians at Westfield, and at present many others are there at work on the village sewer. The men were sent to the contractors by Nicholas Orchetti, an Italian lodging-house keeper, and were known to the foreman only by number. The body of the dead man was identified as that of No. 29. It was learned that he had been playing cards nearly all the morning at Orchetti's house with Guiseppe Venharelli, Michael Sholian, and Joseph LaGuary. Constable Pickell arrested these men, and they were taken before Justice Collins. The story gathered from the men was substantially as follows:

Nicholas Orchetti, who supplied the laborers to the contractors, Stratford & Cox, recently had a quarrel with their foreman, O'Flynn, and yesterday morning endeavored to call off his men. The only ones who responded were the three prisoners and the man who was murdered. His companions said that the only name by which they knew him was Jack.

The four men went from their work to Orchetti's house and there began playing cards for beer. A quarrel arose over the score, and Orchetti attempted to eject the men. In the fight No. 29 was stabbed. He staggered from the house and started to cross a vacant lot. He went only a short distance, stumbled, and fell where his body was found a few minutes later.

At the examination of the prisoners yesterday afternoon Sholian accused Orchetti of committing the murder and Orchetti retaliated by accusing Sholian. The others refused to implicate either of their companions. One of the officials said last night that he had secured the name of an Italian who declared that he saw Orchetti stab No. 29, and that others had seen the two struggling on the floor with Orchetti on top. When the men were arrested no weapons were found on them, nor were there any blood stains on their clothes. It was said, however, that Sholian had changed his clothing and was preparing to leave the place when he was arrested.

Orchetti is the leading man af the Italian colony and is said to be wealthy. Immediately after his arrest he sent for a lawyer. The four prisoners were taken to the Union county jail at Elizabeth. Today Coroner Hornung will hold an inquest on the body.

Run Into By a Careless Driver.

Accidents to cyclists are very few in proportion to the great number of riders, but one Plainfield wheelwoman, Miss Edith Titsworth, of Madison avenue, has just recovered from the effects of one. Last Monday, while riding on West Fifth street, she was run into by a horse and carriage and upset. The front forks of her wheel were broken and her knee was injured so that she was confined to the house for several days. She has now recovered and is out on her wheel again.

Walked and Slept.

Some people go to sleep standing up, but a little newsboy on Park avenue yesterday afternoon apparently was dreaming as he walked along. A woman cyclist had just mounted her wheel in front of Willett's shoe store when the youngster walked right into the wheelwoman, bringing her to the ground. The lad was so badly frightened that he took to his heels and fled.

Junior Bicyclists Meet.

The Junior Y. M. C. A. Bicycle Club met in the Y. M. C. A. rooms this morning at 9:40. D. A. MacPhie presided. Eleven out of the forty members of the club were present and adopted the senior constitution and bylaws. Another meeting will be held next Saturday morning at 9:30 to decide on a run for the day. It is expected that they will go to Roselle to see the baseball team play ball.

The Bicycle Thief Captured.

The bicycle is back in its accustomed quarters in Frucht's store, and Frank McCommey, its colored kidnapper, is in jail. He was arrested at Newark yesterday by Chief Grant and the Newark authorities, and this morning Sergeant Kiely brought him to Plainfield where he was arraigned before Justice Newcorn. He pleaded guilty and was held for the grand jury.

Filled With the Bad.

Some man filled with devilishness drove through Grandview avenue, from Somerset street to Westervelt avenue, and broke all but one of the incandescent electric globes with the butt of his whip. Several persons saw him, but were unable to see who he was or even catch him.

There was not a public library in the United States a century ago.

It was not such a victory as might have been desired, but it was a victory just the same, and that is better than defeat.

A Florida editor has been arrested on the charge of libel, preferred by a baseball umpire whose decisions were the subject of criticism.

I think the world would go mad, just frenzied with strain and pressure, but for the blessed institution of Sunday.—Herford.

And still the murder cases pile up in Union county, but, let us congratulate ourselves, they are all out of Plainfield. That is something to our credit.

The New woman will not fine a man for splitting wood on Sunday, as they do in New Jersey. She will be only too glad to find a man to do it.—Terre-Haute Express.

America can beat England on land as well as water. The New York Central yesterday ran a train from New York to Buffalo, a distance of 436½ miles, in 407 minutes, the average speed being 64½ miles an hour. This breaks all previous records.

The neglect of the News to publish the sewage bed ordinance within the time limit which the law said it should, thereby delaying its becoming a law, proves better than anything else the claim of the Daily Press that the News editor runs his office on sweat shop ideas.

The Daily Press has had occasion to complain of some contemporaries filching from its columns without credit, and now this week The Westfield Leader prints a portion of a piece of poetry recently published in The Press about the sewers as though it was the original effort of The Leader editor. It is not good journalism.

It is said that a New York man started in two weeks ago to play the races with a five dollar bill, and is now worth $40,000. But just think of the other thousand poor cusses who are kicking themselves that they ever went near the seductive game. That makes a different picture.

A Jersey City man has discovered a verse in the Bible which he thinks stigmatizes the bloomer girl as an evil thing. It is Deuteronomy 22-5, which is as follows:

The woman shall not wear that which pertains to a man, neither shall a man put on a woman's garment, for all that do so are abomination unto the Lord, thy God.

This is a great year for Johns—not exactly a Johnnie year, but a good Jack year. In the Republican circles there is John W. Griggs, John Kean, John J. Toffey, John J. Gardner, and in the Democratic bailiwick we hear much about John P. Stockton. Two years or so ago the name George prevailed. There was George Werts, George Peffer, George T. Cranmer, George McGuire, George Olcott, and other Georges. This year the Johns come to the front and they are likely to be heard from.—Newark Advertiser.

The decision of the Supreme Court of the State that the Linden Township Committee of Union county must pay back to the Linden Blood Horse Association $5,000 which was obtained nominally for the building of a sewer, but practically as consideration for a racing license, was a righteous one. The money has probably been spent by the township, and it will be hard for it to refund. But it ought to be a lesson to public officials everywhere that honesty is the best policy. The transaction was a scandalous one, and the rebuke was necessary and wholesome.—Paterson Press.

The licensed liquor dealers of Plainfield have the right notion about the way their business should be conducted. They have organized to have those indicted who are selling without a license. If similar action should be taken in this county the hotel keepers would get along much better and the business would not rest under such a black cloud as it does at present. It has always seemed to us that the men who were paying license fees were standing in their own light when they endeavored to shield illegal sellers. Yet they have done this for a long time. Such action shows either that all are guilty of law-breaking or that they expect to need the sympathy of these guilty ones at sometime. But it would seem as though it would be to their advantage to bring to the attention of the Prosecutor of every unlicensed sale in order to protect themselves. Otherwise they must sell illegally themselves to compete with their neighbors. Such are the conditions in other lines of business. If the liquor dealers would combine for the purpose of thwarting all unlicensed selling it would be more effective than any other efforts to maintain the lair and would certainly prove advantageous to all who are paying license fees. — Somerville Unionist Gazette.

DEATH OF LOUIS B. MULFORD.

THE FATAL MOMENT CAME SUDDENLY TO HIS FAMILY.

Born and Brought Up in This City Where He Had a Host of Friends—Worked His Way Up in Business—Ill for Some Time

Sorrow came into the household of Louis B. Mulford Thursday afternoon at about 3:30 o'clock when the husband and father shut his eyes to this world.

Mr. Mulford's late residence was in the Manning flats on West Front street and it was there that he died.

Mr. Mulford was one of the prominent business men of Plainfield, actively engaged in the meat business, greatly respected by all who knew him, and perfectly upright in all his dealings.

He was born in Plainfield on January 23d, 1855, and has resided here ever since. In 1882 he entered the employ of Lutkins & Hummer and proved such a faithful worker that, when in 1890 that partnership was dissolved, he entered into partnership with Mr. Lutkins. In 1892 there was another change and the new firm, then formed, called Hummer & Mulford, has continued ever since.

About a year ago Mr. and Mrs. Mulford lost their nine-year-old child, Hiram B. Mulford, with diphtheria, and since that time Mr. Mulford has never been perfectly well. Doctors have said that his trouble was consumption, but the cause of his death was heart trouble.

His death has been expected for some time, but a few days ago he began to rally and, only one hour before his death, walked from the parlor to the dining room. His death, therefore, came very suddenly.

He leaves a sorrowing wife and four young children, May, Andrew Lutkins, Matilda, and Louis B. He also leaves one brother, Mahlon T. Mulford, of New Market, and five sisters, Mrs. Elizabeth Chapin, Mrs. J. B. Hulburt, Mrs. John T. Case, Mrs. Andrew Lutkins, and Mrs. L. A. Hummer.

Mr. Mulford was a prominent member in Queen City Lodge, No. 226, I. O. O. F., and also belonged to Columbian Lodge, No. 58, Ancient Order of United Workingmen.

GREAT DAY ON THE WATER.

Plainfielders Have Fun if They Don't See the Race.

Undaunted by the failure of the Valkyrie to enter the lists with Defender Thursday, the Plainfielders who went to sea on the ocean tug Evarts had a day of pleasure unmarred except by semi-occasional spasms of illness of a rather fatiguing nature. The run of fifteen miles to leeward from the Sandy Hook Lightship was very trying to most on board, as the sun beat down relentlessly and the tug ran away from every vestage of breeze that was stirring.

The roll of the sea laid low about half the party at one time, including the quartermaster—but it never touched the major. The commissary department was admirably conducted, although the quartermaster at one time felt so very tired of this weary world that he was dispensing two sandwiches and thirty cents in change for a quarter.

By this example of generosity it will be understood that no one was "shaved." Among the prominent guests present was the Central Railroad's "star," Ben Johnson.

FIFTH ANNUAL REUNION.

Thirtieth Regiment of Jersey Volunteers Meet at Rahway Next Month.

The fifth annual reunion of the 30th Regiment, New Jersey Volunteer Association, will be held in the Opera House, at Rahway, Wednesday, Oct. 9th. Those in Plainfield who belong to the association and who will attend are as follows: D. R. Weaver, P. V. Weaver, T. J. Carey, Hugh Powelson, J. Rittenhouse, Company A; J. Sullivan, Company C; Capt. J. F. Hubbard, E. C. Mulford, Chas. Randolph, R. Thorn, J. L. Mundy, F. S. Runyon, Nelson Runyon, Theodore Runyon, Benjamin Wright, Company H; Garret Eick, Company K; Samuel Moore, John Giddis, Company J.

The Hose Got the Best of Them.

The hose in front of V. L. Frazee's grocery on West Front street, from which the sewer trench was filled with water, got the better of the Italians who were in charge of it, yesterday afternoon, and began squirming about the street, giving an involuntary bath to the spectators. The Italian at the hydrant tried to turn it off but turned it on further instead. At last, somebody who understood its workings, stopped the water.

Mr. and Mrs. Perry, of New York, returned this morning after a visit in Plainfield.

COMMON COUNCIL IN SESSION ONLY A FEW MINUTES LAST NIGHT.

Sewage Bed Ordidance Reconsidered and Passed the Second Time to Rectify the News' Mistake of Not Publishing It.

One of the shortest sessions of the City Council on record was the special one held on Friday. It was nearly 8:30 before a quorum was present, Councilmen Fisk, Erickson, Dumont, Ginna, Bird and President See answered to the roll call by Clerk MacMurray. The latter then read the call of the meeting which was to reconsider the resolution adopted September 5th in regard to advertising for bids to construct the sewage beds, on account of the failure of the News to publish it within the time prescribed by law.

Mr. Erickson offered a resolution that the proposals for constructing the sewage beds, etc., be readvertised and the date of receiving the same be amended from September 23d to September 30th.

It was adopted, all voting for the resolution. Mr. Dumont asked the City Clerk if he had notified the newspapers in regard to the publishing of the ordinance, and he replied that he had not. Mr. Dumont then stated that he thought they should be notified at all times as they could hardly be expected to know about those matters. If they were notified and then failed to comply they should receive no compensation. Mr. Erickson offered a resolution that the committee on printing be instructed to have plans and specifications for sewer proposals printed as amended. It was so ordered and the meeting adjourned.

ANOTHER ATTEMPTED HOLDUP.

Had it been in the seventeenth century and two men had tried to waylay a carriage at night, nothing would have been thought of it, but when that happens only a short distance outside of the city of Plainfield then excitement may be expected. Last evening, hackman John Lynch, took two passengers from the North Avenue station to the Stelle residence on Park avenue. The night was clear and cold and the horse that Lynch was driving was frisky, so Lynch's surrey went down Park avenue at a fast gait. He had just passed the woods and pulled his coat tighter about him when he noticed two men directly in front of him—one crouching in the road and the other in the gutter. The individual in the road made a jump and tried to seize the horse by the head. Down came the whip on the animal's back and she jumped forward, leaving the would-be highwaymen far in the rear. Lynch heard them yelling and plied his whip until he had placed a safe distance between himself and the men.

When seen by a Daily Press reporter this morning, Lynch said he had no idea who the men were or what they looked like as it was very dark. He thought, though, that it was some one that knew him and was waiting for his return from Stelle's. But for the fact that his horse was going at a lively pace the highwaymen would have probably been successful.

Wanted To Run Away Again.

A buggy containing two little children was run away with by a fiery little mustang on Somerset street yesterday afternoon. The horse started near the bridge and ran up to Front street where he was caught by a young man. The man, to whom the rig belonged came up and drove the runaway horse about the streets sometime causing quite a little excitement in his efforts to quell the spirits of the fractious animal.

Liquor Men Choose Delegates.

The Liquor Dealers' Association met yesterday afternoon at the Casino on East Second street. Eleven out of the fifteen members were present. The principal object of the meeting was the choosing of delegates to attend the State convention to be held in Paterson, Tuesday, September 16th. Those selected were: John Rafferty, Henry Haurand, Thomas Parker, Henry Wedemeyer and Jacob Blimm.

To Reopen Soon.

H. C. Hadley, who was agent for the Hallet & Davis pianos in Plainfield some time ago, has returned from Brooklyn and will reopen his office about October 1st. The location has not yet been decided upon.

Plainfield to Have a Glee Club.

It is the present idea of a number of the young men who attend Leal's School to organize a glee club as soon as school begins.

THE SUMMER GIRL.

Her oval cheek is like a peach that ripened in the sun,
Her locks are lit with beauty from the summer newly won.
She is brighter than the daisy in the dell,
And she dances every day
Like a naiad in the spray,
This dainty little seaside belle.

I love to list the patter of her feet upon the sand,
I love to watch the motion of her small brown hand,
Till every pulse is thrilling to the spell.
I could meditate a week
On the dimple in her cheek,
The saucy little seaside belle.

I would I were the breezes that about her tresses blow,
I long to be the flowing tide to kiss her pretty toe.
Alas, no rhyme her charm can ever tell,
For we meet and love and part,
And she never breaks my heart—
The darling little seaside belle.

A Snake Among the Worshipers.

The camp meeting at High Bridge, Ky., came to a close, and with it ended one of the most successful enterprises of its kind in point of order and attraction in the State.

Just as Gen. Cozens finished his sermon, which was very late, and as the people was just beginning to leave, some men discovered a large snake in one of the rafters of the north wing several feet above women's heads, and began an attempt to kill it by punching it to death with a huge limb that had been torn from an adjacent tree.

The reptile was not to be destroyed without a chance for its life, for suddenly entwining its slimy body about the limb, it leaped to the ground in among a throng of women, and hastily glided beneath their feet. The ladies became frantic, and some came very near fainting.

A mouse wasn't a circumstance as to a cause for skirt dancing as was this snake. Women climbed over benches upon the backs of those near, and the display of limbs was forgotten in fright. Men came bravely to their aid, but the snake would have certainly got away had it not been for the timely act of W. K. Shugare, a business man from Lancaster. He grasped the cause of consternation by the tail and dashed his head against a post near by.

The panic soon died away and everything went on as if nothing had happened. The snake was a large black racer, measuring about six or seven feet in length. Even when almost dead it coiled around Shugar's leg and gave him a good thrashing with its tail.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

A Rapid Recovery.

"Talk about your faith cures," said the man on the end seat; "taint alongside o' what happened up to Si Stover's house only yesterday.

"You see, Si's wife was took awful bad, and they thought she was dyin' sure. So they got Si to go for the doctor. When they told him to hurry, he said: 'All right. I'll get him fast enough; but as I've got to go by the shoemaker's I may as well drop in and see if my shoes are done, and perhaps I'd better call and see how the Widow Stomes does—haven't see her for a day or two, and ——'

"'You needn't mind about seein' any doctor for me. I guess I'm all right now.'

"And so she was. She got up and has been as well, if not better, than ever she was, ever since. The Man Who Persisted.

About twenty of us got off the east bound train at Elmer Junction to take the train over to Washburn, and though we had been told that we would have to wait two hours, it wasn't ten minutes before one of the crowd went into the little office where the agent was at work on his books and asked how long before the south bound train came along. The agent answered him and hung out a sign reading:

"The south bound train is due here at 4:30.

"This is the first train due.

"It arrives at Washburn at 6:10.

"It will probably be on time.

"I can't hurry it up any.

"I am not a bad man, but should any person persist in annoying me after reading the above——"

All of us read the sign, and it was satisfactory to all but a tall, stoop-shouldered individual.

He read it aloud twice over to himself and was evidently puzzled. He finally knocked on the door of the office, and when the agent put his head out the tall man said:

The agent glared at him and retreated, and the tall man got a piece of paper and a pencil and wrote and put up this sign under the door:

"I am a peaceful man.

"But I can't be bluffed.

IF THE SOUTH HAD WON.

An Observer Who Thinks it Would Have Soon Discarded Slavery.

Here we are on the border of three States, with Catlettsburg, Ky., a mile to the west, and Scranton, O., just over the Ohio River. We have just come over the mountains and are resting a few hours between trains in a larger and finer depot than Richmond's, although this is only a crossing.

Just at this point, before crossing over into my native Buckeye State, it is good to stop and moralize a bit, and the wait is long enough at least for that. We have traversed some of the loveliest country in the Eastern States; not bold, bald crags and bluffs as in the Rockies, but hills verdure-crowned to the summits; tall, rolling slopes that rise gently, not confused now with precipitous haste. We have trailed alongside the New River for sixty miles, until it debauches into the Great Kanawha, and marveled at the great boulders, some as large as a house, that impede its course—great giants' playthings, perhaps. This all may not all be so wild and rugged as the B. & O. Railroad can show along its line, where the Cheat River flows, and one can look downward from the flying train half a mile into the charming valley, but it is more restful, and the roadbed is better ballasted. Not a suspicion of rocking and rolling of the train and consequent seasickness here on the C. & O., as on its sister system over the mountains.

But in the midst of all his natural beauty and bounty we have seen only miserable huts, board shanties, not a decent town, not a ray of civilization or progress having penetrated these precincts. It has been more or less so all the way through Virginia, and notably West Virginia, whose only decent town, so far, has been its capital city. My wife turns to a lady in the depot and frankly asks how they manage to live here. "Oh, somehow we get along and make a living. We buy most everything we eat in Ohio."

What is the reason there is so much difference between these and the northern States? Simply because this is "Secessia," and it has been left with the dregs of the war on it to curse and defile it. Here is found the aftermath of the late war. Here slavery, of course, ceased, and the world came to a standstill in consequence—at least so far as this "neck of the woods" is concerned. It is the Panhandle of the South; but the whole "skillet" is made of the same metal.

What if the Confederacy had succeeded. I am not waving the "bloody shirt," mind you, but only guessing, as all good Yankees can and should do. The whole South (or "South," as they call it) would have been better and brighter—and it is really half the country, in numbers if not in area. But whether it would have improved at the expense of other portions of the Union is a question. We think not, for slavery would have been "done away with" by natural and rational causes by this time, without doubt. It would have evolved itself, perhaps, into a better condition, at least for the ex-slaves and their progeny, without such sudden change and rupture. Whether slavery was discontinued by war or by natural causes, it is safe to say that we would have been by this time sufficiently enlightened not to return to it. It is also safe to say that the great majority of the voters, both black and white, in the South, or white voters alone (and they govern in the South still, in spite of numbers), would not return to slavery. Existing conditions seem to suit all classes now, and there is not such a radical difference as one not on the ground would suppose. The blacks still work for and serve the whites, and on such wages as make independence impracticable, and slavery, except for the sentiment of it, almost a welcome alternative. That nine-tenths of the labor of the South is performed by blacks is not a rash statement—meaning menial labor.

If the South had prevailed, and a new republic had been set up, the dividing line would perhaps be this panhandle of Virginia, extended to Canada, and another division at the Mississippi River later on, for the fabric would not have been strong enough, instituted by the minority, to have long remained intact. Aaron Burr's scheme of disruption, early in the century, would have become a reality.

The Southern people would not have retained slavery long. They were not wholly wedded to it. Few Southern people were slaveholders. They were a handful, like the Irish landlords or the Mormon polygamists. Many of the Southern people were opposed to it. Beside, there were forces at work among the negroes themselves that would have helped them along. Slavery would have been gradually dethroned and a more united sentiment between North and South would exist to-day.—Correspondence Hartford Courant.

Solomon and the Fool.

One day Solomon and a fool were walking together.

"Solomon," said the fool, "why is it you never talk?"

"Fool," said Solomon, "that I may listen to other people's wisdom."

And then after a pause:

"But why is it you always talk?"

"That other people, I suppose," quoth the fool, "may listen to my wisdom."

If the liquor dealers would organize to drive out of the business men who are not fit to have licenses they would have little to fear from Legislatures, or, for that matter, from "fanatics," either. One disreputable saloonkeeper does more harm to the men who conduct respectable places than do a hundred Prohibitionists. — Trenton Times.

Plainfield Republicans as politicians are an odd lot. Here it is within three days of the time for holding their primaries to choose delegates to the State convention, which will select a Gubernatorial candidate, and yet, with two home candidates in the field for the honor, not one has come out openly to work for or espouse the cause of either Kean or Voorhees.

The sweat shop editor of The News is an eminent success at printing what is not the truth. He states that he received the reports of the yacht race last Saturday by special wire. The Daily Press reiterates the statement that he faked his yacht race story from the posted bulletins of The Daily Press and from the early editions of the New York papers. He did not receive one word of yacht race news "by special wire from the greatest news distributing agency in New York."

Wednesday last, the 11th inst., the terms of office of the members of the various district boards of registry and election began, and will terminate on the 10th of September, 1896, or when their successors are appointed and have qualified. They are required to meet within ten days after their appointment for organization. They must take the official oath before performing any duty and forward it to the county clerk.—Camden Democrat.

Plainfield's well paved streets have been torn up to allow the laying of sewer pipes, and it will be very difficult to have the streets put in as good condition again. Some day municipalities will reach that point where the necessary sewer will precede the erection of dwellings. As it is now sewerage is generally an after consideration.—New Brunswick Home News.

The repulse to the Kean forces in Union county would be the more discouraging to the hopes of that candidate were it not universally known that Union county politicians, of both parties, have often opposed the ambitions of Union county men. In both his Congressional and Gubernatorial aspirations the late Governor Green found his most stubborn opponents among the Union county Democrats. Mr. Kean seems to find the same condition accented by a factional disturbance, which is much more likely to be effective in a nominating convention than in an election.—True American.

It took a New Jersey clergyman to quote the Bible as a fashion authority. He preached a sermon against bloomers, telling his hearers that such attire is forbidden in Deteronomy xxii., 5: "The woman shall not wear that which pertaineth unto a man." But as men do not wear bloomers and never did, the text shot wide of its intended mark and the preacher's effort to pervert the Scriptures ignominiously failed. Meanwhile women will continue to dress as they please and to look well, as they have done through all the ages.—Rochester Democrat.

Out in Kansas, where prohibition is the law of the commonwealth, the legal authorities are continually confronted by new phases of the puzzling liquor question. At Abilene, recently, a learned judge decided that a prisoner could not be held for selling liquor, because, in fact, what he really had sold was a mixed drink, concerning which no one could testify absolutely that it was intoxicating. Under this judicial interpretation, the imbibers of cocktails, fizzes and smashes in Kansas would have to manifest unmistakable signs of inebrity before their bibulous pastime could be lawfully interrupted.—Newark News.

Supreme Court Justice Magie filed his dissenting opinion yesterday in the case brought by Lay Judge Herman Schalk of Essex county to test the constitutionality of the elective Judiciary law. Justice Magie says he is unable to agree with Justices VanSyckel and Lippincott, as he has not found any clear and undoubted discrepancy between the law and the Constitution. On the contrary, he thinks that under the construction given and acquiesced in for forty years, and approved by an adjudication of the Supreme Court, the power is conferred upon the Legislature to pass the law in question. Justice Magie explains at considerable length his views, and concludes that the County Judiciary law should be upheld and the mandamus asked for refused.

What a humiliating spectacle the sweat shop editor of The News made of himself in his issue of Saturday, in the endeavor to make a plausible explanation of why he did not publish the sewage bed ordinance within the time limit, thereby necessitating a special meeting of the Common Council to rectify the mistake. On the day that the ordinance should have been published he declares that "two extra compositors were employed, (all that were available in the city." Yes, quite true, all that were available—for his scab shop. The fact of the matter is that he cannot get members of the International Typographical Union to work for the wages and under the unfair rules which he maintains, and it was for this reason alone that compositors were not available for his work on the date in question. The need for his employing at least one of these alleged extra compositors displays better than anything else the sweat shop methods in vogue in The News office. A short time ago one of the compositors, who received the munificent sum of $2.50 per week for sixty hours exacting labor, left the office at half past five in the afternoon to go home on account of a painful and serious accident which a relative had suffered. The Saturday night following, this employe received ten cents less than the weekly stipend for the half hour lost. The result was that the employe resigned the position, thus necessitating the employment of one of these extra hands. The principle of docking a $2.50 week compositor at a $12 rate is one peculiar to The News editor.

MORE THAN A SOCIAL RESORT.

THE EDUCATIONAL PLANS OF THE Y. M. C. A. FOR THE WINTER.

Classes Will Be Organized in Different Branches, and a Busy Season Is in Prospect—Religious Work Not to be Neglected.

Many people look upon the Y. M. C. A. as merely furnishing a place where young men may pleasantly spend their evenings instead of going to some low resort. It does furnish that, but something more; it gives the young men who have had to leave school at an early age a chance to take up more extensively some of the necessary studies.

This year promises to be an active one in this line, as well as in the athletic department. One of the features of the educational department will be a complete mechanical course lasting three years. The first year includes mechanical arithmetic, algebra, mechanics, and mechanical drawing. Walter S. Timmis, a certified teacher of the Science and Arts Department, of London, will be in charge and will give instruction on Tuesday and Thursday nights.

To the young man, who has entered a business house as clerk or bookkeeper, the book-keeping and commercial course will be of practical use. The instruction in this course will be given by E. H. Bonnell, an experienced tercher and graduate of the Coleman Business college. He will be assisted in his work by George E. Fuller and Max Moraller.

The German classes will be under the instruction of Rev. F. Kionka, the same as last year. John C. Whiting, who has had several years experience as a teacher of shorthand, will have charge of the classes in that branch of learning. Arithmetic will be taught by Garrett Q. Packer.

Another important feature of the Y. M. C. A., is the special class in English for foreign-speaking young men, which will be under the charge of J. V. A. Craighead.

If a sufficient number wish to join, classes in commercial correspondence, Spanish, and vocal music will be formed.

A certificate will be given to those finishing the courses in book-keeping, shorthand and German, and in the mechanical course.

The educational department will be open on Oetober 14th, when H. Coleman, president of the Coleman Business College, will make the opening address.

An entainment course has been almost arranged which provides for seven entertainments to take place during the winter. They will be free to all members paying $5 or over.

The religious work is also to be actively pushed this fall and winter. Much is to be done in Bible study and special Sunday afternoon meetings will be held through the winter and every effort possible will be made to make them a success.

One of the new lines of work planned for the winter will be a literary and debating club, which will be organized if there is a sufficient demand for it. A musical club, including vocal and instrumental, is also thought of. Social meetings will be held at which prominent Plainfielders will tell some of their experiences, amusing or thrilling, as the case may be.

The work in the junior department is not being overlooked in all the preparations for the young men. The $1 membership will give the use of the rooms to the boys while the privilege of the physical department will be given to the $3 members.

The prospectus of the different departments of the Y. M. C. A. will be out this week and may be procured at the Y. M. C. A. building.

Notable Theatrical Event.

Theatre-goers in this city are much interested in the coming of Edward Harrigan on Thursday evening in Music Hall. Mr. Harrigan has not produced "Old Lavender" for something like nine years, and it is remembered by his admirers as one of the best things he has ever produced. "Old Lavender," as it will be given on Thursday next, is less boisterous than most of his other productions, and inclines more to the melodramatic. It shows a convivial gentleman—Harrigan himself—who is a cashier in his brother's bank, and a scheming villain, who runs away with the banker's wife. The brother is unjustly suspected with complicity, is discharged and becomes a homeless wander around the docks. The happy reunion of the brothers is, fortunately, postponed until the end of the third act, for in the meantime Mr. Harrigan has an opportunity to do some clever character acting. Mrs. Yeamans has her old well-fitting part of "Mother Crawford," the deaf proprietress of a sailors' boarding house, and John Wild reappears as "Smoke," the inimitable dog-stealing darkey. Seats on sale at Leggett's drug store.

AN EVANGELIST CHARGED.

THE SOMERVILLE MURDER MYSTERY IS CLEARING UP.

Rev. Jacob S. Johnson Is Accused of the Crime—Warrants Out for Others, Too—Robbery Was the Cause of the Deed.

Jacob S. Johnson, the colored preacher, at Somerville, was arrested Tuesday charged with complicity in the killing of Annie Beekman, or Rogers, colored, whose body was found in the woods near the Raritan River bridge Sunday morning. Warrants were also issued late last night for the arrest of Mrs. Catherine Johnson, the suspected strangler's wife, and for two other inmates of the colored evangelist's hut. Johnson is now in the Somerville jail. He has retained Lawyers Steele & Meehan to defend him, and refuses to make a statement. State Attorney Nelson Y Dungan said late last night that from evidence in his possession Johnson would have to stand trial for his life.

Robbery is believed to have been the motive for the horrible crime. The girl and all her friends are poor people, and $48 is a great deal of money to any of them. The murderer, in his feverish anxiety to gain possession of the strangled woman's savings, ripped her dress in several places, knowing that she carried her money in a beaded purse concealed in her corsage.

Johnson is about forty years old. He is quite short, stockily and powerfully built. His wife is five years younger and very tall. Both profess to be evangelists, and have until recently held camp meetings roundabout. Mrs. Johnson is a far better preacher than her husband.

The murdered woman was twenty-four years old. Two months ago she was married by Rev. Dr. Scott, of St. John's A. M. E. church, in Newark, to Thomas Rogers, a colored basket maker, seventy-two years old, of 27 Lock street.

PROMOTER ROBBINS'S CHECKS.

Many Were Protested and Numerous Inquiries Being Made for the Man.

William M. Robbins, a promoter, having an office in New York, who has been a resident of Westfield for a year past, left town Sunday night, and now many tradesmen are mourning his departure and sadly contemplating many reminders of him in the shape of protested checks and drafts.

When Robbins came to Westfield he rented, under an agreement to purchase, a place on Dudley avenue, belonging to John T. Lawrence. It is one of the handsomest residences in that town. Mrs. Robbins opened it as a boarding-house and through liberal advertising soon had the place filled with boarders. Everything seemed to be prosperous with the Robbinses, and the local tradesmen gave them unlimited credit. Mr. Robbins made many acquaintances, and from the stories he told his new friends thought him a clever man and a successful promoter who was making plenty of money.

About three months ago matters seemed to take a turn, and occasionally the checks given by Mr. Robbins would be returned by the Westfield Bank, protested. Each time Mr. Robbins succeeded in explaining the matter to the satisfaction of the holder of the check, and promised to make it right in a few days.

During the past few weeks the protested checks have been numerous and the holders grew anxious. Investigation at the County Clerk's office showed that the elegant furniture and horses and wagons used by the Robbinses were all covered by a chattel mortgage to John T. Lawrence, the owner of the house, and that they had nothing that could be held for the payment of the checks.

To Superintend Electrical Repairs.

Victor Christofferson, who has been engaged in the electrical business in this city for some time, leaves for Atlanta, Ga., where he has accepted the position of superintendent of the electrical repair department in the Campbell machine shop in that city. Much of the electrical work of the exposition goes to the company, so Mr. Christofferson will be kept very busy.

Another Photographer.

The Loveland Photographic Studio will be opened in a few days on the third floor of the building now occupied by the First National Bank. William Mullon, the sign writer, has just completed painting an advertising banner for the studio.

Three Colonial Boys.

A story of the times of '76. By Everett T. Tomlinson, author of "The Search for Andrew Field," The Boy Soldiers of 1812," etc. 368 pp. Illustrated. Cloth $1.50. W. A. Wilde & Co., Boston.

We have issued this book as an aid in the solution of that difficult problem, "What shall our young people read?" It deals with one of the most interesting periods of American history, and embraces many incidents and regions which heretofore have been kept in the background. It is a story of three boys who were drawn into the events of the times; is patriotic, exciting, clean and healthful, and instructs without appearing to. The heroes are manly boys and no objectionable language or character is introduced. The lessons of courage and patriotism especially will be appreciated in this day.

It is a volume of special and peculier merit. It embodies exceptional merit as a historical story, dealing with the events preceding and during the early days of the American Revolution, and combines this so perfectly with the exciting adventures of three boy friends that the history is absorbed unconsciously, but is remembered all the more readily for that very reason. The number of really good stories for young people on the Revolutionary period of American history is suprisingly small. The customs of our forefathers' time are admirably portrayed, and strong lessons of patriotism are taught in "Three Colonial Boys," and for this reason it is a book that should be in every library. Another volume is to follow, giving the adventures that befell the three young friends as soldiers in the Continental Army. The title of this book is to be "Three Young Continentals." This is a book that wide-awake librarians will be greatly pleased with.

For Speeding Horses.

According to arrangements, a number of gentlemen met on Saturday evening at the Rahway House to organize a driving park association. Dr. C. P. Holmes was chosen chairman. The call was presented and Dr. J. J. Daly was elected president; E. H. Vanness, vice-president; H. Day Crowell, secretary; John B. Brown, treasurer. There were nearly 100 members enrolled, and the name chosen for the organization is the Rahway and Woodbridge Driving Park Association. The property secured for the purpose is situated on what is known as the back road to Woodbridge, and is a part of the farm of E. H. Vanness, the vice-president of the association, and was leased for five years. It contains about sixteen acres. The park will be open to members only, and the membership is restricted to residents of Union and Middlesex counties.

Hotel Netherwood Plans.

Leonard Spangenberg called at The Press office this morning and stated that yesterday he had a talk with those who have purchased the Hotel Netherwood property, and that they state the place will not be open to incurables, but will be conducted more on the plan of a hotel for invalid people who need rest and medical attendance. It is said that many of the residents in Netherwood were much concerned over the supposition that the hotel was to be a sanitarium where deaths would occur frequently among the incurable patients, but Mr. Spanggenberg investigated and finds that there is no occasion for alarm in that direction.

HIS WIND WAS ALMOST GONE

BOROUGH PRISONER TRIES TO ESCAPE BUT DOES NOT SUCCEED.

Louis Teller, Awaiting Trial, Endeavors to Escape By the Ventilator Shaft and Gets Stuck—Was Rescued Just in Time.

The borough lockup came very near being the scene of a death by hanging Monday, but the victim was saved just in time. The hanging was not done by the authorities, however, but in an attempt to escape by Louis C. Teller, who was locked up there last evening for being drunk and disorderly. Only last Saturday he was released from the lockup after a five days visit on the same charge.

At twelve o'clock Chief Marshal VanHorn locked up the jail and went home to dinner. About fifteen minutes later Mrs. William Sharkey, whose husband's blacksmith shop is next door, heard loud cries issuing from the jail. She called her husband and H. E. Cramer, who was in the shop on business, to come and see what was the matter.

Mr. Sharkey and Wm. Smalley, who heard the cries, thought that the prisoner inside was faking, but Cramer got a ladder and climbing up, looked in a window.

"What's the matter?" he called out.

There was a loud groan from the inside and then the prisoner screamed:

"I'm hung! For God's sake, help me, I'm hung!"

"Where?" Mr. Cramer queried.

"Over the partition between the cells," came the answer.

Those outside did not exactly see how that was possible, and most of the crowd, which had gathered in the meantime, thought that there was nothing the matter with the man. But the loud cries for help continued and a boy was sent to tell Marshal Doud to come and investigate the affair.

The Marshal started to come slowly, but when he heard what was the matter he soon appeared on the scene. When the jail was unlocked, they found that Teller had crawled halfway through the ventilator shaft between two cells, an opening six inches high by fourteen inches broad, and was hanging there, resting on his stomach on a two-inch strip. The poor man was in an exhausted condition, while his clothes were badly torn in his effort to pass through the small opening. He was finally released from his awkward position at about quarter of one.

Dr. D. C. Adams was sent for and examined the prisoner. His face was badly cut as was also his breast and he was so weak that he could hardly stand.

He told Chief Van Horn that he had only tried to get out to get a drink of water, but the general opinion is that Teller was trying to escape.

He had placed his chair on the bunk and in this way climbed into the opening, but as there was nothing in the opposite cell to catch hold of, he was unable to pull himself through.

As it was, when his rescuers arrived, they had to pull him back into his own cell.

He was brought before Judge Crosley this afternoon to answer to the charge of being drunk and acting in a disorderly manner. He owned up that he was drunk but said that he had behaved himself. He received ten days in the county jail.

A Former Plainfielder Dead.

Somerville lost a prominent citizen this morning in the death of George W. Samborn, who was, at one time, a resident of this city. Mr. Samborn has recently been engaged in the sash and blind business, but about fifteen years ago served very efficiently as manager of Hope's Express in this city. He was very active in all public affairs and will be greatly missed by a host of friends that he leaves behind. He leave a wife. He returned only a short time ago from the Honeyman excursion to the Adirondacks.

Able to Go to the Coast.

School Commissioner William D. Wolfeskeil, of Elizabeth, who has been seriously ill for the past two weeks with intermittent fever, is convalescent. He started some time ago for Atlantic City, where he will remain a week.

THE GREAT PEACH RUN.

CRESCENT WHEELMEN HAD A JOLLY TIME ALL ALONG THE TRIP.

The Roads Were Heavy, Causing Many Accidents and Breakdowns, But Nothing of a Serious Nature Happened.

That long anticipated event of the Crescent Wheelmen, the annual peach run to Clinton, came off Thursday and, as far as peaches went, was a grand and glorious success.

Ex-Captain Haynes was in command of the twenty-six riders that started and a glorious time they had. The weather was perfect, but the roads were not, as the dust was two inches deep and it was impossible to see the small stones which played havoc with the tires. The party stopped at the farm of John Haynes, son of the ex-captain, and ate peaches and drank milk until they could hardly ride. Then they went on to Clinton, about two miles further, and sat down to a magnificent dinner at Weller's Hotel, spring chickens, and peaches in every imaginable form, besides hosts of other good things. Then they returned, stopping at Haynes' farm and feasting again on peaches and milk.

When they arrived at Somerville they found the hotel and all the houses empty, everybody having gone to the coroner's inquest of the mulatto girl who was murdered there. The wheelmen took possession of the hotel and enjoyed themselves while they waited for someone to come. Finally they left for Plainfield.

The most lively part of the run was the accidents which were taking place every few minutes, and there was scarcely a rider who came through safely. Clifford Pearson punctured both of his tires and rode from North Branch to Somerville on the rims. T. J. Carey had a puncture and Mr. Rogers ran into a wagon and smashed his front forks. Will Weston enjoyed several punctures, while another rider had his cone all ground up into a number of small pieces. Charles Smith was another one to have several holes punctured into his tire. Harry Coward and C. C. Lister both had to dismount several times to loosen the bearings to their wheels which persisted in tightening up. There were a number of other smaller accidents which added to the fun.

When the party reached Clinton they found a campmeeting in session and several attended.

PLAINS TEAM WAS NOT IN IT.

THE Y. M. C. A. BALL TEAM WIN THEIR FIRST GAME AFTER A REST.

Burt Pitched a Splended Game, and Had Good Support All the Way Through—Townley Behind the Bat—The Score.

Scotch Plains is not in it with Plainfield when it comes to playing baseball, as the game at Scotch Plains Saturday afternoon showed, when the Y. M. C. A. boys of this city cleaned out their Scotch Plains opponents to the tune of 11 to 2. The game was not a close one as the Plainfield nine took such a lead in the first inning that the home team could not come anywhere near them.

Burt pitched a splendid game, and although he did not strike out as many as the other pitcher, only four hits were made off of his delivery and his cool head saved his team many a run. There were several new men on the team and all played well. Symons, at first, being a great success. Townley played his old game behind the bat, and taught the players from Scotch Plains that it was no easy task to steal second, Billy Lee being the only one to steal it safely.

There was one very novel feature of the game, which was probably never seen at a ball game before, and that was when Umpire Quereau appeared at his position near firstbase on horseback.

The Y. M. C. A boys were first at the bat. Corey took his first on balls, then a wild throw caught Townley on the hip and sent him limping to first, forcing Corey to second, while Symons hit one safe for first which filled the bases, and then Schenck put one over the centrefielder's head, bringing in the three runs and sending him to second. The next three went out in the one, two, three order.

In the next inning Burt was struck in the side and made the circuit on an error by the pitcher and a sacrifice by Corey. Singles by Burt, Thiers, Corey and Townley in the sixth inning netted three more runs, and in the next inning four more runs resulted from a base on balls to McKelvey and hits by Schenck, Bolsterle, Mulford, Burt, Tiliers and Corey. That kind of batting was too much and in the next inning Johnson pitched for the Scotch Plains.

The Scotch Plains nine made their runs in the first and last innings.

The score by innings was:

A NEW CATHOLIC SOCIETY.

It Will Be on the Same Lines as the Y. M. C. L., But With No Age Limit.

A mass meeting was called yesterday afternoon in the Y. M. C. L. rooms to organize a Catholic union. M. J. Cashin called the meeting to order and was elected temporary chairman. J. J. Gallagher was elected secretary. Father Murphy made an address stating that the object of the meeting was to organize a social club to which all members of the parish might belong. He told of the need of such an organization, as the Y. M. C. L. is only for young men.

An association was then organized and about eighty of those present came forward and signed their names. The charter will remain open for four weeks longer, however, to allow all who wish to become charter members.

The real object of the meeting was to change the name of the Young Men's Catholic Lyceum and reorganize it so that it will allow any who wish, irrespective of age, to become members. The new organization is to take the place of the Y. M. C. L.

The meeting adjourned to the call of the chairman.

MERITED REWARD.

SALES OF LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

Never in the history of medicine has the demand for one particular remedy for female diseases equalled that attained by Lydia E. Pinkhams Vegetable Compound and never in the history of Mrs. Pinkhams wonderful Compound has the demand for it been so great as it is today. From Maine to California, from the Gulf to the St. Lawrence, come the glad tidings of woman's suffering relieved by it; and thousands upon thousands of letters are pouring in from grateful women, saying that it WILL and does positively cure those painful

Ailments of Women.

It will cure the worst forms of female complaints, all ovarian troubles, inflammation and ulceration, falling and displacements of the womb, and consequent spinal weakness, and is peculiarly adapted to the change of life.

Every time it will cure

Backache.

It has cured more cases of leucorrhœa by removing the cause, than any remedy the world has ever known; it is almost infallible in such cases. It dissolves and expels tumors from the uterus in an early stage of development, and checks any tendency to cancerous humors.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills work in unison with the Compound, and are a sure cure for constipation and sick-headache. Mrs. Pinkham's Sanative Wash is frequently found of great value for local application. Correspondence is freely solicited by the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., and the strictest confidence assured. All druggists sell the Pinkham's remedies. The Vegetable Compound in three forms, — Liquid, Pills, and Lozenges.

SOME BASEBALL GOSSIP.

Pointers About the Game Interesting to the Cranks of This City.

Keeler made four hits for Baltimore in Saturday's game with the Brooklyn's, two put outs, three stolen bases, and no errors. Who is there can beat him?

The Southern League wound up its season on September 4th, Atlanta winning the pennant, of which club Leo Smith, formerly of this city, was a member. The windup was very exciting between the Atlanta's and Nashville's as the following will show:

	Won.	Lost.	Per Cent.
Atlanta	70	37	654
Nashville	69	38	649

Jack Sharrott, who all Plainfield cranks know, is hitting the ball hard for the Bangors in the New England League. He gets in two or three hits every game.

Catcher Warner of the Louisvilles, who formerly caught for the Westfield's "in the good old times," is entirely too good for a tail-end club. He has been playing good ball for the Louisville's, and Manager Selee, of the Boston's, now sees he made a mistake in releasing him to them.

Pitcher Dolan, of the Boston's, and James Brown, of this city, are very close friends. They used to work together in Pennsylvania a few years ago.

A county base ball league between Elizabeth, Cranford, Westfield and Plainfield next year ought to prove successful. It would be a good thing to see some of the exciting times of a few years come back again, as Plainfield is dead without a ball team. A good location for a ball field is in the western part of the city near the terminus of the street railway which will be accessible to everybody, and The Press has no doubt if a good ball team could be got together and properly managed it would be a success. If towns like Somerville, Raritan, Flemington and others can have a ball team, why can't Plainfield have one? Now ye cranks get together and demand a ball team next year.

AN ODD FELLOWS FUNERAL.

The funeral services over the remains of Louis B. Mulford were largely attended Sunday afternoon at his late home in the Manning flats. The services at the house were under the charge of Rev. Herbert Randolph, of Grace M. E. church, and Rev. Dr. Yerkes, of the First Baptist church, who spoke briefly of the admirable characteristics of the deceased, and drew consoling conclusions from his demise for the afflicted relatives.

The bearers of the casket were members of Queen City Lodge of Odd Fellows, of which Mr. Mulford was a member. Fifty-four members of this organization attended the funeral in a body, and at the grave the services were impressively conducted from the Odd Fellows ritual by Noble Grand A. G. Barber and Chaplain W. J. Conroy. The floral tributes were very beautiful, the Odd Fellows gift being a pillow with three links and the letters I.O.O.F. prettily arranged thereon.

SCALDED BY STEAM.

The Engineer at Scott's Was in a Perilous Position.

David Fisk, of Johnston avenue, the engineer at the Scott Printing Machine Works, was badly scalded by steam about the arms last Saturday morning while endeavoring to repair a break in the machinery. It seems that a cup blew out and Fisk got down in narrow quarters to repair the break while the assistant cut off the steam. The break was thought to have been fixed and the signal given to turn on the steam before the engineer got out of the pit. The moment the steam was turned on the cup blew out again filling the air with scalding steam, with the result of badly injuring Fisk. The flesh peeled from his arms and he was taken to his home where a physician was called and administered to his injuries. Today his arm is badly swollen and he is unable to work.

AN ELEVATOR RACE.

Husband and Wife Would Find Each Other But Missed.

A well-dressed woman walked into the Crocker building the other afternoon and took an elevator. Her husband saw her from across the street and hurrying over took the next elevator. He went to the office where he knew his wife had business and found that she had stepped in and out again, and went down in the next elevator.

In the meantime his wife had gone down, and the elevator dispatcher said:

"Your husband has went up in the elevator. I think he is looking for you."

The lady took the next elevator up. Just then her husband came down. He looked all around and then inquired of the elevator man:

"Have you seen my wife here?"

"Yes, she just went up this minute."

The man took the next elevator and he was no more than out of sight till his wife came down again.

"Your husband has gone up again," said the elevator man.

"I guess he'll wait for me this time, so I'll go up," and up she went.

Down came her husband a second later.

"Did my wife come down again?" he inquired.

"Yes, and just went up again. She thought you would wait for her."

"Well, I'll wait here.

He waited about five minutes, and then, growing impatient, took an elevator upstairs. She had been waiting for him and came down just as he disappeared.

"Well, I will wait for him and catch him this time," said she.

After standing in the corridor several minutes she decided to go upstairs and find him. As she was whisked out of sight he stepped out of another elevator.

"Your wife has just gone up," said the elevator man.

The husband swore a little under his breath and started to leave the building. At the door he hesitated, changed his mind and took the next elevator up. Down came his wife at the same moment.

"He's just gone up again," was the elevator man's answer to her weary look of inquiry, "and he's as mad as a hornet."

"Then I had better go right up and catch him," said she.

Up she went and down he came.

"Just went up," remarked the elevator man.

"I'm demmed if I'm going up again," said he. "I'll wait right here," and he sat down on the stairs. Half an hour later he was still sitting there, and his wife, equally determined, was waiting for him upstairs.

"I hope they'll meet in heaven," remarked the elevator man.—San Francisco Post.

AN INEFFECTIVE CURE.

The Remedy Was Administered All Right but It Did Not Work.

A bachelor clergyman bought a parrot to relieve his silent chambers. The dealer assured him it was a good talking bird, but warned him not to be surprised if it was silent for a few days until it became accustomed to its surroundings.

A week later the clergyman was back at the bird store. He said the man must come and take the parrot away. The night before he had a number of his best parishioners visit him, he explained, and the conversation woke Polly up. It talked all right, but such talk. Oaths and execrations of the most awful kind the bird poured out in torrents. Such a bird he could not keep.

"You can cure him of that," said the dealer. "Parrots often remember stuff they learned early, but you can cure them. Next time Polly swears have a pail of water ready and souse him into it, cage and all, and then shake and kick the cage around. Frighten the bird thoroughly and it will never swear again."

The experiment was duly tried and the next time Polly swore cage and bird were plunged into the water, and then the kicking and shaking began. But in this process the catches which held the cage to its pan were loosened and Polly got out. However, the clergyman, resolved to make the lesson thorough, pelted the unlucky bird with books, slippers and other missiles. Finally, when he was tired, Polly crawled up on the back of a chair and shook out its bedraggled and drenched plumage.

"B-r-r-r-rh!"—and then, catching sight of the clergyman—"Say, where in h——l were you when the cyclone struck us?"—Chicago Tribune.

A Painful Necessity.

Bridget O'Hoolihan, an elderly Irish cook, had been induced to go to a quiet little suburban town to live in a wealthy gentleman's family. Two weeks after her arrival she declared her intention of returning to the city.

"Why do you leave us, Bridget?" asked her mistress, in a grieved tone. "We pay you the very highest wages."

"Ye do, ma'am, an' yer a perfect leddy. Oi'm not lavin' troo anny fault av de fam'ly, but this place is such a dead old place, wid no chance to do annything loively in it, that, begorry, Oi have to mek up a pack o' lies iv'ry toime Oi go to confession, or Oi'd have nothing to confesh."—Harper's Magazine.

Too Exacting.

"You know that although a wealthy man, I never drink, smoke, gamble or swear—that I am perfectly exemplary. Then why do you refuse me?"

"You certainly couldn't ask me to become the manager of a freak!"—Harper's Bazar.

The fool is always dead sure that his own way of doing things is the best, if not the only way; but the wise man wonders if there is a better way than the one he has adopted.

UNION WILL BE SPLIT UP.

KEAN AND VOORHEES BOTH WIN DELEGATES LAST NIGHT.

Republican Primaries Held in Several Towns Last Night—Great Hustling for Both Candidates—Plainfield Choose Later

Senator Voorhees swept Elizabeth Friday at the Republican primaries for delegates to the State Convention. From the latest returns he has carried the Third, Fifth, Seventh, Eighth, Ninth, Tenth, Eleventh and Twelfth wards. Kean carried the First and Sixth wards. This will give Kean two delegates from Elizabeth to Voorhees' thirteen. The Second and Fourth wards were for Maurice A. Rodgers, who thus gets three delegates.

Kean came out ahead in Rahway, securing three delegates to Voorhees' two.

President Barr, of the City Council, as a Voorhees delegate, was beaten in the First ward. Congressman Fowler and William H. Corbin triumphed in the Eleventh, while Mayor Rankin beat Capt. Ogden in the Ninth ward.

Kean captures Westfield's two delegates and one in Union Township.

It now looks as if Union County will be pretty evenly divided between Kean and Voorhees.

The Republican leaders were all in the saddle at Elizabeth yesterday urging the voters to go to the primaries for the State Convention.

The chief battle was in the banner Republican ward—the Eleventh—where Congressman Fowler and William H. Corbin, counsel for the Senate Investigating Committee, were pitted as Voorhees delegates against ex-Aldermen William P. Thomas and James A. Little, the John Kean delegates. An unprecedented vote was polled at this primary, as both factions were working like beavers.

The Republican primaries were held at Rahway also last night. There was a large attendance at each voting place. The supporters of Kean and Voorhees were hustlers and nothing was left undone to get the people out in each ward. In the First ward, William H. Miller, for Voorhees, defeated George Heath, for Kean, by two majority in a cast of seventy four votes. In the Second ward Freeholder John Farrell, Kean, carried the ward by one vote over Water Commissioner Daniel G. Winston, Voorhees. The Third ward, the ward of Editor Rollinson, ex-Senator Braval, Voorhees, carried over ex-Assemblyman F. L. Sheldon, Kean man, by a majority of eight.

In the Fourth ward Mayor J. J. Daly, Kean, defeated George P. Edgar, Voorhees. In the Fifth ward Seymour Gibbons, Kean, defeated Harry W. Gibbons, Voorhees, by eight votes out of a total of fifty-six.

Daniel G. Winston, Voorhees delegate, will contest the seat of Freeholder Farrell, on the ground of voting non-residents and Democrats.

From Clark township comes the news that Benjamin King, a Voorhees delegate, was elected.

LAST SAD RITES.

Funeral Services Over the Remains of the Late Rowland M. Stover.

The funeral services of the late Rowland M. Stover were held from his late residence on East Ninth street yesterday afternoon. The officiating clergyman was Rev. E. M. Rodman who made the Episcopal service seem very impressive. The parlors were filled with friends and relatives.

The music was furnished by a trio composed of Mrs. W. A. Freeman, L. Groff Boyer and E. E. Runyon, which rendered "Abide With Me" and "Rock of Ages" in a very impressive manner.

The floral tributes were very beautiful. The casket was covered with white asters and a large bunch of pink sweet pease. There was also a wreath of pink and white roses, a crown of white roses and several other handsome pieces.

The remains were taken on the 10:04 train for Greenwood cemetery this morning for interment.

Appropriated Red Men's Money.

John Gehring, who is charged with misappropriating the funds of Rahway Tribe, Order of Red Men, has been admitted to bail in $200, George Andellinger and Gehring's mother becoming his security. Gehring was chairman of the committee of arrangements for the Red Men's picnic on July 4th, and had the handling of the receipts and the payment of all the bills. The balance he was to turn over to the treasurer. The society has been trying since the picnic to get Gehring to make a settlement with it, but he has not done so. It is alleged that several bills which he was supposed to have paid were left unpaid.

An Odd Explosion.

While Henry Frentz, of Scotch Plains, was riding his wheel from Fanwood to his home Thursday night, his cycle lamp exploded and went into a thousand pieces. Mr. Frentz escaped injury.

THE COGS ALL FIT IN NOW.

CRESCENT'S BOARD OF GOVERNORS GET DOWN TO WORK.

It was announced that the board of governors would provide refreshments at their own expense for the club meeting which takes place next Wednesday evening at eight o'clock. The board will meet the same evening at half-past seven.

Four new members were elected and several more will join next Wednesday. Captain Charles C. Lister announced the following as his staff: First Lieutenant, Nathan Titsworth; second lieutenant, Harry VanEmburg; Bugler, W. J. Stephenson. The color bearer will be appointed later.

Although no action was taken at the meeting, there is some talk among the members of having a local meet or field day on the oval this fall. Several of the local dealers have agreed to offer prizes should such a meet be arranged. The scheme seems to find general favor and will probably be introduced at the next meeting.

A HORSE IN THE SEWER AGAIN.

George Squires Had a Tangled Up Affair Last Night.

George Squires, of North Plainfield, met with an accident last night in front of Mrs. Flynn's house on Liberty street while out driving with a horse and buggy. An excavation had been made at that point for the house connection to the sewer, and Mr. Squires without noticing any danger drove the horse close to the opening. The latter slipped and fell on his side. Squires immediately jumped from the wagon and with the assistance of Edward Martin and a few others succeeded in getting the animal on his feet, but just when they thought the horse was safe he made a turn and fell into the hole again, landing on all four feet.

Two or three shovels were procured and before the horse could be rescued it was found necessary to throw dirt into the opening. After this was done the horse walked out with ease. Excepting a few scratches on the animal there was no damage.

SIXTH STREET SOCIABILITY.

Miss Richardson Entertains a Few Friends At Her Home.

It may have been cool out doors last night, but the warm hospitality of Miss Cora Richardson, of East Sixth street, left no coolness at the little social gathering held at her house last evening in honor of her friend, Miss Kittie Wann, of Jersey City. A most enjoyable evening was spent in dancing, games and conversation and a daintily served collation ended the evening's pleasure. Those present were the Misses May Coyn, of Jersey City, Charlotte Messersmith, Alice Jenkins, Mamie Steiner, May Giles, Jennie Giles, Lizzie W. Stafford and Cora Dayton, of New Market, Herbert Fletcher, of Dunellen, William Slate, of Dunellen, Fred Haynes, of New Market, James A. Stafford, Judson R. Miss T. A. Alexander, of East Fifth street, has just returned from her summer vacation.

STOPPED BY HIGHWAYMEN.

FRANK MANCHESTER HAD AN EXCITING ADVENTURE LAST NIGHT.

Was Riding From Westfield on His Bicycle, When an Attempt Was Made to Stop Him Near Fanwood—Escaped Bruised.

It is about time that the Italian population of the towns and cities are taught a lesson that they will not forget. Frequently women are assaulted, men are accosted and killed, and too often they insult in a most dastardly manner respectable people.

A case of this kind occurred last night about eight o'clock when Frank Manchester, of Lafayette place, was returning from Westfield on his wheel. He got along all right until he reached the cut at Fanwood where the road is very dark on account of the woods on each side.

Very suddenly two Italians appeared in the road and called to Manchester, telling him to stop. The latter could just make out that there was two men there, but their voices gave them away.

Manchester was making good time and when one of the highwaymen appeared in the road, throwing up his hands to stop the rider, the Italian was struck full force by the wheel, laying him flat. The collision threw Manchester head first over his machine and he landed in the road with the result of receiving several bruises and strains about the body and legs.

His quick forethought probably saved his life, for he grabbed his wheel mounted and rode for dear life. The collision had extinguished his light but that did not stop him until he had gone far enough to know he was out of danger. It is not known what became of the men.

When Manchester reached town he stopped at Reynolds's pharmacy and purchased some liniment, and went on his way home.

MIDNIGHT ALARM AT THE PLAINS

Scotch Plains was rudely awakened from its quiet sleep last night by an alarm of fire. Very soon the streets were alive with the residents of the village all inquiring of one another, "Where is the fire," as there was no reflection shown on the sky. The firemen were directed to the residence of Daniel Allen on Westfield avenue, where they found a fire burning brisky in one of the closets. The fire was caused by the explosion of a kerosene lamp which had been carried to the closet by Mrs. Allen's son Frank. Frank had been writing until nearly one o'clock, when feeling hungry he went to the closet for something to eat, set the lamp down for a moment, when it exploded, scattering burning oil over the shelves and floor.

The family were awakened and worked hard to subdue the flames, but if it had not been for the arrival of firemen and neighbors the house and the one adjoining would have probably been burned to the ground, as the family were nearly exhausted. Mrs. Allen was severely burned about the hands, but is very thankful that it is no worse. After the fire had been extinguished it was found that the blaze had been confined to the closet where it had started.

All the tins, refrigerator, kettles and other articles in the closet were ruined, but the damage was fully covered by insurance.

Would Not Cut His Hair.

John Decker, played the part of Dick the Rat, Tony Hart's old role in "Old Lavender." Harry W. Wright, who was cast for the part, and whose name appeared on the programme, saw the performance from a seat in the orchestra. This change was made only yesterday afternoon, and the way it happened was this:

Mr. Wright is a good looking young man with curly hair, which he wears rather long, a style affected by a good many gentlemen of the stage. He joined Harrigan's company only this season, and in "The Woollen Stocking" he played a juvenile part which required no makeup. When it was decided to put on "Old Lavender" he was cast for Dick the Rat. Rehearsals began, and one day last week Mr. Harrigan informed Mr. Wright he would have to have his hair cut. Mr. Wright said nothing at the time, but to some of his fellow members of the company he declared he would not spoil his appearance for any part. He said nothing to the management though, and they did not know he intended to throw up the part until yesterday afternoon, when a dress rehearsal was held and Mr. Wright did not appear. Then the whole thing was explained and Mr. Decker was given the part.

Manager Mart Hanley, when questioned last night, admitted that the above were practically the facts in the case. "I am very sorry for Mr. Wright," he said, "but then young men are awfully foolish sometimes—now aren't they?"—New York Herald.

HOTEL NETHERWOOD SOLD.

TO BE CONDUCTED AS A SANITARIUM FOR CONSUMPTIVES.

Bought By a Syndicate of New York Capitalists, Headed By Dr. Crossman—Cost $300,000 But Was Sold for Less.

After having had a career filled with failures the Hotel Netherwood property Thursday afternoon passed into new hands and will be conducted no longer for the purposes for which it was originally intended—that of a high-class summer resort hotel.

Yesterday afternoon a deal was consummated whereby a syndicate of prominent New York capitalists, headed by Dr. Crossman, become the owners of the property. These gentlemen have for some time been looking about for a place to establish a sanitarium where consumptive patients could be treated, and in the Netherwood found just what suited them.

Its close proximity to the metropolis, with unlimited railroad facilities, its location in a section that is celebrated as being the most beautiful and healthy in Jersey, together with the commodious structure, and luxuriously furnished rooms, made it especially desirable for the purposes for which they will use it.

The matter has been under the consideration of the new purchasers for the course of a month, and while the price paid for the property is not what it originally cost, the sale was a satisfory one, because as a hotel it had always been a source of loss to the owners.

The property cost $300,000 to build and furnish. The building will be taken possession of by the syndicate in two or three weeks and probably thoroughly overhauled. Late in the fall or early in the winter it will be opened for the reception of patients with a corps of experienced physicians in lung ailments.

The sale was made by Charles Hyde, as trustee for the bondholdolders, including the Latimer estate, Warren Ackerman, E. R. Pope and a large number of other Plainfielders.

THEIR CAKE IS ALL DOUGH.

Union County's Republican Slate Smashed to Smithereens.

The Jersey City News has the following political gossip from Trenton:

Senator Voorhees came in for considerable gentle chaffing by his colleagues, because the Supreme Court has decided that the Elective Judiciary bill is unconstitutional. The young Senator took it all good naturedly, but it was quite apparent that he was nettled at the reversal, particularly at this stage of the game. He made no expression, except to say that he was very much surprised that it went that way. What effect this opinion will have upon his candidacy remains to be seen. There are many who think it will not seriously effect him. It, however, does make some slight changes in the political matters of Union county. Ex-Speaker Cross was to receive the Republican nomination for Judge, and this knocks him out, and places him in line as a senior Assemblyman to be a candidate for Senator. Of course Senator Voorhees has another chance at it, and, should the Gubernatorial nomination not go to Union county, it is more than probable that he will take another three years so as to keep himself in line for the Gubernatorial nomination later on, or for Congress. Mr. Cross, unless he tires of politics, will have to wait three years, Assemblyman Codding, who was planning to be Senator in case Voorhees became Governor, will also have to bide his time, so that some of the cake of the Union county politicians is all dough.

A Mind Picture of All Others.

A Republican member of the City Council in speaking of Plainfield's two daily papers, said that he formerly read the News altogether and never looked at The Daily Press, but on examination found that The Daily Press contained more news, covered the town better, and best of all it was most accurate. The Daily Press is always glad to receive such unsolicited compliments, but the words of the Councilman seem to be the public's sentiment.

Counsel Engaged.

The Somerset County Board of Freeholders Tuesday decided to engage the services of Lawyer R. V. Lindabury as associate counsel in the mandamus proceedings in the stone-road matter. Freeholder Perry and Director Staats were chosen a committee to attend the hearing. The salary of the County Physician was fixed at $50 per annum, he to furnish medicines and attend to patients in jail, and to be paid regular coroner's fees for other services.

The Last of the Summer Dances.

The Y. M. C. A. baseball team will cross bats with the Scotch Plains team on Saturday afternoon at 3:30 on the Olympia diamond at Scotch Plains. The following is the personnel of the team:

Cory, Townley, Symons, McKelvey, Schoonmaker, Bolsterli, Freeman, McLaughlin, Burt, Schenck.

WARM WEATHER DIDN'T INTERFERE.

St. Joseph's People Danced and Enjoyed themselves at Saengerbund Hall.

Ice-cream and lemonade were a great success last evening at the festival of the St. Joseph's R. C. church held in Saengerbund Hall, on Somerset street, even if it was rather warm to dance. Those that went, however, didn't mind a little warm weather, but enjoyed the dancing and then the refreshments. The attendance was fairly good, but a much larger crowd is expected tonight. The music, furnished by Professor O'Reilley, was enjoyed by all. The ice cream booth, at one corner of the hall, was very prettily arranged and the frozen cream was distributed to the purchasers by Mrs. D. T. Kenney and Mrs. Andrew L. Carney. In another corner lemonade was served from a tastefully decorated booth by Mrs. James Harper, Mrs. Alfred Wilkins, Mrs. James E. Bailey and Miss McCaffrey.

The tickets were sold at the door by Thomas Neeley, while James Nolan guarded the entrance and allowed none to enter without showing their ticket. The floor was under the charge of Fred Huff, Garret Powers and William Kiely, who performed their duties in a most satisfactory manner.

The entire festival was under the care of a committee of arrangements consisting of R. H. McCullough, R. A. Boyce and D. T. Kenney, to whose energetic efforts the complete success of the festival is due.

The festival will be continued this evening and a very large attendance is expected.

THE FINDING OF MISS CLARK.

A New York Paper Comments on the Abilities of Detective Beck.

The Cuba Libre, a weekly periodical published in New York, recently printed the following sketch of Louis J. Beck in connection with his finding Miss Lucretia Clark, in company with Robert Campbell, The World reporter:

The Agitator takes uncommon pleasure in calling the attention of his readers to the successful endeavor of Detective Louis J. Beck to discover the whereabouts of the missing educationalist, Miss Clark, who so suddenly and unaccountably disappeared from view some days ago. The police of every big city in the country had been put upon the case, but Louis Beck, quickly planning his search, was finally able to locate the unfortunate but gifted woman is Fitchburg, Mass.

I knew Louis J. Beck when he first found employment on a New York newspaper. This is not the first time he has distinguished himself when assigned with Mr. Vincent Cooke and Mr. Isaac White, two of the brainiest men on the press of this city, to work up important cases. The work of these three men, in fact, has gained for them widespread reputations.

Beck proceeded to trace Miss Clark in a conservative, understandable way. Placed upon the case, he followed her steps from different stores, where she had left orders for the equipment of the school she intended to open in the fall, to the ferries. He talked with the Fall River line steamboat officials and discovered that a woman of Miss Clark's appearance had been a passenger on one of their boats. He called to his aid Mr. Campbell, of The New York World, and went directly to Boston.

Looking over the Boston newspapers, Beck followed up advertisements for employment. His next move was to visit every employment bureau in Boston, and by this means he traced the missing woman to the Massachusetts town. He communicated with her relatives and she was finally induced to place herself under their care. Mental aberation is given as the cause of Miss Clark's disappearance, and this reasoning out of the case is undoubtedly the true solution of the misfortune which has overwhelmed a refined and lovable woman.

To show of what genuine material Louis J. Beck is made, of, I need only mention this fact:—When he opened up his handsome quarters in the Vanderbilt building, at No. 132 Nassau street, he was visited by representatives of the Spanish government and asked to serve them in the capacity of a spy throughout the country, and particularly in the southwest. The offer was alluring in a monetary sense, but this was the young detective's answer:—"I was born in a free country; my people have enjoyed the privileges of its institutions, and I'll never betray the cause of any people who are opposing a monarchical form of government." The Agitator wishes Louis Beck success in his new career.

Shut Off the Water.

What possible idea the driver of the sprinkling cart can have in standing in one spot waiting for a blockade of teams to move out of the way and let the flow of water continue from the sprinkler, is something the average person cannot understand. The small-sized duck pond left in the road in these instances is as disagreeable as too much dust.

An Address On Tarsus.

A special missionary meeting will be held by the Christian Endeavor society of the Congregational church, Sunday evening. S. M. Mileonyan now studying for the ministry at Princeton, will speak on his native land, Tarsus, Asia.

FOOTBALL LEAGUE FORMED.

FOUR TEAMS FROM THIS SECTION OF JERSEY WILL KICK THE PIGSKIN.

Officers Elected and Schedule of Games Arranged—Plainfield Y. M. C. A. Will Put Out a Strong Eleven to Contest.

The football prospect for Plainfield this year is very bright and there promises to be the best eleven in the field this fall that Plainfield has ever seen. Last evening the Central New Jersey Football League was organized in the Y. M. C. A. rooms at Westfield by representatives from Westfield, Plainfield, Dunellen and Cranford. Those present at the meeting were E. G. Wherry, Robert Wherry and Mr. Vought, of Westfield; D. A. McPhie, Raymond A. McGee, Charles B. Morse and Arthur B. Crane, of Plainfield; Edward Hardingham and Mr. Carpenter, of Dunellen; and A. Tousch, Jr., of Cranford.

E. G. Wherry, of Westfield, was chosen temporary chairman and Robert Wherry, of Westfield, was appointed secretary.

The league was then organized and a constitution, prepared by E. G. Whiting on the same lines as that of the Intercollegiate Football Association, considered.

It was decided that this year the league should consist of four teams: The Westfield Football Association, the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. Football Association, the Dunellen Football Association and the Cranford Football Association. An annual assessment of $2 was decided upon, the money thus raised to go for the purchase of a trophy for the league. After considerable discussion it was agreed that the trophy won this year should be the property of the club winning it.

The officers selected were a president, vice-president, secretary and treasurer. A committee composed of three delegates from each club, shall be known as the advisory committee. When one of the delegates was unable to be present it was agreed that he should be allowed to send his proxy.

The rest of the constitution provided for the players and rules in connection with the game. The rules of the Inter-Collegiate Football Association were adopted.

The election of officers then followed and resulted as follows: President, E. G. Wherry, of Westfield; Vice-president, A. Tousch, Jr., of Cranford; Secretary, Charles B. Morse, of Plainfield; Treasurer, George W. Richardson, of Dunellen.

It was decided that each club should play two games with every other club, one at home and one abroad. Then after some discussion the dates on which the games were to be played were selected as follows:—Saturday, October 19th; Saturday, October 26th; Saturday, November 2d; Tuesday, November 5th; Saturday, November 9th, and Saturday, November 16th.

Saturday, November 23d, was retained as a day on which to play off any postponed games or tie.

Work on the schedule was then begun and the first two weeks play arranged as follows: October 17th—Plainfield Y. M. C. A. at Westfield, Cranford at Dunellen. October 26th—Dunellen at Plainfield, Westfield at Cranford.

A committee, consisting of the three Westfield delegates, was appointed to complete it, as the Plainfield and Dunellen delegates had to leave to catch their train.

The complete schedule will be published later.

"Old Lavender."

On Thursday evening, September 19th, Edward Harrigan and his own company will give "Old Lavender" in Music Hall. The Newark Advertiser says of Mr. Harrigan and his play:

"'Old Lavender,' with all its pathos and humorous touches of low life in a great city, found, as might be expected, splendid exponents in Edward Harrigan, its author, and his competent company, at Miner's Theatre last night. Of all of Mr. Harrigan's plays, perhaps 'Old Lavender' is the most human. And this characteristic, it may be said, is sustained throughout the whole three acts. 'Old Lavender's' fate, and his portrayal, remind the beholder strongly of Bob VanWinkle. The work of the actor author and his songs found a ready response in the audience, which was unusually demonstrative. 'Poverty's Tears Ebb and Flow' was particularly well received. The scenes of life on the river side at night and in the barroom of the sailor's hotel are capital sketches. The play of features on 'Old Lavender's' face when his brother dismisses him from his employ and calls him a thief, is clever, indeed."

A Slight Runaway.

Yesterday Oliver P. Vosseller, who is associated with Watson Tunison in the feed business, and the colored man, Wm. Lane, while driving along Park avenue near Campbell's clubhouse met with a slight accident. The team took fright at some water in the roadway and jumped in the ditch. Several spokes in one of the wheels were broken. There was no other damage.

HELD FOR THE GRAND JURY.

One Knocked His Sister Down And The Other Stole a Wheel.

Two men came up before Justice Newcorn this morning and were held for the Grand Jury.

The first was Henry Pendleton, the warrant for whom was issued on July 11, for assault and battery, but until today he had managed to dodge the constables. The complaint was made by his sister Mrs. Jennie Henderson, and his wife. According to the story of the women, he met the two on Central avenue one day and assaulted his sister, knocking her down and pummeling her generally, saying that she had been interfering with his wife. His wife took the side of the sister and a good old quarrel ensued. Pendleton is a resident of West Third streeet and was caught today after he had finished a little affair at the city court.

S. Frucht, the West Front street bicycle dealer, was complainant against another man, Frank McCommey, colored, charging him with the larceny of a wheel. Last Monday McCommey came to Frucht's store and wanted to hire a wheel for an hour. Frucht let him have it, supposing everything was all right, but it wasn't, and the colored man did not show up. McCommey has been living at the home of David Jones, of Cottage place but was not heard from until Chief Grant this morning received word from the Newark police that they had captured McCommey in that city, where he had disposed of the wheel. Chief Grant will go to Newark tomorrow and bring the culprit to this city.

The case of Welch against Johnson, on contract, which was to have came up before Justice Newcorn this morning, was settled in court.

THREE COMMITTEED.

"De Bowery" Man, A Drunk And Another Tough Character Go Down.

The county jail at Elizabeth is richer by three more inmates as a result of this morning's proceedings in the city rourt.

John McGowan of "de Bowery" was the first to appear before Judge Coddington. Mrs. Julia Snyder complained that he had been using threatening language to her and that he had struck her on the nose until the blood flowed. About three months ago he used to live with her and then he left. Yesterday he came back and wanted to stay but Mrs. Snyder objected and McGowan became abusive. He pleaded guilty and was given sixty days straight in Elizabeth.

A regular drunken case, James Price, was the next culprit and he went down to the county jail for ten day's as he did not have the necessary $3 fine.

Henry Pendleton, the next on the programme, was an old offender, and has had the constables after him for some time. He got drunk yesterday and came around to abuse his sister, threatening to kill her. Judge Coddington gave him his choice between paying a fine of $10 or thirty days with Sheriff Kyte, but as he did not have the wherewithal to pay, down he went.

BOSTON ILLUSTRATED.

"Boston and the Convention" was the title of a stereopticon entertainment given at the Park Avenue Baptist church by Mr. Sherman, of Whippany, under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor society of that church last evening. Most of the views were of Boston itself, and Mr. Sherman spoke very entertainingly of them. A large audience, composed mainly of Christian Endeavorers, was present and listened to an interesting address. A junior society came from Springfield in a stage to attend the meeting. The great heat kept many away that would have otherwise come.

Horses Run But Do No Damage.

A team of horses belonging to John Goff, the fish dealer, stood on Emily street, near Somerset street, this morning and were in charge of a young man. Goff told the man in the wagon to drive up the street, and just as he started the horses became frightened at something and turned into Somerset street at a terrible speed. They ran as far as Jackson avenue when Frank Rickert, who was standing near, ran out and caught them just in time to prevent any damage.

Early Morning Robbery.

During the early part of yesterday morning someone effected an entrance into A. Titsworth & Co's place of business on North avenue and stole $14 from the safe. The firm has no idea of who committed the theft. Nothing else is reported as missing. A few stray papers were found lying on the floor.

Made Good and Was Let Go.

Wm. Cockran, of the borough, obtained $1 from a man named Hall under false pretenses a short time ago. Last night Cockran was arrested and taken before Justice Crosley. Upon the promise of the man to make it good sentence was suspended.

TALKED ABOUT HIS GIRL.

A BATTLE ROYAL RESULTS OVER ALLEGED SLURRING REMARKS.

Frank Hurlig Gets a Thrashing from J. Hamilton, and Gets Locked Up Besides—Settled in Court This Morning.

Almost every week North Plainfield furnishes excitement of some kind that keeps the marshals busy.

Last night about 10 o'clock occurred a lively fight on Greenbrook road, near Somerset street, that was witnessed by a few persons.

Recently a man named Frank Hurlig, of the borough, circulated reports about one man by the name of J. Hamilton who resides in this city. He also passed remarks about Mr. Hamilton's lady friend. Mr. Hamilton, however, wrote a letter to Hurlig stating that he would like to meet him, and that he would also bring his lady with him.

Last night was the date set and accordingly the two went to the place of meeting, but Hurlig was not there.

They heard, however, that he was at the merry-go-round near Greenbrook road. They went to the place and found him.

The remarks that Hurlig was supposed to have passed were brought up, but he denied saying anything of the kind. This angered Hamilton and a fight ensued. Hurlig was given a good thrashing that he did not enjoy. The scene was very exciting when Marshal Doud appeared, but the cry of "Here comes the cop" did not stop them, for Hamilton succeeded in giving his antagonist, and a friend with him, the worst of the fight.

Doud arrested Hurlig and put him in the lockup. This morning he went after Hamilton, and while he was absent Justice Crosley gave Hurlig a hearing and released him. Hamilton appeared before the Justice and after his story had been related he was also released.

RETURN OF THE OLD DOCTOR.

He Is Back to His Hut in the Neighborhood of Rahway.

The "Old Doctor," or old man of the woods, as many call him, has returned to his hut in the vicinity of Rahway after an absence of several weeks. The "Old Doctor" has been there sixteen years, and no one can say that they know his name. During all that time he has lived in a rude hut in the woods between the two branches of the railroad, subsisting for the most part on herbs and wild berries. His appearance is striking, with his long white beard and curious dress.

Some years ago a man was stung by a snake and cured by herbs that the old hermit applied to the wound. Since he has always been knows as the "Old Doctor." There is an old story to the effect that he was in the hospital corps between the lines in the Franco-Prussian war, that he was struck in the head by a bit of shell, and that his recovery left his mind unbalanced.

Good Things to Know.

Library card holders who were out of town during the summer, and who thus missed the notice in The Daily Press, will be interested to know that Saturday afternoons have been added to the circulating hours at the Free Public Library, so that the delivery hours are now: Daily, from 2 until 5:30 p. m., and Saturdays from 7:30 until 9 p. m. Also, that it has been decided, for the convenience of borrowers desiring to draw more than one book at a time, to issue an extra non-fiction card. For particulars inquiry should be made at the library.

A Window Cracked.

A mysterious accident occurred yesterday afternoon at Gavett & Co's store on East Front street which is puzzling. While Mr. Gavett was waiting on a customer a sharp loud report was heard like that of a pistol. Both were very much startled and upon examination found that one of the large plate glasses in the front of the store was cracked, evidently caused by the throwing of a large stone. There was no one in sight and Mr. Gavett was unable to find the guilty person.

An Old Timer Retires.

John E. Kelly, who for so many years has conducted his "Old Parliament House," at 113 Broad street in Elizabeth, has retired. He was one of the well known figures in that city and his saloon has been the resort of many of the best known politicians in the State. In that little back room many an incipient boom has been inaugurated. Mr. Kelly himself is one of the best informed men on current politics and other local politics in the State.

Bicycle Riding Taught.

The Crescent Cycle Academy, under the management of Joseph L. Wiseman, the plans for which were exclusively told in The Daily Press, will open on or about October 1st in the Crescent Rink as a bicycle academy. The academy will be furnished with all the modern apparatus, and instruction will be given from 9 a. m. to 11 p. m., on all days except Sunday.

THE BITING POWER OF MAN.

The man with the iron jaw used to be a prominent figure in the traveling museum shows. He did all sorts of wonderful things with his teeth—picked up barrels full of water, bent iron bars and held his wife in the air while he himself hung head downward from a trapeze on his toes. All this time the jaws of the audience were wide open—a favorite rural manifestation of astonishment.

If they had only read of the recent experiments of Dr. G. V. Black they might not have been so overcome with wonder. Dr. Black has been measuring the biting power of all kinds of persons—men, women and children—and he finds that in muscular strength the jaw compares favorably, for its size, with any other part of the body. And no wonder. It has plenty of practice.

A man may reduce his biceps to flabbiness by inaction; he may cause his calves to dwindle by always patronizing the street cars instead of walking, but unless he feeds entirely on gruel he must exercise his jaw muscles thrice a day or starve.

And the strength he must exert in chewing is by no mean contemptible, either. To crush a piece of steak, according to Dr. Black, a bite of 40 to 45 pounds is necessary. That is, if the proper machine was so rigged that by seizing a double lever between the jaws an object could be lifted from the floor, a 40 pound weight could be so lifted by the force necessary to crush a bit of steak.

Repeat this effort every time you chew and you can get an idea of how much exercise is required to eat one's dinner. The idea of doing work with one's jaw has generally been regarded as a fiction of the humorist, and is the subject of countless funny paragraphs about boarding house fare, but there is really nothing about it. It is real downright hard work for Dr. Black says so, and his statistics back him up.

And what makes it harder still is that most people habitually use much more force than is necessary in chewing their food. For instance, in chewing steak whose crushing point is at 40 to 45 pounds, the persons tested by Dr. Black used a force of 60 to 80 pounds—from 15 to 40 pounds more than was necessary. All this extra force, of course, is worse than wasted, but probably the generality of mankind will keep on wasting strength just so till a more systematic method of eating is to be adopted.

An Oversight.

"Have you read Brown's speech to the jury in that murder case he has been trying?" asked the merchant.

"I glanced it over," replied the lawyer, in a deprecatory way.

"It seemed to me that it had some very strong points," suggested the merchant.

"Oh, yes; there were some pretty good points in it," returned the lawyer.

"I couldn't see a chance to find fault with it anywhere. It was one of the ablest arguments I ever read."

"Oh, that's because you are not a lawyer. The argument was all right, but from a truly legal point of view the speech was faulty, extremely faulty."

"In what way?" inquired the merchant in surprise.

"There were some fearful oversights in it," explained the lawyer. "It violated all precedents in at least two instances."

"What were they?"

"Well, at the opening of his address he failed to say that it was the most intelligent jury that he had ever had the honor of addressing. That was an almost unheard-of oversight and reflects seriously upon his training as a lawyer. Then when he closed he failed to compliment the jury on its patience and close attention to the proceedings."

"But it wasn't patient or attentive," protested the merchant.

"That makes no difference," replied the lawyer. "No real attorney was ever known to leave those remarks out of his speech, no matter what kind of a jury he had. Such neglect is unprofessional in the extreme."—Chicago Post.

Not a Question of Profit.

Those brewers and liquor dealers who complain that they lose money by the closing of saloons on Sunday are furnishing an argument to many minds in support of keeping up Sunday prohibition, and they are demolishing one of the strongest arguments against it. Those people who believe that Sunday selling leads to excessive drinking and the squandering of the money of the poor will find in this complaint conclusive evidence that they are right, and will regard the loss of brewers and saloon keepers as the saving of people who need the money more than they do, and who will make better use of it by not using it in drink. Those who have maintained that shutting off the business of saloons on Sunday would not lessen drinking, but would lead to the buying of drink on Saturday and its secret and excessive consumption elsewhere than in saloons on Sunday, will find in this same complaint a conclusive answer to their chief argument. It involves an admission that less liquor is sold, that less money is spent for it, and consequently, that the results of the traffic, be the same good or bad, are curtailed.

IN MEMORIAM.

[CONTRIBUTED.]

When all that was mortal of Mrs. Thomas MacDonald was laid to rest yesterday afternoon in the cemetery of North Plainfield, it might truly have been said that one of the representative women of our city had passed away. For almost forty years she had lived among us, leading a blameless life as wife, mother, friend and neighbor. "To know her was to love her," quiet, gentle, unobtrusive, but yet endowed with great powers of mind and good old-fashioned common sense. She was a sincere and earnest Christian, having been for many years a communicant in the Episcopal church.

Mrs. MacDonald was until the day of her death an ardent patriot. She had endured and suffered much for her country and flag. When the call to arms was sounded through our land her husband responded, and in May, 1861, left this city with Co. I, 3d N. J. Vols., in which went so many of our brave boys. For three years he served his country, and was permitted to return. In July, 1862, her son, her oldest born, a mere stripling, enlisted in Co. D, 11th N. J. Vols., "McAllister's Boys," but all unused to hardship the young feet soon grew weary, and after four months of service he was laid to rest in a soldier's grave at Alexandria, Va. The mother's heart never recovered from the blow, and after thirty years of waiting they have been united, never more to part. Mrs. MacDonald was a charter member of Garfield League of the Loyal Ladies League of this city, and had been its chaplain from 1884 until her death.

About two months ago Mr. and Mrs. MacDonald quietly celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage. Had her health permitted the day would have been observed by her many relatives and friends in a manner befitting the occasion.

May the memory of such a life ever be tenderly cherished by her children and grandchildren.

CONDEMNED AS A NUISANCE.

Township Board of Health Take Action Against the Italian Boarding House.

The North Plainfield Township Board of Health met last evening and considered a code of rules formulated by the State Board of Health for the government of sanitary matters in the township. The most important matter, however, was the act of condemning the Italian and Negro boarding houses in the Notch as nuisances and detrimental to the health of the community. The Board adjourned to meet again on October 14th, when the code of rules will probably be adopted.

Received Them in Pieces.

Councilman J. H. Howell and family, of Willow avenue, returned from their summer outing through Boston soon after the Knights Templar convention. Several days ago Mr. Howell received several packing boxes which contained all that remained of his trunks. At the immense trunk blockade in Boston they had been completely smashed, along with hundreds of other trunks.

Been Fishing and Went To Sleep.

Two men from Elizabeth came to Plainfield yesterday and laid down near Stony brook and went to sleep. Chief Van Horn saw them, and thinking that they were drunk, arrested them with the help of Assistant Marshal Samuel Moore and brought them before Judge Crosley yesterday afternoon. The men claimed that they were peaceable citizens and had been fishing when they grew sleepy and laid down on the bank. They had no appearance of being drunk when brought to trial so the Judge released them.

ROMANTIC JUSTUS MORRIS.

The Frivolities of Cupid Playing With an Ex-Freeholder.

Word was received in Elizabeth yesterday that ex-Freeholder Justus Morris, one of the largest property-owners in the city, and who is seventy-four years old, had quietly married on Saturday, Miss Annie Hergert, twenty-two years old, who has for some time been his housekeeper. Mr. Morris lives in Linden township, near Rahway, and caused a stir in the community nearly two years ago by announcing his engagement to Miss Fannie Howard, of Liberty street, Elizabeth, whom he was to marry on Christmas Day, 1893, but he afterward jilted her. Mr. Morris was taken suddenly ill with pneumonia on the day before the wedding was to come off, and it had to be postponed. For nearly two months he lay in a critical condition. Miss Howard attended him faithfully during his illness, but his love for her cooled after his recovery, and when pressed to name a date for the ceremony he announced that the match was broken off.

Through counsel she brought suit against Mr. Morris in the New Jersey Supreme Court for $20,000 damages for breach of promise. At the Sheriff's office it was said yesterday that Mr. Morris had settled the suit by paying the plaintiff $26,000.

MUST PAY THE CARPENTERS.

THE SUIT OF OF HABERLE AGAINST THE BABCOCK ESTATE.

This Suit Will Probably Result in Instituting Seventeen Others—The Jury Was Out But a Very Short Time.

A large crowd assembled in the city court rooms Tuesday and listened to a very interesting suit. Haberle, one of the eighteen carpenters who have been working on the Babcock building, was the plaintiff, and the Babcock estate the defefendant. The suit was to recover wages due to Haberle when he worked on the Babcock building from July 6th to August 27th.

The carpenters had been instructed by J. F. Hubbard, one of the executors of the estate, after Chandler, the contractor, had refused to pay them, to continue at work and they would receive their pay all right. They did so, but when the time came no money was forthcoming, and so the suit was brought to secure $7 .80. the amount due. Haberle's was to be a test case.

The suit was brought before Justice Newcorn and a jury of twelve men, consisting of H. Hand, G. W. Wood, C. M. Fine, James C. Totten, F. S. Bowman, L. P. Hoffman, James Miles, August Wolff, Calvin Neighbor, Samuel Moore, George Fisher and E. P. Baker.

Judge W. A. Coddington represented the tradesman and argued the case in a splendid manner. His remarks addressed to the jury were very forcible and were said by those present to be the best a Plainfield courtroom has heard for many a day.

He brought forward as his witnesses, three of the other carpenters, John Wyman, L. M. Dunavan and Andrew Mattis, who told their story very plainly.

Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh did not apparently have many arguments to bring forward, but those that he did have, he advanced in a strong speech.

The trial lasted from 10 o'clock in the morning until half past three in the afternoon, when Justice Newcorn charged the jury.

After fifteen minutes consultation they brought out a verdict of the full amount of damages for the plaintiff.

Plainfield, a Convention Town.

The Union County Sunday School Association will hold its fall convention at Plainfield on October 24th. A programme of unusual interest is in preparation.

Irving W. Larimore, physical director of Y. M. C.A., Des Moines, Iowa, says he can conscientiously recommend Chamberlain's Pain Balm to athletes, gymnasts, bicyclists, football players and the profession in general for bruises, sprains and dislocations; also for soreness and stiffness of the muscles. When applied before the parts become swollen it will effect a cure in one half the time usually required. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

A HANDICAP FIELD DAY SOON.

HIGH SCHOOL ATHLETES ARRANGE FOR SPORTING EVENTS.

The Events Will Be Held on October 12th, Open to High School Pupils Only—Athletic Association Elect Officers.

After waiting a week to allow the school to get running in regular order, the Plainfield High School Athletic Association met Tuesday afternoon for the first meeting in this term. The meeting was called to order by second Vice President Charles Noble, and in the absence of the regular secretary, Wilbur F. Cornwell was appointed to act in that capacity. The following officers were then elected: President, Volney F. Green; First Vice President, Wilbur F. Cornwell; Second Vice President, Chas. Noble; Third Vice President, Raymond Carroll; Fourth Vice President, George P. Smith; Secretary, Herbert Richardson; Treasurer, Walter Serrell.

The officers in the Bicycling Division were then elected as follows: Captain, Wilbur F. Cornwell; First Lieutenant Volney F. Green; Second Lieutenant, George Coard; Color Bearer, Lindsey Hillman; Bugler, Raymond A. McGee.

Mr. Cornwell then made a motion that a handicap field day be held on Saturday, October 12th, open to High School pupils only. The motion was then carried unanimously. It was next decided that a committee of five be appointed by the chairman to make arrangements for the field day, and to draw up a list of events to report to the society at a meeting next Tuesday. The committee appointed was as follows: Wilbur F. Cornwell, chairman; Henry Eggerding, Charles Noble, Charles Dolliver and Herbert Richardson.

A general discussion then followed on the field day, and it was thought best to charge ten cents admission to the Crescent Oval, if it could be secured at suitable terms. There will be no special prizes for each event, but a prize will probably be given for the all-round championship, while one of the members of the association will offer, it is expected, a banner to the class scoring the greatest number of points.

The meeting then adjourned until next Tuesday afternoon, when the committee of arrangements for the field day will make a report.

WILL TRY IT ON APPEAL.

What Craig A. Marsh Has to Say About the Haberle Case.

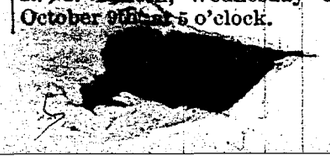
To the Editor of The Daily Press:—Referring to your Tuesday's report of the justice court case, Haberle against the executors of the Babcock estate, will you kindly permit a few observations in the interests of truth. There is no possible objection to the published statement that "Judge W. A. Coddington * * * * argued the case in a splendid manner," etc. Such a manner is always characteristic of the Judge and his arguments. But if you were led to believe that the jury heard witnesses on both sides, or that the executors themselves testified, or that these justice court proceedings settled anything finally, as for example that the Babcock executors "must pay the carpenters," etc., you were misled. The fact is that there were witnesses called on one side only.

When Judge Coddington finished with his witnesses, I advised the Babcock executors that Mr. Haberle had not made out a case, and that we were not required to swear our witnesses until he did; that the jury would probably give plaintiff a verdict (as they afterwards did), but that the whole case would be tried all over again anyway at Elizabeth, and it would be better to reserve our fire. The executors seemed willing to take my advice on a question of law, even though Judge Coddington and Justice did not agree with me. Having decided to take the case to a higher court, we did not call a single witness. The arguments before the jury were merely on the case as presented by the evidence of Mr. Haberle and his own witnesses. The appeal papers have been ordered, and there will be a complete new trial before Judge McCormick and a new jury.

If plaintiff and his witnesses do not make out a case in the higher court, that court will direct a verdict against him without requiring any evidence from the defendants. If, on the other hand, the plaintiff's evidence does make out a case, the witnesses for the executors will then be heard for the first time. Craig A. Marsh.

Coming Marriage.

Announcement is made of the approaching marriage of Miss Mary A. Ward, of Clinton avenue, to George J. Tobin, to take place at St. Mary's R. C. church, Wednesday evening, October 9th, at 5 o'clock.



A RUNAWAY'S MAD GALLOP.

W. J. TUNISON'S HORSE BREAKS UP TWO WAGONS IN A DAY.

Mr. Tunison Thought to Quiet the Animal by Hitching Him Up a Second Time, But It Was a Bad Undertaking

An excited horse made things rather lively in the streets of Plainfield Sunday afternoon by running away twice. One roadwagon was badly damaged and another partially so as the result of the two runaways.

The horse was the property of Watson J. Tunison, the flour and feed merchant, of Watchung avenue, and was being driven down LaGrande avenue towards Netherwood at about 3:30. The sewer contractors have been excavating at the intersection of LaGrande avenue and Franklin place and left only a small passage way for vehicles. The iron top of the man hole lay near by and when the horse saw it he began to shy toward the other side of the road, but on that side there was a man watering his grass, and the hiss of the water startled the animal who made a bolt for a large pile of dirt near by. Mr. Tunison tried to pull the horse into LaGrande avenue, but the animal would not be guided, and started down Franklin place. As the carriage swung around the corner the wheel struck the curb and was dished, throwing Mr. Tunison out of the carriage. The horse ran down to East Fifth street, and in front of the residence of J. P. Laire, ran his burden into a tree and completely smashed it. The harness gave way and the horse started down the sidewalk alone as far as Watchung avenue, and then turned into the street and ran to his stable on Sycamore street. There were several narrow escapes when the horse was galloping down the sidewalk. Two little girls, who were walking the same direction as the horse was going, stepped off the sidewalk just in time to escape the horse's hoofs.

Mr. Tunison, who was not seriously injured by his fall, walked to the stable and harnessed the horse to another road wagon. He started up Sycamore street towards East Seventh street, but the frightened animal was still excited and tried to bolt again. Mr. Tunison, seeing he could not stop the runaway, jumped out and left the horse and carriage to its fate. The animal ran into the yard of Mr. Yates and then turning about started for the little children that were gathered on the lawn in front of Grace P. E. church. There was a general rush for some point of safety, but the general screaming sent the runaway galloping along to West Seventh street, up which he ran to Plainfield avenue and followed that street to New Brooklyn, where a colored man named Scott, who had chased the flying animal all the way on his wheel, captured him and took him to Thompson's stable in that place. The mad course of the horse on West Seventh street was a sign for a general scattering of other teams and bicyclists. One colored man was chasing after the runaway, and tried to pass to one side, but the horse made a little turn and the rider struck a tree, knocking his machine out of all resemblance to a wheel. There were other numerous escapes of both wheelmen and carriages.

The Prettiest Hat.

It has been said that the prettiest girl of the family sits at the window the most, and the prettiest hats and bonnets in the town are to be seen in the windows of White's store. Today, the first day of the fall opening, was a grand success. Their milliner parlors were thronged all day with women who were perfectly delighted with the styles and trimmings of the hats and bonnets that Miss Daly took so much pleasure in showing them.

While in Chicago, Mr. Charles L Kahler, a prominent shoe merchant of Des Moines, Iowa, had quite a serious time of it. He took such a severe cold that he could hardly talk or navigate, but the prompt use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cured him of his cold so quickly that others at the hotel who had bad colds followed his example and half a dozen persons ordered it from the nearest drug store. They were profuse in their thanks to Mr. Kahler for telling them how to cure a bad cold so quickly. For sale at Reynolds's pharmrcy, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

IN SOMERSET COUNTY COURT

A NUMBER OF BOROUGH CASES ARE ON THE CALENDAR.

Several Men Who Will Face Serious Accusations Before the Grand Jury—Mr. Thorn's License to be Opposed.

The Somerset County Circuit Court opened at Somerville Tuesday, but no important business was transacted. There are several cases, both criminal and civil on the court calendar that are of interest to the people of this city and the borough. The first is that of Angelo Osniarti, an Italian, who is charged with highway robbery. Sometime ago a girl by the name of Wyckoff was knocked down in Washington Valley by an Italian, and her pocketbook taken from her. Osniarti was suspected, and was captured by Chief Marshal VanHorn at Smalley Brothers stone crusher, where he was in hiding. George W. DeMeza represents the Italian highwayman.

George Lewis, colored, is the next prisoner of interest on the criminal docket. The charge against him is grand larceny. Sometime ago some one went into several vacant houses on Fairview avenue that Woolston & Buckle were painting, and stole a quantity of brushes and paint. Inquiry was made and Mrs. Messrsmith, who resides near by, said that she saw a colored man answering to Lewis' description go out of the houses with the paint. Mr. Buckle had a search warrant issued and went with Chief Marshal VanHorn to search the premises of Lewis. Here they found a wagon freshly painted and on further search found a quantity of paint in cans on the roof. The different kinds had been mixed together, but Mr. Buckle was sure after investigation that they were the property of himself and partner. Lawyer George W. DeMeza, of this city, looks after the interests of Lewis in this case. Lewis has already served a term of ten years in prison.

Joseph Green and John Cahill appear for the same offence. Green was employed in Horace J. Martin's blacksmith shop and Cahill was another boroughite. One night the two men started for Washingtonville after drinking heavily. They were in for a good time and broke into houses, fired off their revolvers, and frightened the people in that vicinity half out of their wits. Those who objected to their treatment were promptly pounded into subjecion. At last Constable Stewart, of North Plainfield township, appeared on the scene, and the two men fled. Stewart captured Green at once, but Cahill escaped only to be captured later.

There are two civil cases of local interest. The first is Smalley vs. Bird, on contract, appealed from Justice Todd, of Bedminster. The other is Doud vs. Carpenter, on contract, appealed from Justice Sperry, of the borough. George W. DeMeza represents the plaintiff in both cases.

There is one matter which comes before the Court which is of great interest to the citizens of the borough and indicectly to those of Plainfield also. That is the granting of the license of Edward P. Thorn, who has applied for one to run a hotel on Somerset street in the Bock building. A number of the prominent citizens of the borough are opposed to a new license anywhere in the borough, and especially in that location. George W. De Meza has been retained by those who are fighting the license, and will make a strong fight against it when the question comes up a week from Friday.

A Neat Little Book.

The Union County Equal Rights Association has issued a neat little pamphlet for the purpose of advertising their coming series of lectures to be held in this city. It contains many appropriate selections from well known authors, several pretty poems, and a number of interesting sketches. Excellent half-tone pictures of Mrs. Florence Howe Hall and Mr. and Mrs. Aaron M. Powell are also printed, as well as a select list of substantial advertisements. The book is sold for ten cents.

To Be Married Tonight.

The marriage of Miss Annie Anguerbauer to Willard V. Sutton, will take place this evening at the bride's home on East Third street.

A. M. Bailey, a well-known citizen of Eugene, Oregon, says his wife has for years been troubled with chronic diarrhoea and used many remedies with little relief until she tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and diarrhoea Remedy, which has cured her sound and well. Give it a trial and you will be surprised at the prompt relief it affords. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

Hired the Outfit From Blair's Livery Stable, and Had a Narrow Escape From a Smashup, by a Train of Cars.

Two men, with a single horse and buggy, drove into Bound Brook yesterday morning, and tying the horse in front of a grocery store climbed out and disappeared. The men looked respectable, while the rig itself was a handsome one. The men did not return and in the afternoon the horse was led into Taylor's livery stable and the police began a search for the owner of the abandoned horse and buggy. Chief Grant, of this city, was notified, and after inquiring around among the different livery stables, learned that Adam C. Blair had rented a rig of that description to two men from Newark. Mr. Blair went down to Bound Brook last evening, recognized his horse and buggy, and brought them home.

While at Bound Brook Mr. Blair learned that he came very near being minus a horse and buggy. Just as the two men started to drive over the tracks a train went by, and those who saw the affair said that had the horse been an inch further on the track there would have been a smashup, and as it was the train whizzed by so close that it touched the horse's nose.

Both of the men who so strangely left the buggy are known in this city and have a very good reputation here. Their home is in Newark, and it is supposed that that they took the train for that place from Bound Brook.

BOROUGH APPEALS TO CITY.

Common Council Will be Asked to Have the Brook Cleaned.

At a special meeting of the borough board of health a few days ago a letter was written to the city common council in which it is sought to have the latter take some action with reference to the condition of the brook, which the people residing near have come to think is a menace to their continued good health. Last year the borough board of health went to the expense of having the stream thoroughly cleaned and now they think that it is the city's duty to do the same, inasmuch as the pollution comes entirely from the sewage which flows from the city side. The borough board endeavored to get the city board of health to take some action with reference to the matter two month ago, but failed in this direction.

Councilman Frost made an examination of the brook this morning and said that there was but little doubt that it needed cleaning badly, and that the council would probably take the necessary steps at its next meeting, which will be held on Monday night of next week.

The method of cleaning last year was to tear up all the weeds which filled the channel, and then flush it with fire hose until thoroughly cleaned.

IDEAL BICYCLE COSTUMES.

Exhibits That Will Interest and Delight Women.

Another American woman becomes an inventor and has scored a hit. She is Mrs. Ida M. Rew, writer and lecturer upon classic subjects, and a philanthropist and dress reformer, who has given up the best years of her life to the study of the woman question. Mrs. Rew's costume is very different from nearly all advanced bicycle suits. It has the skirt and not the trouser effect. It looks refined, elegant and womanly. One hour before and after Mrs. Hunder's lecture Tuesday, October 1st, Mrs. Rew will be pleased to show her athletic costumes in a dressing room connected with the lecture room at the Y. M. C. A. She will also exhibit ideal dress designs on October 1st and October 8th, before and after Miss Slocum's lecture.

A Trip Through Europe.

A trip through Europe affords countless interesting sights to the thinking observer and each traveler has a different story of what they saw and heard. Rev. W. C. O'Donnell will speak on what he saw and heard during his trip abroad, at Monroe Avenue chapel, Friday evening at eight o'clock. The lecture is under the auspices of the Young Men's Association of the chapel and promises to be very enjoyable as Rev. Mr. O'Donnell is an interesting speaker as well as a careful observer.

A DOUBLE QUARTETTE.

EIGHT CULPRITS APPEAR BEFORE JUDGE CODDINGTON TODAY.

The warm weather of the last two days has seemed to have its effect on the liquor drinkers of this city, for Monday four drunks appeared before Judge Coddington, and this morning four more were present in the city court.

The first of yesterday's batch was John Morrisey, who paid a fine of $3 for his fun Saturday evening. Charles Callahan and Thomas Hammel drank a little too much Saturday evening and engaged in a friendly bout on East Front street about eight o'clock. The scrap began to get rather serious when Officer Cooney and Special Officer Carney appeared on the scene and quickly parsuaded the combatants that the lockup was the best place for them. The next morning they each paid a fine of $10 for their scrap. The last of Sunday's offenders was Johanna Haley, who had been staying at the home of Frank Hollenbeck, of North avenue. She was drunk and became so abusive that an officer was called and she was taken to jail. Judge Coddington gave her the choice between a fine of $20 or sixty day with Sheriff Kyte at Elizabeth. She had not the funds, so she was sent to visit the Sheriff.

The first to come before the Judge this morning were two Italians, Jose Sullivan and Vito Boyinno, who were acting in a rather hilarious manner near their camp at Netherwood yesterday evening. They paid their fines of $3 and departed.

Michael Donco was charged with being drunk on the street yesterday and was left to decide between a fine of $10 or thirty days imprisonment at Elizabeth. The last of today's batch was Richard Caldwell. He had been making Liberty street rather lively Monday and his fun cost him $10.

Murderers May Not Be Executed.

The preliminary arrangements towards carrying the case of the two Italian murderers, Joseph A. Ragic and Anello Spina, to the Supreme Court, have been made by George S. Silzer, their counsel of New Brunswick. He has prepared the testimony taken in the two trials and will present it to Chancellor McGill at an early date for his consideration. In case the Chancellor grants the writ of error it will act as a stay and the execution of the two men will be delayed until the Supreme Court gives its decision.

Frightened At a Match.

A runaway took place at Scotch Plains Sunday evening, but luckily no one was injured. Louis Frentz had been out riding with his wife and had just taken her home. He struck a match to light a cigar when the horse jumped forward and sent Mr. Frentz flying out of the carriage. The horse then ran up to the mountain where he was captured by a friend.

An Invitation.

I. H. Boehm extends a cordial invitation to the lovers of fine millinery to attend the fall opening of the prettiest line of trimmed and untrimmed hats ever shown in seasons gone by. One glance into the large show windows will uphold us in our statement. Opening days, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

Temperance at Garwood.

The temperance meetings that are held every Sunday afternoon at Garwood are largely attended by Plainfielders. George Watts, of this city, has charge of the music. Next Sunday afternoon there will be a special open-air meeting, and a cordial invitation is extended to all.

A Professorship in Yale.

Dr. Charles Sears Baldwin who spent his boyhood in Plainfield and graduated at Columbia College, New York, receiving later the degree of Doctor of Philosophy, has resigned his position as Professor of English Literature in Columbia College and has accepted a professorship in Yale College.

John G. Manger Editor of the Sunbeam, Seligman, Mo., who named Grover Cleveland for the Presidency in November 1882, while he was Mayor of Buffalo, N. Y., is enthusiastic in his praise of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. He says: "I have used it for the past five years and consider it the best preparation of the kind in the market. It is as staple as sugar and coffee in this section. It is an article of merit and should be used in every household. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

BALLOONS IN WARFARE.

It Behooves Uncle Sam to Hump Himself, as Have Other Nations.

Uncle Sam will soon be forced to consider seriously the establishment of a balloon corps as an adjunct of the army. This country is sadly behind in the development of aeronautics, while England, Germany, and especially France have been giving much attenlion to the subject, though their experiments have been veiled as far as possible. Within a year the French have produced a balloon that can be steered and maneuvered in the teeth of a wind blowing twenty miles an hour.

In truth, the most important problem in aerostation has been solved, and the dirigible balloon is now an accomplished fact. Cigar shaped airships have recently been run by propellers in France on calm days at fourteen miles an hour, and there is no doubt that double that speed can be attained.

The Germans are said to have produced a balloon that can be steered and which carries great weights; but little is known about it. The supposition that atmospheric air is too tenuous a medium for propelling fans to act upon is exploded, while it is certain that a rudder will operate to direct the aerial machine if the latter can be driven fast enough to give it steerage way.

The notion that an airship sustained by gas is not to be relied on is another fallacy. Experts in Europe now understand how to make balloons tight, so that leakage is reduced to almost nothing.

When one has a gas bag of gold beater's skin that will stay afloat thirty days he has something with which to begin business.

If half a dozen aerial batteries of four balloons each were stationed along the Atlantic cost no hostile fleet could come near our seaboard cities. The vessels could be sunk by dropping nitro-glycerine cartridges upon them.

Dr. Myers, the aeronautic engineer, speaks of experiments in killing ducks in water by dropping shot from an elevation of 1,500 feet. Falling so far, the velocity of the leaden pellet was as great as if fired from a gun.

Air current at a high elevation always move from west to east. Having wiped out the ship, it would be necessary for the flying battery to return in the face of the wind, but this could be accomplished very easily by using the propellers.

Uncle Sam has been thinking of putting more than $20,000,000 into coast and harbor defences for the Atlantic shore line. To keep these in order would require an expenditure of millions of dollars annually, without considering that the entire system would have to be remodeled every few years. Aerial batteries as here described would cost comparatively little at the beginning and could probably be maintained for $1,000 each per annum. Of course, a long course of experiments would be required. Meanwhile, if England should come down upon our cities with a flock of balloons from Montreal we would be obliged to sue for peace on any terms.

Against balloons no armed force on land or water could have any means of defense or retaliation. The warriors in an air ship would be absolutely safe at an elevation of a little more than a mile. Owing to the force of gravity, no shot that can be fired from any gun will do damage beyond 6,000 feet above the surface of the earth.

If a balloon were within, say, 1,500 feet of the ground, and passing away, the line of sight would change so slowly that sharpshooters could easily pepper it with accuracy; but even so the balloon would not suffer importantly. Though pierced by a score, or even 100 bullet holes, its bouyancy would not seriously be affected.

A rifle bullet puncturing a great gas bag would make a small hole only, which would be partly closed again by the broken edges of the fabric. Some gas would escape, but not enough to be of any consequence. But there would be no reason for passing over a hostile fleet or army at so low an elevation, as a bomb could be dropped as accurately from a point high enough to be out of reach. Beside, the instant that a bomb would be thrown the balloon would rise rapidly.

At night or in a fog it would be entirely safe from observation. Or it would be easy enough for the airship to come down into the lower part of the cloud, whence the crew could see the enemy below while invisible.

These are the most important conclusions obtained from experiments recently made by foreign powers. During the siege of Paris balloons were sent up in large numbers from the city, gassing over the besieging armies. The aeronauts took homing pigeons which carried back news. These balloons were constantly fired at, and Krupp, the gunmaker, at the request of Von Moltke, designed a balloon musket. This sort of rifle practice proved wholly ineffective, and only those balloons were captured which were low down through expended gas.

GRANDMOTHERS ENTERTAIN.

A NOVEL ENTERTAINMENT AT MONROE AVENUE CHAPEL.

Larger Crowd of Visitors Than Expected—Some Had to Go Hungry—The Programme and Those Who Arranged It.

It is a very pleasant sensation to the promotors of an entertainment when there is a larger attendance than was expected and so it must have been to those in charge of the grandmothers' tea at Monroe chapel Wednesday evening when the crowd gradually grew until the plentiful supply of refreshments had disappeared and still loud rang the cry for more.

Supper was served early in the evening in the church parlors and after all was gone the crowd moved to the main room of the chapel to enjoy the varied programme provided. Then the grandmothers, in old-fashioned white caps and aprons, gathered from their tasks at kitchen, dining room and fancy table and opened the entertainment with "Auld Lang Syne." A medley was next rendered on the piano by Stephen Haff, after which Miss Alice Pugh gave a recitation entitled "Grandma's Spectacles." "Grandma and Grandpa" were represented in a tableau by Mary and Aaron Brouwer, dressed in appropriate costumes.

The recitation, "A Boy's Opinion of Grandmas" was amusingly given by Clarence Van Doren, and was followed by a duet, "Grandmother's Easy Chair," by Mary and Aaron Brouwer. Miss Lulu Randolph recited "When Grandma Was a Little Girl" and then Miss Sadie Elliot sang "Old Oaken Bucket" in a manner that charmed all her hearers and brought forth hearty applause. "Gossips" was another tableaux by the grandmothers. The vocal solo, "Coming Thro' the Rye," was delightfully rendered by Mrs. James Rogers. The next number on the programme was a reading from Carleton by J. R. Joy, after which followed the tableaux. "Aunt Sally Plunkitt," represented by Mrs. LaRue. Another selection by Mrs. Rogers and a reading by Mrs. Haff were followed by the principal part of the programme, a dialogue entitled "City and Country Hospitality." Walter McGee and Miss Charlotte Aldrich played the county uncle and aunt in a most successful manner, while their city neice and nephew were represented by Miss Georgie Beekman and Blanchard Randolph. It was the old story of the hearty welcome at the country home and the cold shoulder turned when the country relatives paid a return visit.

The parts were all excellently acted, and the audience were kept in roars of laughter especially by the actions of the country couple. The programme closed with "Home, Sweet Home," sung by the grandmothers.

The entertainment was arranged by the following committee: Mrs. Hayes, Mrs. A. S. Brouwer, Miss Mary E. Brouwer, and Mrs. Henry Pugh, and all deserve great credit for the splendid programme furnished.

The entire affair was given by the Ladies Aid Society of the church of which Mrs. La Rue is president. The supper was served by some of the members, including Mrs. A. D. Pierson, Mrs. Theodore Van Pelt, Mrs. E. E. Brown, Miss Emily Haff, Miss Lottie Aldrich, Mrs. W. J. Eakins, and Mrs. James Rogers, while Mrs. La Rue, as Aunt Sally Plunkett, sat at the head of the table and poured the tea. The kitchen was under the supervision of Mrs. Henry Pugh, Mrs. Wenzel, and Mrs. L. G. Fulton. Miss Stafford acted as cashier. The fancy table was under the charge of Mrs. Stephen Haff and Mrs. William C. Burt.

MADE A MISTAKE.

Y. M. C. A. Cyclists Go to a Festival and Find a Prayer Meeting.

The recent rains left the roads in fine condition for wheeling and made last evening an ideal one for a run. The Y. M. C. A. cyclers took advantage of it and rode down to Springfield under the command of Captain T. A. Cuming.

When passing the little schoolhouse at Locust Grove some of the boys noticed a number of people going there carrying bundles. The general census of opinion was that a peach festival was to be held and it was decided unanimously that a halt should be called there on the return. The thought of delicious peaches and ice cream inspired the cyclists and they flew along at a lively pace. When the schoolhouse was again reached they dismounted and all anticipation entered the building to find to their amazement a prayer meeting in progress. During the service Rev. D. A. McPhie told the reason of their visit and a general laugh followed. When the meeting broke up the cyclists started forth again without the wished-for peaches or cream.

In a letter published in the New York World this morning Attorney-General John P. Stockton says that he is not a candidpte for Governor and could not accept the honor if he was nominated.

DUPED THE HOUSEWIVES.

Sharpers Who Worked Unsuspecting People of Aldene.

Three Aldene ladies were victimized on Saturday last by two men with a prize package racket. The scheme was the old one of putting money in envelopes in a box, which were drawn out at so much a chance. The victims of the sharpers were Mrs. Stryker, Mrs. Penny and another lady whose name could not be learned. The method pursued by the fakirs was extremely bold, and their success was doubtless due mainly to their audacity. Bills of different denominations, consisting of twenties, fifties and hundreds, were apparently placed in the envelopes right under the eyes of the victims. When an envelope was drawn out the sharper would take it, seal it, and leave it with his victim, saying they would call in the afternoon and open it. Each paid $10 for the privilege of drawing, and one of the victims was so thoroughly deceived that she borrowed the money to pay for a chance. The ladies were happy in the thought that they had drawn valuable prizes until the confidence men failed to show up in the afternoon, when a suspicion that all was not right induced them to open the envelopes. Inexplicable as it may seem, they were greatly disgusted when they discovered the envelopes to contain neat, clean pieces of white paper instead of filthy lucre. The sharpers also failed to pay for the carriage which they hired from N. L. Bonnell. They took a boy with them to drive, and late in the afternoon they got out near the racetrack and told the boy to take the rig to the stable, saying they would return shortly to pay for it. This was the last heard of them.—Elizabeth Journal.

EXEMPTS WELCOME BACK.

President Saltzman Entertained by Old Fire Fighters.

President Auguste Saltzman, of the Exempt Fireman's Association, can't complain that he was not heartily welcomed back by his brother exempts last evening. About sixty of the members gathered at the rooms during the evening to attend the social and smoker given in honor of his return from Europe. Vice-President J. E. Flannery presided. The address of welcome to the returned president was made by Alexander Titsworth, whose interesting remarks were happily replied to by President Saltzman.

Chief Engineer T. O. Doane spoke of the past in a few words, and L. E. Barkalew was entertaining in his old reminiscences of the first fire company in Plainfield.

D. W. Littell made a short speech on the old times. H. N. Spencer added a few words of his experiences, Abner Bartlett, of Alert Hose Company, spoke welcoming words for his company, while Charles J. Newman, foreman of No. 2 Engine, and William T. Newman, foreman of Gazelle Engine, also made a few remarks.

Secretary G. Thorn read an original humorous story which brought down the house. Vice-president J. E. Flannery gave a vocal selection. Among the other speakers of the evening were Frank Marcieles, of Elizabeth, Assistant Chief Engineer James Martin, Edward Nelson, Frank Schuck, J. E. Waters and John Sheppard.

SOME GOOD KICKERS.

A Football Enthusiast Wants the Y. M. C. A. to Have a Crack Team.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—I notice in a recent issue of your paper that the Y. M. C. A. of this and adjoining cities have formed a football league. This city has never had a good representative team—why can we not have one now? This team, I understand, is to be formed exclusively from the Y. M. C. A. who only have among their members a very few who can claim to be among the representative players.

Why not make it an object for other players to join the association that we may have a really good team? Then there is the matter of "coaches." Why not get some such men as Louis Waring, Walter Stuart or Louis Darling, who have a good knowledge of the game. Lou Darling is the best fullback in these parts and his fine kicking, especially "drops," would benefit the team immensely. Stuart is an old end-man and Waring is strong in the line. Why not get these three men, if possible, to coach the three departments? Enthusiast.

Want The Trolley.

The executive committee of the Board of Trade, of Elizabeth, is negotiating with a syndicate that has in view the extension of the East Jersey street horse-car line to Rahway and Summit, and the changing of the motive power to the trolley system. About $300,000 will be spent in the undertaking.

SAVED BY A HAIRBREADTH.

An Obstruction Struck by the Philadelphia and Reading Express—One Car Jumps the Tracks—The Details.

Passengers who were on the Philadelphia and Reading Express, which leaves Plainfield at 6:10 p. m., had a thrilling experience on Friday, and a miraculous escape from an appalling fatality which might have sent a large number of souls into eternity. The train, which is made up of a combination baggage and smoking car, two day coaches and a Pullman sleeper, is a fast one, and while running a mile a minute last evening between Cranford and Roselle, near Aldene, the pilot on the engine struck some obstacle on the track. The pilot was ripped into kindling wood, and the trucks of the combination car thrown off the track. The effect upon the passengers in this car was terrifying and the sudden jolting caused by the engineer bringing the train to a quick halt was equally as startling to the passengers in the other cars. Before the train could be stopped, however, another passenger train, going towards New York on the next track, whizzed by. The only thing that saved this train from running into the swaying, bumping combination car, was the guy chains which were attached to the second coach. It was a hairbreadth escape, and the astonished passengers as they emerged from the cars and were told the trouble, raised their eyes Heavenward and gave thanks that they had escaped as lucky as they did. The railroad ties for a quarter of a mile were gouged to a depth of several inches. After a delay of three-quarters of an hour the passengers were transferred to a local train and continued on their journey.

James T. Powers and P. M. Demarest, of this city, were passengers on the train.

GOLF COURSE ALMOST COMPLETED.

The Golf Committee of the Hillside Tennis Club Meets.

When the leaves begin to turn red and the evenings grow cooler then the golf season will begin in Plainfield, at least so the golf committee of the Hillside Tennis Club say. They held a meeting last evening and it was reported that the links would be completed by October 1st, after which time the members of the Hillside Club will have the privileges of one of the finest courses in this part of the country. Already the promise of golf has induced a number of young men to join the club, and within the next ten days a meeting of the club will be called to act upon the applications of others and to listen to the report of the golf committee.

The links, which are located between Central and Plainfield avenues, will be excellent ones when completed and the game promises to furnish an exciting and interesting pastime for both the young men and women of Plainfield.

The course will be the property of the Hillside Tennis Club and the members will have all the privileges of both tennis courts and golf links.

JUDGE CODDINGTON REPLIES.

Mr. Hetfield's "Little Boy" Was a Big Bulldozing Man.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—Permit me space in your valuable paper to correct the false and erroneous statements contained in the article published in last night's Courier-News over the signature of W. L. Hetfield.

In the first place, Joe Robinson who was arrested by Officer Kiely on Tuesday for peddling without a license, was not "a little boy" as stated in our friend's communication. He was a man taller than the robust officer who made the arrest. He said he was from Newark and admitted that he had peddled in this city without a license, and furthermore threatened to fix the man who made the charge against him. After considering the circumstances of the case I sentenced him to pay a fine of three dollars and in default of the payment thereof to be confined in the county jail for the term of ten days. At first the offender refused to pay his fine, but later when he saw the officer was about to take him to jail, he put his hand in his pocket, took out his money and paid his fine. Hence the man, whom our friend designates as "a little boy" did not go to jail nor have we ascertained that he continued to peddle in the city of Plainfield without a license.

The ordinance provides a penalty of ten dollars for any person or persons who carry on the business of peddler or hawker in the city of Plainfield without a license. The City Court does not make the ordinances. It is the duty of the Court to see that the law is enforced as justice requires. I presume the Common Council enacted the above ordinance for the purpose of protecting our local merchants and tradesmen. There are numerous licensed peddlers in the city of Plainfield, and I consider it extremely unjust to allow persons from other cities to come here and peddle without a license in the face of the peddlers who have paid for that privilege. If the ordinance provided no penalty, what protection would our local merchants, tradesmen and licensed peddlers have?

If Mr. Hetfield had first acquainted himself thoroughly with the facts and circumstances attending the case of which he speaks, I am satisfied he would have taken a different position.

Respectfully yours,
Wm. A. Coddington, City Judge.

High School Notes.

The industrious students who entered the High School building on Monday last were very agreeably surprised with the changes of both building and school calander. A day or so was spent in becoming acquainted with the new arrangements, but now everything is in running order and the pupils are doing good work.

Among the changes made are the putting of chapel exercises one period ahead, chapel now coming at twenty minutes after 8 instead of 9 o'clock.

Another change which has greatly pleased the members of the classes of '96, '97 and '98 is the moving of their classrooms from the second to the third floor, thus saving the climb upstairs every morning to the chapel.

On Monday morning of each week Mr. Travell will conduct the singing when especial attention will be given to the music in order, if possible, to improve the vocal abilities of the students.

Eat, Drink and Be Merry

Ethical teachers freely grant man's right to happiness. How can he enjoy life any better than by taking a day off at the Fair. Apart from the mere pleasure (and that's an important thing in this work-day world), there is much to learn at such an exposition that it actually pays a man to go to the Fair and acquire a liberal education. He will go home refreshed and recreated; he will have acquired new ideas and methods for his work, and he will have been broadened by running against new ideas. The unsuccessful farmer, merchant or artisan is the one who stays at home all the time and lives on a small stock of ideas until he is impoverished. This applies to the wife and children, too. Don't forget them, but bring them along for a day at the Fair.

September 30 to October 4 are the dates.

The New Reformatory.

The commissioners having charge of the building of the State Reformatory at Rahway will hold a meeting on Friday at the office of Thomas M. Gopsill in Jersey City to arrange for the advertising for proposals to do the work. The plans drawn by Architect J. R. Thomas, of New York, have been accepted by the commissioners, and the work of constructing the sewer which is to drain the grounds will be commenced next week, if possible. Mayor Daly, who is one of the the Commission, said that the printed stories about dissatisfaction among the commissioners over the site were false. City Surveyor Clark, of Rahway, will look after the preliminary work of surveying and staking out the site.

JOINED IN GRACE CHURCH.

DEPEW-PATTERSON NUPTIALS CELEBRATED LAST EVENING.

Church Prettily Decorated With Flowers, and Made Joyous With Wedding Music—Reception Afterwards—The Guests.

A simple, but very pretty wedding took place in the Grace P. E. church Thursday when Miss Louise Depew was married to Sturt Hayt Patterson. Potted palms filled the chancel and the church was elsewhere decorated with smilax and hydeangeas. At an early hour the guests began to arrive and at 7 o'clock the edifice was filled with relatives and friends.

Rev. Dr. E. M. Rodman officiated and Mrs. W. A. Freeman presided at the organ. A little after the appointed hour the surpliced choir marched down the centre aisle where they met the bridal party and then returned leading the procession and singing the well-known strains from Lohengrin.

The ushers were August W. Kleinecke, John Drayton, Edward K. Hayt, of Paterson, N. Y., Arthur Masters, of Philadelphia, and John Downer, of Newark. Following the ushers was the maid of honor Miss Ewing, of Philadelphia, cousin of the bride, wearing pink organdie with satin ribbons and carrying a bouquet of pink roses. Next came the bride leaning on the arm of her brother, R. Henry Depew. She was attired in a gown of white corded silk, trimmed with honitan lace and orange blossoms, with a tulle veil. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses. The orange blossoms and the lace were the same as worn by the bride's mother at her own wedding. At the chancel the bridal party were met by the groom and the the best man, the groom's brother, Edward James Patterson.

The ceremony was in the usual Episcopal form. After the church service there was a small gathering at the home of the bride's mother, at which only the immediate relatives and friends who came from a distance were present. Among out-of-town relatives were Mrs. Frank Depew and the Messrs. Depew, from Linden; the Misses Ewing, of Philadelphia; Mrs. D. Kleinecke, of Chicago; Edward K. Hayt, of Paterson, N. Y.; Miss Wheeler, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. George Hall, Jr., Mrs. J. K. Caldwell, Mrs. M. Jordan, of Philadelphia.

At an early hour the couple departed amid the best wishes and congratulations of their friends. Mr. and Mrs. Patterson will be at home Mondays after November first, at 346 Franklin place.

PINK AND GREEN WEDDING.

CHARMING NUPTIAL EVENT CELEBRATED AT DUNELLEN.

Marr age of Miss Mabel Burniston to Wm. Hamilton, Jr.—Ceremony Performed Under a Wedding Bell.—Names of Guests.

At the home of T.C. Bodine, in Dunellen, Thursday at four o'clock, took place a pretty home wedding. The contracting parties were Wm. Hamilton, Jr., of Hackensack, and Miss Mabel Burniston, of Dunellen. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Davis, of Elizabeth, an uncle of the bride, assisted by Rev. A. I. Martine, of the Presbyterian church in Dunellen. The bride was attired in white satin, with veil, and carried a bouquet of orange blossoms.

The prevailing tints in the decorations of the house were were green and pink. The ceremony was performed under an arch, in the centre of which was a miniature bell, making a very pretty altar. The bride was given away by her father.

The bridemaid was Miss Eva Bodine, and Mr. Barrett was best man. The ushers were John Curtis, of Kingston, and John Bollemus, of Newark.

As the time approached for the bride and groom to leave, the guests gathered in front to give them the proverbial lucky shower of rice, but the newly married couple endeavored to escape these congratulations by making an exit from the rear. They were observed, however, and the party gave chase and gave a great farewell for the honeymoon, which will be spent at Orange.

Among those invited were: Miss S. Gray, Miss C. Williams, Rev. A. I. Martine and wife, of Dunellen; Mrs. Hamilton, Mrs. Stryker, of Hackensack; Miss Myria Runyon, of Plainfield; Miss Howell, the Misses Stryker, of Somerville; Miss Young, of Trenton; Harold Tomlinson and wife, of Plainfield; Mr. and Mrs. Staats of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Davis, of Nyack; Mrs. Perlumes, of Newark.

MISS HOGARTY BRINGS SUIT.

She Denies Being Implicated in the Jailbreaking Conspiracy.

Miss Mamie Hogarty, of New Brunswick, has brought suit against Thomas Kelly, also of that city, to vindicate her good name. She was arrested upon the information furnished in an affidavit of Thomas Kelly, who alleged that Miss Hogarty assisted in smuggling the burglar saws into the jail. She was honorably discharged by William F. Harkins, City Recorder.

Peter F. Daly, counsel for Miss Hogarty, has characterized the girl's arrest as an outrage, and the charge against Kelly is made as a means of proving publicly that they were foundless, and restoring to the girl her former unblemished reputation. The charge against Kelly will go before the Grand Jury.

Kelly at present is in jail on two charges, one of being a suspicsous character, and the other for robbery. It is also alleged that he is connected with the jail-breaking conspicacy, being charged by the Prosecutor's office with being one of the conspirators.

THE STEAM ROLLER.

Its Weight is Sixteen Tons—Will Soon be Given a Trial.

The steam street roller, when in running order with coal, water, engineer, etc., will weigh sixteen tons. The roller will be steered by steam apparatus. There is one large roller on each side of the machine, between which is the boiler and engine. The rollers are so built that they can be fitted with large steel spikes, which are used to break the hard crust on the surface of the earth, after which the spikes are removed and the perfectly smooth rollers run over the ground. The cost of the roller was $2,990. John H. Porter has been engaged as engineer. As soon as a representative of the company that sold the machine arrives, the roller will be unloaded and given a trial, after which it will be put to work on streets sewered by Prout & Company.

Sentence Day in Union's Court.

In the Union County Court yesterday John Henry Moore, of Summit, was sentenced to six months in the Union county jail for making improper proposals to a little girl. Guiseppe Tossetchino, of Summit, got six months in the county jail for drawing a razor on a fellow countryman. Wm. Carr and Daniel O'Donovan, of Springfield, got six months for breaking and entering a barn in Clinton township to steal apples.

An Officer's Good Luck.

Ex-Police Sergeant Fred Hess, of Elizabeth, has just come into possession of a legacy of $12,000 by the death of a relative. Officer Hess purchased a plot of land with the money opposite the old General Scott mansion, on East Jersey street, and yesterday morning ground was broken for the erection of two fine houses on the land.

WALKED FOR A CAKE.

Revere House Waiters Had a Jolly Time Last Night.

A large attendance and beautiful weather made the first ball of the Revere House Social Club at the Central Hall last evening a great success. The crowd began to gather soon after eight o'clock and at twelve the new arrivals had increased in numbers until the floor was crowded with dancers. The great event of the evening was, of course, the cake walk. The cake was an immense affair, a triumph for the caterer with its highly decorated mound on top. There were eight couples that contested for it, who were as follows: R. Hopkins and Miss C. Perkins, J. Dunham and Miss R. Davis, J. Glouer and Miss McCarr, of Brooklyn, J. Washington and Mrs. Jennie Henderson, T. Thompson and Miss Georgie Armstrong, L. Peterson and Miss C. Jenkins, W. Wilson and Miss Florence Wilson, of New York. The last named couple won the cake after one of the most exciting walks Plainfield has seen. The judges in the contest were three white and three colored men, G. H. Amstrong, G. H. Armstrong, Jr., Geo. B. De Reve, J. Potter, A. Huff, and Howard Grobes.

Prof. Guttman's orchestra furnished the music. W. J. Davis was in charge of the sale of the tickets, while G. H. Henderson acted as floor manager.

A Bureau of Social Requirements.

"A Bureau of Social Requirements" is the sign on the doorway of a neat office in an uptown street in New York. The young woman who offers her services in this phraseology is able to take charge of any social function, from a dinner to the most elaborate evening entertainment; she engages the caterer, supervises the floral decorations, and, in fact, takes all care and responsibility from the hostess; and belonging as she does, in a fashionable set, she is qualified to do it all in the most approved manner.

Not every girl could take reverses so bravely nor turn her social knowledge and talents to such immediate and practical use. And here is just where character shows itself; having recognized the talent within ourselves, and found the opportunity to exercise it, we should make the most of that opportunity, and never stop to consider whether or not the work will degrade us in the eyes of our acquaintances. No good and honest work for which one is fitted is ever degrading; and when a woman really believes this she will succeed, and not before.—From "Opportunities for Women," in Demorest's Magazine for October.

Coming Attraction.

No more fascinating melodrama, or one with a better moral, has ever been presented than "The Silver King," which has for years been the sensation of London and New York. It has made fortunes for the authors and managers and has been laughed and cried at by millions of people. Carl A. Haswin, who, with his excellent company will be seen in this city in this great drama soon, is the sole owner of the American rights, and has played the leading role of Wilfred Denver over one thousand times in the United States and Canada. The entire play abounds in dramatic situations which this strong actor is abundantly equipped to present. The company which he has engaged to support him are all excellent actors and the production will be superb.

For a Better Road.

Chief Justice Beasley, of the New Jersey Supreme Court, has appointed P. Hampton Wyckoff, of New Brunswick; Mayor John G. Schenck, of Keyport, and Forman Taylor, of Colt's Neck, Monmouth county, as commissioners to condemn the three miles nearest to New Brunswick of the New Brunswick and Cranbury turnpike. The object of the condemnation is to compel the purchase of the road by the county and the making of it a public thoroughfare.

A Faithful Workman.

John Richter, who has for the last nine years served so faithfully as a shoemaker for the popular firm of Doane & Edsall, will on Monday set up an establishment of his own in the Manning building, where he will treat his customers as well as before. He will continue to do the repairing for Doane & Edsall.

Date Changed.

The ninth annual reunion of the twenty-eighth Regiment, New Jersey Volunteer Association, will be held at Washington, South River, and at the request of the members of Frank Lloyd Post, No. 79, who will entertain the regiment, the date has been changed from the twenty-eighth, to Thursday, the twenty-sixth of September.

"Black America," Nate Salsbury's spectacle of Southern life, will commence an engagement of two weeks at Madison Square Garden on Monday night, with matinees on Wednesdays and Saturdays. There are 300 Southern darkies employed in this entertainment. The exhibition is a representation of life in the Southern States, and it is put on in a realistic manner.

HART WAS TOO HILARIOUS.

AND HE WAS PROVIDED A COOLING PLACE IN THE LOCKUP.

But Before He Was Incarcerated He Gave Officer Totten a Lively Tussle—He Filled Up On Bug Juice.

A big, brawny countryman from over the mountains came Thursday to visit Plainfield. Like many of his brothers the first places of interest to visit were the saloons. His name was Frank Hart, or at least such was the name given by him at the police court. He went to the Farmer's Hotel on Somerset street in the afternoon and took just enough bug juice to make him feel like fighting, when he tried to clean out the hotel, and then he started toward Front street loudly proclaiming that "No cop in this town can put me in the lockup." He wandered up to Front street and was there seen by Officer Totten, who seeing that the man was creating a disturbance, arrested him. The man struggled and Totten was forced to throw him before he could get control. Then Hart promised to behave himself and the two started toward the jail, but they had hardly gone any distance before the countryman began to feel like fighting again and struck his captor.

Again the officer had to fight to reduce his prisoner to submissiveness and made an effort to get his handcuffs on the man. The drunken man was strong and the two rolled off the sidewalk and into a mud puddle in front of Schwed's clothing store. After a lively little scrap Officer Totten put the nippers on his prisoner and escorted him to jail.

This morning Hart was brought up before Judge Coddington on the charge of being drunk and disorderly, and was given his choice of paying a fine of $5 for his fun of yesterday afternoon, or taking twenty days in the county jail to think it over.

FOURTEEN WHEELS PARADE.

Bicycle Carnival at Bound Brook Not a Great Success.

The bicycle carnival at Bound Brook was postponed until last evening on account of muddy roads. And two Plainfield young men, Harry Fulper and Wyatt Barnes, who went there the other evening only to find no carnival, went again last evening. Although it was rather warm they started out in the afternoon on their wheels to go a rather roundabout way. They first went to Springfield, then to Elizabeth, Rahway, Metuchen, New Brunswick, and finished at Bound Brook at about five o'clock. Here they stopped to take dinner with a friend and then went out to see the bicycle carnival. They were greatly disappointed in it, however, for instead of the several hundred decorated wheels that they expected to see, there were twenty riders in all, of whom fourteen had their wheels decorated. Some of them were very pretty, though, while many of the decorations along the line of march were artistic.

The prettiest designs were a large crescent hung with Chinese lanterns and a little red school house made of canvas stretched on a frame inside of which was a lantern and the wheelman. Just as this design passed the Mansion House, the front wheel of the safety struck a stone and over went school house, wheel and wheelman. The lantern ignited the canvas but the school house was saved by the bystanders before the fire department could be called.

The crowd that attended the carnival was very large, wheels and carriages flocking there from all the neighboring towns. Fulper and Barnes came home on the train after all was over.

Conductor Flegley Hurt.

Conductor Flegley, of a Central Railroad freight train, was struck by an overhead bridge at Roselle Wednesday night while the train was in motion. He was knocked off the car and fell beside the track. He was badly cut on the head and bruised about the body, and after being attended by Dr. Pattet was removed to his home at Mauch Chunk.

Robbers at Cranford.

Thieves attempted to blow open the safes in the grocery store of J. C. Hummer and the postoffice at Cranford last night. The safe in Hummer's, after drilling, they found to be unlocked. The postoffice safe door was wrecked by the explosion, but they failed to gain an entrance. The robbers stole Mr. Irving's horse and buggy, which was found this morning tied to a post on the road near Newark.

Stereopticon Lecture.

Next Wednesday evening, in the Park Avenue Baptist church, Miss Ellie Potter, one of the workers in the Morning Star Mission House, New York, will give a stereopticon lecture illustrating the work in the slums. Miss Potter is a young woman of culture, who left a home of refinement and wealth, to engage in this work of self-denial. Public cordially invited.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Here's a good one which is floating around: "It is said that the King of Belgium is such an enthusiastic wheelman that he has issued an edict, to the effect that the new postage stamps shall be adorned with portraits of Houben and Protin, the famous professional bicycle riders."—American Wheelman.

"I don't look for any reduction in price for the high-grade wheels for next year," said a manufacturer yesterday. "We will have to pay more for our tubing and more for tires than we did this year, and good tubing in sufficient quantities will be hard to get. I believe that the average tubing on '95 models will be about one inch in diameter. I hear a great deal about 1¼-inch tubing, but I don't believe it will be general."

The telegraph and telephone poles are landmarks which are often of great aid to the bicyclist who is on a tour. The lines of wire usually skirt the main thoroughfares, and many journeys between fairly large centres of population can be made without danger of losing the way, if these poles are followed. This advice may seem superfluous to some old cyclists, but more than one novice has floundered into difficulties because he didn't know about it.

Death of Mrs. Voorhees.

Mrs. Voorhees, mother of Hon. Foster M. Voorhees, of Elizabeth, died at her home in Clinton last night. She has been an invalid for some years and at the time of the recent convention in Trenton her death was expected at any moment. Mrs. Voorhees was a faithful Christian, a devoted mother, and interested in all charitable work.

STRANGELY REUNITED.

Mr. Sammons and His Finger Get Together After Nearly 32 Years.

John Sammons is a responsible man, a good farmer, who stands high among his neighbors, and whose reliability has never been brought into question. He was a brave soldier of the Confederate army, and was one of those who participated in that bloody tragedy on the banks of Chickamauga Creek on the 18th of September, 1863.

During the hottest of the engagement Sammons found himself in an exposed position, with shot and shell playing high revel around him, and he sought such shelter as was afforded by a large oak tree which was in direct line of fire. While handling his piece a bullet struck his gunstock and cut off the two first joints of the forefinger of his right hand as clean as a knife would have done it.

The dismembered finger dropped among the leaves, and as he was more particular about saving the balance of his body than about rescuing as little a thing as a missing finger, he made the best of his way out of the fight, stanching his bleeding hand as best he could.

The war was fought to a finish and Sammons came back home and went to work, charging up his maimed hand to the losses of the Confederacy. Some time ago he decided to revisit the battlefield, which he had not seen in nearly thirty-two years, and so he betook himself to Chickamauga and started to stroll over the battlefield.

The tree where he stood when wounded occupied such a conspicuous position that he found little difficulty in locating it, with all the scars and knots on its rugged trunk caused by the flying missiles of death. Having found the tree he put himself in the same position in which he was standing when wounded, and then it occurred to him to look for the bones of his missing finger. Scratching around among the leaves, much to his astonishment, he found the bones where the finger had fallen, and they corresponded exactly with the finger he had lost. They had lain there undisturbed ever since that dread day, and it was with a strange feeling that he took them, and after establishing their identity to his perfect satisfaction, wrapped them up and took them away with him as a strange souvenir of his war-time experiences. Mr. Sammons has them in his possession now, and will preserve them as an evidence of the fact that he found them on the battlefield after the lapse of so many years.—Atlanta Constitution.

Gen. Grant in Japanese Eyes.

"In the spring of his sixteenth year he expressed a great thought to his father, and addressed him, saying: "I have in my mind the thought that, when four years from to-day have passed, I shall not be doing this kind of labor." The father, thinking it a strange thing, said: "Do you hate your father's hereditary trade? Do you hate to become a leather-maker, and spend your life thus? What profession, then, do you expect to adopt in future? Do you expect to go into the fields carrying a sickle and a hoe? Do you expect to buy and sell things in the market? Or do you fix your eyeballs upon books of 10,000 volumes, and desire to speculate reasons and promote moralities, and become a man of wide knowledge?" Gurando Kuen, replying to these questions, said: "To cultivate the fields and become a farmer is well, but to spend the whole life as a hireling is not well. To take a Soroban (counting machine) and become a merchant and gain profit is well, but along with it to make bad practice is not my desire. Contrary to all this, our ancestors in the war of independence of this country, sowed great merit, I hear. I also, entering a military school, will have to show my arm in the time of great things. O, Father Kuen, how is it?" The father being exceedingly glad, did as he would.

GREAT RAILROADING

A BRITISH TRAIN RUNS 540 MILES IN 512 MINUTES.

This is the Fastest for That Distance Ever Made, but It Doesn't Begin to Equal Our Record for Somewhat Shorter Runs. Our Own Remarkable Feats.

England is enjoying the spectacle of a great railroad speed contest between the roads that run from London to Aberdeen, Scotland. The contest has been on a month. The east route is eight miles shorter than the west route, and the west route, to get the travel, has been compelled to make up the difference in length by extra speed. Every time it did that the east route has chipped off another fifteen minutes, until the average speed got to be about fifty-two miles an hour. Then it was thought the limit was reached. The railroads have expended a mint of money and everybody was excited about it. The western system has succeeded in lowering the record for the 540-mile run more than an hour, having made it in twenty-eight minutes less than nine hours.

If these figures are correct, the trip of the new train is the fastest for that distance not only in England but in America, though it doesn't come anywhere near equaling the American record for shorter runs. The best long distance run in the country was made in 1891 over the New York Central. The train consisted of engine No. 870, weight 200,000 pounds; New York Central private car No. 247, weight 88,500 pounds; Wagner Palace Car Company's private car Traveler, weight 77,900 pounds, and Mariquita, weight 93,000 pounds—total weight of train, 230 tons, or 460,000 pounds, about equal in weight to an ordinary passenger train of five cars. The run from New York to Albany, 143 miles, which was made without a stop, occupied 140 minutes. The distance from Albany to Syracuse, 148 miles, was covered in 146 minutes, and that from Syracuse to East Buffalo, 146 miles, in 147 minutes and 34 seconds.

The change of engines at Albany required 3 minutes and 38 seconds, the change at Syracuse 2 minutes and 58 seconds, and a hot journal at Fairport occasioned a delay of 7 minutes and 50 seconds. The gross time of the trip from New York to East Buffalo—43 1-2 miles—was 439 1-2 minutes, including all stops, while the actual running time, exclusive of stops, was 425 minutes and 44 seconds for the 436 1-2 miles.

Changes of engines were made at Albany and Syracuse in the same manner as is done with all through passenger trains on the New York Central.

Between Yonkers and Oscawana the speed of the train varied from 65.7 to 68.24 miles an hour. Between Garrisons and Poughkeepsie the slowest mile was made at the rate of 63.49 miles an hour, and the fastest at the rate of 72 miles an hour. Between Rhinecliff and Hudson the rate varied from 63.32 to 71 miles an hour. The run of 143 miles between Albany and New York was made at the average rate of 62.11 miles an hour. Between Albany and Syracuse the train made part of the run at the rate of 69.72 miles an hour, and between Syracuse and Buffalo 72 miles an hour was the average for several miles.

The Empire State Express, which is the fastest regular long distance train in the world, has traveled once at the rate of 112 miles an hour for five miles and several times at the rate of 100 miles an hour for the same distance. The development of railroad speed has been remarkable in the last ten years. Ten years ago a mile a minute was next to lightning swiftness. A mile a minute is made daily now on several roads. The Empire State Express reels off mile after mile in 45 to 55 seconds. On the Jersey Central trains are run frequently at the rate of 87 and 90 miles an hour. A Sun reporter rode on a train from Plainfield to Jersey City, 23 miles, in 20 minutes, about a month ago.

There is no stretch of 540 miles in this country like the run from Euston Station to Aberdeen, therefore it is hard to make comparison. The longest runs in the world are between this city and San Francisco, a distance of 3,346 miles. The fastest time on this route was the Jarrett-Palmer special. In June, 1888, it made the remarkable time of 3 days 7 hours 39 minutes and 16 seconds. This is at the rate of 43 and a fraction miles an hour for the entire distance, and it included stops which in the aggregate amounted to several hours. The actual running rate was nearly 50 miles an hour.

This is the most remarkable run ever made in the world. No other train has approached it within five hours. Other remarkable runs over the same route are John W. Mackay and party, 4 days 12 hours and 54 minutes; James L. Flood and party, 4 days 12 hours and 37 minutes; Herman Oelrichs and party, four days 16 hours and 30 minutes, and Baron von Schroeder and party, 4 days 16 hours and 13 minutes. The New York and Chicago limited, a train weighing 515,700 pounds, has traveled the 440 miles between Buffalo and New York in 8 hours and 34 minutes.

The fastest short runs in this country are made between New York, Baltimore and Washington, on the Royal Blue Line. The 11:30 train has on several occasions made the 226 miles in 260 to 265 minutes, including stops. The Pennsylvania Railroad has run a 242,300-pound train from Jacksonville to Washington, a distance of 789 miles, in 15 hours 39 minutes, including thirty-four stops. This is at the rate of 53.29 miles an hour, and between New York and Washington in 4 hours and 1 minutes.—New York Sun.

RARE SWISS CATTLE.

Brought to Strengthen the Falling Jersey Breed.

While the cattle fanciers of this country have even gone to far-off India for the Brahmin cattle to use in making certain crosses for our Southwestern States, they have heretofore overlooked one of the finest breeds in the world, called the Simmenthal, from Simmen Valley, in the canton of Berne, Switzerland.

There are now at Garfield, N. J., fourteen head, eight cows and six bulls, of this breed, recently imported by Mr. Theodore Havemeyer for his model farm, "Mountain Side," at Mahwah, N. J. Here, in the heart of the Ramapo Mountains, for nearly twenty years Mr. Havemeyer has kept Jerseys.

It was his idea to raise a herd, bred on scientific ideas and handled in such a way that they would demonstrate to the farming world that pure-bred animals could be used profitably in dairying. When the present manager of the farm, Mr. John Meyer, Mr. Havemeyer's son-in-law, took charge some sixteen years ago, twenty head of Jerseys were imported. Not only were they carefully selected for their blood lines, but the greatest attention was given to their individuality; each animal must be a good producer of milk and butter to make a good return for the food consumed and the care given it. From this beginning there has been built up a herd of over 400 head. The Simmenthal cattle are to be used to cross with the Jerseys.

"I have had constantly brought to my attention," said Mr. Havemeyer, "the fact that owing to persistent inbreeding the stamina and health of the Jerseys were on a yearly decline, and from losses in our herd I found that if I wished to retain my dairy and furnish milk and butter on the lines that we have always used, to make each animal pay for the food consumed and the care given to it, that we must do something.

"The Jersey cow is the ideal butter cow with the exception of the matter of health. She has been pampered and petted until she is so nervous that the slightest thing puts her off her feed, but she will undoubtedly return, under favorable conditions, the largest amount of profit for the expense incurred. When the first suggestion of an out-cross came some four years ago Mr. Mayer spoke at once of the cattle of the Simmen Valley, in Switzerland, which he had seen in tramping over Switzerland. I kept hoping that by a more natural method of stabling I could maintain the Jerseys in good health. When I found this not to be the case, Mr. Mayer went to Europe last summer and made a careful study of these cattle. Through the courtesy of his friend, Col. Jean de Watteville, President of the Simmenthaler Breeders' Association, four hundred head, the pick of the breed, were selected; from this one hundred head were taken, and then the fourteen head that I have now were ultimately chosen.

"It is a wonder to me that so few people know anything about the Simmenthalers. Their butter is sold in Berne and in Paris, bringing about 60 cents a pound. The veal of their calves is the finest in the world. It is nearly all consumed at Berne. The farmers don't kill until they are four months old, when they will weigh about 200 pounds, rough weight, which is quite a difference from the Jerseys, which at that age will hardly come up to 150 pounds. The farmer in Switzerland who owns ten to twenty acres of pasture will keep four or five of these Simmenthaler cows, making from each cow 450 to 500 pounds of butter a year. These cows do all the work of the farmers, hauling out the manure and ploughing. They are very quick walkers and seem to be endowed with unusual intelligence. They are fed in the summer time hay from the celebrated mattens, and in the winter time a little bran, possibly a few oats. These cows will give milk and do all the work on the farm until they average about ten years old, when they are dried off and fattened for beef. The beef will bring five cents more a pound right in Berne than that of any other beef, and when scarce often goes up as high as ten cents more a pound. You can see where the profit will come to the farmer in this. The fat is beautifully distributed throughout the beef. Almost immediately after the birth of the calf the cow is put to work, and the calf is taken off and fed on grass and skimmed milk, and that is all it gets until it is big enough to work."

DUCKS THAT DON'T TAKE TO WATER

They Were Brought Up in Paris and Had Not Learned to Swim.

Hydrophobic ducks may seem a bit strange, but a writer in the Revue Scientifique tells of such.

These were not mad ducks, but merely ducks that hated what people have come to consider their natural element. They were three of them and they had lived some years in Paris, where they had a small basin and their daily bath. Their owner finally took them to the country to live beside a fine lake, thinking it the ideal place for the amphibious. What was his surprise, on putting them into the lake to see them instantly scramble ashore and waddle Indian file to a neighboring stable, whence they never came out save to feed.

Never could they be induced to remain in the water save by force or fear, and when there they always drew close together, so as not to occupy no more space than that of their bath basin at Paris. They were thoroughly afraid of the lake, and they never became used to it.

In Picardy, it seems, young ducks are often kept from the water in order to protect them from water rats, and prevent them from eating things that might injure their flavor when brought upon the table. Ducks thus brought up until their full growth of feathers is acquired refuse to enter the water, and if forced are sometimes drowned.

South Carolina now has three times as many cotton mills as it had four years ago. The capital to construct and operate them mostly comes from the north.

The aggregate of the employes of the railroads of this country is as large as the whole German army. Nine hundred thousand people work for the roads.

The New York World this morning publishes a large number of interviews with Democrats from all over the State, with whom Chancellor McGill seems to stand most favorable for the Democratic nomination for Governor.

The "practical joker" who sent in the false alarm from box 27 on Saturday night and gave the fire department a long run for nothing, is one of those fellows who will pay a large-sized fine to the city some of these days if he should persist in this sort of joking. Sensible people will not stand it.

A lawyer in a court room may call a man a liar, scoundrel, villain, or a thief and no one makes a complaint when court adjourns. If a newspaper prints such a reflection on a man's character, says an exchange, there is a libel suit or a dead editor. This is owing to the fact that the people believe what an editor says. What the lawyer says cuts no figure.

The strange statement is made by a Philadelphia newspaper that "the oyster seems to be following the example of the peach and only to be making money for the favored ones." The idea of an oyster following the example of a peach probably never had occurred to anybody before. Oysters were in the business of setting examples long before peaches were known.—Rochester Union.

It is announced that the Supreme Court of this State has rendered a decision to the effect that a property owner who has been notified to repair a defective sidewalk can be held responsible for any injury that may befall a pedestrian by reason of his neglect. This being so, damages may be collected of owners when anybody brings suit to recover broken limbs or other injuries.

People who know what percentage of verdicts for damages commonly goes to the lawyers who help to secure them, may be pardoned for venturing to think that a Judge of the United States Court does not err on the side of undue liberality when he thinks it necessary to reduce from $10,000 to to $7,000 a verdict for a woman whose husband has been killed, and from $10,000 to $6,000 a verdict in favor of a man who has been so injured as to be incapacitated for work.—Newark News.

It is said that the declaration of the Grand Army of the Republic at the Louisville encampment, that a pension is a "vested right," will soon be followed by a test case in a United States Court, brought for the purpose of procuring a judicial decision on that point. It will not be necessary to hunt very long for a foundation for such a suit, as there are multitudes of cases in which pensions have been cancelled or reduced. But those who institute it must be prepared for an unpleasant surprise, since it is quite possible that the Court may regard a pension as a gratuity, and as not bigger than the Government that grants it. Of course, it is not to be expected that the courts will hold that the granting of a pension bars the Government from showing that it was procured by fraud. What the people are concerned with is to interfere not with vested rights, but vested wrongs.—New York Sun.

The independent vote in this State is now about fifty or sixty thousand strong. Upon the last division which seemed to represent the normal strength of the two parties, there was an apparent difference of something under 10,000 in favor of the Democrats. The last election showed 46,000 Republican majority in the Assembly ticket and 48,000 in the Congressional. Thus the number of voters who are ready to change their political allegiance when they think it right, is up to the figures given above. The neccessity considering this vote should need no argument. If men were willing to change for one good season, they are probably willing to change again for equally good cause. The fact is that party obligations are no longer binding on citizens who have learned how little is to be gained for the public benefit by partisanship.—Newark Call.

The organized liquor dealers who want to go into politics in their business interest, realize that there are a great many men in the trade in New Jersey, but some of them appear to forget that there are a great many more who are out of it, says the Newark News.

Clapp & Company have the following this week on the financial outlook:

Prosperity is writ large without respect of class. It takes time to convert corn into meat and prospects into dividends. A silver statesman cannot be turned into a gold bug in a moment any more than can the silver certificates be converted into gold in large amounts. The lawyer that can win every case and the broker whose advice is always right, are yet to be born.

City Judge Coddington did a commendable act in holding police court last Sunday. There were four culprits locked up in this apology for a station-house, and while a little incarceration would doubtless do the most of them good, the fact that the thermometer was close to the 100 degree mark was ample reason that they should be given as speedy a hearing as possible. To lock a man up in one of the dingy, four by six, whitewashed cells, in this alleged station-house for two days without a hearing is almost atrocious, and especially when the weather was such as it was on Sunday. The police station is a disgrace to the city.

An invention has appeared which would seem to make possible the plan, rejected as impracticable by the Marine Congress at Washington, to establish ocean paths for all vessels. The invention consists of an electric steering indicator, and its introduction promises to have considerable influence on the art of navigation. The apparatus indicates constantly in all weathers the longitude, latitude and course of a vessel at sea, making its own correction for compass variations. If this invention should fulfill its promise one of its direct results will be that the trip of a fast steamer between New York and Liverpool will be shortened five or even ten hours, from the possibility of maintaining an absolutely straight course.—Electrical Student.

To run a train from Jersey City to Philadelphia on the Pennsylvania railroad ninety-four miles in ninety-eight minutes is not to break a record or score such a notable triumph in fast railroading as has been achieved on the English roads and the New York Central of late, but it is to give promise of new facilities for fast travel. The run, it is understood, is not a merely experimetal one, but had behind it a well-defined purpose to decrease the running time between the two great cities. With the extensive elevation of tracks that has been done on both the lines connecting New York and the Quaker City, with the powerful new engines that both have secured, and with the many improvements that have been made in the roads, it is possible that the day of ninety-minute trains from Jersey City to Philadelphia may not be very far in the future.—Newark News.

Municipal ownership of street railways and of electric railway and lighting plants is making steady progress in Great Britain. According to a letter in the New York Tribune Manchester, Oldham, Huddersfield, Bradford, Glasgow, Brighton, and other cities, have established electric lighting plants under municipal ownership and management. In Glasgow and Manchester this policy has been markedly successful. In Bradford a return of ten per cent. has been made to the town treasury upon the capital invested, after payments have been provided for the sinking fund. In many English and Scotch cities the municipal goverment retains control over the roadway, constructs and owns the tramway, and either operates it as a branch of the town service or leases it to the highest bidder with guarantees of remunerative rentals, low fares and satisfactory accommodation for the public. In Leeds, the town council purchased the property of the street car lines—horses, engines, cars and stations—for $650,000, and brought them under direct municipal management. The wages of the operatives were advanced, and their working hours were shortened. Fares were reduced, the rolling stock was improved, and the traffic enormously increased. There is a strong movement in rural communities for the construction of light or electric railways at the expense of ratepayers for the benefit of the farming classes, and Parliamentary legislation is eagerly awaited for that purpose.

THEY'RE ALL FOR THE UNION.

No Feeling of Sectionalism Embitter the Southern Mind.

The fourteenth annual encampment of the Commandery-in-Chief of the Sons of Veterans, held in Knoxville, Tenn., from September 16th to 19th, was probably the most successful on record. Southern hospitality was very much in evidence, making the visit of the Sons of Veterans one of real pleasure, so much so that the very urgent invitation from the citizens of Louisville to meet in that city next year was accepted.

The business of the encampment was quickly dispatched, allowing the visitors plenty of time to visit the city and various points of interest surrounding Knoxville.

Nearly every place in the city was gaily decked in red, white and blue and anyone who previously had ideas as to feelings of sectionalism quickly had them removed, for the true, warm hearts of the people in Knoxville was sufficient evidence for all. Never in the history of the order has such recognition been extended. On several occasions a number of the governors from various States attended the meetings of the encampment and receptions were held.

As a result of the encampment the coming year gives promise of being the most successful in the order.

A Christening.

A very pretty christening took place in St. Mary's church yesterday at three o'clock, when the young son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter McDonough, of 611 West Third street, was christened Francis Howard. Miss Margaret Kiely was the godmother and Michael Cullen, godfather. The ceremony was performed by Rev. P. E. Smith. After the christening the many relatives and friends of the family gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. McDonough, where a pleasant time was passed in singing, conversation and various other amusements, and at the same time wishing long life and prosperity to the young son.

Found Floating in Newark Bay.

A bundle was discovered Sunday evening floating in Newark Bay, near the Central Railroad bridge, Elizabeth. It was picked up, and on opening it the body of a male child about two months old was found inside. The body was badly decomposed, and Morgue-keeper Jensen said it had been in the water about two months. County Physician O'Rielly held a post-mortem yesterday to determine whether the child died by violence.

RALLYING IN THE HEAT.

SUNDAY-SCHOOLS GET READY FOR ACTIVE WORK FOR THE WINTER.

Musical Programmes and Other Instructive Exercises in the Crescent Avenue and Congregational Churches.

Sunday was rallying day of the Sunday-school of the Congregational church, but the warm weather kept kept many at home, and the attendance was not as large as it otherwise would have been. Those who did brave the extreme heat, however, attended a most enjoyable service, in which beautiful music played a prominent part. The exercises were held in the afternoon, and until next summer the Sunday-school will continue to meet at 2:45 o'clock.

The first selection was an instrumental trio rendered by Mrs. B. T. Barnes, organist, Mrs. M. E. Dwight, pianist, and P. Ludwig Conde, violinist, entitled "Prelude du Deluge," by Saint Saens and was excellently rendered. Another selection, "Harfin Arie," by Handel, was given by the trio during the services. There was also a solo by Miss M. G. Morse, entitled, "Do Ye Right and Fear Not," by J. R. Thomas. The address of the afternoon was made by Rev. C. E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church, and he talked about Sunday-schools. He told the use of Sunday-schols and how they originated. And spoke on what the teachers should do and what they should be. The ministers, he said, preach to the older people, while the Sunday-schools are especially for the young, and the children are easily influenced, and, therefore, what a responsible position, he said, that of the teacher is. He closed with a few words of exhortation to the scholars themselves, urging them to pay good attention, to listen carefully and to be eager to learn of God's Word.

The music for the singinging was furnished by Mrs. B. T. Barnes, organist, Mrs. M. E. Dwight, pianist, P. Ludwig Conde, violinist, and Lyman R. Allen, flageoletist. The singing was in charge of Horace J. Martin.

Notwithstanding the hot weather of Sunday afternoon the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church was crowded with bright and happy faces of both young and old people who had met to rally around the standard of the cross and to consecrate themselves to the work of the Sabbath school. The service commenced with a trio composed of Elmer Runyon, of this city, Miss Banta, and Mr. Charles Lewir, of New York City.

After the scripture reading and prayer by the superintendent the school and their friends listened to some cordial words of greeting from the pastor, William R. Richards, D. D. Miss Hardenbergh, of New York city, who is the alto of the choir, then favored the school with a selection. Staff Captain Edith Marshall, of the Salvation Army addressed the school with some very interesting words illustrative of the work of the army among the children who dwell in the filth and evil of the great cities. Miss Marshall told touching stories of the misery of the poor and gave many illustrations of the grand work the army is doing for the better in the slums in many of the great cities.

After a few remarks by Mr. Murray the school joined in singing the old hymn "Blest be the tie that binds." The school was then dismissed by Dr. Richards.

REFORMATORY PLANS ADOPTED.

Commission Meets and Decides Upon the Thomas Scheme.

The Rahway Reformatory Commission met in Jersey City Friday afternoon in the office of Commissioner Thomas M. Gopsill.

The plans for the buildings drawn by J. R. Thomas of New York, were adopted, and Mr. Thomas was instructed to draw up the specifications and advertise for proposals. The Engineer, W. E. Clark, of Rahway, was directed to advertise specifications for the sewer.

The northwest wing of the Reformatory will be built this winter. Ground will be the middle of next month. Work on the sewer will commence as soon as possible after the bids are received.

The Governor and all of the Commissioner say that the Rahway site is proper one for the New Jersey State Reformatory, as it has every natural advantage, and is so centrally located.

Prominent Hebrew Dead.

Abraham B. Wasser, one of the most prominent Hebrew residents of Elizabeth, dropped dead yesterday afternoon when visiting at the home of a neighbor, Jacob Levi. Wasser lived at 68 South Fifth street. For several years he had been a sufferer from rheumatism, and had been unable to attend to business. Yesterday afternoon he met several of his friends at Levi's home, and was relating a story when he suddenly threw up his hands and fell to the floor. He died almost instantly. The rheumatism had reached his heart.

HOW TO EAT.

Everyone Can Do This But, Not Always the Right Way.

Horace Mann once said that "the lecture platform was the People's College." The great educator recognized the place that lectures have in education and character building. There are great advantages in receiving oral instruction. Perhaps it arises from the fact that there is one faculty less called into play. It is more interesting to attend a lecture than to read an account of it afterward, for as someone has said "There are some things which are entirely independent of the one who talks on the platform, we have the stimulus of intellectual companionship." The attention of the readers of The Press is called to the list of lectures advertised in another column, and especially to the first one by Mrs. Hudders. The importance of "What to eat and how to eat it" is a matter paid too little attention to by most people. Good health is largely due to the selection of foods which best supply the various principles needed. Hence Mrs. Hudders' analysis of various common articles of diet cannot fail to be interesting to all who attend her talk on Oct. 1st.

Next Time the Dog Goes Along.

While Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Blackford, of Grove street, were at Atlantic City last week they left at their home a pet dog which a neighbor kindly fed and watered. The dog was locked in the house every evening, and as the party who looked after him only went as far as the back door, his dogship had a big surprise for his owners upon their return. The mail for Mr. Blackford, which the postman dropped in the front door and fell into the hall, containing two checks, besides several letters, were chewed and torn into bits, and a lace curtain, rugs, and, in fact almost everything within his reach was ruined.

Wedding Bells.

A very pretty wedding took place Saturday afternoon at 5 o'clock at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. G. S. Martin, 617 LaGrande avenue, when Miss Mary C. Sutphen was united in marriage to John C. Hafner, by Rev. J. W. Richardson, of the Park Avenue Baptist church. Miss Fredrika Hafner, sister of the groom, was bridemaid, and G. S. Martin, brother-in-law of the bride, was best man. Only the immediate relatives of the contracting parties were present. Mr. and Mrs. Hafner will reside in this city.

AN EVENING OF STORY TELLING.

D. E. Titsworth Entertains His Masculine Friends With Music, Etc.

A very enjoyable stag party was given Saturday evening by David E. Titsworth at the residence of Charles Potter, of West Seventh street. Mrs. D. E. Titsworth entertained the men with vocal and instrumental music, while Mr. Titsworth also sang several selections. A dainty supper was served at about 9:30 o'clock, and the evening was spent very enjoyably by all. Story telling was one of the features of the evening's fun, and each tried to excel his neighbor in yarns. There were fish stories, Jew stories, Irish stories, Negro stories and stories on every subject. Mr. Titsworth was especially entertaining in his dialect stories.

Among those present were Frederick Dunham, Frank H. Hartwell, Asa Randolph, Robert Randolph, Henry M. Maxson, Charles Randolph, Frank Randolph, Arthur J. Spicer, Sydney R. Titsworth, Clarence Rogers, Nathan Lewis, Wm. M. Stillman, George Wooden, Frank J. Hubbard, Marc L. Clawson, Charles P. Titsworth.

ODD LADIES GIVE A SOCIAL.

Opened With a Literary and Musical Programme and Closed With Dancing.

Mizpah Lodge, No. 1, U. O. of I. O. L., celebrated their seventh anniversary in Red Men's Hall last evening, at which time a large audience was present.

A most creditable entertainment opened the exercises and consisted of a piano solo by Miss Ada Nash; instrumental duet by Henry and Harry Jessup; vocal solo by Mrs. William Westphal; dialogue, "Mrs. Bixon's Victory;" vocal duet, Miss Ada Westphal and Miss Mamie Richards and a piano solo, by Miss Cartwright. Mrs. Theodore Kurzhals, Sr., was in charge and introduced the several numbers.

At the conclusion of the entertainment the balance of the evening was devoted to dancing, the music for which was furnished by Frazee.

The committee who had charge of the affair consisted of Mrs. Snyder, Mrs. Demarest, Mrs. Terry and Mrs. Weigmann.

About midnight all retired to the banquet hall and enjoyed an excellent supper.

One Rider Has Tried It.

South Second street, west of Grant avenue, is in very poor condition, especially for cyclers. In one place, in the centre of the road, there is a hole which promises to do up the first wheelman that does not notice it at night. There is a sudden drop of about six inches and then a sudden rise. Wheelmen should look out for it when riding there at night.

THE BAND WILL PLAY NO MORE

LAST PUBLIC OPEN-AIR CONCERT HELD SATURDAY NIGHT.

A Great Crowd Thronged All the Streets About Franklin Square—Few Decorations —All Anxious to Have Them Next Year.

By far the largest crowd that has attended any of the open air concerts thronged about the intersection of LaGrande, Watchung, and Crescent avenues Saturday evening to listen to the last of the series of open air concerts, which Councilman Frost has been entertaining the residents of the Second ward and incidently furnishing an evening of pleasure to the whole city. The high temperature reminded everyone that the heat of summer was not quite over, and in consequence, white dresses and summer suits were in the majority. The edges of all the streets surrounding the square were two and three deep with spectators, while the uneasy ones circulated around the sidewalks and kept up a continual movement about the square. The streets leading to the square had their share of people who leaned against trees or sat on the piles of sewer pipe that were present in some places.

And everybody was there, from the Boulevard girl and her beau, to the daintily arrayed maiden of society and the accompanying swell in white duck pants and stiff shirt and collar. The piazzas of the surrounding residences were thronged with friends who preferred to sit and swelter than stand up and do it. There were old grey headed men in the crowd and little children too, while even a few babies were present. Altogether Plainfield turned out as she never did before, and if those who came Saturday evening have anything to say about it, the open air concert will be an assured thing next summer.

The decorations were not at all prominent, Dr. E. W. Hedges being the only one that decorated to any extent, but that may be accounted for by the fact that notice that the concert would be held in the square was only given two days beforehand.

Shortly after eight o'clock an incident occurred that caused quite a little excitement for a few moments. During the intermission between two of the selections the sound of the fire-alarm started the assemblage. There was a general hush when the whistle first blew two and stopped. Then followed seven, and most of the men and boys in the crowd made a mad rush up Watchung avenue in the direction of box 27, which is located at the corner of Watchung and Kensington avenues.

All was excitement and that was heightened when No. 1 engine rounded the corner from La Grande avenue into Watchung avenue, with its horses on a gallop. The running men and horses and the loud clang of the warning bells on the fire apparatus made the scene a wierd one.

The selections were all well rendered, while "The Forge in the Forest" brought forth loud applause and was rendered again. A special feature in this selection was the burning of red fire. These concerts have taught the people of Plainfield that they have a band which they may be proud of. And Plainfield may also learn from the concerts that she has some public-spirited citizens.

The Daily Press learns from a number of residents that they would gladly subscribe for a series of concerts next seasan.

ANNIE BEEKMAN'S HAT FOUND.

The Case Against Johnson Thought to Have Been Strengthened.

The sailor hat which Annie Beekman wore last Saturday night week was found Thursday by some boys in a clump of bushes east of the river bridge at Somerville, a quarter of a mile from the scene of her murder.

Detective Barcalow thinks that the finding of the hat in that place is a very important clue, indicating that the murderer retraced his steps to the main road and crossed the bridge. This would naturally strengthen the case against Johnson, who would go to his home that way. The pocketbook is still missing, but the officers think they are in a fair way to get it.

Around the World on a Tricycle.

John B. Thomas, a cripple, who claims to be on a trip around the work on a wager, passed through this city Saturday afternoon. By the terms of the wager he is compelled to propel himself all the way, except when it is necessary to use a vessel, on an odd little three-wheeled tricycle which he uses to get over the ground. He expects to finish his trip in 1897 and have made $200 on the way, besides paying his expenses and accepting no gifts. From Plainfield he went to Newark and then to New York, where he will sail next week for Europe.

The Fifth Anniversary.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the South Plainfield Baptist church will hold its fifth anniversary on next Sunday evening at 7:30. An invitation has been extended to all the societies of this city.

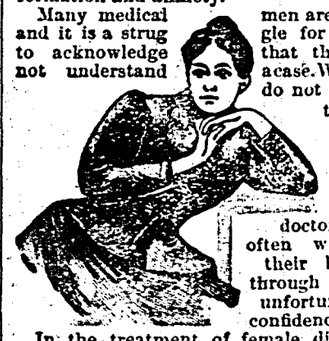
MANY WOMEN SUFFER

FROM LACK OF INFORMATION.

Doctors Are Too Reserved. A Woman Should Be Dealt With Openly.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

Women are often allowed by their physicians to suffer much from lack of information and anxiety.



Many medical men are vain, and it is a struggle for them to acknowledge that they do not understand a case. Women do not investigate; they have faith in their doctor, and often wreck their lives through this unfortunate confidence.

In the treatment of female diseases men work from theory; and it is not to be expected that they can treat as intelligently those complaints from which they have never suffered, as a woman can who has made the organism and diseases of her sex a life study.

Women afflicted with female diseases are wise in communicating promptly with Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Their distressed condition is due to womb trouble, and their symptoms tell the story.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the one remedy that removes the cause, and restores health, courage, and happiness. The druggists sell more of it than all other female medicines. Why?

The following short letter speaks for itself. Mrs. Parker is a very young wife; only twenty-one years old. She was suffering untold misery when she wrote to Mrs. Pinkham for advice. See the result.

Can evidence be stronger than this?

"I deem it my duty to announce the fact to all my fellow-sufferers of all female complaints that your Vegetable Compound has entirely cured me of all the pains and suffering I was enduring when I wrote you last May. I followed your advice to the letter, and the result is wonderful."—MRS. CHAS. PARKER, Little Falls, Minn. Any druggist has it.

MRS. GROENDYKE'S CASE.

Mrs. Groendyke has been confined to her bed from early in June to the present time with what, until Sept. 1st, was mistakenly supposed to be malarial fever, enlargement of the liver and abdominal dropsy. Dr. Endicott the first Sunday in September was called in, pronounced it ovarian tumor, she had no malarial fever, enlargement of the liver, etc., and had not had. The doctor said the only chance for her life was to remove the tumor, and to operate then, in her weak condition, was sure death, so that a systematic course of feeding without the aid of medicine, was instituted, and as soon as she had improved all that it was possible, Dr. Endicott, assisted by Dr. Probasco and Dr. Murray, performed the operation of removing the tumor which weighed thirteen pounds, and contained six quarts of pus. Because of the early mistake in the diagnosis of her disease, the tumor was permitted to grow and press upon the organs of nutrition, and this combined with continued absortion of pus from the tumor caused her to become so poisoned and emaciated that I thought she had but a few days to live. Then I asked that the consultation with Dr. Endicott should be held immediately, with the result as above stated.

The tumor had obtained such an enormous size, the walls became so thin, that it ruptured as soon as the abdomen was opened. Had the operation not been performed at that time this rupture would have soon taken place and death would have followed.

Since the operation, September 19th, under the continued care of Dr. Endicott and two trained nurses, she has continuously improved. Unless some unexpected complication arises the doctor assures me she will get well. To us it seems a young life has been virtually snatched from the jaws of death. Geo. W. F. Randolph.

A Fox Hunt.

A fox chase is down to take place next Friday afternoon. The fox will be released from Campbell's Road House on Park avenue at twelve o'clock, and soon after that the hunters will start. The hunt is gotten up by William Beckman, Frank Day, and Ed Campbell, and all their friends are invited to enter and bring their hounds for the chase.

TRIED TO ROB UNCLE SAM.

AN ATTEMPT TO BURGLARIZE THE POSTOFFICE AT SOMERVILLE.

The Would-be Thieves Were Scared Away By the Night Watchman—Left Part of Their Tools—No Clue to Who They Were.

Uncle Sam was the proposed victim of two crooks at Somerville Tuesday but he objected to the operation and the would-be thieves left without any booty.

It was about midnight and the watchman, whose rounds include the postoffice, was walking along when he noticed two shadowy figures flitting by the postoffice door. They seemed very busy at something and the watchman went to investigate. When the two men saw that they were watched one of the drew a revolver and fired and then both of the would-be thieves took to their heels and fled out into the darkness.

When the watchman came up to where they had been standing he found a heavy hammer, a brace and bit, and two chisels. They had not made any impression to the door as they were interrupted too quickly.

The police have no clue to the thieves as the watchman was unable to see what they looked like in his brief glance in the dark.

ONE ELOPER RETURNS.

And is Welcomed Back By the Faithful Husband—Not So With the Other.

The elopement that so startled the citizens of Washington Valley a few weeks ago, did not prove to be a happy one to those concerned. Mrs. Schofield has returned to her home, forgiven and welcomed back by her husband. VanNorton has not appeared as yet, however, and his wife says that he needn't come for she does not want him back.

Eighteen Carpenters Awaiting the Result of a Suit Now on Trial.

A very interesting suit is taking place today before Justice Newcorn and a jury of twelve men in the city court rooms. The suit, Hawley against the Babcock estate, is a trial one, and if it is won by the plaintiff will bring about eighteen others. Fred Hawley is one of nineteen carpenters that the Babcock estate refused to pay for work done on the Babcock building. Out of the seventeen witnesses called only two testified, and the suit promises to be a very long and tedious one.

The suing carpenter is represented by Judge W. A. Coddington, while Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh is for the Babcock estate.

THREE WAR STORIES.

A Surprised Private. One Bridge Cosby Couldn't Burn. Ready to Drink.

Jeff Sterrett was a Confederate soldier who served as a private, and who is one of the two or three privates who survived the war. He was somewhat sentimental, and naturally fell in love with any good looking girl he might see. He fell in love with a young woman of Murfreesboro and slipped off to see her at every opportunity. One day his feelings so overwhelmed him that he suddenly found himself proposing marriage to her.

Sterrett was surprised.

"Why not?" he asked.

"Oh, my heart is gone. It's in the grave. It was buried when they buried Capt. —— five months ago."

That was too much for Sterrett. He at once became angry.

"Very well, miss. If you can love a dead captain better than a live private you can scratch for it."

Gen. Cosby had a mania for burning down bridges. Whenever he heard there was a bridge in his neighborhood he promptly had it laid low. His continual destruction of bridges several times got himself and his men in tight places, where a bridge would have come in mighty handy, and resulted in an uneasy feeling among his men.

He moved into Virginia in the neighborhood of the Natural Bridge, and one day gave his men permission to inspect the great natural wonder. Two cavalrymen, one of a poetic turn and the other of a worldly, practical turn, happened to go there together.

"Isn't this the most stupendous, magnificent, grand view you ever saw?" exclaimed the poetic man, grandiloquently. "Gaze upon that landscape. See how beautiful are the works of nature."

"I don't know much about its bein' stupendous, nor any o' that sort o' thing, but I'm d——d glad we've found one bridge that Cosby can't burn up."

In the regiment with Gen. Duke was a soldier named Jack Skillman, who was a great hand at telling yarns. His yarns were about great acts which he said he did, but which he never performed, ignoring completely several astonishing deeds of bravery he really did and which really were more remarkable than any alleged act he told about. The scene of one of his yarns was a strip along the bank of the Tennessee River lying between Chattanooga and Knoxville. At the point mentioned the river flowed in a deep canon and appeared from above to be a thread winding about, hundreds of feet below. It was a dizzy height.

"I was a-going 'long here one day all by myself," said he, "an' when I came to this p'int I see a blamed Yankee all by hissel' a comin' toward me. I says to mysel', says I, 'It ain't no use o' your fighting here, where no one ain't lookin' and where we'd like as not fall down the cliff.'

"I told the Yankee we needn't fight.

"'Yes, we will,' says he

"I said no.

"'Our fightin' wouldn't decide the war,' says I, 'an' we mought as well be friends.'

"An' I told him to come along an' have a drink.

"The blamed Yankee kept on a-tellin' me we was a-goin' to fight, an' 'fore I knowed it he jumped onto me. Well, sah, how we did fight! We knocked each other down an' wallowed an' scratched and tore round, an' I see more stars than you can think of. Oh, we did fight.

"Pretty soon I saw we were a-goin' over to the edge of the precipice. In another minute I see we was lost. Over we went a-whirlin' an' a-whizzin', a-fightin' an' a-scratchin'. We bumped into the rocks as we went down and knocked lots of them loose. I thought we was never goin' to reach bottom. After what seemed two hours we struck. Kerplank! Whew! We was knocked apart by the lick, an' I thought the Yankee would be dead. I raised up an' looked. Just as I raised the Yankee raised, too.

A Great Linguist Baffled.

The late Professor Stephen J. Young, of Bowdoin, was an accomplished linguist. One day he was on a train bound from Bangor to Brunswick, when a conductor who knew him entered his car to ask him to come out to the second class coach to find out where a certain stupid foreigner was going.

The conductor had attacked him in all the foreign lingo he could muster, and could get no other response than a stupid stare.

Prof. Young went back to the rear of the train. The passenger sat there looking very much disturbed and bewildered. The Professor went at him in Canadian French, then in German, then in the languages of Scandinavia, Egypt, Italy, Spain, and every other country on the face of the green earth. Still the passenger sat mum as an owl while the look of bewilderment deepened on his face. The Professor was nonplussed and was about turing in defeat to his own car when the man looked wearily out of the window and remarked sadly to himself:

He was an Ardostook Yankee and he could speak nothing but English.—Daily Eastern Argus.

An Offhand Definition.

"Can you tell me, Professor," asked Grigsby, "what an 'extempore pianist' is? I see that the performances of such a pianist are advertised."

"Certainly," said the Professor. "Ex, out of it; tempo, time; an extempore pianist is one that plays out of time!"—Boston Transcript.

BYRNES' SUCCESSOR.

NEW YORK'S HEAD DETECTIVE O'BRIEN'S THEORY OF THIEVERY.

Gotham no Longer an Asylum. Other Towns May Hope to Get From Here Malefactors Whom They Particularly Want.

The New York World says: In the midst of all the excise rumpus, it is well to remember that we have a new boss detective. O'Brien is his name and these are some facts about him. They are gratifying on the whole.

He never bought or sold a share of stock in his life. He never made any sort of Wall street deal in his life. He would not know how. He knows no one on Wall street and no one know him.

He never drinks and never smokes.

He was born and brought up in New York.

His front name is Stephen. When he was a small boy he used to watch the ladies and gentleman get out of the Black Maria, and try to remember their faces. He studied the three card monte men at Coney Island and could point them out to young admiring friends.

He is not rich. He does not expect to become rich. He owns no flats, no fast horses, no farms, no boats.

He says that he would not feel that he could justly devote himself to the especial service of a Gould or any other very rich man, in return for private pay while drawing his salary from the city.

He is a moderately young man, with his hair brushed up off his forehead. He has a good chin, which Byrnes had not, but his eyes are a little too close together. Byrnes had not that defect.

He dresses with care, and does not wear thick soled boots. This is wonderful for a detective. Almost all detectives wear very thick soles, so that criminals may know them on sight.

He is very immaculate as to linen, and wears a very small diamond in a flat gold button. This he uses as a single shirt stud. His evident enjoyment of this very small diamond proves that he is a man who has not used his place to accumulate the price of many big diamonds.

His eyes are not blue enough to be very good, but they are bright and piercing.

He declares that he means to give individual detectives credit for their individual work, and not to claim all the credit himself. This programme, if carried out, will be a great change in New York detective methods. It should help the tone of the whole force.

Mr. O'Brien has one great and natural pride. But you can have ten guesses and not guess what makes him proud.

He is proud because he has to his credit 1,000 years of sentences. That means that criminals captured by him have been sentenced in all to a thousand years of imprisonment. He reflects occasionally that he is a very young man. Then he remembers that criminals of all shapes and sizes are doing and have done a thousand years of prison work, thanks to his efforts, and his bosom swells with honest pride.

In his most melancholy moments this thought cheers him and spurs him on. Of course there is a fly in his ointment and a crumpled leaf in his bed. He grinds his teeth occasionally when he thinks of the suspended sentences hanging over the heads of some of those whom he has convicted.

If those sentences had been enforced instead of being suspended his total would be far and far above a thousand years.

Mr. O'Brien is not the character that Thomas Byrnes was as boss detective. He may acquire Mr. Byrnes's charm of manner and of diction, but now he lacks both. Mr. Byrnes, beyond all question was a very strong personality. He had imagination and character of its kind. He was a man for a novel. He was a born playwright. He had a certain presence very effective with criminals and women and very young reporters. But he was not the ideal boss detective. I believe that O'Brien has a chance to do better than Byrnes, although he is not naturally as much of a man. When an individual has a strong personality and an egotism out of proportion to his ability to carry around, they unfit him for such detailed executive work as is demanded in detective service.

O'Brien has not the slightest notion of the art of coining phrases or of constructing situations. If his men caught an Anarchist of the Most type, he would not at once see, as Mr. Byrnes saw, the dramatic value of saying that he was caught under the bed.

O'Brien is a simple type of the young New York man, a representative of the good class of young New York policemen. He looks upon criminals as a perfectly natural element in society's make-up.

Mrs. Caldcash—Yes, and that's the only time in his life he ever supported me.

Arthur—Don't you know, Miss Sharp, I'm thinking of getting a bicycle; what do you think of the idea?

Kate—Oh, do it by all means, Mr. Softcroft; the bicycle, they say, is an excellent thing for the development of calves.—Boston Transcript.

RECEPTION TO SUMMER TOURISTS.

Grace M. E. Church Gives Their First Social of the Season.

It was a warm night, but the attendance at the opening social of the season in the Grace M. E. church last evening did not seem any less crowded than usual. It was a reception to all the congregation who had been away during the summer, and was given jointly by the Ladies Aid Society and the Epworth League of the church. The Epworth League, through its entertainment committee, which consists of Miss Grace Carroll and Miss Carrie Tingley, furnished the programme, which consisted of a piano duet by Mrs. Powell and Miss Alice Carroll, a contralto solo by Miss Grace Carroll, with violin obligato by Dyckman Winckler, a recitation by Miss Ada Woolston, a bass solo by John Steiner, and a contralto solo, "Slumber Song," by Miss Alice Carroll. The selections were all well rendered, and everyone seemed highly pleased with the programme.

After the refreshment for the mind had been supplied the inner man was also provided for. At the cake table were Mrs. John Carney, Mrs. Schuck and Mrs. E. Stevens. The peaches and ice cream were under the control of Mrs. J. C. Garey and Mrs. E. Vermeule.

The decorations, which added greatly to the beauty of the room, were arranged by Mrs. W. H. Griffin, Mrs. Sheppard, Mrs. A. A. Taft, Mrs. E. Winckler and Mrs. Will Lunger, who also looked out after the general arrangements.

Those in charge of the refreshments and decorations were from the Ladies Aid Society, and all fulfilled their duties in a most satisfactory manner.

WHO OWNED THE HORSE?

Carter Thought That He Did, But the Jury Differed With Him.

The ownership of a horse sometimes becomes quite a complicated matter as shown in the case of Carter vs. Stevens, a suit in trover and conversion, tried before Justice Brandon and a jury of twelve men at Bound Brook Thursday. Mr. Stevens, the defendant, is a member of the firm of Stevens and Giles, the West Front street bakers. The cause of the suit was as follows: Mr. Watts owned a horse on which Stevens had a chattel mortgage. Watts took the horse to Carter's livery stable and there kept him until the bill for his keep exceeded the value of the horse. Carter and Watts then agreed that a man by the name of Powlinson might have the use of the horse for its keep. At last Powlinson turned the horse over to Stevens. Carter made a demand for it, but Stevens would not turn it over to anyone but Watts. The suit was then brought. After deliberating the jury brought in a verdict of no cause of action. Anderson and Voorhees, of Somerville, represented the plaintiff and S. S. Swackhamer, of this city, acted as counsel for Mr. Stevens.

ANNIE DIDN'T CARRY A BAG.

So Much Testimony in the Beekman Murder Case Retracted.

Detective Barcalow has obtained evidence which goes to show that Jacob S. Johnson, charged with the murder of Annie Beekman, did not kill Mrs. Hamilton on Long Island in 1892. He found that Johnson had lived since 1886 continuously in the neighborhood of Neshanic. Counsel for Johnson say they have a complete record of his life since his boyhood.

Calvin Corville, who paid the $68 to the Beekman woman and testified that she carried a black bag, today retracted that statement, saying that two colored women called for money Saturday, and that he got them mixed in his memory.

Opening of the Plainfield Art School.

The opening reception and exhibition of the models of the Plainfield Art School, at 212 West Front street, will be held on Thursday, October 3d, at 8 o'clock. At 8:30 Olaf Sangstad, will give a short talk explaining the work for the coming year.

The aim of the school will be to give most thorough instruction in these fundamental departments of the graphic arts, with a view of fitting its pupils for usefulness, as well as giving the very best preparatory work for those intending to make the arts their profession.

Do You Play?

What is more delightful than the clear notes of the mandolin or the twanging of the banjo? To become an expert player on either of these instruments requires years of practice but to those who know nothing of the art, or have just begun studying, Miss Claribel Jeffrey, teacher of mandolin, guitar and banjo playing, offers unequalled inducements. She had a large class in Plainfield last year and all who took of her were completely satisfied with the results. Further information regarding lessons and terms may be had by inquiring at 322 West Front street.

THE FOOTBALL ENTHUSIASTS.

THE Y. M. C. A. MEMBERS FORM A LOCAL ORGANIZATION.

To Contest With the Other Teams of the Central New Jersey Football League—Officers Elected—Crack Players to Go In.

The football enthusiasm took practical shape last Friday when those interested in the sport gathered together in one of the meeting rooms in the Y. M. C. A. building and organized the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. Football Association.

The meeting was called to order shortly after eight o'clock by Physical Director D. A. McPhie, and the purpose of the gathering stated. Chas. B. Morse was elected temporary chairman and Raymond A. McGee secretary pro tem.

Mr. Morse then told what had been done and read an account of the organizing meeting of the Central New Jersey Football League, and then the constitution which was adopted last night. The delegates who had attended that meeting, explained some of the positions that were not easily understood.

Then, on motion of Mr. McPhie, the association was regularly organized: The following officers were next elected: President, Charles B. Morse; Vice-president, Volney F. Green; Secretary, Edgar I. Serrell; Treasurer, D. A. McPhie; Manager, Louis Waring; Captain, George Schoonmaker. The next question to come before the meeting was that of the selection of colors and distinguishing features of the team. On motion of Arthur B. Crane it was decided to adopt a black jersey and maroon stockings as the uniform, and black and maroon as the colors.

The selection of the ground on which to play was then discussed and D. A. McPhie appointed a committee to see if suitable arrangements could be made with the Crescent Wheelman for the use of the oval. The question of practicing, when and where, was introduced and Manager Waring recommended that as much outdoor practice be taken as possible, but cautioned the players on practicing too hard at first. After a general discussion, Monday and Friday evenings were selected for practice in the gymnasium under the charge of Manager Waring.

The financial department of the association was next talked over and a number of suggestions made as to ways in which to raise the necessary funds to keep the team going. No definite action was taken, however.

The subject of practice was again referred to and Mr. Waring gave a brief description of some of the methods, but particularly advised that a tackling bag be procured. After some debate it was decided that a committee of three, consisting of George Snediker, George Schoonmaker and Thomas A. Cumming, be instructed to arrange one. The meeting then adjourned and the members stopped to talk over the proposed eleven. Many of the crack players of Plainfield were present at the meeting and several more, who were unable to be present, sent word that they wished to join. From the present outlook it appears that Plainfield is going to have a football eleven that will make a hard fight for the championship. Mr. Waring, aided by several of the other veteran players, will coach the men.

The Coming Lectures.

Attention is called to the valuable course of lectures advertised in another column. Mrs. Hudders and Miss Lindley are too well known in Plainfield to need an introduction. Miss Slocum delighted the Current Events Club last year with a lecture on "Social Economics." On October 8th, she will speak on "The Moral Element in Citizenship," a subject of vital interest to the community. Mrs. Livermore, the "Queen of the American Lecture Platform," will give her "Dream of Tomorrow." And the last lecture will be illustrated by the stereopticon with Prof. Gifford to explain the pictures and tell of forest conditions in New Jersey, completes a course of lectures, both instructive and entertaining.

TO HAVE ELEVATED TRACKS.

The Pennsylvania Railroad intends to elevate its tracks through New Brunswick, at an estimated cost of $2,000,000. The first step has been taken by the beginning of a four-track bridge across the Raritan River.

For a long time the property owners at the New Brunswick terminus refused to make terms. The railroad instituted condemnation proceedings for the Freeman property on Water street. It is partly owned by the Consolidated Fruit Jar Company and partly by a syndicate composed of P. M. Welsh, Phillip Smith and others. The total of the awards is $55,270.50.

To Arrange for Golf.

The Hillside Tennis Club will meet on Wednesday, October 2d, to revise the constitution and bylaws so as to provide for the golf course.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

An event that the ladies all look forward to with the greatest expectation is the annual fall millinery opening at White's. They all know that the hats that are displayed are the latest and choicest designs and this year Miss Daly promises that the display will excel all previous efforts. One of her most stylish creations that the writer was shown is a saucer brim of green chenille and felt braid, three inches deep in front, crown of net, with velvet draped over. The velvet is put on to form a tall loop to the left of the front and gathered at the back of this on the crown under a jet and rhinestone bar. The velvet is then gathered in, loose and full, around the head, size and finished by a twist. The brim is bent up against the crown at the tall loop, a big bunch of black and white aigrette and cluster of varigated roses, are set in the wave. Another wave is bent in the brim to the right, but not close, and one on each side of the back where two very large-beaded pins secure it to the crown. This crown is made of a square of velvet, with three corners rounded, the forth corner forming the loop. The opening takes place next week, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, September 25, 26, 27.

Mayor Daly is Sour.

Mayor Daly, of Rahway, is much disappointed over the failure of his friend, John Kean, to get the nomination and is disgusted with the actions of certain prominent Republican leaders in Union county. "I never witnessed so much personal spite or bitter feeling in any delegation," said the Mayor, "as was shown against Mr. Kean by the men I refer to. With them the cry was anything to beat Kean."

DEADLY BARB WIRE FENCE.

IT INJURES A HORSE AND CAUSES A LAW SUIT.

Tried Before Justice Sperry and a Twelve Men Jury—Testimony of Horse Authorites—The Plaintiff Won the Case.

The law recently passed by the State Legislature, which allows no barb wire fence to be put up on the division line between the property of two different owners without the consent of both, played a very prominent part in a suit in the borough Thursday afternoon.

The case was that of Wolfe against Stiles, in tort, and was tried in the court room before Justice Sperry and a jury of twelve men. The plaintiff, John P. Wolfe, brought the action to recover damages done to his horse, which on May 15th ran into a barbed wire fence erected by the defendant, Frank Stiles, on the boundary line between the then adjoining properties in Washington Valley.

The law regarding barb-wire fences was passed in May, 1894, and in August of the same year, a wire fence was built between the properties of the two men by Stiles without the consent of Wolfe. Wolfe, however, never objected until one day his horse ran into the barb wire fence. The equine was badly injured by the accident, sustaining a deep cut in the breast and fore leg, requiring the care of a veterinary surgeon.

Wolfe testified that he was unable to use the animal for over five weeks after the accident and brought suit to recover $150 damages.

A number of witnesses were called and cross-examined by both sides. Lawyer Harry C. Runyon represented the plaintiff and Lawyer Clarence L. Murphy the defendant. During the progress of the trial some very amusing testimony was given by Adam Fritz and A. S. Huff, dealers in horses.

Hot arguments were made by the counsel on both sides. Lawyer Runyon presented a strong case, and Lawyer Murphy made an excellent fight for his client, with the law and the facts of the case against him.

The case was submitted to the jury which, after an hour's deliberation, brought in a verdict of $7.50 damages for the plaintiff.

A COMPLETE SURPRISE.

Miss Searing Is Given a Party in Honor of Her Birthday.

It seemed to those that arranged the surprise party for Miss Anna A. Searing, of Madison avenue, that it cleared off yesterday afternoon for their especial benefit, and of course the beautiful evening made the party an entire success. The surprise was complete and the social gathering was very much enjoyed by the surprised and the surprisers.

Most of the evening was spent in playing games and in conversation, after which refreshments were daintily served and the party broke up with everybody sorry that such a pleasant evening had come to a close.

The party was arranged by Miss Searing's friends and was in honor of her birthday. Those who assisted in surprising her were Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Woolley, of Westfield Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. The October Forum.

The Hon. Charles S. Fairchild, ex-Secretary of the Treasury, has written for the October number of The Forum an article entitled "The Present Condition of the Silver Question in the United States." In his opinion there are no more advocates of the free-silver policy today than there were a year ago; he thinks that those opposed to that policy are far more outspoken now than they were then, and that the sound-money cause is rapidly gaining ground.

CRESCENT'S $3,000 IN DEBT.

THE WHEELMEN'S FINANCES ARE IN A BAD WAY.

But Few of the Members Are of the Supporting Kind—More Money Must Be Had—Dues to Be $1 a Month Hereafter.

The Crescent Wheelmen met Friday evening to listen to the reports of the old officers and to discuss the question of raising the monthly dues.

President C. E. Teel called the meeting to order and about sixty members responded to the roll-call. Then followed the report of James Buckle, ex-treasurer of the club. His report was not particularly encouraging as it told of a debt of $3,000, consisting of notes given for the building of the oval.

The report of John Petrie, the ex-secretary, was read by his successor, Fred Pope, and gave the total membership as being 160, of whom very few were in good standing, there being about $200 still owed in back dues.

Clarence E. Teel next reported as chairman of the racig committee and gave a record of the meets that have been held this year and what other work had been done in the racing line.

An auditing committee was then appointed to examine the books of the club and make a final report of its condition.

The changing of the dues was then discussed at some length. It was shown that the club must have a greater income to keep up the track and the club house, besides providing for all of the privileges which the members now enjoy. Only two members opposed the change and it was decided to make them a dollar a month hereafter instead of fifty cents.

A Plucky Woman.

Wednesday afternoon a drunken tramp went to the house occupied by John Marsden, the sewer contractor, on Park street, Westfield. Three little children were alone in the house at the time and they fled at the man's approach and left him in full possession. Mrs. Williams, who resides across the street, heard the children scream and went to the house. Without a moment's hesitation she ejected the tramp in no gentle way and was pacifying the children when their mother returned. There was not a man in the neighborhood at the time.

Hickey, of 223 Avenue D., Bayonne, a former clerk in Mr. Dunn's law office, sued for the recovery of $418.17, which he claimed was due him for services rendered. A nonsuit was ordered by Judge Lippincott on the ground of non-performance of duty on Hickey's part.

Death of John Evans.

John Evans, a former resident of this city and a foreman in The Potter Press Works a few years ago, died in Newark on Wednesday. Mr. Evans was prominently mentioned at one time by the Republicans of the Fourth ward as a candidate for the Council. His remains were taken to Norwich, Conn., by his father, where they were interred. He died of consumption and at his death weighed only 120 pounds. He was over six feet in heighth, and at one time a man of a magnificent physique.

The brute caused a stampede as he ran through the street. The animals bitten will all be killed. Some children had narrow escapes from being bitten.

SERIOUS BOLT THREATENED.

The German Republicans at Elizabeth Won't Support Griggs.

The Democrats of Elizabeth are delighted with the nomination of John W. Griggs, says The World this morning. They claim he will be an easy man to beat. Local German Republicans are in open revolt against the nominee on account of his past record on local option, and he will get a very few of their votes.

The German Liquor Dealers' Union, which comprises all the men of that nationality in the business in Elizabeth, will at its next meeting pass a resolution denouncing the action of the Republican Convention in selecting Griggs as the party's standard-bearer. It will issue an address, it is said, urging all German-Americans to vote against him on account of his radical temperance views and his former record in the Legislature on local option.

The attitude of the Germans has been threatening for the past month, so far as the Republican party is concerned, on account of its excise doings in New York and elsewhere. It took only the nomination of Griggs to make the final straw that will drive the Germans out of the Republican party.

The Republicans of Elizabeth feel sick over the fact that both of the Union county men got knocked out. The Voorhees men blame John Kean for their favorite's defeat, while the Keanites say if Voorhees had kept his fingers out of the pie all would have been well.

The only consolation Mayor Rankin, Congressman Fowler and other big shouters for Voorhees have is that their hated foe John Kean failed to gratify his ambition.

There is no doubt that the split in Union county was a large factor on determining the final result.

The thorough business man believes in supplying his customers with the best, and Garret Q. Packer, the Park avenue furniture dealer, although he is soon to move to the J. W. In the upholstery department he is specially furnished with all the facilities for doing excellent work, and he advises his customers to give their orders at once before the regular fall rush comes.

Although the assortment is larger than ever before, the prices will be lower as Mr. Packer does not care to go to the expense of moving his large stock to the new store unless it is necessary. The latest novelties in the trade are on exhibition and his store is a perfect paradise to the lover of dainty furniture.

Somerville Progressive.

The steady growth of Somerville within the last five years, the population having increased 25 per cent. according to the census statistics, has led to considerable agitation for further improvement of the town by the building of additional sewers. It is only a few years ago that the town spent in the neighborhood of $25,000 in sewering certain streets in the town. It is in contemplation to sewer the new addition made under the recent act of the Legislature, which has taken in a large amount of property to the east of the town limits, going towards Finderne. At a public meeting recently held it was estimated that the new sewers would cost in the neighborhood of $23,000.

The long-looked for melodrama of New York life has finally arrived and achieved the great success predicted for it. "The Great Diamond Robbery" by Col. E. M. Alfriend and A. C. Wheeler, (Nym Crinkle, the famous critic) produced by Managers A. M. Palmer and Edwin Knowles, is an honest attempt to make a drama of incident for the multitude. No dramatic author need be ashamed of such a task, and in this case they have done their work well.

JOHNSON LEGALLY ACCUSED

CORONER'S JURY HOLDS HIM GUILTY OF ANNIE ROGERS' DEATH.

The Son Oliver Could Not Tell a Straight Story, Thus Damaging His Father's Case—Her Satchel Found in His Hut.

The Coroner's jury at Somerville Tuesday rendered a verdict accusing Jacob S. Johnson, the evangelist, of the murder of Annie Rogers, and named Mrs. Kate Elizabeth Johnson, his wife, and Oliver Johnson, his eighteen-year-old son, as accessories

The prisoners were self-possessed, and refused to answer any questions. The son, Oliver, was recalled to the stand in the afternoon, and became muddled. His testimony was unfavorable to his parents.

Calvin Corle, the farmer, from whom Annie Rogers received $46.70, testified that Johnson signed the receipt for the money. Theodore Barcalow, an ex-Internal Revenue detective, and Officer Manning Crow, on searching Johnson's hut, found the satchel in which the money was put by the murdered woman.

Coroner Brady, yesterday, made a thorough search of Johnson's premises. The Johnson hut is a one-story wooden shanty, of two small rooms, two miles from Somerville. These persons lived there: Jacob S. Johnson and his wife Kate, and their three children; Isaac Lewis, his son-in-law, and his wife: Charles Haney and his wife, Rachael, Johnson's niece; Daniel Mead and his wife Rebecca; Johnson's sister and two friends, Mary Davenport and Julia Annin.

CAPTURED BY HER WHEEL.

Miss Garrison's Dress Becomes Entangled, But is Finally Released.

A lady's wheel, without a chain guard, is a dangerous thing to ride, and many a fall has resulted from the dress being caught in the sprocket and chain. What came very near being a serious accident happened to Miss Garrison, of Jersey City, this noon through this cause. Miss Garrison, who is visiting her grandmother, Mrs. Calvin Neighbor, of East Front street, was riding down Front street on a lady's wheel when her dress caught in the chain and sprocket wheel dragging her from the saddle.

She tried to release herself from this involuntary imprisonment but the more she tried to unfasten the tangle the worse it became. Chief Marshal Van Horn, of the borough, came to her aid but with no better results. At last J. J. Kenney appeared and invited Miss Garrison and her captor to come to his store. The offer was accepted and Mr. Kenney assisted by Sergeant Kiely soon released Miss Garrison from her unpleasant predicament.

JOHNSON MURDERER OF ONE ONLY.

Idle Charge Against the Colored Evangelist at Somerville.

All the authorities in Somerville are of the opinion that there is no truth in the story printed yesterday to the effect that Jacob Johnson, the colored preacher who is accused of the murder of Annie Rogers, was implicated in the Hamilton murder case at Winfield, L. I.

On May 1st, 1892, a colored woman named Annie Hamilton was strangled near Winfield. Her throat was then cut and her body thrown into a pond of muddy water. Her husband, James L. Hamilton, a colored evangelist, was electrocuted for the crime.

It is said that while in jail Hamilton accused Jacob S. Johnson, a hoodoo doctor, of murdering his wife, and an attempt has been made to connect the Jacob Johnson in jail at Somerville with the crime.

Johnson was interviewed in his cell last night and carefully questioned as to his whereabouts during 1892, when the Hamilton murder was committed. Without knowing that suspicion of the Hamilton murder had been directed against him he said he had never lived on Long Island in his life, and finally concluded with the statement, when the direct question was put to him, that he never knew anybody by the name of Hamilton and was never before implicated in a murder or any other crime.

The body of Annie Rogers was buried yesterday afternoon in the colored cemetery about a mile from Somerville. Her aged husband was in attendance, having come from Newark, and the dead girl was followed to the grave by a morbid throng of whites and blacks. There was no ceremony.

Factories May Be Built.

The transfer of more than 100 acres of land to the Orange Industrial Association has been recorded in the office of the Union County Clerk during the last week. The property lies on the road from Cranford to Springfield. It is said that several fretories will be built on the property. This is the land where it was reported some months ago that the Pullman Car Company contemplated moving their shops to.

Elizabeth Bound to Have a Depot.

It is said that unless the Pennsylvania Railroad Company erects a new station by December 28th, the city will take legal steps to force it to do so, as the five years which the city gave it to elevate the tracks and build a station will have expired.

GOV. M'KINLEY TALKS

THE OHIO STATESMAN TELLS OF HIS EARLY LIFE IN THE BUCKEYE STATE

Political Matters and the Presidential Campaign Touched Upon in Gingerly Fashion. Outlook for the Tariff. Taught School at $25 a Month.

Gov. McKinley is a queer Presidential candidate. A New York Herald correspondent went from Washington to Columbus to see what he is doing to make himself President of the United States. Every one knows he is to be one of the leading Republican candidates before the Republican National Convention. Ohio has declared herself for him, and McKinley clubs are being formed all over the Union. Columbus ought to be the headquarters of the campaign.

There is nothing of the kind. The State House is as torpid as a snake in midwinter, and the Governor apparently shows no more interest in wire-pulling than if he were the Chief Executive of one of the poorest Territories of the West. He is not doing a stroke to help along the movement, and he refuses to say a word upon national politics for publication. He will not talk about the Presidency, and he says his ideas on public questions are so well known that it is useless for him to make any statement to the probable platform.

Still, Governor McKinley makes a great number of public speeches. He has a fine presence upon the stump. His features are much like those of Daniel Webster. He has the same full, characteristic forehead, the same deep-set, piercing eyes looking out from under heavy brows, and his jaw is equally broad and massive. He is a finer looking man than Webster. His features are more cleanly cut, and the honesty which shines out of them was not so apparent in that greatest orator of the last generation. McKinley speaks for hours without diminution of force or repetition of ideas. He uses short sentences and makes it a principle never to speak unless he has something to say. He believes in plain Anglo-Saxon and avoids classical phrases. The correspondent says:

GOV. M'KINLEY.

During my talk with him to-day I asked him how he prepared his speeches. He replied:

"When I have an important speech to make it absorbs me. It is hard work, and it takes all there is in me. I go over the subject again and again in all its phases in my mind. I read all I can get hold of upon it, and the speech gradually grows until it is ready for delivery. If it is one that has to be given to the press I dictate it to my stenographer and see that the copy is given out beforehand. This clarifies my thought, and though I seldom make exactly the same speech that I have dictated, it is substantially the same."

"Do you like to speak?"

"No," I do not," replied Governor McKinley emphatically. "I dread it. My heart goes down into my boots whenever I get up before an audience, and I tremble until I have begun to talk. This is always so, and still I have been making speeches for twenty-three years."

"Do you remember your first public speech?" I asked.

"Yes, indeed; very well," replied the Governor, with a laugh. "It was upon my return home with the troops at the close of the war. I lived in the little village of Poland, near Youngstown, and a reception was given in honor of the soldiers. One of the judges of the county made the welcoming speech, and I was chosen to give the response. I was then just twenty-one years old."

"How old were you when you went into the army, Governor?" I asked.

"I was just seventeen," was the reply. "I was acting as a country school teacher at the time the war broke out. My father was anxious to give me a good education. He moved with his family to the little town of Poland in order that I might go into the academy there, and when I was about fifteen or sixteen he sent me to the Allegheny College at Meadville, Pa. I fell sick there and had to come home. When I became better I took up teaching and got a country school near Poland This I left to go to the army. My wages were, I think, $25 a month, and I boarded around.

"I don't know when I was not interested in the tariff. I was brought up, as it were, on protection. My boyhood was spent in an iron manufacturing district and among miners, and Canton, where I went to live, is a center of great manufacturing industries. The first speech I made in Congress was in favor of a protective tariff. It was against Fernando Wood's tariff bill in 1878. As I went on in my study of the question I became more and more convinced that this was the best way to raise our revenues and at the same time support our industries. The tariff will always be a live question."

SOME ONE'S FUNNY ACT.

Gave the Fire Department a Long Run on a False Alarm.

There have been several cases in which a key to one of the fire-alarm boxes has been stolen and a false alarm sent in, but on Saturday evening the first case occurred in which a different key altered for the purpose has been admitted by some one to the inside of the box.

Shortly after eight o'clock Saturday evening the fire department turned out in response to an alarm sent in from box 27. Special Officer Flynn, who came to the scene of action on the No. 2 hose wagon, was the first to reach the box.

"Where's the fire?" he shouted, but no one answered. Assistant Chief Engineer James Martin was the first of the fire department to join him, but none of the crowd which had then quickly gathered seemed to know who sent in the alarm. Martin suspected that something was wrong and a quick glance showed that the key used to unlock the box was not one of the regular keys belonging to it.

The firemen were notified at once and the recall sent in. The owner of the key is still a mystery to both fire and police departments, but should he be caught it will go hard with him.

For the Young Woman of Today.

The young woman of today is far better prepared to enter society and appear in the world if she is in a healthy condition. It is only within the last few years that exercise has been so broadly advised by physicians, but to physical improvement should be added gracefulness, and the two cannot better be united than in the course of physical culture and rendering that Miss Addie Parker Jackson teaches. Her classes were most successful last year, as was shown by the entertainment given in the spring, and this year she is again forming classes in these branches. Those who wish further information on this subject will find Miss Jackson at 512 Arlington avenue.

Plainfield Not In It.

The first annual one hundred-mile handicap race arranged by the Century Cycle Club, of Newark, was run on the Elizabeth-Rahway course Saturday. The race was won by John W. Conklin, one of the scratch men. His time was 5:47 3-5. Three Plainfield riders started but none finished. Kissam had five punctures in the first five miles and gave up. Scott Terry dropped out after making fifteen miles with a sunstroke, and James Voorhees, the last of the three, gave up after riding forty miles on account of sickness caused by not having sufficient training.

Funeral of Frank Schroppe.

The funeral of Frank Schroppe took place yesterday afternoon from St. Joseph's R. C. church and was largely attended. Mr. Schroppe was born in North Plainfield and resided there all his life. He was at one time engaged in the fruit business on West Front street with his brother, John Schroppe. He was a son of George Schroppe, Sr., of Jackson avenue, and was forty years of age at the time of his death and unmarried. He was a quiet person and had not an enemy in the world. Six of deceased's nephews acted as pall-bearers.

Surprised Her Niece.

There is nothing as enjoyable as a surprise party if it is a success, and the one given Miss J. Louise Jenkins by her aunt, Mrs. C. B. Clifton, of West Second street, last evening, was a perfect one. It was given in honor of her twenty-first birthday and was heartily enjoyed by all those present. the evening passed very enjoyably with music and conversation, while dainty refreshments added to the pleasure.

Chief Doane on Fire Escapes.

Some time ago the members of the Common Council of Asbury Park requested Chief Doane, of this city, to give them a draft of what he would consider a good ordinance providing for fire escapes. The Chief made a draft of one and sent it to Asbury Park. The next evening it was passed by the Council.

A Fact.

Central Railroad Detective Charles W. Dodd is as good a shot with a gun as he is a detective. A few days ago he was snipe shooting near Barnegat and fired a charge into a flock of surf birds on the wing. He killed 43 with the one shot. A fact.

KNIGHTS OFF FOR A GOOD TIME.

Large Number of Plainfielders Go to Phillipsburg.

The annual field day exercises of the Uniform Rank, Knights of Pythias, of the State of New Jersey, is being held at Phillipsburg today. Knights from all parts of the State are in attendance as guests of Ortesie Division, of Phillipsburg. A special train passed through Plainfield at 9:15 stopping to take the local knights.

Those present from Crescent Division, No. 13, U. R., K. of P., of Plainfield, include: H. Werner, J. H. Tier, Jr., E. Mackey, M. Terrill, S. Robinson, Joseph Flack, F. Dunham, J. D. Pope, C. McGinley, B. Moore, D. Blackford, Rudolph Speigel, Stephen Higham, C. Giese, Jr., J. Liable, M. Turton, J. Rounceville, Joseph Blimm, W. Milliken, W. Kriney, G. W. Clark, L. DeCamp, C. Foster, C. Stultz, T. Osmun, J. Wakefiely, T. Mason, E. Garrison, C. Ulrich, J. E. Flannery.

Among the important features of the day's programme will be the formation of a bicycle division among the State Knights who ride wheels.

James Scott accompanied the Knights and will refresh the latter with cool water along the line of march.

The meet will probably be one of the largest and most successful ever held.

What Advertising Does.

VanEmburgh & Son, who are liberal advertisers, told The Press this morning that they are more than ever convinced that newspaper advertisements are read and that the money they spend for newspaper advertising pays them. Friday and Saturday they told the people of Plainfield by their advertisement in The Daily Press that they had 700 gents linen collars on sale at five cents each, and sixty pairs of cuffs at ten cents a pair. Saturday evening, between seven and ten o'clock, they sold all the cuffs, and could have sold many more; they also sold between those hours over 400 of the collars. If you are not already an advertiser in The Daily Press what more evidence do you need that you should be.

Twenty-three children survive, and most of them reside within a few miles of the place of their birth.

Attacked With Cramps and Drowned.

Mrs. Skidmore, a colored domestic in the employ of Wm. E. Day at 92 Duer street, on Sunday evening received a message from Rocky Hill conveying the sad intelligence that her son had been drowned during the afternoon while swimming in the Millstone river. He had taken a plunge in the water when overheated, and had an attack of cramps. He sank before he could be rescued. This is the second son that Mrs. Skidmore has lost by drowning. Accompanied by Mrs. Day, the afflicted woman went to Rocky Hill yesterday to attend the funeral and burial of her son.

Young Cyclists to Compete.

Some of the young cyclists of this city are planning a little race meet all of their own to take place at the Crescent Oval on next Saturday afternoon, beginning at half past two. The races will be open only to boys under fourteen years of age. The events, which consist of three bicycle races and one running contest, are as follows: One-fourth of a mile scratch, one mile handicap, two-mile handicap, and one hundred yards dash. The entry fee will be ten cents, and will close on Friday with E. Stanley Peck, of 824 Second place. Good prizes will be offered in each of the events.

About a Plainfield Girl.

The following is taken from a recent copy of the Buffalo News and will interest friends of Miss Sadie D. Grant, daughter of Chief of Police Grant:

The Chautauqua Literary Circle of the Delaware Avenue church held the first meeting of the season last evening in the church parlors. Two meetings monthly will be held during the winter, and Miss S. D. Grant, of the Chautauqua Literary Bureau, will have charge of the Circle. It numbers fifty or more, and the American study this year is likely to largely increase the membership.

Said He Didn't Steal Any Overcoat.

The colored man, that was said to have stolen the coat belonging to Chef Robinson, of McVey's restaurant, was brought before Justice Nash on Saturday evening and discharged for want of evidence. He was represented by J. P. Powers. Robinson's counsel was George W. DeMeza.

Sold by the Executor.

The building belonging to the Chas. Greder estate, situated on the corner of Somerset and Chatham streets, was sold a few days ago by Executor V. W. Nash to the present tenants, Zeller & White, the beer bottlers.

TRIED THE DINING ROOM WINDOW.

An Attempted Robbery at a Liberty Street House Last Night.

An attempt at robbery was discovered at the residence of William Claassen, of Liberty street, this morning about 3:30 by one of the boarders in the house.

The boarder heard a noise and on looking out noticed a man attempting to raise the dining room window. He did not make any noise, thinking it best to notify a policeman.

Before he could do this, however, a policeman near by sounded his club on the sidewalk. This frightened the robber, who made off. An examination was made, but nothing was missed. A dog in one of the lower rooms was found enjoying a piece of meat which no doubt was his reward for keeping quiet.

No clew as yet to the man's identity has been discovered.

The [illegible] of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

The Sewer Trench Again

The sewer trenches are the deadly enemies of wheelmen, and last evening John Keefe, the trusted assistant in the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company's store, came to the grief in one at the corner of Washington and East Fifth streets. He was riding down East Fifth street and saw the light in the middle of the road and, when he had almost reached it, crossed the street. The next thing he knew his pedals struck a pile of dirt and he was sent sprawling in the ditch. He struck his shoulder against a board on the way and is somewhat sore this morning.

An Illinois Man Here.

Edward T. Terrill, County Clerk of Mason county, Illinois, a brother of George Terrill, Collector of Warren township, also a brother of Thomas Terrill, of Bernards township, two well-known Somerset county politicians, was a welcome visitor at each of his brother's large farm for a few weeks lately. Mr. Terrill is a Jerseyman by birth and an Illinoian by adoption and is a Democrat well known in that State. He made many warm friends while on his visit here.

Wants to Wake the Dead.

The residents of Liberty street are treated to a fine assortment of yelling and calling every morning about 6 o'clock when a milkman passes through that thoroughfare. One of the residents of that neighborhood suggests that if he wishes to wake the dead with his yelling he would be more successful if he went down to Plainfield avenue by the cemetery. Several complaints have been made to the police and they are on the lookout for him. He is supposed to come from South Plainfield.

SEWAGE BEDS COST $24,000.

CONTRACTS GIVEN OUT BY THE COUNCIL LAST NIGHT.

Washburn & Washburn, of New York, Get the Contract—Three Other Bidders—Street Railway Matter Laid Over a Week.

An adjourned meeting of the City Council was held last Monday, principally for the purpose of receiving bids for the construction of the sewage beds in connection with the system of sewers that are being put in.

President See called the meeting to order and to the roll call by Clerk MacMurray the following Councilmen answered: Messrs. Bird, Dumont, Erickson, Frazee, Fish, Frost, Ginna, Moore, See and Westphal.

The clerk then read the call of the meeting, after which President See announced that the hour had arrived to receive bids for the construction of the sewage beds. Four bids were received. Councilmen Ginna and Fisk were appointed assistants to the clerk in the work of opening the bids. The latter were read off in detail and referred to the sewer committee, who retired to ascertain the total figures of the bids, and report later in the evening.

Mr. Fish reported that the street railway matter would have to be laid over till next Monday evening. He offered a resolution that Monday evening, November 4th, be set as the time to have the property owners along the proposed extension of Watchung avenue meet at the council rooms to make a final settlement in regard thereto. It was adopted.

Another resolution by the same Councilman was adopted that the said property owners be given due notice. He then presented a notice to be sent to them and also published in the city papers, providing the Corporation Counsel so directed. On his motion it was adopted.

A recess was then taken till the sewer committee returned with their report. Chairman Frost reported that four bids had been received as follows:

Patrick Plunkitt, of Jersey City, $34,126.20; Washburn & Washburn, of New York and Chicago, $24,662.50; T. H. Harrison & Sons, of Newark, $34,867.60; M. Honan & Sons, of Chester, Pa., $27,566.55.

Mr. Frost then offered a resolution that Washburn & Washburn, of New York and Chicago, be given the contract and that the bond be arranged within the specified time. It was so adopted all voting yes, except Mr. Frazee and Mr. Moore.

The work is to be commenced on October 15th, 1895.

Mr. Erickson offered a resolution, which was adopted, that on due execution of contract the checks of the various bidders be returned to them.

After a resolution was offered by Mr. Dumont and adopted that $3,000 be borrowed to carry on the sewer work, Council adjourned to meet on Monday evening, October 7th.

Plainfield '95.

The following reasons are put forth by the Christian Endeavor why the State convention should come to Plainfield:

1st—The local union were the first to ask for it.

2d—It is easily accessible from all parts of the State.

3d—It has the largest inclosed hall in the State.

4th—It is abundantly able to care for the convention delegates.

5th—It can raise all moneys needed for the convention expenses.

6th—It needs the spiritual awakening the convention will infuse.

7th—Plainfield wants the convention.

Mr. Demarest's Good Luck.

The President of the United States, by an executive order issued Monday, has placed about one-half the U. S. consulships, including that here, under the Civil Service regulations. This means that Colonel Demarest will leave us only in the event of his promotion and not upon a change of administration. When the day comes for his promotion, Brockville will be sorry indeed to lose him. His friends here are reduced to the seeming unfriendliness of wishing that he may never be promoted. Uncle Sam could not find anywhere a representative who would be better liked here than Colonel Demarest is, or who would deserve better the esteem in which he is held.—Brockville (Ont.) Times.

Every mother should know that croup can be prevented. The first symptom of true croup is hoarseness. This is followed by a peculiar rough cough. If Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is given freely as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even after the cough has developed it will prevent the attack. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, corner Park and North avenues.

EAT WELL IS TO THINK WELL.

MRS. ETTA MORSE HUDDERS' INTERESTING TALK ON FOOD.

Points on What We Should Eat and How We Should Eat It—Too Many People Eat in a Hurry—Good Advice.

The first of the five lectures arranged for the benefit of school suffrage for woman was given in the small hall of the Y. M. C. A. Tuesday afternoon at four o'clock by Mrs. Etta Morse Hudders, of New York, on "The Influence of Food on Health."

Aaron M. Powell was present and after stating the object for which the lectures are given, that of securing money to assist school suffrage, introduced Mrs. Hudders.

There was a large audience present that listened with deep interest to this well-informed speaker on a very broad subject. Mrs. Hudders used a table upon which she exhibited samples of various foods, etc. The speaker then went on to explain the great influence that food had on health. The fact that wheat contained sugar, fat and starch, she considered it to be the most nutritious, and with all the food eaten there must be vitalizers such as mineral waters. The latter acted also as an eliminator, an absorbent for fruit and light green vegetables. It is what we digest that builds up the system. The blood is the carrier of nutrition to every part of the body, and every day the different parts must receive their nourishment.

Our food should be well masticated. Max O'Rell once said that the reason so many American people had indigestion was that you could see a sign on the office door at the noon hour "Will be back in five minutes; gone to lunch."

The meat and bread that we eat should be thoroughly masticated, and the habit of general diet should be well established. If not, sick headache, sallow complexion, and stomach trouble results.

Oatmeal is a strong food and should not be eaten by people who are not very active, for its qualities are heating.

Excessive eating of all kinds of animal food are injurious. If we wish to retain our youthfulness we should eat fruits, grains and cereals. Nervous prostration is nothing more than starvation of the brain, and the nervous system must have nourishing food to keep it in excellent condition. The tendency, the speaker thought among American people, was toward fatty degeneration, causing apoplexy, and heart failure.

When a person is tired they should eat lightly and when they are busy light food should be partaken of.

"To think well, eat well and breath well, is to live well and thus be well," was the motto that hung on the wall and Mrs. Hudders explained in a few words its meaning. Continuing, she said that sweet potatoes were more nourishing than white potatoes. She did not recommend salted almonds, for she believed them injurious. Corn bread, as a winter food, was excellent and should be used more generally.

The balance of the afternoon was devoted to the answering of questions by different ones in the audience, and at the close slices of whole wheat bread were distributed among those present.

On account of the large number present it is probable that the next lecture will be given in the main hall of the building.

"The Ethics of Citizenship" will be the subject of the next lecture by Miss Jane L. Slocum, on Tuesday afternoon, October 8th, at 4 o'clock.

Mrs. Rue was present with her costumes.

Camp Hand's Anniversary.

Arrangements for the second entertainment to be given by John Hand Camp, No. 28, S. of V., Friday evening, October 25th, were completed at the meeting of the camp last evening. James L. Stryker, one of the members, presented the camp with a very handsome case in which will be placed the thirty guns in possession of the camp. The case is complete in every detail and the boys appreciate the gift very much. Under the direction of Sergeant of Guard H. S. Thatcher, the team worked the Degree of Friendship in a very satisfactory manner.

Irving W. Larimore, physical director of Y. M. C. A., Des Moines, Iowa, says he can conscientiously recommend Chamberlain's Pain Balm to athletes, gymnasts, bicyclists, football players and the profession in general for bruises, sprains and dislocations; also for soreness and stiffness of the muscles. When applied before the parts become swollen it will effect a cure in one half the time usually required. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

THE DAILY PRESS MEDAL.

HIGH SCHOOL ATHLETES ARRANGE FOR THEIR FIELD DAY.

The Events Decided Upon—The Press Medal to Be For the All-Around Championship—List of the Officials.

The Plainfield High School Athletic Association is to have its usual handicap field day on Saturday, October 12th, and The Daily Press will offer, the same as last year, a medal for the all-around championship.

The P. H. S. A. A. met yesterday afternoon at the High School building. Six new members were admitted and then the report of the committee on the field day was made. Chairman Cornwell first gave the list of events which were amended and adopted in the following order:

One hundred-yards dash; one-third-mile bicycle race; two hundred and twenty-yards dash; putting the shot; one-mile bicycle race; running high jump; three-legged race; pole vault; four hundred and forty-yards run; running broad jump; two-mile bicycle race; one-half-mile relay foot race.

There was considerable discussion over the events and a number of suggestions were made to the committee.

The list of officials was then read and accepted.

Referee, Charles H. Angleman; Judges, Lyman R. Allen, D. A. McPhie, I. Winthrop Travell; Clerk of the Course, Charles B. Morse; Assistant Clerks, Henry B. Drake, J. Hazelwood Craig; Timers, S. C. Crane, Thomas A. Cuming, Walter B. Rittenhouse; Starter, A. M. Franklin; Announcer, Raymond A. McGee.

The handicapping is to be done by the following committee: C. B. Morse, T. A. Cuming, S. C. Crane. The entries are to be made with Secretary H. L. Richardson, and are to close on Monday, October 7th. Charles Noble was appointed committee on printing. After a lengthy discussion the report of the committee on the field day was accepted with the amendments made.

The announcement that The Daily Press would offer the all-round championship medal was made by a representative of The Press. The statement was hailed with delight by the members, and a unanimous vote of thanks immediately passed, thanking The Daily Press for their kindness in giving the medal. The medal will bring out a number of new candidates for honors, and the contest for the all-round championship promises to be a close and exciting one.

After the excitement had lessened, the report of the treasurer was heard, and several outstanding debts ordered paid. An assessment was made for the expenses of the field day. After settling other matters pertaining to the association and the field day, the meeting adjourned.

A FURNITURE SQUABBLE.

Murphy Buys on the Installment Plan and Gets Into Trouble.

There promises to be a lively time if John Murphy, formerly of Somerville, but now of Pennsylvania, does all that he promises. When Mr. Murphy resided in Somerville he purchased a quantity of furniture from Fairchild, the furniture dealer in Somerville, on the installment plan. He paid the first installment all right, but suddenly took up his bed and the rest of the furniture and walked out of town. He came here and stored the furniture in J. L. Marshall's storehouse on Park avenue, and then went to Pennsylvania. Both Fairchild and the landlord were wroth over the way that they had been treated and vowed vengeance. Several days ago the furniture was discovered in Plainfield and the former victims were happy again. Writs of attachment were immediately issued on the furniture.

Mr. Murphy has written Justice Nash, who issued the writs, that if the goods are sold they will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

Laid Off for Carelessness.

As a result of the smashup on the Jersey Central at Dunellen a few mornings ago the conductor, brakemen and switchman were all laid off for a time. The engineer and the firemen were held blameless from the fact that the switch was left open for them to pass through by the switchman.

"Many of the citizens of Rainsville, Indiana, are never without a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house," says Jacob Brown, the leading merchant of the place. This Remedy has proven of so much value for colds and croup in children that few mothers who know its worth are willing to be without it. FANWOOD BOROUGHITES WIN.

THE SPECIAL ELECTION CARRIED BY THE PROGRESSIVE ONES.

A Majority of Thirty-nine Recorded for Them—Capt. Tuzo and Son Establish a Camp, Residence But It Did Not Go.

The Fanwood boroughites gained another victory Tuesday when the second special election was held to determine whether or not that section of the township near the railroad station should be separated into a borough government. An election for this purpose was held some time ago, but some irregularity was made by not keeping the polls open long enough, and so as not to invalidate the formation of the borough the second election was held yesterday. The election was carried by those in favor of the borough government by a majority of thirty-nine.

The polls were opened at six o'clock in the morning and remained so till all had an opportunity to vote. The inspectors of election were Sheriff Geo. Kyte, Walter S. Force and Wm. Stanbury. In connection with the contest a very amusing incident happened.

Captain Tuzo and his son, who, by the way, are not residents of the township, were strongly opposed to the proposed change, and they were very anxious to defeat the object.

The Captain owns a small lot at the corner of Terrill road and King street, which is just on the line of the township, and he thought that fact entitled him to all the privileges accorded any citizen.

On Monday night he pitched a tent on his small domain, in which he and his son slept all night so as to be on hand early Tuesday morning to cast their votes against the township becoming a borough. Their efforts were in vain, however, for the votes did not count from the fact that they had not been residents of the township long enough.

An election will be held at an early date to choose officers to govern the new borough.

THE ROLLER AT WORK.

Witnessed by a Number of Officials Who Are Pleased With It.

The new steam roller was given a test in a new line of work Tuesday afternoon. The picks, sharp prongs of steel about five inches long, were placed around the large side rollers and as the roller moved forward, the picks broke up the thin upper layer of crushed stone. The work of the picks was shown on East Fifth street between Sycamore street and Park avenue, where there still remained a high ridge from the sewer trench. The ridge and the surface of the road on either side was loosened. Then a man with a rake rounded up the street and the roller, with the picks removed set at work. The entire block was picked up and partially rolled during the afternoon from one until about four o'clock. A committee of citizens from Lebanon, Pa., came to witness the test in company with Street Commissioner Meeker and were as enthusiastic as he was before the roller had completed its work.

Although the steam roller will be more expensive in the beginning than a horse roller, it is much cheaper in daily work. The horses necessary to pull a roller for one day cost $8 while all the expenses for the steam roller do not average over $5 daily.

The roller will be able to work up to about the first of December, when the ground becomes solidly frozen. Rainy weather will not hinder as the interior of the cab can be protected from the elements by curtains. The work this fall will be on the streets in which both central and house mains have been laid.

Railroad Company Settled.

The case of Mrs. Porr against a street railway company in New York was settled by the company recently before it went into the courts. It will be remembered that Mrs. Porr was on her way to Plainfield with a baby girl, and in alighting from a street car in New York the child was thrown to the ground and received injuries from which she never recovered. The accident was caused through the carelessness of the conductor. Mrs. Porr received $100 and funeral expenses from the company, for which she agreed to settle.

THE REGULARS DEFEATED.

THE MEMBERS' TICKET OF THE PARK CLUB ELECTED.

The Vote Was Three to One—Annual Report of the Officers Show the Club to Be In a Highly Prosperous Condition.

It was with an overwhelming vote that the members' tickets defeated the regular ticket at the Park Club last Monday. The election took place at the annual meeting and was for the nine members of the Board of Governors in whose hands the management of the club rests. The regular ticket consisted of the following: George P. Dupee, Charles A. Reed, George D. Hallock, Benj. M. Day, George C. Worth, J. E. Erickson, Augustus VanDeventer, George T. Rogers, Wm. N. Runyon.

The opposition ticket was composed of George P. Dupee, Benj. M. Day, Charles A. Reed, George C. Worth, George D. Hallock, Henry A. McGee, Samuel Townsend, Elston M. French, Wm. J. Roome.

There were thirty-one ballots cast, of which the opposition ticket received twenty-three, the regular nominees seven, and one vote was irregular.

The treasurer of the club made his annual report at the beginning of the meeting which showed the club to be in excellent financial condition. President B. A. Hegeman, Jr., presided at the meeting.

After the annual meeting of the club was adjourned, the newly-elected board of governors met and selected officers for the ensuing year.

The following were chosen: President, Charles A. Reed; vice-president, Benjamin M. Day; secretary, George D. Hallock; treasurer, George P. Dupee.

The board will hold its regular meeting on next Tuesday evening.

GETTING READY FOR GOLF.

Hillside Club Meet Tonight to Arrange for the Sport.

The golf course of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, the name by which the association will hereafter be known, is about finished, and before the present month is over some expert golfers from out of town clubs will be invited to play an exhibition game, at which time the members of the club and their many friends will have an opportunity afforded them to see the charm of the game.

The club has been most fortunate in securing land well adapted for golfing and the course is picturesquely laid out on the Stillman and Leonard properties east of Plainfield avenue, running north, east and south of the Barnaby estate.

This evening a special meeting of the club will be held at the club-house on Watchung avenue for the purpose of changing the constitution and by-laws of the club to conform with the interests of golf and to elect about forty new members who have made application for membership in consideration of the new feature. This will no doubt insure the future success of the organization.

Many are looking forward with great pleasure to the chance of playing the game, and it is proposed to have an expert on the grounds daily, for three or four weeks, to teach the game to those unfamiliar with it. Notice will be given later, when the members will have this opportunity.

—The regular quarterly business meeting and election of officers of the Congregational Y. P. S. C. E. will take place in the church parlors Thursday evening, October 3d, at 8 o'clock.

There is no medicine so often needed in every home and so admirably adapted to the purposes for which it is intended, as Chamberlain's Pain Balm. Hardly a week passes but some member of the family has need of it. A toothache or headache may be cured by it. A touch of rheumatism or neuralgia quieted. The severe pain of a burn or scald promptly relieved and the sore healed in much less time than when medicine has to be sent for. A sprain may be promptly treated before inflammation sets in, which insures a cure in about one-third of the time otherwise required. Cuts and bruises should receive immediate treatment before the parts become swollen, which can only be done when Pain Balm is kept at hand. A sore throat may be cured before it becomes serious. A troublesome corn may be removed by applying it twice a day for a week or two. A lame back may be cured and several days of valuable time saved or a pain in the side or chest relieved without paying a doctor bill. Procure a 50 cent bottle at once and you will never regret it. For sale by Reynold's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

THE BOROUGH IRE IS UP.

ACROSS-THE-BROOK PEOPLE SAY THE CITY MUST DO SOMETHING.

Borough Board of Health Claim That the Brook is Fouled by Sewage From the City Side Only—Talk of Indictments.

The following is a copy of the letter which the North Plainfield Borough Board of Health has prepared to be sent to the City Common Council, and which is expected to be presented to the latter body next Monday evening:

The Board of Health of the borough of North Plainfield begs to call your attention to the unsanitary condition of Green brook. Into this stream many citizens of your city habitually sewer. Of this fact this board has ample evidence. The bed of the brook is overgrown with weeds and grass upon which the sewage matter collects with the result that offensive odors arise and germs of disease are spread. Many of your physicians can cite instances of disease traceable to this source. This condition has repeatedly been called to the attention of the Board of Health of your city, but that board fails to treat the matter with the serious attention it deserves. After great efforts on our part your board last year finally consented to pay one-half of the expense of removing the grass and weeds and flushing out the brook. This year your board refuses to take any action. We feel that inasmuch as we have entirely stopped any sewering into the brook from our side, and the foul and unhealthy condition which now exists is due entirely to the action of your own citizens, we should not be called upon to contribute toward the expense of remedying the evil. We know that the law of 1893, found on page 281 of the laws of that year, would enable us to put a stop to the practice of emptying sewage into the brook indulged in by your citizens. That law provides a penalty of one thousand dollars fine and two years imprisonment.

We recognize the fact that you are endeavoring to provide a system of sewers which will be adequate to your needs, and for that reason we have temporized for years and restrained any attempt to indict those who are constantly violating the law. But, when your Health Board neglects to make the slightest effort to counteract the evil, and refuses to take those precautions which the most casual examination shows are imperative if the health of the community is of consequence, we feel that it is our duty to act. We should deplore the necessity of setting in motion a law which is so severe as the one mentioned, and for that reason we call the matter to your attention in the hope that such prompt action will be taken that we will be justified in permitting the matter to rest for the present. The situation requires immediate action and we trust that your honorable body will recognize this fact and that we shall not find it necessary to appeal to any different tribunal.

SHAVING ON SUNDAY.

The Barber Evades the Ordinance By Visiting His Customer.

There is one thing in obeying the letter of a law and another in obeying the spirit of it. Several of the barbers who were foremost in pushing forward the Sunday closing agitation are now, although obeying the ordinance by closing their shops on Sunday, working as hard as ever on the day of rest. Instead of the customer coming to the barber as on week days the barber goes to his customer and there, at his residence, the business man gets his Sunday shave after all. Although many of the other barbers know of this scheme to get around the ordinance, they have taken no action as they believe it is a losing game to play. They are, however, very indignant at their brother tradesmen for breaking faith in this matter.

When the thermometer is way up the price of coal is way down, and when the thermometer is way down the price of coal is way up. Why is it?

"I would rather trust that medicine than any doctor I know of," says Mrs. Hattie Mason, of Chilton, Carter Co., Mo., in speaking of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. For sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

STRANGE AMERICAN CUSTOMS.

A Matter of Considerable Surprise to Foreign Tourists.

"I have been in America but two days," said the talkative foreigner, "but already I have become impressed with some of the strange customs of the country."

"Indeed! What particular customs do you refer to?"

"Well, for one thing, I had not been ashore for more than one hour when a spruce official looking man came up to me. He showed a silver badge of some sort and said he was a collector of the internal revenue. He asked if I had paid my side whiskers license yet. I told him that I didn't know side whiskers were taxed in America. He said they were, and that the tax was $4 a year. He added that I might consider myself lucky that he did not add 25 per cent. for cost of collection, because it was my duty to report at City Hall and pay the tax, without putting the nation to the expense of sending a collector after the money."

"You paid him, did you?"

"Oh, yes, and I was quite glad that I did not wear a full beard. He said the assessments on full beards was $10 per chin. Why do you have such odd taxes in America? Is it so very expensive to run a republican government?"

"It costs quite a good deal. But was that your only experience?"

"No, it wasn't. About two hours later another man approached me, asked me if I had yet procured the Government permit entitling me to wear trousers of such a wide stripe as those I had on. It was the same pair I'm wearing now. I asked what the blamed Government would do if I refused to pay for such a permit. He replied that the fee for the permit was so excessively small that no one tried to evade payment. It was only $2 he said. The penalty was the confiscation of the trousers, and it would be his painful duty to take me to the nearest police station and take posession of my garments in the name of the United States Government if I manifested any further hesitancy about producing the $2. As I did not want a scene, I paid him the money and he left."

"You would have done well to have allowed him to take you to the police station."

"Why?"

"You could have told your story, and he would have been locked up on a charge of swindling."

"Do you mean to say that he was not an official of the Government?"

"That's what I mean."

"But he said he was."

"I'm very much afraid that he didn't speak the truth."

"But how about the other?"

"He was a fraud, too."

"But he showed me his badge."

"That cuts no ice."

"I beg pardon! It doesn't do what?"

"I said it cut no ice. I meant that it was of no significance. Thieves can get badges when they deem it necessary to use them in their business."

"But who are the real officers who issue permits to wear striped trousers, and who receive the tax on side whiskers?"

"There are no such officers."

"And no such taxes?"

"No."

"Then they both lied?"

"Yes."

"Well, I never would have thought it. Do you suppose that others will try to do me up in this way?"

"It would not surprise me in the least."

"Allow me to thank you for putting me on my guard, sir. I pay no more taxes except at the City Hall. Good-day, sir."—Harper's Bazar.

The Worst to Come.

COLORED BAPTISTS CONVENE.

The Board Meets and Decides in Favor of Home Missions.

Another division of the Baptist church meets here in convention today and tomorrow. It is the Afro-American Baptist Association, which is now holding its annual State convention at the Mt. Olive Baptist church on Liberty street. A large number of delegates are already present and many more are expected. The board of managers of the association met this morning at ten o'clock to review the mission work done. It was found that there are fifty colored Baptist churches in this district, and that each is giving from seven to ten dollars toward missionary work in other fields. While in the vast field for work in New Jersey, there are no missionaries, and the churches give no money to aid in the work, except in a very scattering manner. It was the sentiment of the assembly that all unite together and lend their aid toward a little home missionary work.

The introductory sermon was delivered this afternoon at two o'clock by Rev. Wm. Perry, of Montclair. Then followed the election of officers of the association for the ensuing year.

Dinner was served for the delegates in the lecture room, and was looked after by the entertainment committee, Mrs. Wm. H. Manning, Mrs. P. S. Gibson, Mrs. L. Scott, Mrs. Nathan Thornton and Wm. H. Manning.

Tomorrow, L. J. Pollard, whom the First Baptist church of this city, assisted to work his way through the Richmond Theological Seminary, will be ordained.

BIG DELEGATION GOING.

Christian Endeavorers Will Go Forth to Win at Atlantic City.

How can Plainfield secure the '96 State Convention of Christian Endeavor? First, those who have the power of deciding where the convention of '96 shall be held, must understand Plainfield is in earnest and really wants the convention. Second, it must be demonstrated that the Colorado of the East is well suited both as to accommodations, churches hotels, boarding houses, etc., and as to easiness of access.

Everyone knows of the arrangements which the local union has made for conveying the delegates from this locality to Atlantic City next month when the '95 State Convention takes place. As already published, two hotels will be at the disposal of the party from Plainfield, and the cost of the entire trip will be extremely small. With such provision, a large number ought to go from Plainfield, and thus show their desire to have the next convention in their own city. A large representation at the '95 will do much towards securing the '96.

NO DIVISION LINE.

And Borough and Township Politicians Are Hustling to Get One.

A new point has arisen in North Plainfield township that is causing the politicians to put on their thinking caps. As a matter of fact the dividing line between the township and borough has never been established and its necessity was never thought of until the delegates went to the State convention recently and the township was denied a representation. Of course there was much surprise shown, but on second thought they were convinced that the matter should be settled.

The Somerset county convention will be held early next month and unless the line is established the delegates will meet the same obstacle there, and in consequence those interested are doing some tall hustling. Old books are being hunted and F. A. Dunham, who did some surveying years ago, is being sought for the valuable information.

The North Plainfield township committee will meet this evening at Horace Martin's blacksmith shop and will endeavor to get some light on the subject.

TALK OF INCREASING PEW RENTS.

The Crescent Avenue Church Discusses the Question, But Take No Action.

After the regular Wednesday evening prayer meeting at the Crescent Avenue church last evening, a meeting was held to decide the question of raising the pew rents. Ex-Mayor Charles Place called the meeting to order, after which Henry B. Newhall and W. P. Arnold read their respective reports regarding the change. The meeting was then opened for discussion. After hearing both sides of the question, a motion was made to adjourn until next Wednesday evening at the same time. This motion was unanimously carried.

District Convention.

The fall convention of the Elizabeth district meeting of the Epworth League will be held at Somerville on Thursday, October 24th. Each chapter in the district will be entitled to four delegates who will be entertained by the Somerville chapter.

MRS. FERNANDEZ HAS LEFT.

Went Away Owing Many Bills, But the Debtors Expect to Get Their Money—She Talked of Going to California.

What promises to be quite an interesting complication has arisen in the borough which apparently can only be settled satisfactorily to all parties by the return of Mrs. Ula Fernandez, who left her home at 110 Park place a week ago today and of whom nothing has been heard since.

Last Thursday, Mrs. Fernandez and her little two-year-old daughter left here with several trunks. John Gill, who had had charge of her summer residence at Dog Corners, and Miss Maggie Nugent, the nurse who has cared for the little girl, accompanied her to New York, where they all spent Wednesday night at a hotel. On Thursday, Miss Nugent told a Daily Press reporter this morning, Mrs. Fernandez sent her with a message to Plainfield and that when she returned the party was missing. She went to the station, but found that her own as well as her mistress' trunks had disappeared also.

"She told me some time ago that she was going to remarry her former husband, W. F. Fernandez," said Miss Nugent, "and was going south with him where he was to take a new position." Supposing, of course, that it was all right, Miss Nugent returned and waited.

Saturday Miss Nugent's suspicions became aroused and she went to Brooklyn to see Mr. Fernandez, who is superintendent of the Edison Electric Light Works on Lexington avenue. When she found him, he said that he had seen nothing of his former wife and then the two started on a hunt for the missing woman which proved unsuccessful.

When Miss Nugent returned, he said that he wished it contradicted that he was to remarry his former wife.

"Was the trunk all right?" inquired The Press reporter.

"Yes, except a letter that she wrote to me once, which was missing," was the reply. In answer to the question of whether the letter contained anything important, she said "Yes, it made me the guardian of the child, which is an adopted one."

Some time ago, Mrs. Fernandez remarked to a friend that she was getting tired of Plainfield, and that she was not going to stay here any longer, but would probably spend the winter in California.

When she went away she was in debt to the nurse about $14, and also owed Mrs. L. Adams, the East Front street millinery, about $70. There were a number of other smaller debts which, with those already mentioned, amounted to about $200. At the time of Mrs. Fernandez's departure she was supposed to possess a horse, two buggies and the household effects at her home on Park place. The creditors immediately issued a writ of attachment and retained George W. DeMeza to look after their interests. But now Adam C. Blair, the liveryman, through his counsel, Judge W. A. Coddington, says that she sold the horse, buggies and the household effects to him previous to her departure.

Mr. Coddington told a Daily Press reporter yesterday afternoon that he thought that Mrs. Fernandez would return soon and settle all the trouble, as there seems to be no reason for her departing without a settlement with her creditors as she has an independent income of her own and has influential and wealthy relatives.

Smashed Both Shafts.

There was quite a lively time on the Springfield road last evening at about nine o'clock, where the road branches off for Glenside Park. A young man from Orange was driving over to see friends in Plainfield when, in some manner, his horse became frightened and jumped backward getting its feet entangled in the cross-bar. The horse was thrown and both shafts were snapped while the dashbard was kicked out of place. Thanks to the kindness of Ed. Schenk, the milkman, the young man was enabled to go on to Plainfield where he spent the night with his friend, Eugene Moore, of East Fifth street.

Run Into by a Wheel.

"Accidents will happen in the best regulated families," is an old saying, and yesterday afternoon shortly before six o'clock Herbert Chamberlain, of that very well regulated family, the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company, accidentally ran over little Eddie Cooper, son of Howard Cooper, foreman for M. Quinn, the East Fourth street blacksmith. Mr. Chamberlain was riding down East Fourth street on his wheel when he saw the lad in the road. He rang his bell and tried to turn out of the way, but the little fellow was frightened and ran the wrong way. He was not seriously injured by the tumble, however.

WORK AMONG THE SLUMS.

Miss Potter Speaks Very Interestingly of Her Work and Illustrates It.

The slums of New York and mission work among them, was the subject of a very interesting stereopticon lecture in the lecture room of the Park Avenue Baptist church last evening. Miss Ellie Potter, of the Morning Star Mission, spoke very interestingly, while the instrument was run by an assistant that accompanied her. The mission is located in the heart of Chinatown on the third floor of a building on Doyer street, near the rooms of the Rescue Band of whom Plainfield has already heard.

The evening opened with devotional exercises led by Rev. J. W. Richardson, after which a view of Chatham Square was shown. Then Miss Potter said that she would take her audience on a tour throug the streets in that vicinity. Then followed views of the streets, shops, houses, and rear tenement yards where the sunshine is never seen, which were all explained. She then told of the people and how they lived, especially the children who often came to the mission to beg for something to eat. The mission, both outside and inside, was next illustrated and the methods of conducting the work described. The Chinese missionary was also shown on the sheet with a picture of his family. Then photographs of the various Christian Chinamen in the mission were reproduced. The deeply interested audience was next told of the Sunday-school and sewing school, in which boys as well as girls learned that useful art. Miss Potter concluded by telling how great the work was and how much more they could do if they had more to do it with.

The lecture room was crowded with a highly interested audience who greatly enjoyed Miss Potter's address. After a collection the meeting was dismissed.

A MORNING BLAZE.

A Gasoline Stove Sets the Kitchen of Isaac R. Giles on Fire.

The residents of the Second ward were rudely awakened from their morning nap this morning at about 6:10 by a fire alarm sent in from Box 25. Those that rushed to the box were directed to the house of Isaac R. Giles, of 315 East Sixth street, where the kitchen was all ablaze.

Early this morning Mrs. Giles filled the gasoline stove and wiped it off with a rag which she put to one side. Then she lighted the stove but it did not work as it should, and the next instant the room was filled with flames. The fire spread from the blazing rag and stove to a clothes horse filled with freshly ironed garments which also blazed up. Mrs. Giles seeing that she couldn't extinguish the flames, left the room to give the alarm to the rest of the family.

John Ross, of East Sixth street, was the first one outside of the house to learn of the fire and came at once to the rescue. David Smalley, of Smalley Brothers, who resides across the street also came with several of his men to render their assistance, while Letter-Carrier VanWinkle who happend by sent in an alarm from Box 25. But before the fire department could reach the scene of the fire a large tub of water brought from Mr. Smalley's extinguished the flames.

The clothes on the clothes horse were all badly burned, while the woodwork in the kitchen was slightly charred. The walls in the dining room were also blistered, while several other rooms were blackened with smoke. The entire damage done is estimated at about $150 which will be fully covered by insurance secured through the agency of William A. Woodruff.

Middlesex Court Cases.

Two cases come up in the Middlesex county circuit court at New Brunswick today which are of interest to Plainfielders. The first is Johnson against Cole, on contract, appealed from Justice Huff and jury. George W. DeMeza appears for Johnson, and Judge W. A. Coddington for Cole. The other case is Keratzel against Seader, in tort, appealed from Justice Storms and a jury. Judge W. A Coddington is the counsel for the plaintiff, and George W. DeMeza for the defendant.

Put Up Signs.

The sewer contractors make a mistake in not putting up a sign at the head of a street when closed. A man from Dunellen reported to this office this morning that through the fault of the contractors to do as above suggested on West Front street he missed his train. He drove through the street almost to Plainfield avenue before he learned he could not get through.

W. T. Kirk to Build a Tower.

The fire alarm tower for which an appropriation was voted a year ago by the residents of Summit, is now to be built. W. T. Kirk & Co., of this city, have been awarded the contract at $600. The tower will be erected in the rear of the town building, and will be 65 feet in height and 20 square feet at base. This will permit the use of a bell weighing 2,000 pounds.

NO REFORM IN THE DALTON'S

INTERESTING COLLOQUY BETWEEN AN OUTLAW AND A MISSIONARY.

Miss Moffett Tells of Her Work in the Slums and Out in the Wild West—A Large Number Instructively Entertained

A charming reception and tea was given Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. C. L. Goodrich, of West Seventh street, to the ladies of the Congregational church, to meet Miss Moffett, a home missionary, who returns to her work in Oklahoma next month, who was introduced, after which she gave an informal talk about her work.

She was the first woman in New York to do rescue work in the slums at night. In this work she was very successful. Her pathetic stories of the unfortunate women and girls whom she had been privileged to help, brought tears to the eyes of many of her hearers.

Her work next led her into the country towns of Vermont, where the American Board send missionaries two by two to help over-burdened pastors in their work in the suburban districts, where the inhabitants often live almost like heathen, seldom or never attending church, and doing their work on Sunday, as on any other day. This state of things, said Miss Moffett, is not in Vermont alone, it is in New Jersey, New York and all over the country. In one district, where the people threatened to "run the missionaries out of town," after a two weeks stay, Miss Moffett and her companion left a very different state of affairs; a Christian Endeavor Society had been organized, at least one in every family had come out on the side of Christ, and the worst man in the place, a man with the reputation of being the most profane in the county, had become an earhest Christian.

Lately, Miss Moffett's work has been in Oklahoma. In this city, young in years, but old in wickedness, she has had some strange experiences. On her arrival in the place, the train she was on on was "held up" by banditts of the "Dalton gang." The only woman in the sleeper, she hurridly put her money in her shoe, and determined not to give it up without an effort. But when the depredators reached her berth, they informed her that "they never molested ladies," and passed on.

One day, while walking with a friend, her companion remarked:

"There comes one who is probably the wickedist man you ever saw, one of the Daltons, a leader of the banditts."

Miss Moffett looked carefully at the man, resolved that she would know him again, if she ever came in contact with him.

Driving alone one day, several miles from town, she met a solitary horseman, and recognized him as the formidable Dalton.

She remembered that he "never molested ladies," and instantly her resolution was taken. She stopped her carriage and said:

"Good morning, Mr. Dalton!"

He halted instantly, and gazed at her in astonishment.

"I'm afraid I do not know you, he said.

She told him who she was, and he looked surprised.

"Why, you don't look a bit like a missionary!" he exclaimed.

"Missionaries wear black gowns and black bonnets."

"The missionaries up our way have taken up some new ideas."

Miss Moffett replied: "We wish to look as nicely as we can for our Saviour."

"Are you going to preach to me?" he demanded.

"No, I am not going to preach to you, but I want to ask you one thing. Mr. Dalton, don't you ever get tired of the life you are leading? Wouldn't you like to reform, if you had a good opportunity?"

"Well," said he, "reform isn't much in my line, or in my family's line. We ain't made of that kind of stuff."

"We have two of your brothers up here in the penitentiary," said Miss Moffett.

"And I suppose you think I ought to be there too," he said quickly.

"What do you think about it, Mr. Dalton?" asked the missionary.

"Well, I suppose if I had my just deserts, I'd be behind some prison bars, sure enough," he admitted.

"But I'll show you what my family thinks about reforming.

"One of my brothers determined to leave this wild life, and wrote to our mother that if she would send him the money, he would reform, and settle down to an honest life."

"Of course she sent him the money?"

"She just didn't then! She wrote back that she would see him in hell first, that reform didn't run in the Dalton family. So you see what sort of stuff I am made of."

The missionary looked full in his face with her earnest eyes, and said:

"Mr. Dalton, I am very sorry for you and I shall pray for you every day."

"Well," said he, "I like your spunk. Shake hands, will you? And now remember that I am your friend. It isn't a small matter to have a Dalton for your friend, or your enemy, if a Dalton says he will kill you, you are as good as a dead woman, whether it is now or ten years from now, and your friend once, he is your friend forever."

Who can tell what may be the result of that encounter? He will not forget that a pure woman said she was sorry for him, and would pray for him every day.

Miss Moffett also told of the work for the cow-boys, and among the loney women in the thinly-settled regions of the west.

The audience, which filled the drawing room and extended out into the halls, listened in absorbed interest to the speaker, and at the close gathered around her, eager to grasp the hand of the earnest young worker for the Master.

In the dining room dainty refreshments were served. Miss Ellis presided at the tea table, while Miss Kirkner dispensed lemonade.

WELCOMED THEMSELVES.

But Another Union Will be the Outcome of the Convention.

The Union County W. C. T. U. Convention held yesterday in the Baptist church at Roselle, was thoroughly interesting and productive of much good. At present there is no Union in that place, and it was with the intention, if possible, of organizing one that the convention was held there. The president, Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, of Plainfield, presided and after the meeting was opened with devotional exercises made an address in which she said that the Union was obliged to welcome itself, but everything went to show that the members were welcome by the choice decoration of flowers and preparation made for their reception. The sessions were occupied with the reading of papers and reports and a Bible reading by Mrs. J. T. Ellis, of Newark. Her text was taken from Psalms 104, "Finally my sisters be strong in the Lord and in the power of His might."

The present county officers were re-elected as follows: President, Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, of Plainfield; corresponding-secretary, Mrs. S. R. Krom, of Plainfield; recording secretary, Mrs. Irving, of Westfield; treasurer, Mrs. T. C. Bodine, of Dunellen.

HELD UP BY FIVE MEN.

FRANK MONCTON HAD AN EXCITING ADVENTURE LAST NIGHT.

The Highwaymen, With Clubs in Their Hands, Went Through His Pockets, But Gained No Booty—Who Were They?

George Moncton, who works for Mrs. John Brown, proprietor of the Odorless Excavating Company, had an experience last night about twelve o'clock that was far from pleasant.

He and several other men were working in the rear of Charles Smith's saloon on West Front street, Moncton driving the wagon. About 11:30 he left town with a load of refuse to take below the city line on Park avenue where such material is left.

He got along all right until he reached the woods just this side of the city line, when without any warning five men jumped out into the road, all carrying clubs.

Moncton's team was stopped and held, while three of the men mounted the wagon in search of anything they could find. They went through his pockets, in spite of the fact that Moncton told them that he had nothing. After being satisfied that such was the case they went back in the woods to wait for some other victim.

Moncton proceeded on his journey and then came back to Plainfield thoroughly frightened. He refused to go out again.

The matter was reported to the police, but they were unable to do anything as the place was too far out.

Taken Suddenly Ill.

Ex Councilman Ernest R. Ackerman, who has been unwell for the past few days, was taken ill at his office in New York yesterday. His brother, Marion S. Ackerman, accompanied him to Plainfield in a private sleeping coach, arriving here about 3:30 in the afternoon. Upon their arrival in this city they were met by Dr. Endicott and the three were driven to Mr. Ackerman's home in a coach. The Doctor attributes his illness to close confinement to business and the excessive heat. It is thought he will be all right in a few days.

A Big Job Proposed.

In speaking of the frequency of citizens being held up on the outskirts of Plainfield, a city councilman said last night that the State ought to employ a corps of men whose duty should be to go through the State from one end to the other and clear it of these highwaymen. In this way he thought that the difficulty could be removed.

A STRONG ELEVEN.

The Y. M. C. A. Football Team are Hard at Work Practicing.

Plainfield is going to have a good football eleven, says Manager L. E. Waring, of the Y. M. C. A. football team, and he ought to know. The candidates were in the gymnasium last evening practicing under his direction. There were about sixteen present and the evening was spent very beneficially in using the tackling bag, falling on the ball and other practice. Several new candidates showed up and the team back of the line will be especially strong. The only weak point is at centre, and the man for that position has not yet appeared.

The team will meet on the old Harned Academy field this afternoon and everyone is invited to come and give the team a little practice.

RELAY RACE THE FEATURE.

EVENTS OF THE FIELD DAY OF THE HIGH SCHOOL ATHLETES.

A Medal Will be Given for the All Around Championship, and a Trophy for the Class Scoring the Most Points.

The committee which was appointed to arrange for the coming field day of the Plainfield High School Athletic Association on October 12th is not a slow one by any means, and the members have not allowed the grass to grow under their feet in their efforts to make the event a success. The committee has arranged the following order of events, subject, of course, to the approval of the association:

100 yards dash, ¼-mile bicycle race, 220 yards dash, putting the shot, one mile bicycle race, running high jump, three-legged race, pole vault, 440 yards run, two mile bicycle race, and ½-mile relay run.

The events are all to be handicapped and the committee has chosen T. A. Cuming, C. B. Morse and S. C. Crane as the handicappers.

The feature of the day will be the relay race, which is open to teams of three men from each class. One man from each class is to run one-sixth of a mile and then hand a pennant or banner that he carries to the next man on his team, who is to run the same distance and pass the pennant on to the last man. The first pennant to cross the line will be that of the winning class.

There will be a medal for the all-round championship, and some form of trophy for the class scoring the most points. The points will count 5 for first, 3 for second, and 1 for third in all, including the relay race, when the points will count only in the class contest.

The committee which has charge of the field day is as follows: Wilbur F. Cornwell, chairman; Charles Dolliver, Charles Noble, Henry Eggerding and Herbert Richardson.

Their report will come before a meeting of the association on Tuesday afternoon.

THAT DEAR LITTLE BEE.

He Grows Covetous and George Richards Suffers in Consequence.

A novel contest took place in the yard of Leal's School last Thursday, which resulted rather disastrously for one of the unwilling contestants.

George Richards, of East Front street, was enjoying an apple and while he ate he looked around. A bee saw that apple and the spirit of covetousness filled his little heart. He made a bee-line for that apple and lit on the spot where young Richards was just about to take a bite. Richards's eye was wandering about and did not rest on the wicked bee. The next moment there was war, for Richards took a bite of apple and incidentally of the bee. The covetous bee flew around inside of Richards's mouth and stung him several times until at last he made his exit through the mouth of his victim. The usual remedy of mud was impossible, so Richards had to grin and bear the pain.

AN IMPROVED ZITHER.

J. Van Eps Has Just Finished an Elegant Instrument.

Plainfield has among its many citizens one who is known to the musical world as the best zither maker in all this region. The man is J. Van Eps, of Park avenue, and he has just completed a zither, after five months toil, that promises to be a masterpiece. It has five new improvements that no other instrument has, and is perfect in design and finish. It is constructed to stand a strain of 1,500 pounds, and has a capacity of five octaves. The principle on which it is built is known to no one but Mr. Van Eps. The tone is clear and rich, and almost equals the piano in power.

In the hands of such a skillful player as Mr. Van Eps the instrument fairly speaks, and promises to take a prominent place in the latest improved musical instruments.

CRANFORD WILL NOT PLAY.

THE FOOTBALL LEAGUE WILL BE COMPOSED OF THREE TEAMS.

Think That the Other Towns Will Be Too Strong for Them—Dunellen Has Some Kicks to Make—Next Meeting Here.

From present prospects the Central New Jersey Football League will consist of a trio of clubs instead of the four that originally joined, as it is generally understood that Cranford will be unable to put an eleven on the field of sufficient strength to cope with the other teams of the league.

The advisory committee met at the Westfield Y. M. C. A. building at the call of President E. G. Wherry. President E. G. Wherry, J. Voight and a representative in the place of Robert Wherry were present from the Westfield association, Secretary Charles B. Morse was the Plainfield delegate and George W. Richardson the only Dunellen man. The verbal proxies of the last two were accepted and they were allowed to vote for their absent friends.

Cranford was not represented at the meeting and several of the members of the committee had heard that a team could not be organized as the players there refused to play in the league against the supposed heavy teams of Westfield and Plainfield. The question was discussed to some length, but no action was taken except to notify Cranford of their neglect to send their committee and to enquire if they really meant to leave the league.

The Dunellen association had several grievances to bring up which their manager and captain, Mr. Richardson, presented to the league.

It was simply impossible, he said, to organize a team in Dunellen and New Market alone, as every available player had been gotten out to practice, and only five of them would play. His proposition was that the limit of the territory, from which he might draw his material, be extended to within Piscataway township, the only towns in which are New Market and Dunellen. With this change he said that a team could be organized, otherwise Dunellen would have to withdraw from the League.

The Westfield delegation had been instructed to vote against any such change, although personally they favored it. But the combined votes of Dunellen and Plainfield carried the point.

Mr. Richardson next brought up the question of Coach Darling playing on the Dunellen team, but the idea was immediately sat upon by the other members of the committee.

The last of Dunellen's little kicks was next brought up and that was that the time of the halves be shortened. Mr. Richardson suggested twenty-five minutes, but the Westfield committee had been instructed to vote for thirty minutes. It was finally decided to vote on the question by mail.

The meeting then adjourned until next Friday evening at 7:45 at the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. building, when Cranford's answer will be acted upon.

Detectives Here Again.

There must be something about the Plainfield letter carriers that is very attractive. Sometime ago the postal authorities sent men to Plainfield to watch them, and for the past two weeks another set of men have been in the city following the carriers very closely in their rounds. People are beginning to think that the subject is an interesting one.

THE DAY OF SMALL BEGINNINGS.

A Business Man's Address to New York Editors.

Mr. George H. Daniels, general passenger agent of the New York Central Railroad, delivered an address to the editors of New York State at their annual outing at Lake George. Among other things he said:

"With a view to lending variety to what might otherwise be a dull and monotonous effort, I have selected as the basis of some very brief, but, I trust, pertinent, remarks, a subject from the writings of Zachariah: 'Despise not the day of small things.'

"In the winter of '40 or the spring of '50, a young boy, fresh from a farm, and beaming with the ingenuous enthusiasm so characteristic of the country, entered the office of the publisher of Le Roy Standard and asked if they wanted a boy. A few minutes' conversation satisfied the publisher, who was a judge of human nature, that this particular boy would, if he lived, grow to be a man, and possibly a man of considerable ability, for during his brief conversation the boy had stated that he intended to become a great journalist, the owner of a daily paper, with a large circulation, in which he would be able to compliment his friends and resist his enemies in a style that would attract general attention in the neighborhood in which the paper was published.

"After some preliminaries in regard to bonds, moral character, etc., on both sides, the boy was engaged to fold the papers at one cent a quire, the standing order for paper in the office at that time being twenty-four quires a week. With an enterprise which was indicative of future greatness, this youth, who 'despised not the day of small things,' undertook in a very short time after his appointment to increase the circulation of the paper, and within six months, by diligent efforts at odd hours when he could get away from his arduous duties, he had secured twenty-four additional subscribers, and, beginning with the seventh month, he received the princely salary of twenty-five cents a week.

"You will observe that the maximum order for paper in the most prosperous times was twenty-five quires, making a total circulation of 600, although the publisher placed at the head of his editorial columns the announcement that his was the greatest family paper in Western New York, with the largest circulation in eleven counties, and stated (but this was merely a bluff) that his business manager would make an affidavit at any time that the circulation was between 8,000 and 9,000 per week, making, of course, the finest advertising medium to be found anywhere outside of the metropolis.

"There is an old saying among the Persians that 'aspirations are prophecies which need only faith to fulfill.' The case of the young man above described is a proof of the Persian proverb.

"The boy who at that early day did so much to increase the circulation of the paper with which he was connected, is an honored member of this association, a friend of everybody, and the enemy of no man. I refer to Mr. E. H. Butler, the proprietor of the Buffalo News.

"On a fine morning in the month of May, about forty years ago, there was born in the beautiful Mohawk Valley a child, destined to wield a great influence in the journalistic world; from an early age he displayed a taste for all sorts of comic pictures. When only a very little lad he would sit for hours turning over the leaves of a patent medicine almanac, which contained pictures of an alleged humorous character, interspersed with jokes, more or less ancient, generally more than less. He often annoyed his parents by asking the explanation of these jokes, and became the admiration of all the country round on account of his remarkable appreciation of everything ludicrous.

"His earliest literary efforts were a series of jokes upon the inhabitants of the Mohawk Valley and the boatmen on the canal, published in 1867 in the Mohawk Valley Clarion and Banner of Liberty, at Canajoharie.

"These were the days of small things with our youthful editor, but with a determination which knew no defeat he labored on in his chosen field, and while still a boy became, with the gentleman who has just retired from the presidency of this association, the proprietor of one of the great daily journals at the capital of the State.

"From Albany to New York is only three hours and fifteen minutes by the Empire State Express, and the next step up the shining ladder of journalism was soon taken. To-day his name, and the names of his great journals are household words wherever the English language is spoken, another evidence of the truth of the Persian proverb in regard to aspirations.

"You, of course, know I refer to W. J. Arkell, publisher of Judge and Leslie's Weekly.

"Who would have thought that the Mohawk Valley boy, poring over an old comic almanac or Joe Miller's joke book by the dim but malodorous light of a kerosene lamp, in the days when the Standard Oil Company was struggling for an existence, would one day become the head and front of one of the greatest comic papers of the age?

"It is said that it is just as natural for Mr. Arkell to write jokes for Judge as it is for some country editors to clip them out and publish them without credit.

"Just here I would like to offer a word of advice to the members of this association:

"First—'Despise not the day of small things.' Remember that most of the papers had a very small beginning. Lend a helping hand to those who are just commencing and who necessarily have to begin in a small way. Some day they may have influential journals.

Second—Do not overwork yourselves. The tendency of this age is to deep and continuous thought. Do not try to accomplish everything. There are others

CHANCELLOR KENT.

THE BIRTHPLACE OF THE AUTHOR OF "KENT'S COMMENTARIES."

Revisited It When Old. And Insisted Upon Finding a Mouse Hole Which He Watched When a Boy. His Very Eventful Career.

Mr. James Kent, the great expounder of American law, was the son of Moses Kent and grandson of the Rev. Elisha Kent, and was born in what is now the village of Doanesburg, in the town of Southeast, Putnam county, N. Y., July 31, 1763. This region of the country was a part of the great patent granted to Adolph Philipse, in 1697, and Moses Kent, the father of the learned Chancellor, held a farm on a perpetual lease from the Philipse family.

His grandfather, the Rev. Elisha Kent, came from Suffield, Conn., where he was born in 1703. He was for many years the pastor of the church in Southeast, and a very modest tombstone in a burying ground at Doanesburg, not far from the church which was the scene of his earthly labors, bears this inscription:

"In memory of Rev. Elisha Kent, who died in July, 1776, in the seventy-third year of his age. Blessed are the dead who died in the Lord."

Moss Kent, the father of the Chancellor, died in 1794. He had four sisters, one of whom married John Kane, and was the great grandmother of Dr. Elisha Kent Kane, the famous Arctic explorer.

The boyhood of the Chancellor was spent on his father's farm, near the east branch of Croton River, and to the day of his death the great lawyer felt the keenest interest in that romantic region where he had passed so many days. When an old man he made a visit to his birthplace in company with Dr. Daniel Reed, who describes the following scene:

"The first thing the Chancellor did after entering the house was to go to a certain room and say:

"'I want to crawl under the bed and put my hand in a mouse hole where Brother Moss and I amused ourselves in watching for a mouse when we were boys.'

"And suiting the action to the word down dropped the learned and dignified Chancellor of New York, and not without difficulty accomplished the feat that had pleased his boyish heart long years before."

In 1778 the future judge was sent to a Latin school in Danbury, and entered Yale college in 1777. Owing to the invasion of the British troops in 1779 the college was broken up and the students dispersed. At that time he met with a copy of "Blackstone's Commentaries," which so excited his admiration that he resolved to be a lawyer, and after studying under the famous Judge Egbert Benson was admitted to the bar in 1785. He first began practice in Poughkeepsie, but a few years later removed to New York, where he found a field worthy of his great talent. In succession he held the offices of Master in Chancery, member of Legislature and Chief Justice of the Supreme Court.

In 1814 he was appointed Chancellor and his various and learned decisions have given a lasting honor to his name. After retiring from office he commenced the great work which has given him a deathless fame.

In 1828 appeared the first volume of his "Commentaries on American Law." It is enough to say of this great work that until the present system of things shall be succeeded either by a higher law or utter lawlessness, "Kent's Commentaries" must be the source from which the student will derive his first knowledge of law, and what Blackstone was to England Chancellor Kent has been to America.

Chancellor Kent, after a long life of honor and usefulness, died at his residence, on Union Square, New York, December 12, 1847. His remains rest in the cemetery at Fishkill by the side of his only son. It is no injustice to the dead. It is no disparagement to the living, to say that James Kent was the most distinguished lawyer born within the limits of the Empire State, and of his greatness and his fame his native town, his native county and his native State may well be proud.

Sam Gregory and the Swordfish.

The schooner Abden Keene, Captain Edward Doughty, arrived yesterday from a swordfishing cruise, bringing a good quantity of fish. From the crew was learned a very interesting story of an exciting adventure by one of the crew with a giant swordfish, by which Samuel Gregory nearly lost his life.

The Keene had been out three days and was off the South Shore lights in Nantucket, when a large swordfish was speared. As is the custom, Sam Gregory was sent off in a dory to capture the prize. He got along very well in his efforts for a time, when suddenly the fish became wild and made the water white with foam, as he thrust madly at the boat.

Several thrusts were made, but at last with a terrific blow the giant fish stabbed the boat full and fair on her quarter. It was a terrific blow, and Gregory was thrown several feet into the air and overboard, the sword just missing his leg as it pierced the boat. Gregory cannot swim, and thought his last days had come. But the fish gave a powerful lunge and broke his sword short off and left fourteen inches of it sticking in the boat's bottom. Luckily the movements of the fish pushed the boat toward Gregory, who was struggling in the water, and he managed to scramble in again. It would seem as if he had seen enough of swordfishing for one day, but his fisherman instinct was strong, and in an hour's time he had his marine assassin safely landed.

It was a narrow escape for Gregory. He carries a big scar on his side now from a wound received from a swordfish some years ago.—Portland Daily Press.

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

For Governor,
Alex. T. McGill.

The Republican leaders in New York city have declared in favor of a straight ticket.

Franklin Murphy has been re-elected to the chairmanship of the Republican State committee.

There is nothing like having plenty of confidence. Ex-Governor Flower, of New York, predicts that the Democratic ticket nominated yesterday will be elected by 50,000 plurality.

Writing music for high kicks is of rather a lucrative order, if the $10,000 which Sir Arthur Sullivan is to receive for furnishing the music for an English ballet is any criterion.

Secretary Herbert yesterday signed an order transferring the monitor Ajax to the State of New Jersey for the use of the naval militia. It will be stationed at Camden for the use of the western division of the militia.

For the blues, get out of them: go for a walk; visit a friend; get out your music; help somebody worse off than you; think what good you can do at home and outside, and—stop thinking about yourself.—Somerset Democrat.

Paul A. Queen, of Hunterdon county, has been chosen temporary chairman of the Democratic State Committee. It is thought that E.F.C. Young, of Hudson county, will become the permanent chairman at the meeting of the committee next Wednesday.

Plainfield may close the saloons, shut up barber shops, stop the work of bootblacks, etc, etc., on Sunday, but it will always be inconsistent as long as the cider joints are allowed to run full blast on Sunday. It is a parody on the excise laws to allow the sale of hard cider in the manner it is sold in this city on the day when intoxicating drinks are a supposedly impossible thing to procure.

The Board of Police of Boston notified all the storekeepers of the Hebrew colony in the north end of that city that they must hereafter close their places of business on Sunday. A test case will probably be made. A case as to the rights of the Hebrews, under the Constitution of the United States, to do business on Sunday, when they observe the preceding day as the Sabbath, has been pending in the courts of Massachusetts for more than seven years without a final decision.

The editor of The News has an utter disregard for truth when he takes up his pen to write anything concerning The Daily Press. Last Friday he stated that the business man who advertised exclusively in The News and was compelled to close his store on account of his inability to establish a trade, was once an advertiser in The Daily Press, but ordered his advertisement out because he could get no results from it. This statement of The News editor is a lie pure and simple. The man never advertised in The Press.

Several Buffalo men have formed a company which has for its corporate object the identification of travelers who are killed among strangers, and the notification of their friends of the sad event. Each client of this extraordinary company is to be provided with a badge whereby it will be known that particulars concerning the deceased may be obtained by applying to the Buffalo company. Something of this sort would be a good thing for gentlemen who are in the habit of going home from their clubs in a state of bibulous doubt as to their own identity.—Rochester Union.

The Elizabeth "Journal" is still discouraged as to the outcome of the present canvass, and warns its party that while "the chances of victory are in their favor, they have work to do to win it." This is a very different tune from that which the Republican organs have been singing for the past six months or more, but it is just what the public have believed all the time. More than that, the public have noticed for some time that the Republicans have been whistling to keep up their courage, which for the last two or three weeks has been rapidly oozing out as the political situation gradually dawned upon them. The signs of success for the Democratic party at the ensuing election are growing brighter from day to day.—Trenton True American.

Clapp & Co's weekly financial letter says:

The feverish pulse and mercurial movement of a speculative craze are beginning to be noted. Experienced men see new estimates of values at hand based on the inflation of organized credit. With the Government credit at the centre, the money of account now available can be doubled without danger. The general knowledge that this new era of inflation is at hand will increase the courage of some, the timidity of others, and the nervous energy of all.

The Elizabeth Daily Journal says that C. B. Corwin, of this city, J. Martin Roll, of Springfield, John D. Barr, of Elizabeth, and Clarence D. Ward, of Rahway, are probable candidates for the Republican nomination of Assemblymen in Union county this fall. On the Democratic side The Journal says that Judge Green, of Westfield, William Wolfskeil, Wickliffe B. Sayre and Daniel Wolfskeil, all of Elizabeth, are among those mentioned.

Whatever political capital the Republicans may have intended to make out of the trial and expected conviction of Kuser and Robinson on the charge of fraud in the printing contracts, awarded under a Democratic administration, will have a boomerang effect by the acquittal of these men by the jury at Trenton yesterday. This is the second attempt that has been made in court to besmirch the character of men by the evidence of the Corbin investigation, but in both cases it was a failure.

Under the ballot law in New York State, which provides for a party emblem to be printed on the official ballot, the Republicans were to adopt the American eagle as their emblem. The eagle, however, is a portion of the national insigna and a national law prevents its use, so some of the wiseacres say. Up to two years ago the crow would have been the proper thing for the Republicans to have adopted, but just at present they are exempt in New York State from having anything to do with that carnivorous bird.

Judge Howard Carrow, of Camden, permanent chairman of the Democratic Gubernatorial convention has appointed the following gentlemen to notify Chancellor McGill of his nomination for Governor: Augustus W. Cutler, Isaac W. Carmichael, John H. Dialogue, Charles E. Hendrickson, James M. Van Valen, Frederick A. Marsh, Phillip P. Baker, Rufus Blodgett, Thomas Kay, William B. Gourley, Peter Hauck, Elvin W. Crane, Johnston Cornish, J. Newton Voorhees, Millard F. Ross, George O. Vanderbilt, Bowman H. Cox, Albert Slape, Charles E. Nichols, John F. Hall, Matthew H. Vanderveer—one from each county.

A few days ago the News took occasion to comment on what it considered to be the ill success of a real estate firm because they refused to advertise in that sheet, and then went on to say that no one could get along in Plainfield unless they advertised with them, which was equivalent to saying that any one who did not advertise with them might expect to get roasted everytime an opportunity afforded. But now it happens that a day or two ago a business man who had advertised exclusively in the News was compelled to close his store and leave town on account of his inability to establish a trade. That incident only proves how inconsistent the News editor is when he publishes such stuff as he printed about the real estate firm, who did, in fact, sell considerable property from their results of advertising in the Daily Press. The Press does not wish to convey the idea that because this merchant, who failed in business, advertised in the News and did not advertise in the Press, was unable to do business, because such argument is absurd. The Press only refers to the matter to show the people of Plainfield to what extremes the News editor goes in order to bring business to himself, by making people afraid of the News in the sense that they will try to curry the favor of its editor.

The nomination of Chancellor Alexander T. McGill for Governor by the Democrats is a selection that should bring to the party the votes of all Democrats, and when this is done the Democrats may count on a victory at the polls. New Jersey is a Democratic State under normal conditions. Of that there can be but little doubt when it is considered that its people have not been ruled by a Republican in thirty years. With Mr. McGill as their standard bearer, the Democrats go into the campaign with every reason to believe that they will gain another victory. Though long identified with public affairs his record in both official and private life has been such as to commend him to men of all parties as a man whose performance of duty to the public was always first to any act that might benefit the political party with whom he was affiliated. Though his public duties have been principally of a judicial nature, Mr. McGill's abilities in an executive capacity will prove equally as satisfactory to the people he will serve.

Alexander T. McGill is of Pennsylvanian nativity. He was born in Pittsburg about forty-nine years ago. But in 1854, when he was in his eighth year, his father was elected to a chair in Princeton Theological Seminary, and the family moved to Trenton. Since that time he has been a resident of New Jersey, and as a Jerseyman he attained his present eminence. In 1864 the Chancellor took his degree of bachelor of arts at Princeton College. Two years later he finished at Columbia Law School. In 1867 he was admitted to the bar as an attorney, and in 1870 as a counselor. After leaving the law school young McGill entered the office of the late Justice of the Supreme Court, Edward W. Scudder. He maintained his relations with that distinguished jurist until he formed a business partnership with the late Robert Gilchrist, Attorney-General, and a man unsurpassed in oratory among Jerseymen. In 1874 he began his public career as counsel for the city of Bayonne. That same year he was elected to the Assembly to represent the First district of Hudson county. The next year, also, found him in the Assembly. There he met John W. Griggs, whose opponent for Governor Chancellor McGill is. These two were conspicuous in the framing of the general laws under the Constitution. Mr. McGill succeeded Abram Q. Garrettson, when the latter was appointed Law Judge of Hudson county in the office of Prosecutor of Pleas, and later succeeded him on the bench. In 1887 Governor Green appointed him Chancellor and last year Governor Werts reappointed him.

From constable to mayor is the official promotion that a Perth Amboy man is looking for. Edward Crudden was an independent candidate for mayor against E.W. Barnes, the present chief executive of Perth Amboy. Failing to defeat his opponent, Mr. Crudden took the next best thing that came along and last spring was elected to the constabulary force of the old Dutch town. But his aspirations are high and he is after the mayoralty on rather novel grounds. Mayor Barnes is a New York business man and resides at Flemington, where he owns a farm and summer home. Constable Crudden takes the stand that Perth Amboy ought not to be ruled by carpet baggers, and he therefore calls upon the Board of Aldermen to remove the present mayor and install him into the executive chair on the ground that Mayor Barnes "has no more right according to the statute to hold the office of Mayor," and that having been an independent candidate at the time of election he polled the necessary number of votes to qualify him for the office, and he therefore demands his rights. To paraphrase, the result of the Constable's demand "willbe awaited with interest."

THE NO-HUMP MAN WINS.

THE STRAIGHT-UP RIDER SCORES A VICTORY AT SATURDAY'S RACES.

R. G. Betts, Editor of The Wheel, Decrys the Bicycle Hump and Rides Perpendicular With Success—Results of the Events.

No records were broken and no fast time was made, but those who attended the club races of the Manhattan Bicycle Club Saturday afternoon at the Crescent Oval saw several very close races and lots of fun. The New York riders came out to have a good time, and judging from appearances, they had it, besides furnishing a pleasant afternoon for about two hundred and fifty Plainfielders. Most of the crowd, however, was made up of little boys, some clean, others dirty and ragged, but they all, both colored and white, took advantage of the free races and turned out in full force.

The races, themselves, were quite exciting, especially the finishes, which gave evidence of the efficiency of the handicapping. The one-mile handicap, which came first, was a pretty race, and resulted in a pretty finish between Oatman and Stanback, the former winning by a wheel. R. G. Betts, the editor of The Wheel, started from the 120 yard mark and followed out his doctrine of not humping, but sitting upright while riding. He finished fourth, coming in ahead of some of his less perpendicular club mates.

The most exciting race of the day was the half-mile scratch. Oatman crossing the tape a lenghth ahead while Stanbach secured second by less than a foot after a bitter fight on the home stretch.

In the two mile handicap the scratch men rode together and divided the places between themselves, Oatman winning his third race by a wheel, while Stanback smiled himself into second place.

The last race was the five-mile handicap and was supposed to be the event of the day. The limit men got over a lap's start on the scratch men and tried to hold it. Betts soon went to the front, however, and rode on with McFarland, the two alternately pacing for each other, but the plucky newspaper man could ride and won a victory for himself and the doctrine of no hump. The scratch men rode like fiends to catch the limit men and were not far between in the last lap when Dimick ran into Wheeler's rear wheel, throwing Wheeler and Dimick together. Stanback was directly behind the two, but he met the situation like a man and rode over the fallen wheels then into the field beside the track and finally back onto the track again and finished third.

The officials who served during the afternoon were:

Referee, Clarence E. Teel; Judges, W. T. Stewart, J. T. Dougherty, W. F. Kerr; Timers, C. M. Cohen and George Taggart; Starter and Clerk of the Course, J. Oatman.

One mile handicap. Won by A. Oatman, scratch; C. P. Staubach, scratch, second; C. J. Dimick, 25 yards, third. Time, 2:29 4-5. The other starters were G. C. Wheeler, R. H. Bartsch, H. G. R. Ausbutell, J. W. Foster, Jr., J. Meyer, R. L. McFarland, R. G. Betts.

One mile novice handicap. Won by J. W. Foster, Jr., scratch; M. A. King, 50 yards, second; F. H. Campbell, 100 yards, third. Time, 2:43 2-5. The other starter was Mr. Cohen.

One-half mile scratch. Won by A. Oatman; C. P. Staubach, second; R. H. Baatsch, third. Time, 1:14. The other starters were C. J. Dimick, G. C. Wheeler, J. Meyer.

Two mile handicap. Won by A. Oatman, scratch; C. P. Staubach, scratch, second; R. H. Bartsch, scratch, third. Time, 5:23. The other starters were G.C. Wheeler, C. J. Dimick, J. W. Foster, Jr., R. G. Betts.

Five mile handicap. Won by R. G. Betts, 1 minute, 20 seconds; R. L. McFarland, 1 minute, 45 seconds, second; C. P. Staubach, scratch, third. Time, 15:52 2-5. The other starters were M. A. King, J. W. Foster, Jr., C. J. Dimick, G. C. Wheeler, R. H. Bartsch and A. Oatman.

RALLY OF THE SCHOLARS.

FIRST BAPTIST SUNDAY SCHOOL HAVE INTERESTING EXERCISES.

Afternoon Sessions of the School Resumed—Remarks Made by Superintendent Case and Prof. D. A. MacPhie.

The Sunday-school scholars of the First Baptist church and their friends celebrated "Rallying Day" Sunday afternoon in a thoroughly pleasing manner to all.

The feature in Plainfield Sunday-school work is a new one, but gives promise of being important as Children's Day.

The platform was prettily trimmed with golden rod and asparagus vine. Superintendent R. K. Case was in charge. After First Assistant Superintendent G. H. Batchelor read the eighty-fifth Psalm, prayer was offered by Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, pastor of the church.

The primary department, in charge of their superintendent, Mrs. Powlison, then sang "A Little Talk with Jesus Makes it Right." A beautiful soprano solo "I Lay My Sins on Jesus" was rendered by Miss Bessie Blair, accompanied by Howard Case on the piano. Superintendent R. K. Case then made a few remarks relative to the observance of the day. He said it was a pleasure to him to see so many present, for it seemed like a re-uniting. He hoped that its observance would increase from year to year and be productive of much good.

After a delightful vocal solo "The New Jerusalem" by L. H. Bigelow, Jr., and a recitation "The Fall of the Year" by Hazel Grant, Mr. Case introduced D. A. MacPhie, of the Y. M. C. A., who made an excellent address. He said there were three essential elements in Sunday-school work, namely, Endeavor, Endurance and Enthusiasm. Endeavor had of late years become a great word, especialy in the Christian Endeavor society, where young women and men were educated in the Master's work, but the greatest society was the Sunday-school. It is the duty, continued Mr. MacPhie, of every boy and girl to tell the whole world of Christ's death. A little girl was once asked if her papa was a Christian, and she replied she thought he was, but he hadn't been working at it lately.

The church wants consecrated hearts and lives, not big heads. Secondly, we want more endurance. Our young people need it as well as the older ones. Don't think that when you are converted you will get enough religion to last you all your life. You will need a staying power that you can get from day to day. Thirdly, we want enthusiasm. The superintendent, teachers, and scholars need it. A woman once said she didn't enjoy a funeral because there was no enthusiam there. Our Sunday-schools want to be thoroughly awake and alive with enthusiasm. General Grant once said, the only way to be successful was to push things, and that's what we want to do, also to agitate matters pertaining to our schools. Give them prominence and may God help you to do a grand work for him and his church. Mr. Case thanked Mr. MacPhie for his timely words as though he must have known just exactly what the First Baptist Sunday-school needed. After Mr. Biglow had given notice of the meeting this evening to organize a boys' brigade, Miss Addie Parker Jackson gave a recitation. For those who heard this talented young woman, words would fail to express the pleasure enjoyed yesterday. Her work was superb and perfect. Those present were given a rare treat. Another pleasing vocal solo by Miss Bessie Blair closed the programme, and after the school sang a hymn the benediction was pronounced by Dr. Yerkes.

Jersey Central's Oilhouse Burned.

The oilhouse of the Central New Jersey Railroad at Elizabethport was discovered to be on fire Saturday morning at 2 o'clock, and was completely gutted, all its contents being totally destroyed. These included besides oil, waste and other supplies for locomotives. This is the third time the place has been burned out. The fire is supposed to have been caused by spontaneous combustion. The loss is $1,500.

Telegraph Operator McLoughlin Ill at Muhlenberg Hospital.

Well known in every newspaper office in the United States as one of the most rapid press telegraph operators in the country, J. H. McLoughlin now lies very ill, in fact almost dying, with typhoid fever at Muhlenberg Hospital. He came here about a week ago to visit his old friend, W. E. Martin, manager of the Postal Telegraph Company in this city. He was taken ill and Mr. Martin had him taken to the hospital so that he might have the best of care. He then telegraphed for the father and mother of the sick man who arrived Saturday, and were able to look after their boy.

Mr. McLoughlin has worked from one end of the country to the other, and is at the top of his profession. The incessant work, which enabled to rise, has broken down his constitution, and should he recover it is feared that he will be unable to continue in his duties as operator.

A CONTEST FOR MEMBERS.

Y. M. C. A. BOYS WILL CHOOSE SIDES AND HUSTLE.

Plans for the Coming Season's Work Discussed by Active Members Saturday Night—Special Classes in All Departments

About fifty of the active members of the Y. M. C. A. met at the association building Saturday evening at 6:30, to partake of the most excellent dinner prepared by Mrs. L. M. French, Mrs. Frank Clawson, Mrs. J. H. Manning, and the Misses Demarest. The members were called together to discuss certain topics along the line of association work and to see what could be done to advance the interest. After the inner man had been well taken care of an adjournment was made to the boys game room.

President Murray called the meeting to order and stated the object as above. The first point brought out was in regard to the young men's meetings held Sunday afternoon; how to make them more successful. Mr. Murray stated that during the past year special efforts had been made, and that the same would be done this year. There would be special music, and well known speakers would be secured to conduct the meetings.

In regard to Bible classes the president said that Physical Director D. A. McPhie would teach a class for members of the gymnasium, and he hoped that a large number of these members would be secured for the class. Secretary J. H. Manning would also teach a class, the membership to consist of those who were not in any other class. Mr. Manning said that he had been impressed with the study of the life of Paul, and he would probably take up that line of study. Mr. Murray will have charge of a class, the same to meet some time during the week, which would be convenient to those in it. He said that he had been much interested in the lessons entitled the "Training of the Twelve," and he was very glad to be able to teach the same, which would probably be taken up.

Physical Director D. A. McPhie announced that he would open the gymnasium classes October 1st if it was not too warm. He had also planned to have basket ball every Saturday night in the gymnasium. He also spoke of football, and said that the prospects in this direction were excellent. One member present said he objected to his boy playing the latter game, whereupon Mr. Murray said the man ought to play himself and get used to it

Joseph Robinson chairman of the entertainment committee, made a few remarks in regard to the star course for this season, in which he said that he hoped the entertainments would be well attended. They are free to all $5 and $8 members, and for others the course will cost $1.25.

The matter of increasing the membership was then introduced by President Murray, who said that the association needed more members and an effort should be made to secure them. He also said that the Plainfield association had the reputation of being one of the best in the country.

Curtis M. Thorpe, chairman of the membership committee, then called for and presented a novel idea which his committee had decided upon to increase the membership. The plan is to have two leaders, who are D. A. MacPhie and George Cornwell. They are to choose sides from the membership of the association. They are to contest and see which side can secure the largest number of members, and at the end of the contest the ladies are to give a dinner to the contestants, the winning side to eat and the losing side to look on.

D. A. MacPhie's side has adopted red as their color and the application tickets will of that color, while the other side will use the color blue. Mr. Thorpe said that by this method the Dayton, (Ohio) association secured 1,000 members at one time. One member said that he knew of a man who had lived in Plainfield fifteen years and had never been asked to join the association. When asked where he was now, he replied by saying that the man had left town. Another man wanted to know if that would be the result with all who were asked to join.

H. O. Newman made a long statement in regard to increasing the membership. He said that the work should be done personally, and if a member was given the name of a man to see, he should attend to it. He did not think it was hard work to get new members, if good judgment and sense were used. People were accustomed to seeing him come around and they always had their membership money ready for him. Mr. Cornwell stated that he had already secured an application, but Mr. MacPhie said that inasmuch as the contest did not commence till October 1st, that one did not count.

The work of choosing sides was then taken up. John Whiting was made secretary and kept a list of those selected. At the conclusion of this all returned to the small hall where ice-cream was served. Thus was brought to a close one of the best and most helpful meetings ever held by the association.

A vote of thanks was extended to the ladies for their kindness and efforts in making the affair a success.

A GREAT GAME.

Y. M. C. A. Baseball Fiends Have Lots of Fun.

The sport-loving faction of the Y. M. C. A. met at the end of the Somerset street trolley line Saturday and participated in a game of baseball, the record of which will go down into history as one of the fiercest battles ever fought on the diamond. There was a determined effort on the part of both sides to capture the game. When years have brought gray hairs to those who played in this game, there will still be great pleasure in reciting the exciting events of the notable game played on Saturday afternoon.

The grounds were very rough, and brilliant plays were frequently made. Among the features of the game was the playing of S. W. Clark. This being his first attempt at baseball, his efforts were noteworthy. He persisted, after hitting the ball, in running to the pitcher's box, and of course was put out. Probably the star play of the game was the catch of a fly by George Beebe. The ball fell right into his hands, and he was so much surprised that he almost dropped it. The activity of George Corwell was marked and he ran bases like a deer.

C. M. Evans was the heavy hitting player, making three home runs, as did also John Whiting. It is understood that President Freedman, of the Newark Club, is after the latter. At the end of three innings, which consumed two hours and a half, the score stood 24 to 24, and on account of darkness the game was called. Below will be found the names and number of runs made by each:

ALMOST BROKE HIS NECK.

A. P. Simmonds Dived Into a Plunge Bath and Struck His Head.

To those that knew Albert P. Simmonds several years ago when he resided at the home of his father, Herman Simmonds, of Watchung avenue, would hardly recognize him now, so greatly has he changed. He is now at Baton Rouge, where he is training the football team of the Louisiana State College.

Just at present Mr. Simmonds is suffering from an injury which might have resulted fatally. He plunged into the bath in the gymnasium and struck his head against the bottom of the tank, cutting it in several places. The only wonder is that he did not break his neck. He is doing all right, however, and is able to look after the team as usual.

A DAY OF TENNIS.

In Which Miss A. A. Hagan and Ferdinand Dorman are the Victors.

A Nahant tennis tournament in mixed doubles was played on the courts of William Hagan on Prospect avenue on Saturday. The cool weather and the clear sky made the day a very pleasant one and some very fine playing was done by all the players. After a very exciting contest Miss A. A. Hagan and Ferdinand Dorman were awarded the first prizes which consisted of silver and bisque designs. The winners put up an excellent game together. But of the others, Herbert Richardson and J. Hazelwood Craig especially distinguished themselves by their fine playing.

STARTED TO KILL REDSKINS.

BUT ONE DAY OF WILD WEST LIFE WAS ENOUGH FOR THEM.

Three Plainfield Boys Start Out to Gather Scalps—One Night in a Box-Car Satisfied Their Romantic Desires—Home Again.

Three small lads ranging from twelve to fourteen years of age tramped down from Plainfield to Dunellen Saturday evening about nine o'clock, each with a bundle of clothing fastened to a stick and slung over the shoulder. The three boys cautiously mounted a coal train at Dunellen and rode up the line as far as the train went that night. They slept in the cold and woke up Sunday morning chilled and hungry, but with nothing to eat. The gilded visions of the west, that had tempted them to desert their comfortable Plainfield homes, did not look as pleasing as before the start, and the boys began to realize that the life of a tramp is not an ideal one. One day of cold and hunger was enough, and last evening three tired, hungry and footsore lads arrived in Plainfield and went home to their families where they were gladly welcomed back.

One of the boys was the son of Mrs. Stewart W. Milligan, of West Fourth street, the second was the son of Carpenter Charles M. Wilson, of West Fourth street, and the third was a lad named Devine from over in the borough. When the boys disappeared their parents became very anxious about them and notified the police. The boys returned, however, before any active search could be instituted.

PETER LIVES IN THE BARN.

A Borough Couple Have Hard Work to Live Peaceably.

Peter Brun and his wife, of the borough, have not lived happily together for sometime. Peter says that he is willing to do his share toward making life worth living, but his wife says that he abuses her and makes trouble. This morning she made made complaint to Justice Crosley. The latter saw Peter afterward and asked him what he had been doing. He said that his wife was troublesome and would not live peaceably.

He went by the house yesterday, he said, and she called him hard names.

He is anxious to get the children away from his wife for he does not think they are getting good treatment.

As a result of the trouble, Peter occupies the barn while his wife lives in the house with no prospect of a settlement.

WINTER CIRCUS QUARTERS.

The Forker Farm Sold to a Famous Hippodrome Rider.

The Forker farm, adjoining the Sebring farm at Sebring's Mills was sold a few days ago to Prof. Lowanda, the hippodrome rider, late of the Barnum & Baileys' and who recently has had a show of his own at Atlantic City and Coney Island. It is Prof. Lowanda's intention to erect winter quarters on this place and to have all his parapharnalia and horses wintered there. He will commence the erection of the necessary buildings at once. This place is in North Plainfield township and it will be made the headquarters of equestrains of world-wide reputation.

THEATRICAL.

During the action of "A Happy Little Home" which is the new comedy satire Geo. W. Monroe is going to present here, that popular comedian will be seen in three separate and distinct characters, first as a lawyer, then as a female fortune teller, and later as a detective. The moral taught by this new comedy is that any house into which enters the fortune teller, the lawyer and the detecive that domicile is likely to become a decidedly unhappy one. Mr. Monroe is credited with having made as great a success in this new play as that which was accorded him during the long run of that furiously funny fantastical farce "My Aunt Bridget." Music Hall, Thursday, October 3d.

"The Mountebank" which Frederick Warde and his company will present at Music Hall next Saturday evening is not a tragedy but a romatic drama in which comedy as well as pathos abounds. It has proved one of the most attractive plays produced by this eminent actor and in the title role he finds one of his greatest characterizations. During the summer superb scenery has been painted for each of the four acts, costumes have been made in exact reproduction of the fashion of the times at which the action of the play took place, and accessories in keeping with the requirements have been manufactured, so that the representation will, as a production, outrival even those which have heretofore been so superbly staged by Mr. Warde.

A Sewer Cavein.

Another cavein on the trunk sewer ditch at Westfield imperilled the life of an Italian on Friday. The man was working at the bottom of the sixteen foot trench, when the bank gave way and buried him completely. The other Italian workmen were so frightened that they would not return to the ditch to assist their companion, and the foreman managed to rescue him alone. The man was unconscious when brought to the surface.

The Season Closed.

The Scotch Plains baseball team closed the season on Saturday with a one-sided contest with the Harlem, Y. M. C. A., of New York. Johnston occupied the box for the home team, and the visitors were unable to find the ball. Only seven innings were played, owing to darkness. The score then stood fifteen to three in favor of the home team. The Scotch Plains ball club has put up a very good article of ball this season, considering that it was late when the team was put in the field. Twelve games were played, nine of which were victories. Two of the defeats were administered by the Plainfield Y. M. C. A's.

THE MONOTONY OF DUPLICATION.

In the Italian Style Additions Can be Made at Any Time.

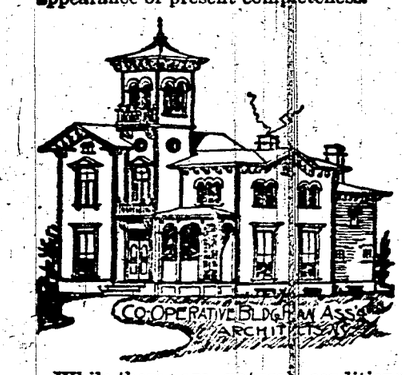
Diversified as are the features of this country in climate, soil, surface and exposure, no one style of architecture can be adapted to suit all conditions. The Swiss chalet was best suited for the mountain passes, the Swiss cottage for the valley, the Gothic structure for the rugged hillside and the Colonial mansion for the city, and to these must be added the Italian villa for the woody slope.

A leading advantage of the Italian style is that an addition can readily be made at any time, and often with great improvement on the original structure. This is a strong point considered with reference to American building. Hundreds of persons of moderate fortune desire to improve their residences at a future period, and by adopting a design of this style a little forethought leaves everything in a favorable state for additions, yet giving at the same time an appearance of present completeness.



While there are natural conditions that point to the adoption of some particular style in a neighborhood, it is not a good policy to have a number of houses of the same design adjoining, or indeed to repeat a design at all in the same place.

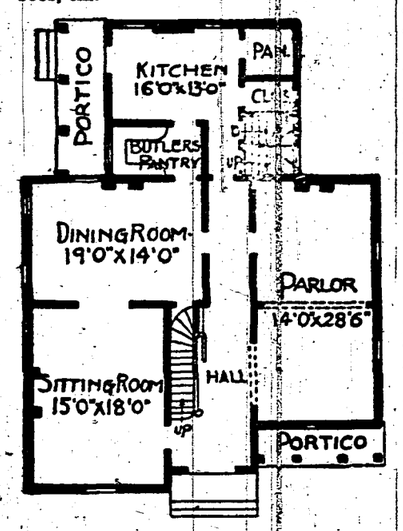
Dimensions: Width, 40 ft.; depth, 54 ft.

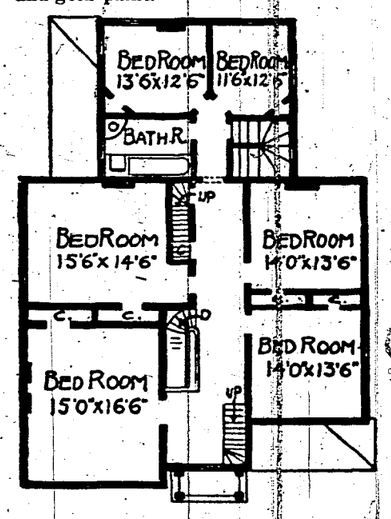
Heights of stories: Cellar, 7 ft. 6 in.; first story, 10 ft.; second story, 9 ft. 6 in.

Exterior materials: Foundation, brick; first and second stories, clapboards; roof, tin.



FIRST FLOOR

Interior finish: Three-coat plaster, sand finished, tinted colors to suit owner, in halls, dining and sitting rooms; elsewhere hard white finish. Plaster centers and cornices in hall, parlor, dining and sitting rooms and large front bedroom. Main staircase, oak. Dining room and hall floor, also trim, oak. Elsewhere flooring and trim of soft wood. Bathroom and kitchen wainscoted. Panel backs and picture molding in principal rooms of first story; chair rail in dining room. All interior woodwork, with exception of parlor grain filled and finished natural with hard oil varnish. Parlor trim, white and gold paint.



SECOND FLOOR

Colors: Trim, including cornices, casings, etc., cream white; clapboards, pearl gray; roofs, red; sashes, dark green; outside doors and brickwork, oiled.

Accommodations: The principal rooms and their sizes, closets, etc., are shown by the floor plans. Cellar under whole house with inside and outside entrances and concrete floor. Wide portierre openings connect dining room and sitting room.

In the vicinity of New York this design as described, not including mantels, range or heater, would cost a little short of $7,500, though in many sections of the country where labor is cheaper it could be bought for 10, 15, or perhaps 20 per cent. less.

BAPTIZED IN CHAINS.

The Sins of Two Condemned Murderers Washed Away in the Big Muddy.

There was a baptism by immersion in the Big Muddy, near Murphysboro, Ill. It was such a novel one that thousands of people were there to see it. There were only two candidates, but they were in chains, and the solemn ceremonies were conducted in the presence of an armed guard in command of the sheriff. The two repentant sinners seeking for forgiveness were Jeffrey and Henderson, convicted of murder.

The men professed repentance and their request to be baptized was granted by the sheriff.

About 4,000 people were at the river bank. Women in their Sunday clothes, men in carriages, in wagons, and on horseback, and in canoes in midstream, and scores of children. A crowd of mechanics, clerks, preachers, business men and laborers, on a few minutes' notice, gathered to see what condemned men recently converted would say and do.

The people had gathered at the upper ford, but the sheriff and his posse, with his converts in a carriage, drove to the lower ford 200 yards below. As a section of the crowd on the far side of the river rushed scattering along the side to the lower place, a war veteran said: "Look, there is a very good picture of how we appeared in the charge at Mission Ridge."

The prisoners were driven to midstream. There were two sets of shackles, one on their feet and one set chaining their feet to each other. The Rev. Mr. McBride and the Rev. Mr. Bagwell, Baptist evangelists, waded out in the stream, while the Rev. Mr. Gordon and his choir sang a hymn on shore. Vehicles and horsemen crowded the sheriff's carriage in the river.

Jeffrey's wife first stepped from the carriage into the stream and was baptized. Then Jeffrey and Henderson, in clanking chains, but with cleanly shaved faces and serene countenances, stepped in and knelt. One preacher took hold of the shackled man, and in a loud voice said:

"Upon profession of thy faith, my brethren, and in obedience to the command of my heavenly father, I baptize thee in the name of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost."

Both converts went under and came up together. Then, still in chains, they crawled into their carriage between the officers and were hurriedly driven back to their quarters in jail. They spoke no word during the ceremony except to the ministers. The spectators stood by in silence. The sheriff stood on the carriage front, surrounded by a well armed posse.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

SURVIVORS OF THE COMMUNE.

All Paris Trembles at Each Recurring Anniversary.

Each year something happens to remind the Paris public of the bloody days of the Commune in 1871. On the 24th and 25th of May—the anniversary of its fall—the police are all afield to prevent manifestations with the red flag at the foot of the wall in the cemetery of Pere-Lachaise. There the last Communist soldiers, shot down by the National troops under General de Galliffet, lie buried in deep trenches. On the same days religious people wander undisturbed in the quiet garden of the Rue Haxo. There the Communist leaders exercised their last act of authority by shooting, before their own turn came, the hostages who were in their power—priests, civil officers and National soldiers.

After twenty-four years the Commune has become sober and respectable. Its survivors have made their way everywhere, since the amnesty of 1879 allowed them to return to France. The revolutionary Socialist party, with its forty members of Parliament, celebrates the anniversary after the approved fashion of politicians. A few months ago, when one of their number had to be disciplined by the President of the Legislative Chamber, they rose in a body to the cry of "Vive la Commune!" Ordinary mortals had a moment of painful surprise. Jean Volders, the leader of the Belgian Socialists, just before he became crazy, explained with authority what his comrades meant by profession of solidarity with the Commune: "'Vive la Commune!' is the war cry of the Socialists of all nations, just as the Marseillaise is the hymn of the social revolution. All those who march behind the red flag, whatever their race or language, sing it as their hymn of deliverance."

A Diamond in a Floating Bottle.

While fishermen were hauling a net for shad in the upper Delaware, near Lambertville, N. J., they took a sealed bottle, with a long, narrow silk ribbon about the neck. In the bottle was this note:

"This bottle was started from Dingman's Ferry, Pa. Will the finder communicate with one of the undersigned, stating when and where found. Ann H., Gertrude G. and Emily L., April 15, 1895."

The fishermen were about to cast the bottle aside when one of them discovered something bright and sparkling in the bottle. It proved to be a diamond, which has since been found to be worth $100. It is supposed in placing the note in the bottle one of the young women dropped the precious stone from a ring she wore.

A TRIP OF THE MIND.

Rev. Mr. O'Donnell Carries an Audience Over Europe in an Interesting Way.

Those who were fortunate enough to be present at the Monroe Avenue chapel last evening, will always remember with pleasure the very interesting talk given by the pastor, Rev. Mr. O'Donnell, on his European trip this summer.

The affair was in charge of the Young Men's Association of the chapel, and Blanchard Randolph, the president, was master of ceremonies. After William Runyon, George O. Stevens, and Blanchard Randolph had pleased the audience with the excellent rendition of the "Star Spangled Banner" Mr. O'Donnell spoke in part as follows:

I am glad of this privilege to tell you something tonight of my trip, for travel elevates both mind and body. Let me say at the start that you will never find a better country than the one you are now living in. It was in June that the French liner La Normandie sailed out of the harbor and down the North River. It was a beautiful morning. During the night it had rained and everything seemed to glisten in the glorious sunlight. Even Liberty waved a bon voyage. At noon we were ninety miles out, and in a short time the clouds began to lower, fog settled around us and the incessant blowing of the fog horn kept us in good humor. Let me say that if you have sunshine in your soul you can be happy anywhere. We arrived at Havre on June 30th, and at once began our travels.

Mr. O'Donnell then gave a graphic sketch of the many points of interest visited in the old country.

When about half through his talk he left his audience among the ruins of Pompeii, while William Runyon and George O. Stevens gave a delightful duett.

Mr. O'Donnell then proceeded to bring his audience home again. He spoke of a visit to Heidelberg, where he saw a cask which holds 60,000 gallons of rum, which he thought was enough for any ordinary man.

In speaking of the Rhine, he said he was very much disappointed and thought that instead of the Hudson river being called the Rhine of America, it would be a compliment to call the Rhine the Hudson of Germany.

After touching a few additional points of interest the audience were brought home in safety, and well pleased with their imaginery trip.

At the close William Runyon and George O. Stevens rendered another duett, and the former sang a solo.

F. A. BARNABY HURT.

Thrown From a Wagon and Quite Badly Injured.

Just as F. A. Barnaby, of Plainfield avenue, got in his runabout at his home this morning to go to South Plainfield where he was to take the train for New York, his horse became frightened and ran away. Mr. Barnaby was thrown from the wagon into the street and received injuries, the extent of which Drs. Hedges and Endicott have not yet been able to determine. However, it is thought that his shoulder is dislocated. The horse is very young, and has a nervous temperament, which accounts for the accident.

The wagon was completely wrecked and the horse was caught at South Plainfield and returned to the owner.

Mr. Barnaby was assisted to his home by his groom where he is getting along as well as can be expected.

Mrs. Hudder's Talk.

Mrs. Hudders will talk upon the influence of food on health in the Y. M. C. A. Hall October 1st, at 4 p. m. Mrs. Hudders will speak of digestion and nutrition, the influence of food in regulating flesh, and the influence of food on the complexion. Much information in regard to this lecture and the four which succeed it will be found in the souvenir, which is for sale at Edsall's and Estil's. Miss Slocum, who follows Mrs. Hudders on Oct. 8th, is one of the few women fully qualified to give instruction in economic and political subjects. Her talks are most pleasing in their clear, free manner of delivery, and are enjoyable as well as profitable.

Took the Wrong Train.

R. McCloskey, who lately arrived in New York from Ireland, purchased an emigrant ticket in New York yesterday for Philadelphia. Through his ignorance he boarded one of the fast line trains. The conductor did not discover the mistake until too late. The first stop made was at Plainfield, and McCloskey was told that he could either pay the additional money to ride first class or get off at Plainfield. He chose the latter and had the privilege of riding back to Jersey City and taking an emigrant train.

On Their Honeymoon.

Miss Elizabeth Earle and James Bailey Willetts were married at the home of the bride in Brooklyn Wednesday evening and are now spending their honeymoon with Mr. and Mrs. William Debele of Somerset street.

MRS. VOEHL LEAVES HOME.

SAID TO HAVE RUN AWAY WITH BILLY TRUST.

Mrs. Voehl Said to Have Taken a Large Sum of Money From Her Husband—Traced to a Hotel in Elizabeth.

George Voehl, who owns a bakery in Plainfield, was in this city this morning searching for his wife, said the Elizabeth Journal last night. He visited Police Headquarters and asked the assistance of Chief Tenney. Voehl suspected that his wife was accompanied by W. F. Trust, a man of leisure, who has an income from an estate, and who is well known among the sporting houses in this city.

Trust has been a boarder at Voehl's for some time, and the baker suspected that his wife had transferred her affections to that gentleman. As both were missing yesterday Voehl believed they had eloped.

Voehl said his wife had taken between five and six hundred dollars belonging to him. On reaching this city he traced the couple to Hynes' hotel. He was at the hotel early this morning and was satisfied that his wife and Trust were there.

Chief Tenney detailed Detective McGrail to accompany Voehl and his friend who accompanied him, to the hotel. There they found Trust, who denied all knowledge of the whereabouts of Mrs. Voehl, or that he had accompanied her from Plainfield.

Trust was corroborated by the hotelkeeper, who said that the accused man became a guest at the hotel early in the week, and that Mrs. Voehl had not been his companion.

Hynes admitted that Mrs. Voehl was at the hotel yesterday, but he said as soon as he learned who she was he refused to allow her to stay there. She went away in the afternoon.

Detective McGrail and Voehl were shown through the hotel, and Mrs. Voehl was not to be found.

Trust was very indignant, and refused to go voluntarily with Detective McGrail to Police Headquarters. He was, however, taken there and questioned by Chief Tenney, who was satisfied that he could not be held responsible for the freaks of Voehl's runaway wife, and he was accordingly discharged. He threatens to bring an action for false arrest.

When Mrs. Voehl left home Tuesday afternoon about five o'clock she gave out the impression that she was only going for a walk, but she failed to appear at home that night, and the following day her husband and friends made an investigation and found that she had purchased a railroad ticket to Newark. It was intended to go to Newark to look for her, but it was afterwards learned that she had gone to Elizabeth instead. Here her husband and a friend went on Thursday and encountered substantially the experience as recited by The Elizabeth Journal above.

Mr. Voehl had been extremely kind to his wife and lavished a great deal of money on her in the way of dresses and other things that are supposed to be dear to a woman's heart. The couple have two bright little children. Mr. Voehl consulted with Judge Coddington this morning and to provide against allowing her to run any bills on his account he legally publishes her as leaving his home, and warns all not to trust her on his credit.

A Wonderful House.

What promises to be the most handsomely interior decorated house in this city is just receiving the finishing touches to its beauty. It is the residence of Abner Bartlett on Westervelt avenue, and the entire house has been repapered and painted. The parlor is especially beautiful, furniture, interior decorations and all are white and gold. The piano is also to be in those two colors. The painting has been done by Chamberlain while William Mullon, of Park avenue, did the gilding. The effect will be very fine when the improvements are all completed.

The Choral Society.

The society will begin rehearsals for the season of 1895-'96 about the middle of October, of which due notice will be given to the chorus. As applications for membership are coming in, the secretary requests any member of the chorus who shall be unable to continue as an active member to so inform him, at an early day, in order that vacancies may be filled without delay. Applications for membership should be sent to the secretary at once, so that the voices may be tried by the conductor in time to enable the accepted applicants to begin practice at the first rehearsal. The representatives of Leal's school were W. Wadsworth and W. L. Glenney, and by their excellent playing succeeded in defeating North Plainfield's champions, Wm. Loizeaux and John H. VanWinkle, Jr., by the score of 6-2, 6-2, 6-3.

What Is He?

A young man, wearing a brown derby and dark suit, has been lounging around the corner of Washington and East Sixth streets for several days. He walks up and down East Sixth street and appears again during the evening. He has been seen to watch the houses in that neighborhood at the rather early hour of two o'clock in the morning. The young man is apparently a stranger to the town but he is well dressed and seems to be watching for someone. His continued stay has greatly annoyed some of the gentler sex who are afraid that he is insane.

M'GILL IS THE NOMINEE.

HE WILL STAND FOR THE DEMOCRATS IN THIS CAMPAIGN.

A Few Scattering Votes for Cutler—Laughable Incident in the Union County Delegation—State Committee Change.

The Democratic State Convention at Trenton Thursday nominated Chancellor Alexander L. McGill, of Jersey City, for Governor. There was but one ballot, and ex-Congressman Augustus W. Cutler, of Morristown, was the only other candidate named in the convention. Chancellor McGill received 796 of the 939 votes in the convention, but before the result could be made known the Cutler votes changed and it was announced that the Chancellor had received every vote and had been nominated unanimously.

Essex county cast 46 votes for Cutler; Hunterdon, 17; Morris, 31; Sussex, 20; Union, 1; and Warren, 28. Morris was the first to change.

In the caucus of the Union county delegation in the morning it was shown that out of the 47 delegates, McGill would receive 41 and Cutler 6, but when the delegation had come together in convention all of the delegates agreed to support McGill with the exception of A. B. Cook, of Rahway, who still held out for Cutler. This was the cause of making a most ludicrous scene among the Union county delegates which set the whole convention in an uproar of laughter. Union was among the last counties that would be called for on the voting, and after Chairman Martine, of this city, saw how the voting was all going for McGill, he turned to the rest of the Union county delegates and said:

"Why not make our vote unanimous for McGill. There is no use of going in with a divided delegation. What say you?"

Some one of the delegates said:

"All right, let her go that way."

So when Union county was called Mr. Martine announced that the entire vote of the delegation was cast for McGill, but he had no sooner got the words out of his mouth than Cutler's friend Cook raised his voice in a mighty tone, protesting that he wanted to cast his vote for Cutler. This was the occasion for a great hubbub among among the Union county delegates which finally spread all over the convention hall. After the excitement had quieted down somewhat, Mr. Cook consented to change his vote to McGill, and in a somewhat dramatic speech Mr. Martine announced the change.

The convention voted to change the method of selecting members of the State executive committee. Heretofore each of the Congress districts has selected two members. Under the new method each county is to elect a committeeman and the chairman of the convention is to appoint five at large. All are to serve for three years. The proposition was made by William B. Gourley, of Passaic county.

The new members from the counties were announced in the convention as follows: Atlantic county, Richard J. Byrne; Bergen, Abram DeRonde; Burlington, Echard and Budd; Camden, Henry B. Paul; Cape May, Alvin P. Hildreth; Cumberland, Phillip P. Baker, Essex, Howard W. Hays; Gloucester, Bowman S. Cox; Hudson, Edward F. C. Young; Hunterdon, Paul A. Queen; Mercer, Samuel Walker, Jr.; Middlesex, Oliver Kiely; Monmouth, David T. Crater; Morris, Thomas H. Hoagland; Ocean, Ephriam P. Emson; Passaic, Louis S. Braun; Salem, Robert Gwynne; Somerset, Frederick P. Olcott; Sussex, Samuel Fowler; Union, S. M. Williams; Warren, Johnston Cornish. The members at large will be announced after a consultation with Chancellor McGill.

Allan L. McDermott, the present Chairman of the State Committee, in announcing the temporary officers, said he would retire from the committee after ten years' service. Recently he had been reviled by the Republicans because he had acted as counsel for the defence in the race track cases, but he had been rehabilitated by their selection of his associate in those cases as the Republican candidate for Governor.

The convention extended a rising vote of thanks to Chairman McDermott for his untiring devotion to the party.

The platform denounces as false the charges of the Republican platform that the Democrats have conducted the State Government dishonestly or extravagantly, and says that the Senate investigating committee, after scrutinizing every expenditure, reported only that in the purchase of supplies two or three employes had been guilty of extravagance or malfeasance. Every good citizen joined in condemning these wrongs, but the misdoings of a few individuals were not chargeable upon the party. Millions of dollars had been spent in public improvements during the last twelve years, without a levy of a dollar of State tax upon property of private owners, which was a sufficient answer to the charge of extravagance.

On the race-track question the platform says:

We favor the adoption of a constitutional amendment that will render impossible any law for the legalization of gambling in any form.

We charge that the course of the Republican party in this and other States, in dealing with the question of legalization of betting upon horse races, has been characterized by trickery and deceit. As evidence of this, we call attention to the course of the Republican Legislature of New York, whose action in attempting to override the recently adopted Constitution of the State and permit gambling on horse races was this year approved by a Republican Governor, and to the further fact that every bet made upon a horse race within New Jersey during the past fourteen years has been made under the protection of chapter 147, Laws of 1880, enacted by a Republican Senate and House.

"On the water question the convention made these explicit declarations:

The imminence of danger is shown by the fact that the management of the Republican party of this State is today committed to the hands of those whose fortunes are invested in the water which they hope to sell to our municipalities at a profit of unlimited millions. The credit of controlling and directing the Republican Gubernatorial convention has been properly given to a gentleman who is the leading spirit of the water companies of New Jersey, and the nominee of that convention last winter appeared before the Legislature as counsel for the "water syndicate," and successfully opposed all legislation providing for the relief of the people from the grasp of his clients.

The platform's final declaration of principle is:

We charge the Republican Legislature of 1895 with attempting to drag the judiciary of New Jersey into the field of politics, and we congratulate the people of the State upon the decision of the Supreme Court, which has foiled the attempt to turn our county courts into political machines.

MISS BULKLEY SPEAKS.

She Addresses the High School Students This Morning.

The mere mention of the fact that Miss Julia E. Bulkley, would speak at the High School this morning, brought a throng of graduates and old friends to the morning exercises in Assembly Hall. After a few words of pleasure at being able to see the High School again, Miss Bulkley told something of the methods of study in Switzerland and Germany. She recalled some of the strange sights that she had seen on her visit to foreign lands and dwelt on the great difference between American and European schools. She closed with the advice to the pupils that they take advantage of the many helps and aids which they had at their command. An impromptu reception was given Miss Bulkley, for her friends crowded about her and grasped the hand once more of their old friend and principal before her return to her duties in the Chicago University. Miss Bulkley had to hurry off, however, to take her train and the welcoming friends bid her good bye.

IN ONE DISTRICT.

Township Committee Meet and Transact Important Business.

The North Plainfield Township Committee, consisting of Chairman Frank Mobus, Clerk H. J. Martin, Elias Allen and R. M. Fountain, met at H. J. Martin's blacksmith shop on Somerset street last evening, principally for the object of establishing the dividing line between the borough and township, as exclusively stated in The Daily Press of yesterday.

Clerk Martin stated that after a careful search among the books belonging to the township he discovered the dividing line which was established in 1872 and runs from Sebring's Mills to Scotch Plains, touching New Providence at one point.

A resolution was offered by Mr. Fountain that the whole of the township be established as one election district. It was carried.

There being no further business to come before the committee the meeting adjourned.

THE SPIDER AND THE FLIES.

A Sensational Story on Tap That Will Startle People.

Plainfield people may soon expect to be made acquainted with the details of a very racy story, which will involve a number of prominent people into complications that are of the most embarrassing nature. As in all affairs of these kinds there is a woman in the case, and the methods which this fair damsel has put into play to capture what she wanted will resemble somewhat the story of the spider and the flies. The flies will be a lot of ordinarily sensible men, successful in business life and standing high in social circles, but whose common sense seems to have fallen by the wayside while they have fallen victims to the intrigues and deceits of a woman who had constructed such an apparently beautiful and innocent trap that will cause all the trouble.

A Crack Shooter.

The Rochester Post Express yesterday afternoon published a picture of Charles Smith, of this city, and had the following to say concerning him:

Charles Smith, of Plainfield, N. J., who is better known to the shooting fraternity from Maine to SanFrancisco as "Dutchy," is always to be found at the tournaments. He is the crack shot of the Climax Gun Club, of Fanwood, N. J., and has never failed to secure his share of the prize money. He is a steady, reliable marksman and is well up among the average shooters at this tournament.

At Rochester in two days Mr. Smith broke all but fifteen out of 390 targets.

ALL CHEWED GUM AND SANG

LUDICROUS ENTERTAINMENT IN TRINITY CHURCH LAST NIGHT.

Quaint Costumes and Surroundings Make a Funny Scene That Is Made Still Funnier by Funny Actors—All Laughed.

"Put your chewing gum under your chairs and get ready," were the instructions given by Prof. Nehemiah to his singin' skewl at the Trinity Reformed church on Thursday, and his remarks were followed by a general scurry and giggle from the very old-fashioned and grotesque gathering that faced him.

The lecture room in the basement of the church began to fill as the hour of the entertainment approached and the little basket, in which Mrs. F. A. Church received the admissions, grew heavy with its valuable load. The room itself was prettily draped with pink and green bunting, while hung around the stage, at one end, were strings of cucumbers, apples, corn, and other farm products. At last, when all the seats were filled and the usual row of young men was standing up in the rear of the room, Prof. Nehemiah, represented by L. S. Bond, and his school entered. The chorus which formed the school consisted of Phebe, Bert Demarest; Betsey Bobbitt, Mrs. J. C. Van Dyke; Jane, Mrs. E. E. Anthony; Beckey, Miss L. Dunn; Polly, Miss E. C. Benedict; Peggy, Mrs. F. S. Cutter; Nancy, Miss E. Gillem; Eliza, Mrs. John MacMurray; Prudence, Miss Etta Krymer; Patience, Miss MacMurray; Hulda, Miss G. Berg; Susanna, Miss M. Williams; Hetty, Mrs. F. C. Adams; Desire, Miss Fenner; Consider, Mrs. J. E. Moore; Jerusha, Miss Minnie Berg; Rachel, Miss M. Van Fleet; Cynthia, Mrs. H. W. Marshall; Reuben, Edward E. Anthony; Jabez, Will Crawford; Ebenezer, F. A. Church; Jeremiah, F. S. Cutter; Jakie, T. E. Hazell; Hezekiah, Robert Clark; Jedediah, Will Holmes; Azariah, Elmer Runyon.

When the professor had instructed his scholars as to the placing of their gum, he called the roll and found a number absent. Jabez, Will Crawford, was the first of the missing ones to appear and, when told he was late, consulted a large alarm clock that he carried in his shirt. With thoughts entirely on the apple he was eating, E. E. Anthony, as Reuben, entered. "I tore my pants," he explained, and showed an immense white patch on the seat of his trousers. His teacher took away the apple and sent him whimpering to his seat. Betsey Bobbitt was the next to arrive and gave a written excuse to her teacher. Will Holmes, representing Jedediah, came late and gave as his reason for doing so that "Mamma tied me up in a knot and I fell in Tier's pond," and poor Jedediah did not appear to straighten himself out during the rest of the evening, but kept the audience convulsed with laughter at his very comical antics.

The scholars were then told by their teacher that visitors would arrive, and soon in walked Obidiah, P. M. Demarest; Jemima, Mrs. P. M. Demarest; Samantha, Miss Lillian A. Force; and Tursha Ann, Miss Lydia W. Dufford. They were welcomed by loud smiles and grimaces from the singers. Samantha was next escorted to the piano. Then their leader asked them all to strike a chord. The noise that resulted was frightful, and another attempt was just as bad. The third was all right, however, and the regular programme opened with a solo by Miss Krymer, "Aunt Dinah's Quilting Party," in which all joined in the chorus. After a general misbehavior on the part of all the school, Miss Dufford played a piano selection in a most enjoyable manner.

"Can't I set by Susanna?" shrieked out Reuben, while Ebenezer bowed deeply to the audience as they loudly applauded Miss Dufford. After a well rendered vocal solo, "I Loved You Better Than You Know" by Robert Clark, Cynthia broke out with "Make him stop pullin' my hair." "He's throwing his peanut shells in my yard" was heard from Jedediah and the next instant his smothered yells could be heard from under a capacious sun bonnet which was sent flying over his head. He was released only in time to jump up on a chair and join in the general turmoil caused by the appearance of a little candy mouse. There was great excitement for a few minutes and Ebenezer made his feet fly about to the terror of his class mates. At last, however, Reuben the brave man, marched up and stepped on it. The whole chorus then united in singing "The Old Oaken Bucket" while Jedediah flourished his arms about in the most improved fashion. Mary Ann here began to cut up and was set between two of the boys. While Jedediah was examining the the sign from off his back which read "From Morris Plains," someone scattered some snuff about and all indulged in a general sneeze.

"Patience" said the professor, "is a virtue" shouted out the irrepressible Jedediah and was silenced with a look. The alarm of Jabez's clock went off at this point and Jed came out with the remark, "Let's play Liberty Bell March." The effort was too great however and Jed went over in a heap, to receive a good thrashing from his teacher.

Miss MacMurray, and Miss Krymer sang vocal selections and then Jed got off a very amusing ditty, which was so pleasing that an encore was demanded, but not responded to, as encores were ruled out from the start, on account of the length of programme.

"The Swanee River" by the entire school followed, and then Azariah, Elmer Runyon, was introduced and sang "The Sweetest Story Ever Told" while Phebe took it all to herself. After a duet by Becky and Jed, the entertainment closed with "Auld Lang Syne."

After the programme was concluded, the audience was invited to remain and partake of the refreshments which were soon passed around by the men. The entire affair was arranged by the Ladies Christian Work society of the church, to pay for the renovating and painting of the lecture room.

About $80 was received, and the rest of the necessary funds will be raised at other entertainments during the winter. The commttee in charge consisted of Mrs. P. M. Demarest and Mrs. J. F. MacDonald, who were assisted by Mrs. F. A. Church and Mrs. R. A. Meeker.

Some of the costumes of the singers were very remarkable. Bert Demarest, as Phebe, wore, besides a very strange costume, a night-cap that was his mother's wedding night-cap. P. M. Demarest had, as part of his make-up, a white vest over forty-eight years old, worn by him at his wedding.

F. A. Church, was a great success, attired as an English school boy, with a genuine white Irish spun linen blouse, over 100 years old.

The evening was greatly enjoyed by all present, and there was a unanimous opinion that "The Singin' Skewl" was a decided success, and should be repeated.

A NIGHT OF PLEASURE.

Young People of the Church of Heavenly Rest Give An Entertainment.

The young peoples entertainment last night in the Parish House of the Heavenly Rest, on Clinton avenue, was a success. The greatest credit is due to Miss Yaeger and Miss Graves for all the pains and trouble they took in the rehearsals, and the audience which filled the hall showed how they appreciated the result of their labors. Miss Ida Tallamy opened with a piano solo, which was followed by an amusing dialogue between Messrs. Walter Sherwin and Ridley Morgan. Then a recitation by Miss Nellie Morgan, followed by a laughable play called "A Boy's Plot," in which the characters were taken by Miss Libbie Dennick, Miss Maggie Porter, the Misses Alma Jackson, Carrie Howard, Rache Schunk, Ida Utzinger, Viola Seivers, Sallie Emory, and Edith Millington, George Graves, Reynolds and Sherwin. Miss Dennick being called away at the last moment, Mrs. C. W. Lines kindly took her part, and made a great character of the Widow Smith. Then came a recitation by the Misses Dottie Smalley, Lizzie Hendry and Helen Fulton. Afterwards a pretty hoop drill by eight young ladies, every two hoops being of different colors.

Miss Viola Seivers gave a recitation; Master Sherwin sang a song; and the performance closed with a clever play called "Independents," in which the parts were well taken by Miss Yaeger, Miss Clark, the Misses Graves, and the Messrs Burt and Will Tallamy. In the drill were the Misses Cora Hartpence, Mary Porter, Jackson, Schunk, Seivers, Maggie Porter, Carrie Howard, and Annie Peterson.

HE DIDN'T LIKE THE SOLE.

And Told the Shoemaker So, But Kiely Settled the Matter.

An innocent pair of shoes was the cause of a quarrel that almost ended in a fight yesterday afternoon. There is a certain Jewish shoemaker on East Fourth street, near Watchung avenue, that is kept busy, day after day, in mending shoes for his fellow citizens in the neighborhood.

A day or two ago Sam Johnson, the colored bootblack on North avenue, brought a pair of shoes in to be mended. Yesterday afternoon he returned to get the shoes, but somehow the repairs did not suit his fancy and he told the shoemaker so. Then they both began to talk and Johnson, to show his disapproval, pulled the soles off the shoes. When the excitement waxed fiercer than ever, Sergeant Kiely suddenly appeared on the scene. At the advice of the officer, the shoemaker repaired the damage done and Johnson paid according to the first agreement. Then Sergeant Kiely waited until all was quiet again, and the colored man had gone on his way, after which the policeman followed suit.

A Hot Box Starts a Blaze.

A train of coal cars filled with fine coal passed through here last evening about nine o'clock. A hot box on one of the cars set it on fire, and it was sidetracked just beyond the Grant Avenue station. An alarm was sent in from Box 47, and the fire department turned out and soon extinguished the flames. The burned end of the car allowed the coal to fall on the ground below, making a rich harvest for the coal pickers this morning.

CAPTURING TIGERS ALIVE.

Some Experiences of an Agent in Search of Menagerie Specimens.

The business of replenishing menageries with wild animals is interesting, especially when the circus agents go directly to the haunts of the beasts to capture them alive. J. B. Gaylord, foreign agent for the Ringling Bros. circus, has had some thrilling experiences in this work. Some time ago he wrote the Ringlings from Singapore about a hunt to capture tigers alive. Among other things he wrote:

"Although the island of Singapore is only fourteen miles in extent, there are no less than 500 tigers in its woods, and people here do not venture alone beyond the city limits after nightfall. The first night after my arrival here, while our ship lay in the harbor, I could plainly hear the roaring of the blood-thirsty beasts as they prowled around the outskirts of the city in search of prey. M. de Silva, the native agent, having located several tigers' trails, we started on foot with about fifty natives the following morning. The trip to the first tiger trail was only three or four miles, and we arrived at this point at about 8 o'clock.

"After locating the trail exactly, and finding the stream to which the tiger must break for water each night on awakening from his all-day sleep—the habit of the tiger—we set about making our preparations. In the direct path of the tiger we dug a pit seven feet wide, ten feet long, and fifteen feet deep, but much longer and wider at the bottom than at the top.

"All the dirt dug from the pit was carefully removed to a considerable distance by the natives, and they showed great care and skill in not leaving any external evidence of the fact that a big hole had been dug. A lot of bamboo strips were next laid over the pit, and these, covered with dry leaves, made to appear like the general surroundings.

"We next took three bamboo sticks about twelve feet in length and placed them in the form of a tripod, in such a position as to bring the point of the tripod directly above the centre of the pit. From the top of the bamboo sticks some of the natives suspended a live goat by a cord barely strong enough to bear its weight, and sure to break if the tiger leaped upon the goat. Everything being in readiness for Mr. Tiger, as soon as he chose to go against our little game, Mr. de Silva and myself, as well as the natives, repaired to a hut about eighty rods distant and awaited developments. It had been dark about an hour, and I began to think we were going to be disappointed, when one of the natives rushed into the hut, crying:

"'Lend me a beshma.'

"The furious cries of the tiger had startled him as with a terrific roar it sprang upon the suspended goat, and, going down with its burden, sank into the merciless pit prepared for it. Igniting a number of torches both to light the way and to forestall any attack that might possibly be made upon us by wild animals, we proceeded in a body to the pit. The roars of the tiger were awful, as he furiously tried to leap upward to gain his freedom. As I have already explained to you, the sides of the pit slanted inward toward the top, and at every effort the tiger could be heard striking his nose against the loose earth.

"This frantic behavior was kept up for about an hour, when, entirely exhausted, the fierce king of the jungle lay perfectly quiet at the bottom of the pit. Two of the natives now lowered a bamboo basket down into the pit, letting the open side fall directly over the supine form of the tiger. Immediately after this a number of natives jumped into the pit and began crowding rattan withes through the sand beneath the tiger and bringing them around the basket. In this manner the tiger was in a few minutes completely inclosed in the bamboo basket.

"Returning to the hut, we awaited the dawn, and as soon as it appeared the natives went back to the pit and lifted the basket containing the tiger out of it. We detailed ten of the coolies to take our captive to the city. Before they started I took a look at our prize through the rattan withes. He was a magnificent specimen, but the sorriest looking tiger I ever saw. He was covered with blood from his frantic efforts to get out of the pit, and the skin was peeled from his nose and face, while the eyes were almost entirely closed by the swollen face."—San Francisco Chronicle.

The Glass Snake Only a Brittle Lizard.

The glass snake, which is not a snake any more than it is a turtle, has a tail of about two-thirds its entire length. This tail, like the tails of about all lizards in the United States that I have met, is very delicate and easily broken off at times.

When a fourth to a half, or even more, of the animal is detached and the head end wriggles away, and the remainder and sometimes larger part squirms in sight, it is an astonishing spectacle, and I am not surprised that the ignorant should clothe the creature with mysticism.

But, as a matter of fact, all sensible people know that the fragments do not reunite, for it would be impossible to fit together the ruptured blood vessels and shattered nerves and restore the animal. Still this story of traditional force is believed by a host of people, along with other surprising hoopsnake tales, milk-snake whoppers, with quill throwing porcupine relations, and a thousand and one other and lesser untruths.

The Reason Why.

FOOLED AGAIN.

The Fire Department Turn Out to Find Nothing But Smoke.

There were several fires that started this morning, but they were either in a furnace or stove. One of the last, however, brought out the fire department about 9 o'clock. As John Devine was passing by the residence of Patrick Keely on LaGrande, corner of Scott avenues, he saw smoke pouring out of the windows. He immediately sent in an alarm from Box 23 at the corner of Fifth street and Franklin place, and the department turned out to find that the stove pipe would not draw and the smoke had gone out of the windows instead.

It May Spoil His Wedding Trip.

A question that is agitating the lawyers in Elizabeth is whether the trial of the libel suit of Dr. Lawrence against the Summit Record will not interfere with Editor Thomas F. Lane's wedding tour. Mr. Lane was married yesterday at Washington to Senator Blackburn's daughter. His lawyer wanted an adjournment for the term, but Richard B. Lindabury, the opposing counsel, would not consent, and Judge VanSyckel said the case would be tried next Monday. Editor Lane intended to start off on a long trip with his bride this week, but the lawyers say he must be in court Monday if the case comes to trial, and from present indications it will.

A Special Train.

All those intending to attend the State Christian Endeavor Convention at Atlantic City should bear in mind the only train on which special rates will be given is the Plainfield '96 special, which leaves Somerville at 12:30 o'clock, Wednesday, October 9th. The total expense for railroad fare, board and room at the hotels, souvenir caps, which are to be worn at the convention, etc., will be only $6.50, which will be less than the regular railroad rates for Somerville to Atlantic City and return. Those wishing to go on this train are urged to make it known to E. E. Anthony, 50 Westervelt avenue, as soon as possible.

Hon. Roswell G. Horr, the eminent Republican who has made Plainfield his home, telegraphs to Candidate Griggs that "my coat is off for work to the finish and victory." Mr. Horr evidently means that he is willing to talk. But the Republicans will need something more than talk to win Jersey this fall.

A Benefit.

The Pond Tool Social Club will give a benefit to Daniel Manly, one of their members, who is deserving at present of substantial aid. The benefit will be in the form of a festival and dance and will take place in T. A. B. Hall, Friday evening, October 18th. O'Reilly will furnish the music.

To the Honorable, the Director and Board of Freeholders;

Gentlemen—I would respectfully call the attention of the Board to the fact that no provision is made to carry off the surface water on the north side of Morris avenue, opposite my residence, so that the water is beginning to run over the macadam, during heavy rains, at one point, (near the brook), running over from Mr. Allen's side to mine.

I believe it is likely to injure the newly macadamized avenue unless attended to. (Signed)

Very truly yours,
Geo. B. Vanderpool.

THE MEANEST CUT OF ALL.

He Ruined Both Tires and Fled in the Night.

Another malicious tire destroyer is enjoying himself in the borough. Last Sunday afternoon Frederick S. Bishop, of Somerset streeet, went out riding on his wheel. When he returned he locked his wheel up as usual in the bicycle house in the rear of his yard. Monday morning when he went to get his safety he discovered that both tires were flat. On examining them he found that someone out of pure deviltry had taken a knife and cut several gashes in the tire two or three inches long. The front tire was in the same condition. Of course the tires were utterly ruined, and Mr. Bishop has vowed vengeance on the miscreant should he ever find him.

Their Eighth Annual Ball.

Probably one of the most popular and well-conducted events among the young people of Plainfield is the annual ball of the Twilight Social Club, who already have a committee hard at work perfecting arrangements for their eighth annual. The dance will be held in the Crescent Bicycle Academy, on Watchung avenue, on Thanksgiving Eve, Wednesday, November 27th. The music for dancing will be furnished by Prof. Nickols, of Newark, and the committee will spare no time or labor in looking to the comfort and pleasure of all who favor them with their presence. The officers of the club are: President, F. S. Moore; Corresponding Secretary, E. C. Searing; Financial Secretary, L. Fering; Treasurer, J. W. Loughlin.

Policemen After More Pay.

The matter of increasing the pay of the Elizabeth police, which was defeated recently, may come up again at the City Council meeting Tuesday night. There is a disposition, it is said, on the part of certain Councilmen who voted against the increase to recall their action, and if this should prove true the finest may get at last the advance in wages they have been so long agitating for.

Republican Primaries.

The borough Republican primaries to elect delegates to the county convention will be held in the public school building on Saturday evening next.

The Somerset County Republican Convention will be held in the Court House at Somerville, Wednesday, October 9th.

PLAYED ALONE.

South Orange Tennis Players Fail to Appear at the Hillside Grounds.

Two tennis cracks from the South Orange Field Club were to come to play Plainfield's best at the Hillside Tennis Club courts on Saturday afternoon, but they did not. The Plainfield boys were there all right, but no one appeared against them, and so a little match was arranged between the players for the benefit of those who came to see the Orange cracks play. Four teams for doubles were secured, Dr. W. Richards and George Ryder, R. A. Beebe and Sherwood West, Howard W. Beebe and Fred W. Walz, and Carl F. Walz and J. H. P. Wharton, and each team was pitted against each of the others. Some very pretty tennis resulted and those present saw some exciting contests. H. W. Beebe and F. W. Walz won the match by scoring three victories and no defeats. C. F. Walz and J. H. P. Wharton were next with two victories and a single defeat. Dr. Richards and George Ryder lost to both of the preceding teams, but won from R. A. Beebe and S. West, thus taking third place in the list.

The scores of the different matches were as follows:

C. Walz and Wharton defeated R. Beebe and West, 6-2, 6-4. C. Walz and Wharton defeated Richards and Ryder, 6-4, 6-4. H. Beebe and F. Walz defeated Richards and Ryder, 8-6, 6-4. H. Beebe and F. Walz defeated C. Walz and Wharton, 6-2, 4-6, 6-3. H. Beebe and F. Walz defeated R. Beebe and West, 6-4, 6-3. Richards and Ryder defeated R. Beebe and West, 6-4, 4-6, 6-4.

LOOKING AFTER THE SCHOOLS

BOARD OF EDUCATION HOLD THEIR REGULAR MONTHLY MEETING.

Prof. Maxson Makes His Report on the Opening of the School Year, showing a Large Attendance—Important Reports.

Most of the regular session of the Board of Education last Monday was spent in closing up accounts for the various improvements and repairs necessary at the opening of the public schools.

Messrs. Jenkins, Lovell and Lounsbury were present when the meeting was called to order, while Dr. Probasco arrived later in the evening. In the absence of President Probasco, Mr. Lovell was elected temporary chairman. Clerk Clark read the minutes of the meeting of September 3d, which were duly approved. A number of bills were reported as approved and were ordered paid. The report of Tax-Collector John Johnson was next read and it gave the amount collected during the last month as $258 03.

Superintendent Maxson then reported for September. The school opened, he said, with a prompt and full attendance but the weather of the past few weeks had been so warm that little work was done, the schools being given one session for several days on account of the extreme heat.

The High School opened a week later on account of the delay in the arrival of the lumber for the floors. The entering class was very large, numbering nearly ninety. The changes in Assembly Hall had greatly helped the school and aided much in improving the discipline and management. The placing of the upper grades of the High School in one room made the school much more effective, but involved the necessity of omitting the Grammar School from the regular chapel exercises. The study of the sciences was still inadequate. The total number in the schools was 1,798, fifty-two more than last year. The crowding was greatest at the Bryant School where there were two classes of over sixty each. The pupils were placed on half time, part of the class coming in the morning and part in the afternoon.

The question of a new encyclopedia for the High School, and one for the Franklin School, which has none at present, was discussed, and Superintendent Maxson presented a volume of the International Encyclopedia which costs $60 a set. Mr. Lounsbury favored the Encyclopedia Brittanica as it was larger and cheaper, but it was finally decided to let the subject rest until the next meeting.

Mr. Loundsbury, as chairman of the committee of building and repairs, made his report. The fire escapes had been placed upon the schools at a cost of $1,275.00, according to contract. Extension repairs had been made on the Stillman building, he said, but they were greatly needed. Their cost was as follows:—Carpenter work, $1,126 88; heating and ventilating, $615.40; architect's charges, $60; papering third floor, $67; rubber matting, $141.63; total, $2,008.91. The sum of $441.75 had been expended for desks and furniture, and a new flag erected at the cost of $131.88.

The expenses at the Franklin building was chiefly for plumbing, ventilating, papering, and mason work, and amounted to $429.03.

The laying of a flag sidewalk and curb was the principal work done at the Bryant where the cost was $366.64. Two new windows in the Washington building with other sundries amounted to $202.55. The largest item at the Irving school was for coating the blackboards, the total being $114 25. In the Wadsworth school, $51.31 was spent chiefly in providing city water. The expense so far had been $3,355.49, and altogether would amount to about $3,500.

Mr. Lounsbury also reported that a low bid had been obtained for connecting with sewers and that the pipe had been ordered laid to the curb. He brought up the question of the great expense of keeping the silicate black boards in order and thought that some other less expensive kind be used.

The question of placing rubber matting on the stairs, as in the High School was discussed, but no action taken. The Irving and the Bryant are the only ones in condition to receive it at present.

After further discussion the building committee was asked to look into the cost of a vault to be constructed in the cellar and a safe, as the present one is far to small to keep all the records of the board and is not fireproof. The question of a letter press and cabinet file was also left to the committee, who was instructed to report on all these questions at the next meeting.

After further consideration of minor business the Board went into executive session.

THE UNTERRIFIED DEMOCRATS

MEN OF STERLING CHARACTERS WHO ARE IN IT TO WIN.

The Nominee for County Clerk is Experienced in the Duties of the Office—Every Other Candidate Has Ability.

Augustus Vanderveer, the nominee for county clerk on the Democratic ticket in Somerset county, has been the deputy in that office for the past ten years. Of a reserved disposition, he has many warm friends, regardless of politics, while discharging the duties of his position. He is very popular and his election seems probable.

The nominee for sheriff on the same ticket is Calvin D. McMurtry. Everybody knows "Cal." He belongs to Somerville's "400" and yet has time to devote to the common people. There is no more popular man in Somerset county. His ways are so courteous that once he casts those beautiful eyes on a person and that winning smile, which is always visible, why you are simply forever afterward his friend.

Charles N. Hoagland, the Assembly nominee, is a farmer and resides in Franklin township, near Millstone. He is an up-to-date man and a very intelligent person. His candidacy will bring him before the people of that county. The impression that Mr. Hoagland will make will be beneficial to the Democratic ticket. He is an honest, industrious man, and although already well known, he will make it his business to acquaint himself with every voter in Somerset county.

The candidate for coroner, who The Press readers will be most interested in, is Dr. P. J. Zeglio, the bright young physician of North Plainfield. The doctor is so well known that it would be useless to attempt to show his personality. He was elected coroner a few years ago, but refused to qualify because his residence was in an agricultural district. The doctor very kindly allowed a Republican to take the position because he resided in a thickly populated district.

The presence of the fair ones will urge the bachelors on to do great things, while their opponents will work hard to show superiority over the married men. The two teams will be as follows:

A News Lie.

James McCormick, motorman on the street railway, states the report in The News that he has been married is entirely false.

There is no medicine so often needed in every home and so admirably adapted to the purposes for which it is intended, as Chambertain's Pain Balm. Hardly a week passes but some member of the family has need of it. A toothache or headache may be cured by it. A touch of rheumatism or neuralgia quieted. The severe pain of a burn or scald promptly relieved and the sore healed in much less time than when medicine has to be sent for. A sprain may be promptly treated before inflammation sets in, which insures a cure in about one-third of the time otherwise required. Cuts and bruises should receive immediate treatment before the parts become swollen, which can only be done when Pain Balm is kept at hand. A sore throat may be cured before it becomes serious. A troublesome corn may be removed by applying it twice a day for a week or two. A lame back may be cured and several days of valuable time saved or a pain in the side or chest relieved without paying a doctor bill. Procure a 50 cent bottle at once and you will never regret it. MAYOR GILBERT TALKS.

MATTERS OF IMPORTANCE ACTED ON

Mr. Gilbert Thinks That the City and Borough Should Be More Neighborly—Harvey Fisk Sons Willing to Cancel the Bond Contract—A Chemical Engine Ordered—A Defect in the Title to the Land Purchased for Sewage Beds—Trolley Extension Ordinance Ordered Engrossed and Advertised.—Other Details.

Monday night's session of the City Council was an exceedingly busy one, and more than the usual time was occupied in transacting the business. All the members were present except Mr. Stockton.

On Mr. Fisk's motion the regular order of business was suspended to allow Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh to make a statement regarding some of the property to be used for the sewage beds. He stated that there were some defects in regard to two titles, both for twenty-five acres. One was for property owned by Thomas Kane and the other formerly owned by the late Mr. Smock and now by Charles Hopp. On the latter Mrs. Penfield, he said, was willing to give a warranty deed for property in consideration of $125, and he advised the city to take it and in case anything should happen it would fall back on the warrantor. There was a cloud over the property in question but nothing that he thought was serious.

Mr. Ginna moved that the city take the title for the sum asked, $8,000, and that a waarant be drawn for that amount. The motion was carried, all voting yes except Councilmen Frazee and Moore.

The regular order of business was then taken up, and Clerk MacMurray read the minutes of the last regular and several adjourned meetings which were approved.

Chief Grant in a communication asked for an appropriation of $300 to purchase overcoats and trousers for the city policemen. It was referred to committee on police and public lights.

D. F Stewart and others petitioned Council for two electric lights on John street. A petition from M. A. Haven and other residents of West Front street, asking for crosswalks at West End, Giraud and Grant avenues was referred.

The communication of the Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company, to erect a piazza 14x6 at the house, 217 West Second street, was referred with power to the committee on police and public lights, as was also the petition from Charles Stimpson for an electric light on Carleton avenue east of Putnam avenue.

Elizabeth VanBuskirk and others petitioned the Council that the grade of the northwesterly side of Belvidere avenue, northeast of Charlotte road, be reduced one foot.

George Ames and others asked that a crosswalk be laid at Eighth street east of Plainfield avenue. At this point a communication from the Borough Board of Health relative to the condition of Green brook was presented and read. The letter was published exclusively in The Daily Press of last week. Another communication from Charles Maire and others, residents along the brook, complaining of its condition was also presented, and H. O. Newman for the Plainfield Board of Health in a communication stated that the condition of the brook prevented it being cleaned on account of obstructions.

Mayor Gilbert, who was present, desired to say something on the subject and the privilege was accorded him. He said in part that he felt it his duty to inspect Green brook and determine what action if any should be taken. He examined it between Tier's dam and Grove street and found at the outlet to the North avenue sewer that the water was discolored. For a distance of from 200 to 400 feet he found an oily substance on top. The stream in places was unsightly but not offensive to smell. He said he went to a point near the raceway and found the latter very offensive, with four house connections emptying into it. Something should be done to compel the owners of the raceway to put it in good sanitary condition.

Between Somerset street and Grove street the Board of Health a year ago reported no house connections. The Borough Board of Health claim there are thirty, but he doubted it. The offense is due to a vegetable matter and waste which is thrown into the brook on both sides. The borough is just as much to blame as the city is, he considered. They have made a dumping place of the ground in front of the Watchung avenue outlet. In the brook proper he discovered more borough pipes in the stream than Plainfield ones. They may not be house connections, however. He believed the borough is unduly excited.

The city, he said, did not want to treat them too lightly or too seriously. We should protect ourselves. That raceway should be cleaned by the proper authorities. Proper attention should be given the North avenue sewer. It should be watched and cleaned whenever necessary. The two municipalties should do this work at the brook in a neighborly way and remove any obstructions that there may be there preventing cleanliness. The accusation that a member of the Plainfield Board of Health is emptying in the stream is denied by him.

Mr. Fisk then offered a resolution that was adopted, which provides for authorizing the street commissioner to clean the brook from Watchung avenue to Giraud avenue at a cost not to exceed $150.

Other members of the Council voiced the sentiments expressed by the Mayor in his remarks.

Mr. Dumont then moved that the clerk be authorized to acknowledge receipt of the communications in regard to the brook, and that the said communications be filed. It was so ordered.

The regular reports of the city judge, clerk, and treasurer were read, referred to the Finance committee and later reported correct and ordered filed.

Jacob Seeler applied for a peddler's license which was granted.

In a communication Harvey Fisk & Sons said that owing to the adverse criticism which the transaction between them and the city had caused in regard to the issuing of bonds on the four per cent loan, and in view of the fact that Charles Fisk was a member of the council, they were willing to waive all legal rights to the contract, providing that the money thus far borrowed was returned to them at the same four per cent. on which it was loaned and that the issuing of bonds be advertised in the papers in the usual way. The matter was referred to the finance committee to report in one week. Mr. Fisk asked for the priviledge of not voting when the matter was brought up for decision. It was granted him.

A short recess was then taken to examine the city collectors books, after which Mr. Dumont moved that the boobs be approved which was so ordered.

Mr. Ginna then presented two bills for hospital cases, Lizzie Brown and Hannah Martin, which, he stated, were admitted to the hospital without authority. He moved the bills be paid, but that it would not establish a precedent, as authority was necessary in all city cases, and the city clerk was authorized to notify the hospital to that effect.

Mr. Dumont made a motion, which was carried, that $12,000 be borrowed for sewer work, and another that $8,000 be drawn to purchase a certain portion of the property for the sewage beds. This was also carried, all voting yes except Councilmen Frazee and Moore.

Mr. Dumont offered a resolution that in anticipation of taxes, the following amounts be drawn: $5,000 for general fund; $3,000 for fire fund and $1,000 for poor fund. It was so ordered.

Mr. Erickson stated that bids had been received for furnishing a chemical engine from the Holloway Company and the Babcock Company. The price for the former was $1,860 and the latter $1,900. He offered a resolution that the former be purchased for $1,860, which was so ordered.

Mr. Moore objected as he thought the taxpayers were not receiving sufficent benefits in the way of reduced rates on insurance.

Mr. Erickson said that Plainfield had a fire hydrant system that cost $3,600 and had disposed of a fire engine, also a hose carriage, and the chemical engine had a record of extinguishing six consecutive fires, and besides the appropriation for the engine had been made early in the year. The engine was ordered purchased, all voting yes except Mr. Moore.

The petition of D. S. Dunavan to erect a wagon-house covered with corrugated iron at 242 East Second street was granted.

Mr. Erickson made a statement in regard to the placing of hydrants. He said that if the Plainfield Water Supply Company would extend their mains to Johnson place he would recommend that the hydrant at the corner of Front and Berckman streets be accepted, also the others ordered placed about the city. He offered a resolution that a two-way hydrant be placed on Prospect avenue and another on Stelle avenue.

It was so ordered. He also offered a resolution that fire-alarm boxes be located as follows: East Front street and Watchung avenue; Watchung avenue and Woodlawn avenue; Clinton avenue near West Third street. It was so ordered. Mr. Fisk moved that all bids for furnishing street signs be returned as none of them were satisfactory. The motion prevailed.

On Mr. Fisk's motion petitions for the following crosswalks were granted and ordered laid: West Second and Liberty streets; West Front street at West End and Giraud avenues; Washington and West Sixth streets; East Seventh street across Watchung avenue; East Seventh street to LaGrande avenue; West Eighth street east of Plainfield avenue.

Owing to a slight mistake in Washburn & Washburn's sewer bond, Mr. Frost offered a resolution, which was carried, that an extension of one week be granted them to prepare it.

Mr. Ginna stated that J. Y. Barrett held property under lease which the city was very desirous of obtaining to go on with the construction of the sewage beds, and that Mr. Barrett would sell the lease for $150. He offered a resolution that the same be accepted which was adopted, Councilmen Frazee and Moore voting no.

On Mr. Fisk's motion the street railway ordinance was brought up and placed on second reading. He then offered a few amendments to it so that it would comply with the map which is a part of the ordinance. The ordinance was then ordered engrossed and advertised.

The City Assessor asked Council for more safe room for his books. The matter was referred to the finance committee.

Mr. Frazee, of the auditing committee, reported all bids correct except that of the Plainfield Water Supply Company, which on examination was found to be $100 too much, it being $995 instead of $8 5. The figures were changed and that with the other bills were ordered paid. The incorrect bill caused considerable amusement among the members as it had passed the City Clerk and finance committee before the discrepancy was found.

On Mr. Dumont's motion Council adjourned to meet Monday evening, October 14th.

"Plainfield '96" Will Be Their Slogan, and Strong Efforts Will Be Made to Make It a Reality—Names of the Party.

If Plainfield does not secure the Christian Endeavor convention in '96 it will not be for lack of energy on the part of the Plainfield delegates. All those who were going and many of their fellow Endeavorers who had to remain behind, gathered on the platform of the North Avenue station to await the arrival of the train. The cool weather kept many from wearing the white yachting caps, but there was a sprinkling of them among the crowd as well as the special society ribbon badges.

The train arrived on time and there was a general scampering. On the side of the first car was a large sign bearing the C. E. emblem and "Plainfield '96." All the train crew also wore the Plainfield '96 caps and all were members of the Christian Endeavor society. The following are members of the party:

Mrs. Diedrich, Misses Angie and Addie Diedrich, Mr. and Mrs. Gifford, Rev. C. E. Herring, A. V. Searing, Jr., Miss Estella Bittenbender, Mrs. Hawkins, Miss F. G. Hawkins, Joseph M. Hawkins, Miss Fish, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Lowry, Miss Myra Runyon, Miss Alice Spangenberg, Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Hart, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Sebring, Miss Adelaide Runyon, Mr. and Mrs. Fred E. Smith and daughter, G. V. N. Tetter, Miss E. C. Benedict, Mrs. H. J. Martin, Mrs. Millard, Mr. and Mrs. Clickner, Mrs. J. M. Tier, Miss Lizzie Dunn, Miss Jennie Quick, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Anthony, Miss Lillian Force, Miss Bagot, Miss Lizzie DeCamp, Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Van Emburgh, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Marshall, Corra Ryno, Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Peck, Jr., Miss Carrie Mehl, Mrs. F. P. Benedict, Miss Susie Benedict, John H. VanWinkle, Miss Emily Coriell, Miss Laura Runyon, Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Randolph, Robert Love, E. C. Hepburn, Miss Jennie L. Blackford, J. B. Mills, Rev. J. O. Rev. J. Clement French, president of the State Union, will accompany the delegation.

WHEELING BY MOONLIGHT.

Plainfield And Dunellen Young People Enjoy a Spin To New Brunswick.

The moon was still bright and the wheeling was delightful Monday evening. A party of nine from this city and Dunellen took advantage of it and went out for a spin to New Brunswick. The party consisted of Miss Mattie Barrett, Miss Jessie Maltby, Miss Sophie Rudd, Sydney Perrin, Alfred Perrin, Daniel Richardson, Thomas Smith, Thomas Barrett and Frank Richards. When the cyclists arrived at Metuchen, Richards' tire punctured. He repaired it, however, without much delay and the rest of the evening passed off without an accident.

SHOT IN THE FACE.

Eddie Duck Accidentally Pulls The Trigger of a Loaded Revolver.

Carelessness in handling a revolver was the cause of an almost fatal accident to Eddie Duck, of Netherwood avenue, last week. He was examining a loaded revolver when it went off, the bullet striking the lad just above the nose, narrowly missing the eye. A doctor was called, the bullet probed for and extracted. The lad is now doing as well as might be expected. The great wonder is that it did not penetrate his brain.

Studying the Good Book.

President Wm. D. Murray organized a Tuesday night Bible class at the Y. M. C. A. last night, with excellent prospects. The lesson for the class next Tuesday night will be the "Names of the twelve Apostles, the four lists, the three groups, who the twelve were, dates when they were called, and first disciples called, John 1:35.

"Many of the citizens of Rainsville, Indiana, are never without a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house," says Jacob Brown, the leading merchant of the place. WEATHER FALLACIES

THEY ARE KNOCKED ON THE HEAD BY AN ENGLISH INVESTIGATOR.

The Signs That Fail as Often as They Are Verified—Old Superstitions Exploded by Modern Meteorological Study—Animal Signs No Good.

Superstitious and proverbial lore about the weather was cruelly rent in the iconoclastic address on "Weather Fallacies" read to the Royal Meteorological society at its meeting in London by the president, R. Inwards, and printed in The Quarterly Journal of the society. In early times, when the weather had to be studied from cloud, sky and sea and from the behavior of animals and plants, men were pardonable for doing what is still often a cause of error, foretelling what they most wished for and putting down as a universal law what was only a coincidence of independent events. One class of prophecies connects the weather with certain seasons of the year, particularly days in the week or the days of certain saints, which was a convenient way of fixing a date, and even with particular times of the day. We often hear such sayings as "Fine on Friday, fine on Sunday," or "Friday is the best and the worst day of the week," and proverbs like "Rain at 7, fine at 11." When these sayings come true they are faithfully remembered, when they fail they are forgotten. There is no kind of foundation for such rules, which Mr. Inwards calls "self exploding," or for the belief that if it rains on St. Swithin's day, July 15, it will rain for 40 days after.

Equally unfounded are the scientific superstitions, presented under the shield of astronomy, which base infallible rules for the weather on the relative position of the moon, sun and planets. These appeal to analogy, to reason and to common sense. The known action of sun and moon on ocean tides is generally the starting point of such theories, and it is clear to common sense that when the earth is nearer to the sun or the moon to the earth, or both sun and moon are pulling together, there ought to be a tide of atmosphere similar to the tide of ocean which these influences undoubtedly produce. But the facts do not bear the theory out. The atmospheric tides do not ebb and flow, except in an infinitesimal degree.

Again, the sun and moon move in planes that are at an angle to each other, so that at times their attraction acts in widely diverging lines, at others almost in the same plane. Here is a clear case When the angle is greatest, when the moon is "on her back," there must be atmospheric disturbance. Unfortunately the storms do not come, and we must find some other cause for our weather. Hardly a year goes by without a new moon theory to account for it. M. Flarguergues, as the result of 20 years of observations, has found that when the moon was farthest from the earth the barometer averaged 755 millimeters, and when nearest 754 millimeters, a difference of only one millimeter.

Some prophets have built their faith on cycles, predicting that weather changes would repeat themselves when sun and moon got back into the same relative position, which they do in 19 years, with an error of only an hour and a half. Others advocate a cycle of 54 years, but all the cycle systems have broken down when tested, and as far as we know there is no period within which weather changes repeat themselves. There are plenty of other fallacies about the moon, such as that the full moon clears away clouds; that you should sow beans or cut trees on the wane of the moon; that it is a bad sign if the moon changes on Saturday or Sunday; that two full moons in a month will bring a flood; that to see the old moon in the arms of the new brings on rain. M. Flammarion says that "the moon's influence on the weather is negligible. The heat coming from it would affect our temperature by twelve-millionths of a degree, and the atmospheric tides caused by it would only affect the barometric pressure a few hundredths of an inch, far less than the changes always taking place from other causes."

Even the halo round the moon is discredited. It has been found by observers that it is followed by fine weather as often as by rain.

About the sun there are many fallacies, and ever since the discovery that the spots on its surface appear with greater frequency theorists in shoals have tried to prove that they rule our weather. It has been proved that the frequency of sun spots and the variations of the magnetic needle are intimately connected and that the aurora appears and disappears in some sort of sympathy with the sun spot variations, but this is as far as we can get for the present, as these changes seem to have no definite relation to our weather. Mr. Scott has proved that there are no equinoctial gales.

Coming down to earth, we find a long list of statements of the behavior of animals and plants having a supposed connection with the weather. E. J. Lowe has carefully examined a number of well known signs, and all seem to break down completely. He took the signs of bats flying about in the evening, many toads appearing at sunset, great quantities of snails, fish rising to the surface, bees busy, crowds of locusts, restless cattle, land rails clamorous, flies and gnats troublesome, many insects, crows flocking and noisy, spider webs thick on the grass, spiders hanging from their webs in the evening and ducks and geese making more noise than usual. Calling a day fine when no rain was measured in the rain gauge, he found in 361 observations of such signs that they were followed 213 times by fine weather and only 148 by rain. Even swallows flying low cannot be depended upon, as especially in summer and autumn they almost invariably skim along the ground. Animals probably feel the dampness or darkness preceding wet weather, and this makes them uneasy, but not more than it affects man himself. As to cows scratching their ears and goats uttering cries, they are no more true as signs of rain than the adage which credits pigs with seeing the wind.

Only a selection has here been made of the vast catalogue of fallacies that have grown up about the weather. There are still people, Mr. Inwards remarked in conclusion, who believe that the saints' days rule the weather, that the sun puts out fire and that warm water freezes sooner than cold.

In Missouri.

"Just across the street from my room," said the traveler—this was in Missouri—"was the town clock. I had left a call for 6. I was awakened by a vigorous pounding on the door, and when I responded 'all right' the man who was doing the work of an alarm clock drawled out:

"'Just wanted to tell you, stranger, that if you heard that clock strike 6 you have 20 minutes more to sleep. The clock's that much fast.'"—Chicago Tribune.

FREEDOM.

When I would think of what is free,
O timeless one, I think of thee!
Thou hast forgotten how we went together
Across the heather,
Where I am left behind,
And I rejoice thy motions are
Swift, indifferent and far.
The birthsprings of the wind
Are for thy roving, and for me
The joy of bringing all these things to mind
We thought together,
Treading the little pathways of the heather.

MICROSCOPIC WRITING.

The Wonders That May Be Accomplished In a Square Inch of Space.

Among the collection of microscopic objects in the United States Army Medical museum at Washington is a specimen of microscopic writing on glass which contains the Lord's Prayer, written in characters so small that the entire 227 letters of that petition are engraved within an area measuring 1-294 by 1-441 of an inch. So far this statement does not trouble us. If, however, we go a little further, we easily find that the area having the above dimensions would be only the 1 129,654 of a square inch, and consequently that an inch square covered with writing of the same size, or counting 227 letters to each such fraction, would contain 29,431,458 letters.

Let us put this figure into a concrete form by seeing how much of a book this number of letters would represent. The Bible is a book of which we may safely assume that every one has an approximate idea as regards its general size or extent Some one has actually determined the number of letters contained in the entire Old and New Testaments and finds this to be 3,566,480. Hence the number of letters which a square inch of glass would accommodate, written out like the text of the Lord's Prayer on this strip of glass, is more than eight times this last number, or, in other words, a square inch of glass would accommodate the entire text of the Bible eight times over written out as is the Lord's Prayer on this strip of glass. I am free to confess that, though this fact has been known to me since 1873, and I have had in my possession photographs taken with the microscope of this writing, I cannot say that I fully apprehend or mentally grasp the fact just stated. I can form no mental picture of a square inch of glass with the entire text of eight Bibles engraved upon it, and yet, when I have verified the measurements and calculations leading up to this conclusion I feel absolutely certain as to its truth, not as the result of intuition, but as a deduction from experience which has not yet developed into an intuitive consciousness.—Dr. Henry Morton in Cassier's Magazine.

A Typical Boer.

The man, Klaas Stuurmann, is a Boer of loose, ungainly frame. He stands 6 feet 1, is about 52 years of age, has a broad, deeply tanned face, in which are planted two watery blue eyes, a shock of hay colored hair and a long beard of the same uninteresting hue. He wears veldt broeks (field trousers) of soft, home tanned skin. He is about the last Dutchman in Cape Colony to use these old world garments, but his father and grandfather wore such clothes, and they are good enough for him.

He has no socks or stockings, and a pair of rude, homemade hide velschoens cover his feet. He has a flannel shirt to his back, and over that a short jacket of much worn corduroy. Upon his head is the usual tall crowned, broad brimmed felt hat, which carries a hideous band of broad, rusty crape in memory of his deceased wife. The man's face is dirty, to be sure, but besides the dirt there is a dull, vacant, unthinking look, rather painful to see. It is the look of one bred through dull, listless generations of men, self banished from their own kind, whose only interests have been in sheep and goats and trek oxen, their only excitement an occasional hunt or a scrimmage with bushmen in time gone by.

Such a listless and vacant look you may see even now in some of the more remote dals of Norway, among the poorer of the peasant farmer folk. It is the look of men who gaze always without a spark of interest upon the silent face of nature around them, and who for generations have seldom exchanged an idea with their fellows. —Blackwood's Magazine.

A Greek Judge's Sentence.

A curious judgment was pronounced the other day by a judge in a court of law at Vollsso, in the island of Scio. An action for damages was brought by two persons against the local railway company for losses sustained by a collision. It appeared that a man had lost an arm and a young woman had lost her husband. The judge—a Greek—assessed the damages thus: He gave 6,000 piastres to the man for the loss of his arm and 2,000 to the woman for the loss of her husband. At this there were loud murmurs, whereupon the judge gave his reasons in these terms: "My dear people, my verdict must remain for you will see it is a just one. Poor Nikola has lost his arm, and nothing on earth can restore that priceless limb. But you (turning to the woman)—you are still young and pretty. You have now some money; you will easily find another husband, who possibly may be as good—perhaps better—than your dead lord. That is my verdict, my people. And so it must go forth." So saying, the judge left the hall. The people cheered him and congratulated themselves on having such a judge.—London News.

Shows Her Home Training.

A Bostonian of mark has lately distinguished himself greatly, and letters and telegrams of congratulation have been pouring in upon him from various parts of the world. These have been the subject of conversation at the breakfast table, and the Bostonian's little daughter has heard of them. The other day she said to her mother, with a pathetic air of concern, "Mamma, do you suppose all those people would think so much of papa if they knew that he sometimes puts his elbows on the table?"—Boston Transcript.

Sweet and Lovely.

The woman who would fain be considered sweet and lovely will find the easiest way to attain that result is to think other people sweet and lovely. The mind which seems incapable of suspecting others of guile is always considered particularly innocent itself.

WAS THE WATCH TO BLAME?

THREE DELEGATIONS FROM TWO NORTH PLAINFIELD DISTRICTS.

Democrats in the Second District Hold Two Primaries and Two Sets of Delegates Elected—A Contest Will Probably Ensue.

The Democratic primary in the first district of the borough to elect three delegates to attend the Somerset County Democratic Convention on Monday next at ten o'clock a. m., at the court house in Somerville, was held in the basement of the school house last night and was called to order by J. R. Newman, the member of the county executive committee, promptly at eight o'clock. David J. Carney was elected chairman and Lewis R. Blackford, secretary. The secretary read the call as published in the Somerville Messenger, and nominations were called for. Ex-Mayor Wm. L. Saunders, John Emmons, Wm. N. Pangborn, John A. Thickstun, and John T. Case were nominated.

The chairman appointed as tellers John H. Whitenack and D. F. Godown. The ballot resulted in the election of ex-Mayor W. L. Saunders John Emmons, and W. N. Pangborn. The meeting was then declared adjourned.

In the second district the meeting was advertised to take place at eight o'clock in the basement of the Saengerbund Hall. About eight minutes before that time Levi C. Kline, the member of the county executive committee for the district, called to order the four or five that were present and E. C. Morse was chosen chairman, and Levi C. Kline, secretary.

The call was read and E. C. Morse Levi C. Kline, and John Becker, Jr., the latter being absent, were nominated and as there was no opposition the chair directed the secretary to cast the ballot and declared the above named persons elected. This all secured before eight o'clock, and as a number of voters residing in that district began to arrive and found that the caucus was over they crossed the street to the primary that was then being held in the first district. The first to arrive in the meeting of the first district was Ex-councilman George H. Neal, who came in just as Secretary Blackford was begining to read the call, less than five minutes after eight o'clock. Mr. Neal was was followed by several others who after the meeting in the first district returned to Saengerbund Hall basement and held another caucus which was also called to order by Levi C. Kline, the member of the county executive committee for that district. Ex-Councilman George H. Neal was elected chairman and C. B. Van Winkle, secretary. David Bodine, C B. Van Winkle, David D. Smalley and Levi C. Kline were nominated. Hiram O. Hance and Elston M. French were named as tellers and the ballot resulted as follows: D. Bodine, 10; C. B. Van Winkle, 8; D. D Smalley, 7; Levi C. Kline, 4. Just at the close of the second caucus Mr. Morse appeared and a comparison between his watch and others showed a difference of seven minutes. Mr. Morse's watch being seven minutes fast There will probably be a contest.

ANOTHER NEW STORE.

A Growing Business Demands Larger Accommodations.

Curtis M. Thorpe, who has been carrying on the mantel, tile and fire place furniture business in the Y. M. C. A. building is compelled by increasing business to secure larger quarters and Boice, Runyon & Co., are arranging for the erection of a fine brick building, 35x100 feet, on the vacant lot on Park avenue, near Fourth street, adjoining VanZandt's feed store. The building will be two stories high and will make a decided improvement on that block. Mr. Thorpe will occupy the entire first floor. He will also have a large show room where he will be able to display his large and fine stock of mantels etc., to good advantage.

TO RALLY WITH MR. MARTINE.

The Farmer Orator Will Entertain Big Democrats Next Week.

There will be a big gathering of Democratic politicians of Union county next Saturday afternoon, says the World, under the stately elms on James E. Martine's farm in Plainfield. The party war horse will all be there to discuss the best way of carrying Union county for candidate McGill. Incidentally they will indulge in a pigeon shoot, partake of a luncheon and sample Farmer Martine's prime old apple jack.

The Demosthenes of the Union county Democracy never does anything by halves and his hospitality is proverbial in Plainfield.

Victor Wheelmen to Entertain.

The Victor Wheelmen have arranged for an entertainment of the club to be held in T. A. B. Hall on October 24th. The Wheelmen meet again next Thursday, when the committee will be appointed.

GENTLEMEN FROM NOWHERE.

PLENTY OF HOBOS IN CITY COURT THIS MORNING.

Some Sent to Jail and Some Let Go—A West Third Street Woman Arrested for Keeping a Disorderly House—Discharged

The knights of the road predominated among the prisoners that came up before Judge Coddington in the city court this morning, and they were all pretty tough customers, too.

The first two, Tim Connoly and Edward Burke, of nowhere, were professional railroad "bums." They belong to the gang which has been such a nuisance to the people of Graceland. Railroad Detectives Murphy and Flood have been after them for some time and yesterday afternoon at about four o'clock they found Connoly and Burke sitting on the steps of the Fanwood station. Burke called the officers names which did not exactly express endearment, but made no resistance when they were led to the city rookery where they spent the night.

They appeared before the Judge in a defiant manner and Connoly said he 'hadn't been doing nuthin'." Burke remarked that he "had nothing to say, but he hadn't been seen riding on any coal train." The testimony of the railroad detectives was too strong for the knights of the road and they were given sixty days with Sheriff Kyte to improve their looks.

A little old man, in a ragged overcoat and torn clothes, with a woebegone looking face, came up before the Judge on the charge of begging on East Ninth street. Officer McCue brought him in yesterday and gave him a night's lodging. This wandering Willie gave his name as Michael Sheridan, but when asked what he had to say, he replied:

"I wasn't beggin' your honor, just getting a little something to eat, that's all the beggin' I was doin'."

"Have you any home?" asked the Judge.

"Not any, just now," and then the prisoner started on a long yarn of his past life, how he had lived at Elizabeth at Fanwood for twenty years.

"Leave town, at once, and never come back again, was the order of the Court and the little, weather-beaten individual flew around in his delight.

"Good luck to your honor," he squeaked as he passed out of the room, "All the days of your life, that's all I can say," and then Sergeant Kiely took him in hand.

The contents of his pockets, which had been removed when he was locked up, lay in a heap and he began storing away dirty rags, pieces of wood and string and an old rusty nickled razor. As he placed it in his pocket, he said, "I have to shave you know, gentlemen," and as he passed out into the open air he smiled at the crowd and murmured, "good morning to you gentlemen, all."

The other culprit to appear was Minnie Docasteno, wife of Frank Docasteno, a tailor of West Third street. She was charged with keeping a disorderly house. Tony Tuffo, an Italian, making the complaint.

"I keep a very nice house," explained the woman.

"Oh no, it is not disorderly, it is very nice."

Tuffo did not appear against them, but told the officer that he had gone to the house and while there Frank, the husband, had come home and thrown him out.

The Judge dismissed the prisoner, but warned her that another charge would mean imprisonment or a large fine.

The excited woman departed explaining to every one that would listen, "that her house was a very nice home."

HOPE CHAPEL LEAGUE BUSY.

Several Important Things on Tap For the Winter.

The most important meeting of the year for the Young Men's League of Hope chapel, will be held Monday evening. A final report will be made by the entertainment committee, while the prizes in the last field games will be awarded. The coming Thanksgiving Day games will also be discussed and the events arranged. The prizes are to be given by George First brook, but only the members who have paid up their dues in full will be allowed to enter.

There will not be prizes in each event but to the man scoring the most points in the bicycle races a first prize will be given and to the next a second prize. The same system will be used in the runs and in the jumping events.

Another very important matter that will be brought before the club will be a scheme to raise funds for a new bowling alley. The plan is to purchase five shares in the Building and Loan Association and, in this way, save sufficient money to build the new alleys.

A Double Wedding.

A double wedding will take place in the Mt. Olive Baptist church on Wednesday evening, October 30th. The contracting parties are Charles Barber and Miss Mattie Kinney, Charles Shelton and Miss Mary Morris. Rev. P. S. Gibson will officiate.

MORE ENDEAVORERS ELECT.

CRESCENT AVENUE CHURCH SOCIETY ELECT NEW OFFICERS.

Pledge Themselves to Contribute to the Support of a Foreign Missionary and Agitate for the State C. E. Convention.

The annual business meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Crescent Avenue church was held in the parlors last evening. The meeting was called to order by George S. Beebe, President of the society. Secretary Miss Mary Miller read the minutes of the last meeting and then gave her annual report which showed faithful work on the part of the secretary, besides the excellent work done by the society during the past year.

The next report was that of the Treasurer, Miss Lillian Oakley, which showed that the society had done exceedingly well financially.

Mr. Beebe, who has been a most excellent President during the past year, made a short address stating in a few well-chosen words what the work of an ideal society should be.

One new associate and six active members were welcomed into the society. Dr. William R. Richards, Jas. E. Kimball, Miss Caroline C. Dewey and Miss Caroline O. Hunter were appointed a nominating committee by the President, and after a brief intermission the committee brought back the following report.

President, Mr. Ira W. Travell; Vice-president, Miss C. M. Wood; Corresponding secretary, Miss Katharine R. Thorne; Recording secretary, Miss May Cahoone; Treasurer, Mr. Paul W. Kimball. This report was excepted and the officers were duly elected.

Mr. Beebe then gave the chair to Mr. Travell, who in a few words thanked the society for the honor they had conferred on him and asked them for their help and support for the coming year.

An interesting letter from George B. Pierson, a missionary in Japan, was read, after which the society voted to be counted in with the societies of the Presbytery of Elizabeth, who have pledged themselves to support Mr. Pierson in the foreign field.

The society decided to adopt some plan of systematic giving by which the treasury of the society should not be diminished by the absence of any of its members.

Almost all present signed the invitation from the people of Plainfield to the United Society of Christian Endeavor, of New Jersey, to hold the next convention in Plainfield.

Refreshments were served by the social committee at the close of the meeting. The several committees will be appointed at the next business meeting.

The election of officers was held at the regular quarterly business meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church last evening, and by an amendment of the constitution just passed, they will hold office for one year instead of six months. The officers elected were: President, Miss Emma V. Fish; vice-president, Joseph M. Hawkins; secretary, Miss Myra Runyon; treasurer, Miss Adelaide Runyon.

The chairmen of committees were chosen as follows: Lookout, Mrs. D. C. Skaden; prayer meeting, Miss Adelia Runyon; social, Miss Alice Spangenberg; welcoming, Thaddeus Doane, Jr.; missionary, Mrs. Frank Clarkson; good literature, D. M. Runyon; flowers, Miss Anna Wyckoff; music, Miss Laura Runyon.

FLORENCE M. BRADSHAW A BRIDE

The Poughkeepsie Daily Eagle published the following about the marriage of Miss Florence Mabel Bradshaw, formerly of North Plainfield, to Clive Newcome Elliot, of New York:

A quiet and pretty little home wedding was celebrated at noon today at the residence of Samuel J. Moore, No. 41 Marshall street.

The contracting parties were Florence Mabel Bradshaw, Mr. Moore's sister-in-law, and Clive Newcome Elliot, a talented young architect, connected with the famous firm of McKim, Mead & White, in New York.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Phillip M. Watters, pastor of the Washington Street Methodist church, the bridal couple standing in a palm embowered bay window.

The parlor was tastefully decorated with asparagus ferns, wild flowers of the season and brilliant autumn leaves, while the hall and stairway were festooned with clematis and bitter sweet.

The bride wore a golden brown tailor-made traveling dress, which was very becoming to her spirituelle beauty, and the groom was in regulation morning costume.

Mr. and Mrs. Moore, baby Evangeline, and the groom's parents made up the wedding party.

A few of the numerous and elegant bridal gifts were displayed, among them a polished oak table, from Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Slee; a pink and gold porcelain clock from Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Tyrrel; a richly decorated card receiver, from Mr. and Mrs. William Benjamin; a cracker jar, from Miss Ogden: a cut glass bud glass, from Mr. and Mrs. Samuel W. Clark; a Dresden china tray, from Miss Slee; a cut glass bon-bon tray, from Miss Paulding; a Dresden china vase, from Mrs. Burnett of Brooklyn; a copy of "Nymphs and Satyr" on Japanese tissue, from Mrs. Andrew Moore, and several pieces of rare decorated china from Miss Johnson and Miss Craig; a handsome clock, from Mr. and Mrs. James Lawson; a white enamel bedroom suit, from Mr. and Mrs. E. D. MacMurray and Mr. and Mrs. Combs; a polished oak chair, from Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Force; rug from Miss Force; and others.

After the ceremony a dainty wedding breakfast was served in honor of the newly mated by Mrs. Moore, whose charms as a hostess rival her loveliness as wife and mother. The viands were duly enjoyed, there were toasts and congratulations galore, and then Mr. and Mrs. Elliot started, amid showers of rice and other testimonials of friendly good will, for the New York boat, beginning the voyage of life together by a sail down the Hudson in the glorious sunshine and invigorating air of early October. Their home will be in Nutley, N. J., where the groom and his father have lately built a cosy cottage among the trees of the old North Woods.

New System of Indexing.

The Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union county Thursday adopted a new system for the indexing of records in the County Clerk's office at Elizabeth. Some time ago a petition from the members of the bar, numerous real estate men and others, interested in searching titles, etc., was presented to the board, asking for a more modern system of indexing, and a committee was appointed to investigate the subject with the above results.

Mrs. D. A. MacPhie, of Liberty street, and her aunt, Mrs. Grace B. Ross, of Nova Scotia, visited Mrs. Winans, wife of Prof. Winans, of Princeton College, yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. John Burnett and Mrs. Burnett's mother, Mrs. H. B. Wildman, of Stuyvesant avenue, Brooklyn, have been visiting at the home of Charles E. Doane, of West Fifth street.

FIREMEN'S FAIR TALKED OF.

THE SUBJECT IS BEING DISCUSSED BY FIRE LADDIES.

The Matter Broached at the Meeting of Gazelle Engine Company—An Old Relic, Which Killed a Man, Unearthed.

A firemen's fair has taken the place of the parade as one of the chief topics in the fire department. There was a meeting of Gazelle Hose Company last evening, and the question of the fair was informally discussed and a committee of three, consisting of Lewis Dunavan, Charles Johnson and J. Huntington, were appointed to confer with the other companies and discuss the advisability of holding the fair this winter. The regular routine business came up but nothing of importance was transacted.

At the close of the meeting a relic belonging to the company, in the shape of a piece of old iron, was brought in. This rusty, irregular-shaped piece of iron was thirty-three years ago a part of a cannon. In March, 1862, when the cannon was being fired on the common where Morgan Bird's mill now stands, it exploded and a large piece struck Henry Jennings, a member of the Gazelle company, and sent him flying through the air for a distance of over fifty feet. He was killed instantly, and the deadly iron that struck him was saved by his brother firemen as a relic. It was kept in the old Gazelle engine house until it was torn down, and then it was placed under a shed in the rear of Moraller's jewelry store, where it remained until, in excavating for the new Coddington building, the shed was torn down. The murderer of their brother fireman will now be kept in the new Gazelle headquarters.

FOR KILLING ANNIE ROGERS.

Johnson, the Colored Preacher, Indicted and Arraigned for Murder.

The Grand Jury of Somerset County came into court yesterday afternoon and handed up twenty-four indictments. Among them was an indictment for murder against Jacob S. Johnson, who is charged with the death of Annie Rogers, of Newark.

Justice Magie received the indictment and Johnson was at once brought up from jail and arraigned. He pleaded not guilty, but said he had no money with which to employ counsel. He said he would like to have Messrs. Steele & Meehan for his his counsel, and the court assigned them. Prosecutor Dungan asked for assistance, and James J. Bergen was assigned for that purpose. The county will have to pay both for the prosecution and defence of Johnson.

Johnson's wife and son and two men, Lewis and Haney, who lived in their house, who had been held since the coroner's inquest, were not indicted, and all were discharged by the court. Johnson's trial is set down for October 21st.

THE MOTHER-IN-LAW SUES.

Claims That the Son-in-Law Didn't Follow the Agreement.

The old story of the son-in-law and mother-in-law is to be presented in a new light at the Union County Circuit Court on Tuesday, when the case of Mary E. Whitehead against Herman A Weber will come up. Mr. Weber is the Liberty street grocer, and, in 1890, lost his wife. Mrs. Whitehead, his mother-in-law, then came to live with him on the condition that if she should do the housework and look after Mr. Weber's little child he would give her a home during life. Last spring he was remarrried, and the new wife looked after the house and child.

Mrs. Whitehead's occupation was gone, but Mr. Weber gave her a room in his house. On March 23d she left, claiming that she was not treated according to agreement. She now sues for $1,560 as salary during the five years as housekeeper and nurse.

S. S. Swackhamer, represented the plaintiff, and Craig A. Marsh the defendant.

A Bible Study Club.

To meet the demand for general Bible study the Young Men's Christian Association has decided to form a Bible Study Club which will meet every Tuesday evening at the building at eight o'clock. The first meeting will be held Tuesday, October 8th. The lessons to be studied will be a series used by one of the classes at Yale, and called "The Training of the Twelve." The life of Christ will be studied from this standpoint. The teacher will be William D. Murray. The director's room in the association building will be fitted up with a library of books on Bible study, and those who join the Bible Study Club may use the room at any time to prepare their lessons. This room and library will also be open at all times to any member of the association.

Coming Nuptial Event.

The coming marriage of Miss Antoinette Gaines Thorne to Mortimer Lincoln Day is announced for October 9th at the home of the bride's parents, 411 LaGrande avenue. The ceremony will be a quiet one on account of recent death in the family.

TRAMPED ON WITH HOOFS.

RUTH BERG'S NARROW ESCAPE FROM FATAL INJURIES.

Riding Her Wheel on East Fifth Street, She Dismounted in Front of Coddington's Team and Knocked Unconscious.

Ruth Berg, youngest daughter of Dr. Berg, of East Fifth street, had a narrow escape from fatal injury yesterday afternoon about four o'clock. The little girl was riding her wheel on Fifth street between her home and Watchung avenue. When near Hebard's drug store, L. B. Coddington's team, attached to his heavy truck, in charge of Michael McCarthy, came around the corner. Ruth was on the right of the road, but instead of keeping to the right, she tried to turn in the middle of the street. This brought her in front of the team, and when she saw the position she was in she stepped off her wheel. The horse nearest to her knocked her down, and one of his front feet struck her in the head, inflicting a severe cut in the back of the scalp, an ugly gash in the forehead, and a bad cut on the index finger of the right hand. The horse then stepped on the wheel, making a wreck of it.

Ruth was unconscious by this time, and Charles Mann, the barber, who was an eye witness, hastened to the scene and carried the little girl into Hebard's drug store. Her father was summoned immediately, but when he arrived his daughter had regained consciousness enough to recognize him.

Dr. Berg carried the injured girl home, where he made a thorough examination. It was found necessary to take several stitches in the cuts. Her left eye was very much enlarged as a result of the accident. However, nothing very serious is thought will result.

A rumor was circulated last night that the horses were frightened at the steam roller, but such was not the case, for the roller was more than a block away and could not possibly have frightened the animals.

MRS. VOEHL HOME AGAIN.

A Reconciliation Had Between the Estranged Couple.

As stated in the Daily Press last night Mrs. Voehl returned to this city yesterday morning. She went to the home of her husband on West Front street, and the scene that was enacted between her and her two little children was very effecting. The children were overjoyed at her return to them, after an absense of a week. Mr. Voehl was compelled to go to Newark in the afternoon and upon his return a reconciliation was had between the couple, in which it was decided to let the past remain a blank, the husband agreeing to stop all proceedings that he may have intended to institute against his wife.

Somerset Prohibitionists.

Somerset Prohibitionists met Tuesday at Somerville and nominated a county ticket: For County Clerk, Thomas Mair, of North Plainfield; Sheriff, Richard Coriell, Millington; Assembly, B. K. Hoppock, Somerville; Coroners, Wm. N. Sorter, Martinsville, and John P. Rhodes, Royceffield. At a mass meeting in the evening H. W. Wilbur, nominee for Governor, made an address.

Lowest in Thirty Years.

James E. Martine told a Daily Press reporter yesterday that the water in Cedar creek and in the little pond in his door yard is lower today than he has seen it in thirty years, and that he believes the cause of it is in the fact that the water works company are pumping such immense quantities of water from the natural wells at Netherwood, and thus lowering the water strata in the ground.

Named at Last.

The East End Whist Club met at the home of Thomas U. Smith, of Westervelt avenue, Tuesday evening and played duplicate whist. The points in all the games this year will be kept and added together at Christmas time and the winner found.

MAY'S LOVE FOR ANIMALS.

MRS. DEFOREST ERECTS A FOUNTAIN IN MEMORY OF HER CHILD.

To be Located on West Second Street, Near New Street—A Mistake in the Inscription — A Free Water Supply.

Plainfield is to have another free water fountain very much like the present one which was erected at the corner of Front and Somerset streets by the Christian Endeavor societies of this city and borough.

This new fountain will be placed on West Second just beyond New streets, in front of the property of Mrs. E. T. DeForest, who furnished the fountain and will have it erected in memory of her daughter May, who died about two years ago.

The fountain itself is very handsome in design, having a bronze finish. On one side are the faucets and small trough for the accommodation of passersby, while on the outside is a large trough for the benefit of horses. Above the horse trough is a plate with the following inscription: "In memoriam of our dear Mary, aged twenty-two years. She loved animals." Through a mistake the name was made "Mary," instead of May.

Mrs. DeForest applied for permission to erect the fountain early in the summer, but the Common Council delayed in granting it, and after the permission was received, the foundation had to be laid, so that it was only yesterday that the fountain arrived from the manufacturers. It will be placed in position at once. And the water necessary to supply the passing pedestrian and horse will be furnished by the Plainfield Water Supply Co., free of charge.

GOLF PLAYING THIS WEEK.

The Hillside Course Will Be Ready by Saturday Next.

At a special meeting of the Hillside Tennis Club last night the necessary amendments to the constitution were passed consequent on the introduction of the game of golf as an important feature of the club.

Among the amendments, besides the necessary provision for the management of the golf course and the increase of the limit of membership from 100 to 150, was the change of the name of the club, which will henceforth be known as The Hillside Tennis and Golf Club.

The temporary golf committee reported satisfactory progress in the building of the course, which will be ready for practice on Saturday, and it is expected that the members will take immediate advantage of their opportunities to familiarize themselves with the features of the game.

In appreciation of the excellent work done by the golf committee this summer, it was resolved to offer its members a sincere vote of thanks from the club at large. The resolution was passed by acclamation.

As a sufficient indication of the popularity of this new departure in Plainfield athletics, it is only necessary to say that forty-one new members were elected by the governing committee after the special meeting of the club had adjourned.

The golf committee, to whose rules and regulations all play is to be subject, was elected by the governors as follows: Howard W. Beebe, chairman, J. S. Anthony, T. F. Sykes, Carl Pfeiffer, and G. P. Mellick.

The exceedingly dry weather has prevented the work of sodding the greens being finished, but as soon as the weather permits the work will be pushed to completion.

A large number are expected on the course on Saturday afternoon and after that golf will become an accomplished fact in Plainfield.

Grand Officers Coming.

A regular conclave of Trinity Commandery, No. 17, Knights Templar, will be held on Monday evening. A visit of the grand officers is expected on Monday evening, November 18th, and all the Sir Knights are requested to attend the intervening conclaves for inspection, rehearsal and review. At the close of the regular meeting of the Commandery, the Ninety-eight Club will meet and the committee on bylaws will report.

Big Apples.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Addis, Jr., of North avenue, received a box of twenty-ounce apples yesterday from Mrs. Addis' mother who lives at Jeffersonville, N. Y. Five of them, weighing four pounds eight ounces, are on exhibition at Mr. Addis' store on North avenue. The largest one of the five weighs seventeen ounces. On account of the apples being so large the name "twenty-ounce" is given them.

An October Wedding.

Invitations have been issued for the coming marriage of Margaret Wierenga to Joseph A. Hylandon Wednesday, October 16th, at St. Mary's church, at 4:30 p. m. A reception will be held at the residence of Thomas Hyland, on Rahway road, after the ceremony.

HIPP'S LICENSE GRANTED.

BOROUGH PEOPLE SURPRISED AT THE ACTION OF THE COURT.

No Chance Given to Present the Remonstrances Which Were Prepared—Thorn Application for Hotel License Refused.

At the Somerset County Court at Somerville this morning the liquor licenses that were laid over at the opening of the September term until today were acted on.

The application of Edward P. Thorn for a hotel license in the building on Somerset street, just across the bridge, owned by Charles Bock, was refused, the Court stating that no more new licenses would be granted in North Plainfield.

The renewal of Jacob Hipp's license for the Manhattan Hotel on Somerset street, opposite Watchung Park, which was also laid over at the opening of the September term of court, was granted.

James P. Powers, of this city, went to Somerville this morning with a number of remonstrances which he intended to present to the court protesting against the granting of the Hipp license, but by the time he arrived at court he was informed that the license had already been granted. An informal application was made by Alvah Clark, of Somerville, who was associated with Mr. Powers in the case, that an order be granted to take testimony to show cause why the case should not be reopened, but no recognition of the motion was made by Judge Bartine.

Mayor Hegeman and a number of the citizens and councilmen of the borough journeyed to Somerville to attend the hearing, and were very much disappointed when they heard that the license had been granted before their arrival. After a conference it was decided to let the matter drop.

The license question in North Plainfield is indeed a troublesome one. A firm of beer bottlers have been doing business over there for several months without a license, and as the authorities were aware of the fact many persons supposed that they would surely be indicted by the late grand jury that was dismissed on Wednesday of this week. As no bill was brought in against them there was considerable surprise expressed. No charges were brought to the grand jury's notice.

AN ACTIVE ENDEAVORER.

E. E. Anthony is Hustling to Bring the Convention Here.

The following recently appeared in The Christian Endeavorer about E. E. Anthony and Plainfield '96:

"There are fewer more energetic and earnest workers in the field at the present day than President E. E. Anthony of the Union County C. E. Society; active and alive to the desires of the society to have the convention held in Plainfield in '96, he enthuses all those with whom he comes in contact and leaves them with the firm conviction that Plainfield is what they want for 1896, and without doubt that fact is gaining a foothold among the majority of the societies throughout the State, as the convenience offered by Plainfield to accommodate three to four thousand is a point not to be despised.

Besides which, the natural advantages it has for transportation to and from all parts of the State tends to form another point in its favor. To such a convention as the delegates of the societies through the State will form the reception that will be accorded them shall only be equaled by that of Boston '95."

Plainfield has already been honored by being selected as the meeting place of two large conventions, those of the Y. M. C. A. and the Seventh-Day Baptists.

So let your voice be cast for the Colorado of the East when the time comes.

New Mission Organized.

The following members of the State and Local Missionary Society, of the Mt. Olive Baptist church, went to Bound Brook on Wednesday night and organized a mission: Rev. and Mrs. P. S. Gibson, Miss Fanny Scott, Miss Harriet Jackson, Miss Emma Scott, Miss Smith, Mrs. Martha Rogers, Mrs. Rosa Jackson, Mrs. Mary Pendleton, Miss Betty Shelton, Mrs. D. W. Brown. The new mission starts off with a membership of eleven. They will hold their meetings every Sunday afternoon at four o'clock in the schoolhouse which has been offered free of charge. As there is a colored population of about five hundred in Bound Brook the prospects of a successful mission is excellent.

A Growing Church.

Special services are being held this week at the Fillmore Avenue Baptist church with good results. Ten conversions were reported up to last night. The services will be continued next week and Rev. W. D. Johnson, of Westfield, Rev. J. A. Harris, of Orange and Rev. P. S. Gibson, of the Mt. Olive Baptist church, this city, will assist.

The Road Gave Way.

When the steam roller was at work the corner of Park avenue and Fifth street, the engineer forgot about the stone covered passage way for water under the road and ran the roller over it. The stones gave way and a gang of Street Commissioner Meeker's men worked up to late at night to make the street passable again.

TO ENLARGE THE TREASURY.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS TALK OF A SERIES OF ENTERTAINMENTS.

Annual Business Meetings Held Last Night —Finances Talked Over and Officers Elected—Sociability Enjoyed at the Close.

About the most important question discussed at the semi-annual business meeting of the Christian Endeavor society of the Congregational church last evening, was the plan of holding a series of three entertainments in the Y. M. C. A. hall.

President J. V. Beekman, Jr., called the meeting to order. Miss Pound reported as treasurer that the society was free from all debt and had a small balance in the treasury. The other committees reported, but owing to the fact that the church was closed for over a month, there was not much to tell.

The following officers were then elected: President, John V. Beekman, Jr.; Vice-President, Harold Tomlinson; Secretary, Miss Julia Belknap; Treasurer, Miss Bessie Pound. The chairman of committees were then elected as follows: Prayer Meeting, Miss Julia A. Butler; Lookout, Miss Edna Howell; Missionary, John C. Whiting; Good Literature, J. Louise Jenkins; Social, Miss Adelene Parsons; Flower, Miss Eda Beekman; Music, the election of this chairman was left over for a time.

The president then suggested a new method of choosing the committees, each chairman being given a chance to state their preference and each member to give the committee on which they prefer to serve.

The question of finances was then brought up and several suggestions made of how to increase the balance in the treasury. A plan was proposed that the society give a series of three entertainments in the Y. M. C. A. hall this winter and some humorous speaker, or a college glee club suggested as the kind of entertainment. After a lenghthy discussion, it was decided to appoint a committee to look into the matter and find out the necessary expenses and the different entertainers that could be secured. The committee will be announced later.

The rest of the evening was spent in a social way and a short informal programme of music and recitation was given. Ice cream and cake was then served under the direction of the old social committee of which Joseph A. Robinson is the efficient chairman.

THEATRICAL.

Just why the author of the piece presented in Music Hall last night by George Monroe should have called it a "Happy Little Home," will probably always remain a mystery, unless it is that after one has seen it he or she will go to their own home filled with joy that their domicle is not likened unto that portrayed on the stage last night.

"A Happy Little Home" is one of the funniest pieces seen in Plainfield for some time, and although its plot and action are ridiculously improbable the "musical comedy satire," as it is termed on the programme, is so smoothly constructed in the knack of getting the characters into ludicrous positions which are only straightened out after the audience have split their sides, figuratively speaking, in laughing at the antics of Mr. Monroe's dual characters, Owen Moore and Mrs. McGruder, that one forgets about everything save the humor that has been floating off the stage and touching the risibilities of all who have eyes to see and ears to hear. The first two acts are laid in the home of the Gayfeathers, with the wife wearing the trousers, and the husband a member of a bicycle club, which is in reality a place where the old man can go and have his fun, supposedly without knowledge to his wife.

But the author of the piece has fixed it so that the wife learns of her husband's midnight frolics and then the fun begins. Mrs. Gayfeather proposes to secure evidence and sue for a divorce, and Gayfeather from the drift of her tantalizing remarks opines that this is the case, too. To be positive about it he sends for Burke, a detective, whom he proposes to put on the case and find out her modus operandi. Before the detective arrives Owen Moore (Mr. Monroe) appears in search of Rose, Gayfeather's ward, with whom he is in love. Gayfeather, surrounded by his two cronies, Hector Savanac, a Frenchmen, and Theophilus Doolittle, mistake Moore for the detective. The latter is puzzled at first, but his Irish wit soon grasps the situation and he acquieses to their demands and is rapidly transformed into an Irish housekeeper, whom Mrs. Gayfeather employs. From that time on the fun runs fast and furious by the acts of Moore who pays love to Rose incog, and does other innumerable funny things that it would take too much space to record.

Lots of Business.

The Union County Grand Jury has an unusual amount of business on hand this term, and will probably be busy for three weeks.

A FORTUNE FOR A BUTTON.

The Tearing of One From a German Officer's Coat Cost the Money.

The Cyclops, Captain Vogelgesang, was making her regular round of calls among the Haitian ports in 1879 and touched at Gonaives just after the opposition to President Solomon had developed into one of the fierce local rebellions that often arose during his regime and rendered an existence in his domain a very precarious one. The lives of those who remained faithful to the government were put in jeopardy, and they were obliged to escape immediately. Some of them sought refuge on board the Cyclops, which had touched at Gonaives to discharge her cargo, and Captain Vogelgesang refused to deliver them up.

As the captain was returning to the landing place from his interview with the general commanding the rebel troops, the soldiers laid hands on him and tore a button from the breast of his coat (he was in uniform at the time), hustled him about and altogether subjected him to very rough usage. He got away finally through the intervention of the general, and by telling the people that it was not possible for him to send the refugees away from his ship unless he were allowed first to go on board. He agreed to land them if he got word from the consul before 2 o'clock in the afternoon, and promised not to start away before that hour. He also agreed to blow his steamer whistle as a signal that he was about to get under way.

No cargo could, under the circumstances, be landed or received on board, and as no word came from the consul, who had wisdom enough not to be found, the whistle was blown and the anchor engine started to heave in the cable. The troops ashore, not willing that their prey should so easily slip away, had anticipated this movement, and had manned the guns of a small battery just below the landing, which commanded the anchorage, fully determined to blow the Cyclops out of the water if she attempted to escape.

There was considerable excitement occasioned by the loading of the guns, and great dismay and consternation when the steamer, having weighed anchor, turned quietly round, passed close to the guns, and left without a shot being fired. The reason was quite apparent, as the vents of the guns were found securely spiked with nails that had been forced down into the chamber and bent so that they could not be withdrawn. The German government took up the cudgels for Captain Vogelgesang and succeeded in getting £1,000 indemnity for the brass button which had been torn from his coat in the scrimmage. —Pearson's Weekly.

GLASSMAKING.

Thebes' Artisans Were Proficient In the Industry Forty Centuries Ago.

The glass blowers of ancient Thebes are known to have been as proficient in that particular art as is the most scientific craftsman of the same trade of the present day, after a lapse of 40 centuries of so-called "progress." They were well acquainted with the art of staining glass and are known to have produced that commodity in great profusion and perfection. Rosellini gives an illustration of a piece of stained glass known to be 4,000 years old, which displayed artistic taste of high order, both in tint and design. In this case the color is struck through the vitrified structure, and he mentions designs struck entirely in pieces from a half inch to three-quarters of an inch thick, the color being perfectly incorporated with the structure of the piece, and exactly the same on both the obverse and reverse sides.

The priests of Ptah at Memphis were adepts in the glassmaker's art, and not only did they have factories for manufacturing the common crystal variety, but they had learned the vitrifying of the different colors and the imitation of precious stones to perfection. Their imitations of the amethyst and of the various other colored gems were so true to nature that even now, after they have lain in the desert sands from 2,000 to 4,000 years, it takes an expert to distinguish the genuine articles from the spurious.

It has been shown that, besides being experts in glassmaking and glass coloring, they used the diamond in cutting and engraving glass. In the British museum there is a beautiful piece of stained glass, with an engraved emblazonment of the monarch Thothmes III, who lived 3,400 years ago.—Jewelers' Circular.

It Wasn't Law.

Judge Wallace was chief justice of the supreme court when an attorney from Montana, who is now a well known practitioner in San Francisco, applied for a certificate to practice before the courts of the state. He stood before the bar while another attorney made the motion for admission and presented the certificate.

"I don't like that fellow's looks," whispered Judge Wallace to his associate.

"Nor I either."

"Well, let's sit down on him."

"All right."

Judge Wallace cleared his throat, smiled upon the attorney and said:

"This court cannot recognize the certificate of a territorial court."

"But, your honor, I have here a decision of this very court upon that point holding directly the contrary," replied the applicant's attorney.

"Let me see it," demanded Judge Wallace.

It was passed up to him by the bailiff, and he observed that the opinion had been written by himself.

"Looks as if he had us, doesn't it?" whispered the judge to his associate.

"That's what it does. How are we going to get around that?"

Judge Wallace wiped his glasses carefully, adjusted them on his nose and read a few lines.

"That is not law," he declared emphatically as he slammed the book on his desk. "The application is denied."—San Francisco Post.

Who Was He?

A proud papa, not many hundred miles from the center of Syracuse, is boasting of the alleged brightness of his 10-year-old son. The said 10-year-old was looking over a newspaper the other day, not forgetting to take in the advertisements.

"Papa," he said, "I thought that Job and Lot was two different people?"

"Why, they were, my son," was the proud father's answer.

"Well, this newspaper is off of its base then," said he of the ten years. "Look here! It says 'Job Lot' at the head of this advertisement. Who's he, then?"—Syracuse Post.

The Borough ire is up over the condition of Greenbrook. The stench that arises from the stream is enough to make anyone turn up their nose, and if permitted to continue, it will, in the language of the uncouth, turn up someone's toes.

Mr. Edison has an idea that the newspawer of the future will be published by phonograph. His reason for this is that the eyesight of the people is becoming poorer, time is more precious, and that newspapers are so large that it is impossible for people to read them through.—Exchange.

Allan M. The Bureau of Statistics of Berlin recently gathered some statistics which prove that accidents from lightning strokes have greatly increased of late. This is said to be due to the disappearance of forests, the use of electricity in various industries and to the carbon vapors arising from towns. The number of such accidents in France, where the records have also been kept, is also very much greater than at the beginning of the century.

Hon. Roswell G. Horr is keeping his word. He is talking, but the following extract from his speech made at Orange last night gives evidence that the gentleman is not as optimistic of Republican victory as some other Jerseyites:

"If Kentucky and New Jersey both go Republican "he said, "I think I shall be ready to depart this world in peace. I'll be satisfied to enjoy my angelic robes the next day."

Nowadays it is not always the talking candidate that wins. Notable examples of this were observed in the last two Gubernatorial campaigns in New York, when in 1891 Fassett orated all over the State and Flower kept mum and carried the election by 50,000 plurality, and again last year when Hill talked day and night and Morton did nothing but write a letter or two and hear on election eve that he was elected by 180,000 plurality.

Here is the way that Thos. F. Lane, editor of the Summit Record, who was married last week, apologizes to his readers for the poor editorial showing in the Record of Saturday:

We must ask the indulgence of our readers for the rather poor showing made in these columns last Saturday and today. Circumstances over which we had some measure of control, but with which we had no desire to interfere, prevented us from giving to our editorial work, that industry and study that alone have made these columns readable and useful.

A personal friend of Chancellor McGill residing in this city sent a letter of congratulation to him after his nomination and in reply received the following:

I will be glad, if the opportunity comes, to render morality and decency a service.

The faculty of Princeton College have issued an edict that the minor student must drink nothing stronger than soda water as long as he is an attendant at the college. This step was taken on account of the shooting affray, in which Fred P. Ohl lost his life, ensuing from the freshness of students who had seen more of the flowing bowl than of books. Every saloonkeeper in the town has been notified not to sell liquor to minor students.

The most striking characteristic of the true New Yorker is the absence of characteristics. Things that mark the people of other cities as Philadelphians, Chicagoans, Bostonians, are lacking. The unwritten, but none the less imperative, law of mind your own business is the great safeguard of our social economy. Exclude the immediate circle of your friends, and it is nobody's concern what you do, how you live, where you dine, how late you go to bed, who is your tailor, what you believe, whether you are married or single, bond or free. The man who lives next door is as oblivious to your existence as the man in the moon. It is a peculiarity to be prized. Life is unbearable if the privacy of the individual is not respected. In New York we do not have to sport the oak if we want to be left alone.—Evening Sun.

Miss Kate Hogan, who graduated from a law school with high honors two years ago, has applied for a $3,000 position as Assistant Public School Superintendent of New York. She is the first woman who has tried to secure that office. In Philadelphia women have held such places almost ever since the system of superintendency was instituted thirteen years ago. There is no reason why, in a department of the public service whose work is so largely done by women as is that of the public schools, women should not be appointed to such places. It will occur to most people, however, that the better place to find available candidates would be among experienced and successful teachers, rather than in law offices.—Newark News.

There had been a great falling off in the quanity of fruit shipped from California to the east up to Sept. 1st, this year as compared with previous years. This year's shipments fall 30,950,000 pounds below those of last year up to the same date. Only 2,900 carloads crossed the Sierra Nevada this year as againist 4,280 car loads during the same period last year, or 71,760,000 pounds as compared with 102,720,000. It is estimated that 1,500 car loads will yet go forward this reason, but even then the shipments will be fully 1,500 car loads, or 36,000,000 pounds below last year's record. The decrease is attributed to the failure of the apricot and early pear and peach crops. Two severe frosts last spring caused most of the damage. The grape crop is very large, and the late pears and peaches have turned out well. As now estimated, the total fruit shipments by rail from California this year will foot up 107,700 pounds.

The Hudson county Democrats will try the direct primary plan this year in selecting candidates for the Senate and Assembly. Each individual casts his vote for his preference for the nominations instead of for convention delegates.

The Republican convention of Middlesex county yesterday afternoon renominated for the Assembly, at New Brunswick, Edward W. Hicks, of New Brunswick, A. H. Slover, of South Amboy, and George Tice, of Perth Amboy.

The most pretentious characters are generally the greatest frauds. The men who are all the time boasting of their superiority in any one thing or line of business are the ones that we should watch most carefully and look out for. One of the most useful qualities of the mind is to learn to quickly discern the true characters of strangers who seek to deal with us in any capacity, and we may soon estimate their real value correctly by carefully noting their tendency to boast of their deeds and by the excessive use of the pronoun "I." Boys should make a study of this matter, and early learn to put a proper value upon those they may meet in the world. Those who do not do so are the ones that sharpers and frauds are looking for.—Jamesburg Advance.

COUNTY CONVENTION IN SESSION AT SOMERVILLE TODAY.

The "After Eight" Delegation From North Plainfield Seated—A Borough Doctor for Coroner—The Organization

Somerville, N. J., Oct. 7th.—The Somerset County Democratic Convention met at eleven o'clock this morning in the court house at Somerville and was called to order by ex-Congressman A. A. Clark. Walter Durling, of Bridgewater township, was elected temporary chairman, and Charles N. Hoagland, of Franklin, secretary. The roll was then called by townships and the credentials were handed to the secretary. North Plainfield's second district presented two sets of credentials. They were referred to the committee on contested seats. The committees were then appointed.

Dr. James Doty of Bernards, George S. Corle, of Branchburg and Augustus Vanderveer, of Bridgewater, and ex-Assemblyman John Vetterlein, of North Plainfield, were nominated as candidates for County Clerk. There was only one name presented as a candidate for Sheriff, and that honor was bestowed on Calvin D. McMurtry, of Bridgewater township. The nomination was greeted with loud applause. Dr. P. J. Zeglio, of North Plainfield, was then placed in nomination as a candidate for Coroner. The Convention then took a recess until 2 o'clock.

The convention reassembled at 2:15 this afternoon and the temporary officers made permanent.

The committee on contested seats reported in favor of seating the three delegates from the second district of North Plainfield: Smalley, VanWinkle and Bodine. They were elected at the second primary.

The following nominations were made:

County Clerk, Augustus Vandeveer, of Somerville.

Sheriff, Calvin D. McMurtry, of Somerville.

Assemblyman, Charles N. Hoagland, of Franklin township.

Coroner, Dr. Zeglio, of North Plainfield.

David J. Carney was chairman of the North Plainfield delegation. W. M. Pangborn was a member of the committee on resolution.

HER LETTER

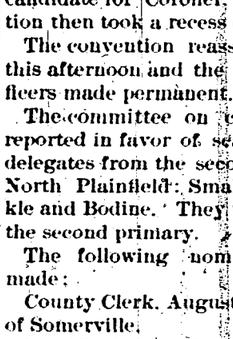
TELLS A WOMAN'S STORY.

Written for Eyes of Other Women.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

There is inestimable pleasure in doing good to others, and joy in a grateful recognition of the act.

On the old York Road, Huntington Park, Philadelphia, dwells Miss M. Downs, whose portrait we give. She desires that her case may be stated as a means of benefiting others. She says:



"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has cured me of Kidney trouble, painful menstruations, and headaches. It is truly a wonderful medicine. I cannot describe my feelings before I took it. The pain in my back was dreadful, and during menstruations the agony I suffered nearly drove me wild; and then my head would ache for a week, and now this is all over, thanks to your good remedy. I trust my testimonial will lead others to take it and be cured. They can find it at any drug store. Our druggist says the demand for it is very large, it is helping so many sickly women."

LITTLE BIKERS PEDAL HARD.

AND THE BOYS HAVE GOOD RACES AS A RESULT.

For Youngsters, Fast Time and Close Finishes Were Made on the Oval—Discipline By the Referee—Summary.

For a race meet in which the promoters and most of the contestants were all under fifteen years of age, the one held at the Crescent oval on Saturday afternoon was a great success. The time in most of the races was remarkably fast and the finishes very close. After the regular programme had been completed, some of the audience took up a collection and secured more money which was turned over to the managers of the races to purchase more prizes. Several events were then added, and the enjoyment continued.

Hazelwood Keller was the hero of all the running contests. He won his heat in the one hundred yards dash after a very close race, but the final and the two hundred yards dash were easily captured, although he started from scratch.

In the regular handicap bicycle events, James Taylor was the scratch man, while the rest of the field were scattered far ahead around the track. Taylor rode a splendid race, however, but the effort needed to set his own pace for all but the last lap when he caught the bunch was too much, and in the one and two-mile handicap he only managed to get fourth. In the mile, the first four men all finished within a length of the first man, and Hand beat Taylor for third place by the width of a rim, many called it a dead heat. In the two-mile handicap, Referee Littell disqualified Hand and Schenck for having a pacemaker. They both claimed that they could not help it, as a lad named Dodd persisted in doing it. Dodd was suspended from track racing during the meet.

The consolation race was a cinch for Taylor who won by about fifty yards.

Of the extra events, Harry Cuming won two, while Lindley Hillman rode second to him in both. In the two-mile handicap, for boys under eighteen, the men soon bunched and began to loaf. A time limit of six minutes was placed on the race by Referee Littell, and Will Havens and Arthur B. Crane were put in as pacemakers. For some reason Richardson did not ride in his usual good form, but finished a poor third.

The officials were as follows:

Referee, Webster Littell; judges, D. A. McPhie, Herbert L. Richardson, Wilbur F. Cornwell, Charles B. Morse, Willis West; timers, Carroll Runyon, George Coard, Lindley Hillman; clerk of the course, Stanley Peck; starter, Homer Smith.

The summary of the events were as follows:

One Hundred-Yards Dash, (handicap)—The first heat was won by Hazelwood Kellar, scratch; Ray Smith, five yards, second; Owen Fleming, three yards, third. Time, 12 4-5 seconds. The second heat was won by Will Nash, one yard; Will Remsen, three yards, second; Linden Stewart, seven yards, third. Time, 14 seconds. The final heat was won by Kellar; Smith, second; Nash, third. Time, 14 2-5.

One-Mile Bicycle, (handicap)—Was won by Ed Waring, one hundred twenty-five yards; Frank Talmadge, one hundred twenty-five yards, second; David Hand, eighty-five yards, third; James Taylor, scratch, fourth. Time, 2.49 2-5.

Two-Mile Bicycle, (handicap)—Was won by Ed Waring, two hundred fifty yards; Frank Talmadge, two hundred fifty yards, second; Harold Phillips, two hundred fifty yards, third; James Taylor, scratch, fourth. Time, 6:04 4-5.

Two Hundred Twenty-Yards Dash, (handicap)—Was won by Hazelwood Kellar, scratch; Will Remsen, eight yards, second; Owen Fleming, eight yards, third. Time, 30 3-5.

One-Mile Handicap, (consolation)—Was won by James Taylor, scratch; Irving Hand, thirty yards, second; Samuel Atchenson, sixty yards, third. Time, 3:00 2-5.

One-Mile Scratch, (boys sixteen and under)—Was won by Harry Cumming, Lindley Hillman, second; James Taylor, third. Time, 2:31 3-5.

Two-Mile Handicap, (boys under eighteen)—Was won by Harry Cumming, scratch; Lindley Hillman, fifty yards; Herbert L. Richardson, scratch, third; Harry Woltmann, seventy-five yards, fourth. Time, 6:00 2-5.

"Stuttering Tom" Dead.

Thomas Hamilton, colored, better known as "Stuttering Tom," died at James Babbitt's place on East Front street yesterday afternoon, of consumption.

Decedent had recently moved here from Newark, and having no relatives stopped with James Babbitt. He was well known in this city, where he was a resident for many years. He was also considered one of the best horse trainers in this section, and a familiar figure at the Middlesex county fair. The city will probably take care of the body for burial, as there is no one else here to look after it. His relatives live in the West Indies, where he was born.

May Return to the Bell.

It seems that as yet no definite plans have been made to place the borough fire gong on the Plainfield Electric Light Station. A prominent business man of the borough said yesterday that the probable result would be that the borough would erect a bell tower and return to the old method of ringing the bell.

KILLED IN A SUNDAY BRAWL.

MURDER NUMBER TWO AT THE WESTFIELD ITALIAN SHANTY.

Raphael Vendros, of the Plainfield Gang of Sewer Diggers, Shoots Dominic Celli Through the Head—He Got Away.

Raphael Vendros, an Itanian padrone, shot Dominic Celli Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock in a boarding house in Westfield. Celli died at 7:35. The boarders are all employed in the construction of Westfield's big sewer system. The original boarding house was burned a short time ago. A new one erected in its place was completed three days ago. Vendros had charge of a large gang of Italians employed in this city on the sewers. His employer had erected the new building, and yesterday afternoon Vendros went to Westfield to inspect it. After looking over the building he went into the bar-room with a half dozen of the laborers. Celli was behind the bar. For over two hours the men played cards and drank beer, Celli serving the drinks. Then Vendros went to the bar to settle his account.

He stood talking to Celli for some minutes, and then the two began to quarrel about the change. Finally Celli ordered Vendros out of the place and started to go from behind the bar to enforce his order. Vendros whipped out his revolver and fired point blank at Celli. The bullet entered Celli's left temple.

As his victim fell Vendros started to run from the place. Three lodgers, Vincenzo Giovanniti, Pietro Ganeti, and Antonio Rosa, seized him. A fierce struggle followed, during which Vendros was disarmed. Then he bit Vincenzo and Pietro on the hands and compelled them to let go their hold. Before they could recapture him he got away from the building and fled to a piece of woods.

His coat and waistcoat were torn off during the struggle. An alarm was sent to all neighboring cities and towns, but up to a late hour today Vendros had not been captured. Celli was unconscious when his companions reached him. The bullet had entered his brain. He was removed to the Elizabeth General Hospital. Six of the inmates of the boarding house have been arrested as witnesses of the shooting. They gave the names of Guiseppe Dianati, Raphael Oyisie, Vincenzo Giovannati, Pietro Ganetti, Antonio Rosa, and Gaetno Randers.

Undertaker P. Casey was sent for and brought the body of the murdered man to the morgue in this city, where an inquest was called at half past one this afternoon by Coroner Horning, of Elizabeth. County Physician O'Rielly was present.

The following jury was summoned by Constable Robert Mattox: T. F. VanHorn, L. H. Pangborn, Frank H. Bacon, M. Lichten, W. H. Clum and Robert Walker. After viewing the remains the inquest was adjourned to the city court room till next Monday afternoon at two o'clock.

Republican Delegates.

The Republican voters of the borough and township of North Plainfield met in the basement of the school house Saturday evening to elect delegates to the Somerset County Convention which is to be held at Somerville.

The meeting was called to order by Mayor B. A. Hegeman, Jr., as member of the county executive committee. Charles Place was elected chairman and John G. McLoughlin secretary. Charles A. Reed then moved that the four delegates be elected with power to fill vacancies. The following were elected delegates: Mayor B. A. Hegeman, Jr., H. Newton Spencer, Charles Place and James K. Arnold.

Greder Property Bought.

Vincent W. Nash, executor for the estate of the late Charles Grueder, on Somerset street, passed the title of the property to Florret Wormser, of Lake street, this morning. The consideration was $6,100. Zeller & White will still continue business at the place and will use the entire building.

Checker Tournament.

Colonel T. A. Ball, of Westfield, has arranged a checker tournament between Westfield and Plainfield players for the town championship. Whitaker and Cash will open the tournament for Westfield and Mattox and Wagoner will play for Plainfield.

Building Ordinance to Be Called Up.

Councilman Erickson will bring the building ordinance before the City Council next Monday night. There is liable to be considerable opposition to its passage.

Dr. Deane's Dyspepsia Pills.

For thirty years Dr. Deane has made a study of dyspepsia, and in thirty years has cured more cases of it than probably any other fifty physicians combined. He gave up the study of theology and took to medicine, because the most eminent physicians of that day gave him up as a chronic dyspeptic, with only a short time to live.

Result of this change—a hearty, healthy, useful life, an enormous practice, and a demand for his pills greater than for all others combined wherever known. For sale at all druggists'. Send for a free sample. White wrapper if constipated, yellow if bowels are loose.

PLAINFIELD'S TURN.

The Odd Fellows of this District to Choose Their Leader.

The election to the position of District Deputy Grand Master in the order of Odd Fellows is a great honor and well worth striving for. The candidate for that office is nominated at Westfield on the 23d of this month by a convention composed of three delegates from each of the eleven lodges in this district. The officer is elected by the Grand Lodge, but the nomination and choice of the convention is usually accepted. It is the turn of Queen City lodge, of this city, to hold the office, and there are several candidates in the field, among the most prominent of whom are J. L. Blackford and Dr. Pocock.

Brought Back War Relics.

Dr. Simpson, of Liberty and Fifth streets, returned Saturday evening from an extended trip through Virginia. He brought with him a large number of war relics, among which was an eight pound cannon shell and sword. The latter he found standing against a tree in a large field. It looks as if it had been there for a long time. The doctor was much pleased with his trip.

PLAYING GOLF.

The Hillside Course Used for the First Time on Saturday.

A dozen or more golfers took advantage of the partial readiness of the course of the Hillside Tennis and Golf club to indulge in a practice game on Saturday afternoon. A number of people drove or wheeled out to the course and watched the play with interest.

The course is in remarkably good shape, considering the phenomenally dry weather for the past few weeks. The tees are fairly hard and the greens have been smothed down so that "putting" can be done with some accuracy. Nevertheless there is hardly a spear of grass in the course of the nine holes and every stroke raises a cloud of dust.

None of the fixtures were in place Saturday but several parties went around the course, the caddies for the nonce being recruited from the ranks of the ubiquitous small boy attracted to the spot partly by golf, but chiefly by chestnuts.

The best play of the afternoon was made by A. D. Shepard, Jr., who succeeded in making the second hole in three, driving onto the green in one.

Eventually, when the marking flags are in place and the grass has had a chance to resume its natural color, the course will present a very attractive appearance and the game will doubtless prove as popular as it has in other places where it has taken root.

Arrangements have been made by the golf committee for a corps of regular caddies who will be thoroughly trained to their duties by spring as play will be continued as late into the fall as the weather will permit.

Notice of the formal opening of the course will be given hereafter.

MORE KING'S DAUGHTERS.

A New Chapter Organized in the First Presbyterian Church.

A new chapter of King's Daughters was organized in the parlors of the First Presbyterian church last Thursday. Twelve young women were present at the organization. The question of a name caused a long discussion, but a compromise was made, and the branch called the Emanon Circle of King's Daughters. The secret to the meaning of Emanon may be understood by reading it backwards.

The following officers were then elected: President, Mrs. Howard Pope; vice-president, Miss Ella Bish; secretary, Mrs. W. E. MacClymont; treasurer, Mrs. Garretson.

Committees were appointed and it was decided to meet on the second and fourth Thursdays in every month.

YOUNGSTERS GET ACTIVE, TOO.

Y. M. C. A. Juniors Will Hustle for New Members.

The boys' rally at the Y. M. C. A. Saturday evening was a great success in every respect. There were about one hundred boys present and several members of the Junior committee. The boys were entertained with organ selections by S. W. Clark, recitations by Clarence Mills, organ and violin duet by S. W. Clark and Clarence Mills, and a short, interesting address by A. D. French, of Montclair.

Assistant Secretary J. Whiting presented a plan for a membership contest that is similar to the one adopted by the seniors.

John Dalziel and W. Whiting were chosen as captains and they selected sides from the members present. John Dalziel's side adopted the color purple and W. Whiting's side yellow.

Naughty Girls.

Two little girls attending the North Plainfield public school engaged in a dispute a day or two ago at school which resulted in a fight. One of the two placed a chip on her shoulder and then dared the other one to knock it off. The latter did remove the insignificant piece of wood and then the fight ensued. There was hair-pulling and scratching and not till a considerable effort was made on the part of the teachers did the affair terminate. It is not known what action will be taken in the matter, but the girls should receive a good lecture.

BROKE INTO THE ROOKERY.

A DEMENTED INDIVIDUAL SELECTS THE FLOOR FOR A BED.

A Varied Assortment of Humanity Line Up in City Court—Disorderly Italian House Pulled—Fought for Liberty

Tattooers, jail breakers, Italians and drunks made the city court a lively place last Monday and it took Judge Coddington over an hour to dispense justice to those who were there to receive it. Harry Panabaker, of Illinois, and George Carter, of Mt. Vernon, Ohio, were the first to appear. They were both young fellows and had come east with a traveling circus to be thrown on their own resources in New York. Officer McCue found them sitting on the railroad bank near Berckman street. He charged them with vagrancy and their appearance certainly was in keeping with the charge.

"We were trespassing," said Panabaker, "but we're not vagrants. We've got money."

"A very little, though," protested his Ohio companion.

"Thirty days in the county jail," said the Judge, and the dilapidated show followers were led back to their cells. They left behind them, however, a book with designs for tattooing in which art they are quite expert. The designs were very amusing and ranged from an anchor to a very elaborate Tammany tiger, which they charged $20 to tattoo on the arm or breast of their customers.

Four Italians were next brought in by Officers Mattox and Flynn, charged with desecrating the Sabbath. Three of them were found at the home of James Martoni on Lake street, near Hillside avenue, dancing, singing and having a good time generally. The fourth was Martoni himself, brought in on the charge of keeping a disorderly house. Mike Paschal and Nicholas Martoni were two of the gay party and a man with an unpronouncable name, which the Judge called "Billy Williams" for short, was the third. When the officers raided the den they met a lively resistance. Martoni, the proprietor of the place, was willing to come but the rest objected. "Billy Williams" wanted to fight, and it took four of his friends to hold him down. When he reached the jail he had cooled off and was talking about the "nice policemen." Williams and Paschal were both drunk but young Martoni, son of the owner of the den, declared that he was not.

"I don't drink," said he, with a grin from ear to ear.

"Did you hear any cursing and swearing?" asked the Judge of Officer Flynn.

"No," replied that officer, with a smile, "for I don't understand them when they do."

Two of the men are employed by Honan & Sons and a representative of that company was there to look after their interests. Walter L. Hetfield acted as counsel for the Italians and pleaded not guilty for all four. Trial was set down for Friday morning at ten o'clock, and the first three men were held in $25 bail to appear at that time. Martoni was held in $50 bail.

It is a rather new thing for a man to break into jail instead of breaking out, but last evening when Officer Saunders came into the station house he found a man fast asleep on the floor.

The moment he entered the court room it was easy to see that all was not right with his brain. There was an undefinable look about him that excited the pity of all in the court.

"I hope you'll let me go, Judge, it's my first offense and I'm on my way home," he glibly remarked, and smiled a silly smile at Captain Grant.

"I'll go back home and stay there and not slip away again," he murmured.

The usual examination elicted the fact that his name was Joseph Wood and that he belonged at Carline Springs, Va., and that he came to New York to get work. "Were you ever in a lunatic asylum," asked the Judge.

"No," was the reply. "But I ought to be there. There's a nice one at Vineland for feeble minded people. I'd like to be committed there, please. Won't you please send me there?" he pleaded.

His language was good and although his dress was poor and ragged he showed that his early education had been good.

"What have you been doing in New York?" he was asked.

"Just a—nothing. People see there is something the matter with me and won't give me any work. I've been in this condition for three or four years," and again that silly smile played over his face. "Night before last I stayed at the jail in Elizabeth."

Here Sergeant Kiely suggested that he spend tonight at the Somerville lockup. When inquiry was made about his stay in New York, he said: "I stayed in New York five days and slept in the station houses there. I got food at the missions and I wish you would commit me to the Vineland asylum."

"Do you drink?" asked one of the interested listeners.

"Oh no, I don't drink!" was the reply.

Upon promising to leave town at once, the Judge allowed him to depart.

"Are you hungry?" asked one of the audience as he passed out.

"Yes kind of, I haven't had anything today," and then a silver coin changed hands and the jail breaker passed out into the open air still smiling in his simple way.

"Too bad" from the Judge voiced the sentiments of all. "There should be provision made for such as he."

Jim Emmons was found at drunk by Officer McCue and was given his choice between a fine of $10 or thirty days at Elizabeth.

Wallace H. Coriell was brought in on the complaint of his wife for non-support. He pleaded not guilty and and said his wife would not live with him. His trial was set down for five o'clock this afternoon. Sergeant Kiely had quite a time arresting him as Coriell wanted to fight.

THEATRICAL.

The spectacular event of the season on Thursday evening next at Music Hall will be the appearance of Joseph Callahan, the only American Mephisto in "Faust," surrounded by a strong company of players of acknowledged repute; this presentation is particularly elaborate, introducing novel electrical and mechanical effects and new special scenery and spectacular embellishments. Mr. Callahan will be supported by a powerful cast, including Miss Beatrice Ingram as the guileless and affectionate Marguerite, Edwin Boring, in the title role of "Faust" and Mrs. Addie Farwell as the droll and amusing Dame Martha. The Brocken scene will be one of unsurpassed grandeur and never equalled, and The Apotheosis, one of the most beautiful of stage pictures, the ascension of Marguerite to Heaven, introducing the "Faust" Quartettes, male and female, in classic and sacred music accompanied by the Florentine Choir singers, six in number.

The Eden Musee in New York has opened its new music hall to the public. The little old winter garden has been removed, and within the Musee is now one of the best-equipped concert halls in New York. The musical programme are enjoyed by large audiences.

The Plainfield Catholic Club met at the C. Y. M. L. hall yesterday afternoon to complete the organization of the new club. The charter list was signed by 123 young men which includes many from the Lyceum Society. This list will be kept open till the constitution and by-laws are adopted.

The following were appointed as a house committee: E. McCue, J. Hibbitts, P. Mack, D. Keefe, C. Regan, T. Owens. The following are the committee on constitution and by-laws: T. Carty, P. Casey, M. Mack, J. F. O'Halloran, S. Birmingham, H. E. Forester, P. Reville, E. McCue and J. Lynch.

The latter will report at the next meeting, Tuesday, November 5th.

To Reform the Italians.

The Board of Health of the borough and township of North Plainfield, will meet Monday, October 21st, to take some action regarding the shanties occupied by the Italians and colored people at Washingtonville.

The place has become a recognized nuisance and an effort will be made to clean it out. Today Constable Stewart inspected the place and will report at the meeting October 21st.

A VICTIM OF ROBBERIES.

A New Providence Grocery Store Looted Twice in a Few Days.

S. C. Percell, a prominent grocer of New Providence, has of late been the victim of robbers that have spared no pains in relieving him of many valuable things.

On account of the distance between New Providence and New York, Mr. Percell usually carries a heavy stock, saving him the trouble of going to New York frequently. On the nights of September 4th and 5th some person or persons entered his store by a rear window and stole a considerable amount of clothing and dry goods. Mr. Percell did not say much about it, thinking he could capture the guilty ones, but he failed to get any clue and the matter was dropped.

A few nights ago the store was again visited by robbers, and an entrance was effected the same way. When Mr. Percell opened his store the next morning he discovered that clothing, dry goods, groceries and all his cigars were taken, amounting to about $50. He has not the slightest idea who the robbers are and is much perplexed over the matter. However, he went to Summit and placed his case in the hands of United States Detective Kelly, who will leave no stone unturned to find the thieves.

Plainfield's Banjo Talent Enlisted.

Preparations are now being made for a large entertainment to be held in Somerset Hall, at Somerville, on October 31st. There is to be a large number of banjo players gathered from the surrounding towns of which Fred VanEps, Henry Piker, Will Cook and Will Force are from Plainfield. The Metropolitan Male Quartette and the Dore Banjo Quartette, of New York, are both engaged and the programme promises to be very attractive one.

Will Not Close.

An Elizabeth paper published an item to the effect that the Stillman Music Hall in this city and Drake's Opera House in Elizabeth would be closed for the season. Manager Aldridge characterizes the report as absolutely untrue.

thinness

The diseases of thinness are scrofula in children, consumption in grown people, poverty of blood in either. They thrive on leanness. Fat is the best means of overcoming them. Everybody knows cod-liver oil makes the healthiest fat.

In Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil the taste is hidden, the oil is digested, it is ready to make fat.

When you ask for Scott's Emulsion and your druggist gives you a package in a salmon-colored wrapper with the picture of the man and fish on it—you can trust that man!

ORGAN GRINDERS.

They Have Their Uses and Cannot Be Considered an Unredeemed Nuisance.

Most men probably sympathize with the testy old gentleman of sporting proclivities in Little Puck who hurls books, bricks or bric-a-brac with equal indifference whenever he hears an organ grinder under his window. There is one man in this town, however—a lawyer who has an office on La Salle street—who will go out of his way a couple of blocks, if he can spare the time, in order to pass by a hand organ grinder. His excursions are not hostile either. He says the sound of music stimulates him. His brain works better, and he can grind out new ideas or polish off old ones while under the spell of the Italian's subtle art in a way which seems impossible to him under other conditions. The organ grinder must be down town, however, where the notes from his music mill are properly mingled with the noises of the streets. Organ grinders who stop in front of this same lawyer's residence, on the North Side, find an entirely different person to deal with. There he is hard and inhospitable, and invariably orders them to move on.

A preacher whom the lawyer told of this habit of his the other day admitted that he had the same experience and did not share in the general condemnation of organ grinders at all times and in all places. Music under any circumstances, he remarked, is stimulating and suggestive to most people, but notes mingled with the sounds of busy city thoroughfares have a different quality. This is business activity set to music, and its suggestions are definite and practical. Many men, he continued, can think out speeches while walking, and he found great benefit from it, but got better results from a long ride on the electric cars, the rush of the motor seeming to communicate itself to his mental faculties. Many of his sermons were manufactured in this way during the week. The exhilaration of bicycle riding, which he seemed to enjoy last year, was in his case, he added, mainly physical, but this he thought was probably because the exercise was new to him and would not permit that abstraction which is necessary to the elaboration of a discourse.

"Authors, we are told, soon learn to compose on the typewriter," suggested the lawyer, "and I don't see why preachers shouldn't compose on the bicycle."—Chicago Tribune.

DINING IN PALESTINE.

Knives and Forks Being Unknown, the Fingers Do Valiant Duty.

A very large circular tray of tinned copper, placed on a coarse wooden stool about a foot high, served as a table. In the center of this stood another big tray, with a mountain of pilaff, composed of rice boiled and buttered, with small pieces of meat strewn through and upon it. This was the chief dish, though there were other smaller dishes, both meat and vegetable. Ten persons sat around the table, or rather squatted on the carpet, with their knees drawn up close to their bodies. Each had before him a plate of tinned copper and a wooden spoon, which some used without the plate. Most, however, preferred to use the fingers of the left hand, several dipping their hands together into the dish, as the disciples did at the last supper.

As soon as any one had finished he rose and went into another room, to have water poured over his hands to wash them, and the vacant place at the table was instantly filled by a newcomer. The bread, I may say, was laid on the mat under the tray, so as to be easily reached, and a jar of water, the only beverage used during the meal, stood within reach. Besides rice, stews of beans or cracked wheat, with thick soup or sauce poured over them in the great central bowl, are also in fashion. Spoons, though sometimes provided, are often wanting—pieces of thin bread, doubled, serving instead. Knives and forks are unknown, and as there is no special dining room there is no furniture suited for one. Hence tables and chairs are never seen. The meat being always cut up into small pieces, there is no need for a knife, and chickens can easily be torn asunder with the hands. So far, indeed, are orientals from thinking it strange to dip their fingers into the common dish that it is a special act of politeness to grope in it for the visitor, and lay nice morsels before him, or even to insist on putting them into his mouth.—"Holy Land and the Bible."

Southern Negro Courtship Speeches.

"Kin' lady, ef I was to go up between de heavens an de yearth an drap down a grain of wheat over ten acres of land an plow it up wid a rooster fedder, would you marry me?"

"Good lady, I was in a garden in my dream, an I saw de lovelies' table, an on de table was a fine cake an a glass of wine, an a beautiful lady was walkin in de garden, and you were de lady. Ef you saw a pea's hull in de garden, which one would you choose—one wid one pea in it or a hull full of peas?" (The hull with one pea is a single man. The hull with many peas is a widower with children.)

"Suppose you was walkin by de side of de ribber, an dere was three ladies in a boat, an dat boat was upsot, which lady would you save, a tall lady, a short lady or middle sized lady?" The girl asks this if she wants to bring matters to a climax. The man's answer corresponds with the size of the inquiring young lady.

"Good lady, ef I was to give you a handkerchief to wash an iron, how would you do it widout water or iron?" Answer—"Iron it with love."

Here is a tender avowal: "Dear miss, ef I was a-starvin an had jes' one ginger cake, I would give you half, an dat would be the bigges' half."—Journal of American Folk Lore.

And She Didn't.

A lady passenger in a small coasting steamer had been annoying the man at the wheel by asking questions.

At last he so far forgot himself as to tell her to "go to Jericho."

The lady was greatly shocked and insulted, complained to the captain and insisted on an apology from the man.

The captain politely promised to see to it.

Having called the man, he told him that he must apologize, and so he went off rather sulkily toward the cabin.

Having reached the door, he stood there till the attention of the lady was directed to him, when he called out to her, "You need not go," then turned and went on deck.—London Tit-Bits.

BOOKS OF A TALKING KIND.

NOVEL KIND OF A SOCIABLE TO BE GIVEN BY THE DORCAS CIRCLE.

The Admission Fee Will Be as Many Pennies as You Are Years Old—Profits to Be Given to Support a City Nurse.

A novel, but what promises to be a very enjoyable gathering, is to be held at the home of Miss Maud Lowrie on Monday evening. It is known as a library social and is given by the members of the Dorcas Circle of King's Daughters, of which Miss Lowrie is the President. Although about four hundred invitations have been issued the social is not essentially an invitation affair but is for all. With the invitation is sent a little cloth bag with the request that as many cents be placed in it as the giver is years old. These bags with their unknown contents will constitute the admission fee and will be dropped in a large basket in the hall. Those receiving none may obtain one at the door.

Around the sides of the large double parlors will be placed about one hundred representations of books. There will be a picture of Chancer's Canterbury house and several fur tails which will represent "Canterbury Tales," and others of a like nature. As each visitor enters he will be supplied with a blank catalogue and in the catalogue he puts his guess for the name of the different books represented around the room. A number of the members of the circle will also be dressed to represent books and their names must also be guessed. The correct names will finally be read and two prizes awarded to the longest correct lists held by a lady and a gentleman.

The circulating department of this library will be in another room. Here ten members of the circle, dressed to represent books, and masked, will be found. After guessing the name of the book that he wants, a young man can take a book out on payment of a small fee and chat with his book for a limited time.

The social part of the affair will be looked after and, during the evening, refreshments will be served.

The object of the sociable is to raise the necessary funds for the circle to work with. They have pledged themselves to the extent of $75 to assist the other King's Daughters in Plainfield to employ a nurse in the hospital. The rest of the money will go to assist in the work among the poor of Plainfield.

The following committees have been appointed to look after the different parts of Monday evening's entertainment: Committee on invitations, Miss Arline Crane; committee on arranging tables, Miss Grace Langdon and Miss Ethel Green; committee on refreshments, Miss Etta Blish and Miss Mary French.

The first meeting of the circle this fall was held at the home of Miss Langdon on September 23d, and the officers were elected as follows: President, Miss Maud M. Lowrie; vice-president, Miss Lizzie Maltby; secretary, Mrs. Corlies Pond; treasurer, Miss Blish.

An advisory board was elected for the first time this year; it is composed of Mrs. J. M. Crane, Mrs. Corlies Pond, Miss Mary Brown.

The President has appointed the following committees for the year:

Lookout—Miss Annie Wyckoff, Miss Grace Langdon, Miss Etta Blish.

Cutting—Mrs. Harry Lowrie, Miss Blish, Miss Lizzie Maltby.

Membership—Mrs. Samuel Clark, Miss Minnie French, Miss Bessie Titsworth.

Visiting—Miss Arline Crane, Miss Ethel Green, Miss Lulu French.

Hospital—Miss Ethel Green, Miss Alice Haynes, Miss Bessie Cornwell, Miss Florence Kline, Miss Millie Langdon.

Mr. Crane to Go to Chicago.

John M. Crane, of West Eighth street, who has resided in Plainfield during the past eleven years, is about to leave and engage in business in Chicago at the first of January. The beautiful home now occupied by Mr. Crane and his family on West Eighth street is for sale, and the location being such an exceptionally fine one, offers a rare opportunity for anyone who desires to locate in what is considered by many to be the best part of town. Mr. Crane remains with his old company, the Standard, of Detroit.

To Run Against Time.

Arrangements are being made to have Engine 385 of the P. & R. Railroad to run against time at an early date. This is the new engine recently put on and passes through this city to New York every morning at 8:45. It is believed that the trip from New York to Philadelphia can be made in one hour and ten minutes by this engine.

Want a License.

An application for a hotel license has been made by Plainfield parties who wish to open a hotel at the corner of Elm street and North avenue, Westfield. The hearing will be next Saturday, and the Westfield people will oppose the granting of the license.

CLIMAX GUNNERS ARE THIRD.

End of the Series of Matches of the State Shooting League.

The New Jersey Trap Shooters League held a tournament at Red Bank yesterday which proved very successful. The principal event was the team shoot, which was won by the Union Gun Club, of Springfield. The other clubs finished in the following order: Climax Gun Club, of Plainfield; Riverside Gun Club, of Red Bank; Maplewood Gun Club, of Orange; Endeavor Gun Club, of Jersey City; Boiling Springs Gun Club, of Rutherford, and Elizabeth Gun Club.

The individual score of the Plainfield team was: Keller, 28; Manning, 22; Breintnall, 21; Darby, 23; "Dutchy" Smith, 20. Total, 109.

This team shoot ends the series for the year. The Maplewoods won in the series and the Climax Club secured third.

Nine sweepstake matches also took place, from ten to twenty-five bird events, and the entrances ranging from $1 to $2.50. There were three moneys in each, all ties to be divided. "Dutchy" Smith won the twenty-five bird sweepstakes alone by a score of 23. There were twenty-five other contestants. In the fifteen-bird match he also took first alone from a field of thirty-two shooters by scoring 15 straight. In the twenty-bird contest he scored 19 and took second alone.

THE FIDDLER WAS IN JAIL.

A Colored Event Delayed on Account of the Musician's Arrest.

There was a very good attendance at the ragamuffin party given by the women of the Mt. Olive Baptist church in Central Hall last evening, and the event was enjoyable in every way with but one exception, and that was the music. Music had been engaged for the occasion and the audience waited patiently for the musician to appear, but he did not, and at a late hour it was learned that he was securely fastened in the rookery, pending a hearing on a charge made against him.

Everyone was sorry, but the lateness of the hour made it impossible to do anything and in consequence it was nearly 10:30 before the affair commenced. At that hour twelve women, who had been in waiting, made their appearance after the fact had been announced by Rev. P. S. Gibson. Those present then began to sing a familiar song as the women marched in. They were dressed in all sorts of styles and wore masks.

Much merriment was furnished the spectators by their ridiculous dresses. They walked around the room as if there was a prize cake to be won. After the march all joined in a social good time and later partook of the refreshments on sale. The affair was arranged by the Building Guild of the church, headed by the following committee: Mrs. Catharine Manning, Mrs. Rebecca Wyckoff, Miss Tillie Ivison, Mrs. Sussie Reed, Mrs. Sally Fountain, W. H. Manning, and Mr. Fountain. The object was to raise a sufficient amount of money to finish paying for a carpet that was purchased for the church and it is thought that enough was secured, as a liberal amount was received.

TWO-FOLD A SUCCESS.

Cypress Fife and Drum Corps Enjoy Themselves and Make Money.

A success socially was the verdict of all those who attended the first reception of the Cypress Fife and Drum Corps at T. A. B. hall last evening, and a success financially said the promoters of the reception. The colored people of the town turned out in full force to attend it and fill the hall to its utmost capacity. The corps marched down to the hall from their rooms on East Front street early in the evening, and from that time the crowd began to gather. William Douglass acted as floor manager and made a very successful one.

The committee of arrangements consisted of the following: J. Scott, L. Pierson, J. Dennis, G. Randolph, O. TenEyck, E. Washington, C. Carr, C. Jefferson, R. Stevens, G. Peterson and W. H. Francis.

The officers of the corps are: President, Wm. H. Jones; Vice-president, Henry Peterson; Treasurer, Frank Kelso; Secretary, Oscar Nelson.

The music was very good and was furnished by Prof. Frazee.

More Voices.

In addition to the quartette choir of the Crescent Avenue church a number of voices will be added so as to increase the volume of tone on the hymns. Quite a number of the choruses from the Holy City, it is expected, will be rendered by the chorus during the winter. The chorus will begin their duties next Sunday morning.

A Dog in a Sewer Pipe.

A small dog was found in one of the sewer pipes on West Front street yesterday. How the animal got there is a mystery, but he was alive when taken out, and the experience didn't hurt him one bit.

A BAZAR OF GOOD THINGS

SCOTCH PLAINS AFFAIR FOR BENEFIT OF THE LIBRARY.

Excelsior Hall Transformed Into a Thing of Beauty and a Joy Forever—Pretty Booths Set Off By Handsome Attendants.

The Scotch Plains Public Library, a bright cozy place in the upper part of Excelsior Hall, has reached that point where it is recognized as an actual public benefactor, and after its six years existence has become thoroughly established both in location and in the hearts of those who live in Scotch Plains.

There are now 1,000 volumes in the library and from year to year the number is increased. Of course there are expenses attached to the running of the library and the good women of Scotch Plains and vicinity have become so much interested in the institution that every year they plan to hold a bazar, and so in accordance with the custom one was arranged for this year.

After much earnest work the affair was opened at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and previous to that hour a Daily Press reporter dropped in and was very much interested in what there was to be seen.

One of the most active workers very kindly explained the objects of the bazar which are indeed worthy of everyone's attention.

The first floor of the hall was converted into an exceedingly attractive place, made so through the use of evergreens and asparagus vine.

The centre of attraction is probably the candy booth, which stands in the centre of the room, which is laden with all the toothsome sweets to be found. The booth is prettily made of greens and flowers and is in charge of Mrs. Moore who is assisted by Miss Moore, Miss Tuzo and Miss Patterson. Directly back of this booth is the platform which represents a Japanese room, and an ideal one it is. Everything that is to be found in an apartment of this kind is arranged in the most artistic manner. Miss Nichol and Mrs. Thomae are located here and find ready sales for the dainty Japanese wares that are so pretty.

To the right of the platform is the stationery booth that contains a complete stock of everything to be found in a stationery store. These goods were loaned by Seely Edsall, of Plainfield. Miss Townsend assisted by the Misses Nichol have charge of this department and they experience no trouble in selling the goods.

The fancy table is one of the most attractive sights at the bazar, and arranged by Miss Boice, Miss Johnson, and Miss Smith, they present a most inviting place for those in attendance. The display of useful and fancy articles show good judgment in selection, and many purchases were recorded yesterday.

The flower booth is a perfect beauty, arranged with the choicest plants and flowers from Miss Lincoln's flower store in Plainfield. The scene presented is that of a garden of flowers. Mrs. Renaud, assisted by Miss Lounsbury and Mrs. Robinson, look after the flowers and have good success in selling them.

The cake table is in charge of Mrs. Dr. Westcott, assisted by Miss Bliss and Miss Squires, while the ice cream is served by Miss Bornman and Mrs. Mead.

A lemonade booth and well stands in one corner as pretty as a picture, where the best lemonade you ever had is served. Mrs. Force, assisted by Miss McAhemy and Miss Kyle, look after the needs of all who are thirsty and the beverage seems to satisfy everyone that partakes. L. W. Randolph, the Plainfield druggist, very kindly donated some things for the lemonade well.

In the room used for the library a number of tables are to be found where an excellent supper is served by Mrs. Miller and Mrs. Marsh. All the appetizing things of the season are given for a nominal price that is within the reach of all.

Among the side-shows is a "nickel-in-the-slot" where mysterious packages are sold for a nickel. No one knows the contents till the package is opened. Then there is a "Gentlemen's Horror," knowledge of which can only be obtained by inquiry and paying a small fee.

The house committee, who arranged and planned this successful affair, comprises Mrs. DeForest Thome, Mrs. Thomas Paff, Jr., Mrs. Mead, Miss Kyte, and Mrs. Thomas Nichol.

Appointed Guardian.

In the lunacy proceedings of the Middlesex County Orphans Court, before Judge Rice Tuesday, touching the case of Simeon Harris, formerly of Plainfield, the Court appointed Postmaster John M. Hetfield, of this city, guardian of said Simeon Harris, and he has qualified and entered on his duties.

Directed to the Borough.

A strange man, who had evidently been drinking, found himself in Plainfield yesterday looking for a friend. Sergeant Kiely directed the man to the borough for information.

STUDY OF THE GOOD BOOK.

Warren Chapel Members Start the Berean Class Again.

Hearty, warm fellowship was the order of exercises at the reception given the Berean Bible Class at Warren chapel last evening. The members were very much disappointed in not having the pleasure of hearing their old teacher, Mr. Tyler, but he was unable to be present owing to a previous engagement.

Joseph Gavett was chairman of the entertainment and introduced those who took part. The first number was a delightful recitation by Miss Ella Osborne.

Rev. J. O. McKelvey followed with a short address. He explained the object of the meeting, which was to promote Christian fellowship and get better acquainted. Among other things he said that there was one thing he hoped for and wanted to see, that was the enthusiasm, interest and zeal manifested among the members that was evidenced when Mr. Tyler was the teacher. He also said that he wanted to be a friend to all and whenever it was possible give advice and help. He wished to see the class grow spiritually and in numbers, thus becoming a great influence for good.

M. C. Evans then pleased the audience with an excellent whistling solo, accompanied by Miss Maggie Sheppard on the organ.

Refreshments were served during an intermission by the Misses Mair, Mrs. Taylor, Miss Swain, Miss Mabelle Gillies. Joseph Gavett, Edward Ryder and Nelson VanWinkle, after which M. C. Evans rendered another whistling solo and Miss Osborne recited "Kentucky Belle."

This closed the programme and the balance of the evening was devoted to sociability.

A HORSELESS WAGON.

A Plainfielder Takes a Ride in a Wonderful Invention.

Upon invitation from those interested Charles E. Buell went to New York yesterday and took a ride in one of the celebrated horseless wagons. He was very much interested in the workings of this wonderful invention and in conversation with a Daily Press reporter, told some facts regarding it. A naptha engine is used, and air forced into the naptha makes gas which is conveyed to the engine. At this point it is fired by an electric spark, giving from three to four horse power. A portion of the axle on which the forward wheels turn, is pivoted to the main portion of the axle, making it possible for one wheel to be turned while the other remains stationery. The wagon can easily go eighteen miles an hour, and climb a grade of ten feet in every one hundred. A party of Wall street capitalists are thinking seriously of purchasing the invention and controlling the business in this country.

A MISSIONARY AMONG WILD PEOPLE.

Miss Carpenter, of Dunellen, to Go to Japan.

Miss Minnie Carpenter, of Dunellen, was present at a meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society held in the First Baptist church yesterday afternoon and spoke informally of her anticipated work in Nemuro, Japan, for which place she will leave her home next week, via San Francisco. Miss Carpenter, on her arrival at Japan, will join Mrs. C. H. Carpenter, who has been engaged in missionary work at Nemuro for the past nine years. The island of Yezo, on which Nemuro is situated, has a climate like Siberia, in the northwestern part where are the Ainos, an aboriginal race of people who are to Japan what the Indians are to America. Mrs. Carpenter hopes to reach these wild people and reduce their language to writing that they may be taught the Gospel. In this work she hopes for great assistance from her young friend, Miss. Carpenter, who is not a relative, though her name is the same.

Women's Clubs Incorporated.

The New Jersey State Federation of Women's Clubs filed articles of incorporation in the County Clerk's office on Tuesday. The officers are: Margaret T. Yardley, president; Antoinette B. Blackwell and Ada Loomis McGraw, vice-presidents; Laura Boormar, recording-secretary; and Laura G. Collins, corresponding-secretary.

Not Enough Evidence.

Joseph Green and John Cahill, of this city, who have been resting for sometime in the Somerset county jail awaiting the action of the Grand Jury in regards to a fight they were engaged in at Washingtonville sometime ago, were released from there yesterday afternoon and returned to Plainfield. There was not sufficient evidence to indict them.

SUING FOR INSURANCE.

MRS. PENDLETON AGAINST THE METROPOLITAN COMPANY.

The Company Claim That the Policy Was Issued on a Misrepresentation of the Condition of Pendleton—An Appeal Case.

A suit between a corporation and a poor family always excites considerable interest and the case of Julia Pendleton vs. Metropolitan Insurance Company is especially interesting.

Mrs. Pendleton is a colored woman who has resided in this city for some time. Her husband, who lived with her, died last spring and it is to secure his life insurance that she is suing. Mr. Pendleton fought in the Civil War and, when in the army, was prostrated by a sunstroke, from the effects of which he never fully recovered. At times he was taken with fits of temporary mental derangement.

Last fall John R. Naylor, the insurance agent, saw Mr. Pendleton with the purpose of getting out a policy. Mrs. Pendleton and daughter both say that the agent was told that Mr. Pendleton had been sunstruck, but Mr. Naylor says that he remembers nothing of it.

Then Pendleton went before Dr. Manning to be examined and the doctor said that he was a good risk. Last spring Mr. Pendleton died of hemiphlegia brought on by the sun-stroke of years ago. The company refused to pay, saying that Pendleton had not told all the facts correctly concerning his early life. The case came up before Justice Mosher with S. S. Swackhomer for Mrs. Pendleton and James C. Connoly, corporation counsel of Elizabeth, as counsel for the insurance company. The verdict was $55 and costs for the plaintiff and Connolly promptly appealed it. The case now comes up before Judge McCormick in the Court of Common Pleas on November 4th and promises to be a hot fight.

A Happy Surprise.

T. S. Armstrong and three brothers went to the pier of the National Steamship line in New York Tuesday morning and met the steamship Kensington, on which were their mother, brother, sister and nephew on board, coming home from a visit of several weeks in European countries. The returning party were much surprised at finding the relatives on the pier awaiting their return, as it was yet early in the morning, just at daybreak.

After happy greetings all around the party started for the mother's home in Camden, where another surprise was awaiting them. The wives of the three brothers had made the home ready for the party and a dinner was all prepared for them. This sort of welcoming, so little expected, was a most pleasant feature of the home-coming. Mr. Armstrong returned to his home in this city last night.

Former Plainfielder Weds.

George Dunshee, formerly of Plainfield, but now of Newark, was married last evening to Miss Charlotte Bender, of Newark, by Rev. Dr. Frazer, pastor of the First Presbyterian church. Miss Florence Bender, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, and Harvey Thorn, of this city, was best man. Mr. and Mrs. Dunshee will spend the next three weeks at Saratoga, and upon their return will reside in Newark.

MAYOR HEGEMAN AROUSED.

HE ARRAIGNS THE CITY FOR FOULING GREENBROOK WITH SEWAGE.

Says the Matter Must Not Rest But the City Must Be Made to Take Action—Other Important Matters Considered.

Mayor B. A. Hegeman, Jr., Councilmen Lounsbury, Peck, Valiant, Smith, and Clerk Arnold were present at the regular October meeting of the borough council held last evening.

The minutes of the last regular and adjourned meetings were read and adopted.

Tax Collector H. N. Spencer then reported the following license money received from the county clerk: E. Hoerster, $225; H. Wedemeyer, $225; G. Sutterlin, $150; which amounted to $600, less the county clerk's per cent, $30, $570. It was received and filed.

The clerk's financial statement was then read as follows:

	Balance.	Deficit.
Borough	$ 988.72
Fire department		$ 34.23
Light		$1,097.97
Roads	$1,576.59
Poor
	$2,565.31	$1,420.70
	$1,420.70
Total balance	$1,144.61

He also reported $119.09 collected from fines, licenses, etc. This report was also received and filed. The monthly budget of bills was presented and later ordered paid. Mr. Peck stated that minor repairs had been made in the rear of Warren Engine Company's house and that some were under consideration in front. Mr. Lounsbury said that the matter of securing overcoats for the marshals had been considered, and later in the evening offered a resolution that proposals for furnishing the same be advertised for. It was carried. He also spoke of the matter of stoves for the borough lockup, and another resolution offered by him was carried that two stoves be purchased, the cost not to exceed $35.

Mr. Smith reported that the stone for macadamizing Prospect place cost $201.42 and the labor $155.26. The report was received and filed. Mr. Smith offered a resolution that $111.61 which was due J. Y. Wilson for stone be paid, which was so ordered.

Mr. Valiant then introduced an ordinance relating to 'licensing auctioneers," and on Mr. Smith's motion it was passed on first and second readings and laid over till next meeting. It provides that $25 be charged auctioneers, and $50 for violations of the ordinance.

Mr. Peck offered a resolution that a loan of $1,500 be secured and the same be charged to light account. It was so ordered.

The clerk then read a communication from Messrs. Smith and Lounsbury, committee on streets, in regard to matter of damages to be awarded residents along the proposed extension of Watchung avenue. The total amount of damages which the people were willing to settle for was $32,000. It was received and filed.

Mr. Lounsbury then offered a resolution that Friday evening, October 11th, at eight o'clock, be set as the time for the Council to treat with the property owners along the proposed extension of Watchung avenue. It was carried.

Another resolution was offered by Mr. Lounsbury and carried that printed notice be served the property owners notifying them of the meeting.

Mr. Smith moved that when Council adjourn it be to meet on Friday evening, October 11th. The motion was adopted.

After a recess of ten minutes, Mr. Smith stated bids for macadamizing Harrison street had been received and the clerk would read them.

They were read as follows: Thomas Doud, 65 cents per lineal foot; A. I. & N. B. Smalley, 75 cents; J. H. Wilson, 82½ cents; John Emmons, 62 cents. They were all referred to the street committee.

At this point Mr. Lounsbury took the chair, and Mayor Hegeman spoke in substance as follows:

The condition of Green brook has been for sometime a source of annoyance to me. The fault is not with us. It is Plainfield's fault, and the fair name she has always held is now smirched. They are introducing a system of sewerage, and pending that sewage matter is being dumped into that brook. Our Board of Health, with commendable zeal, has tried every method with the Plainfield Board of Health, but with no result. It has been reported that the condition of the brook is not so bad, but such is not the case. It is not for us to clean out this filth. Thus far we have been unable to obtain any redress from the City Council, but I hope it will be considered by that honorable body before long. Complaints are daily sent to us in regard to the matter. If people should come here from out of town and see the condition of that brook they would think that this was the last place on God's earth to live. I am aroused about this matter and it demands my attention. We are not going to stop, but we are going to the furthest extreme to punish the violators if necessary. One of the worst features about the thing is that a member of the City Board of Health is emptying his sewage matter into that brook. We are going to protect ourselves and save our reputation.

Mr. Lounsbury asked if the State Board of Health had any jurisdiction in the matter. He understood that Plainfield didn't intend doing anything till the sewers were completed.

Borough Counsel Reed stated that the State Board of Health could impose a $2,000 fine if the city was indicted.

Mr. Valiant thought every effort should be made to stop the nuisance at once.

Mr. Hegeman said he supposed that Plainfield didn't know anyone was living in the borough.

After the council had indorsed orally the excellent words of the Mayor the meeting was adjourned for one week.

MRS. FERNANDEZ'S PROPERTY.

A Trial to Determine Its Right Owner Adjourned to Next Monday.

The trial for the right of property once owned by Mrs. Ula Fernandez was to have been held yesterday afternoon before Justice Newcorn. Writs of attachment had been issued by Justice Nash for Samuel P. Mulford, Fred Dunn, J. W. VanSickle, Edwin H. Holmes, Miss Maggie Nugent, W. Edwin Martin and Mrs. Lamirah Adams, who are Mrs. Fernandez's creditors, but Adam C. Blair claimed all the property, and the question was brought before Justice Newcorn to decide. Judge W. A. Coddington represents Adam C. Blair and George W. DeMeza acts as counsel for two of the creditors, Miss Nugent and Mrs. Adams. Through a misunderstanding, Judge Coddington thought that Mr. DeMeza would not return from Somerville in time to try the case and dismissed his witnesses. Justice Newcorn then adjourned the case until Monday afternoon at 2:30 in the city court rooms.

POSTAL SERVICE COMMENDED.

Secret Service Agents Make No Complaints Against the Carriers.

Postmaster John M. Hetfield yesterday received the following letter from F. H. Jones, First Assistant Postmaster-General on the report of the secret service agents, who recently investigated the service in this city:

Postmaster, Plainfield, N. J.

Sir:—An investigation of your free delivery service was recently made by the Secret Service Agents of this Department, and I am pleased to announce that they found everything in the most satisfactory condition. I quote from their report the following: "They have the most active lot of men here we ever saw and consider the service excellent. The office is run in a very systematic manner. The carriers are all fine looking fellows; uniforms neat and clean and they are very active and attentive to their duties."

BUSINESS AND SOCIABILITY.

Fall Meeting of the Epworth League of the Methodist Church.

A very short session of the Epworth League of the First M. E. church was all there was needed to transact the business of the society. The reports of the different committees were made and showed that, like all the rest, the league had not been very active during the summer. The secretary read a communication stating that a district league convention will be held at Somerville on October 24th, and that Chapter 1, the Plainfield branch, was entitled to four delegates. It was decided, by motion, that they should be appointed by the President, J. R. Joy.

The rest of the evening was spent in conversation and games, of which "Ghosts" and "Who, Sir, Me, Sir?" were perhaps the most enjoyed. The social part was arranged by the regular social committee, of which Miss Elsie Horne is chairman.

CYCLING COMMENT.

The Westfield members of the Advisory Committee of the Central New Jersey Football League, failed to put in an appearance at the meeting of the committee last evening, as did also the Cranford delegates. Treasurer G. W. Richardson called the meeting together, and it was immediately moved and carried to adjourn and meet again at the same place at quarter of eight o'clock next Friday evening. Those present were George W. Richardson and Arthur Palmer, of Dunellen; and D. A. McPhie and Charles B. Morse, of Plainfield. The non-appearance of the Westfield men was quite a surprise and the meeting was delayed twenty-five minutes to allow them to appear as they stated that they intended to attend. Word has been sent from Cranford, it is reported, that there will be no team from that place this year.

What's the Matter With Union County?

A rather uncommon sign in Plainfield has appeared on the telegraph pole at the corner of Front street and Park avenue. It is a statement that Morris Kadusky, aged thirty-six, a merchant of South Second street, has applied for naturalization papers. The application will be considered at the Somerset County Court of Common Pleas.

The Proper Man.

Inasmuch as Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, pastor of the First Baptist church, is going to attend the State Christian Endeavor convention at Atlantic City, it is suggested that he be secured to make the appeal before the executive committee to have Plainfield selected as the place for holding the next convention.

WEDDED AT HIGH NOON.

A BRILLIANT NUPTIAL EVENT IN GRACE P. E. CHURCH.

Miss Caroline Noble Betts Becomes Mrs. Arthur Masters—Ceremony Performed by Rev. Dr. Rodman—Reception.

A beautiful bride and a beautiful day made the wedding at the Grace P. E. church at high noon today a brilliant one when Miss Caroline Noble Betts, daughter of the late William Henry Betts, and Arther Masters, son of the late Charles Masters, of England, were joined in wedlock by Rev. E. M. Rodman, D. D. They leave tonight on a two weeks wedding tour, after which they will spend a few days in Plainfield and then take up their residence at Germantown for the winter.

The bride was attired in a gown of white gro' de londre, made entrain trimmed with Brussels lace, worked by her grandmother for her own wedding. She wore a tulle veil and orange blossoms, and carried a white prayer book. The maid of honor was her sister, Miss Leila Betts, who was gowned in white organdie over white silk, and wore a hat trimmed with white chiffon and white ostrich plumes.

Frank Smith, of Hartford, Conn., was the best man and the ushers were Fordyce S. Caldwell, of New York, Stuart Patterson, of this city, Mr. Wolsey, of New York and Mr. Henderson, of Philadelphia.

Frank Betts, of Easton, Pa., a cousin of the bride, gave her away.

The Episcopal service was used and the singing by the regular surpliced choir of the church was very fine. The organ music was delightfully rendered by Miss May E. Chapman, of Rockville, Conn. The interior of the church was handsomely decorated with flowers, palms and greens which were arranged by Miss A. E. Lincoln, of this city.

After the ceremony was over the newly-married couple drove immediately to the residence of Edward B. Clark, of Crescent avenue, where an informal wedding breakfast was served, to which only the immediate relatives and a few near friends were present.

The house decorations were very beautiful and the table was arranged in a most artistic manner.

Mr. Masters has been residing in New York. His only relative living in this city is his sister, Mrs. Charles W. King, of Watchung avenue.

There was a large number of handsome and costly gifts to the couple from friends and relatives.

PUNTS AND KICKS.

There is a strong feeling among the well informed men at Cambridge that a game will be arranged very soon between Harvard and Yale.

When practicing with the Leal's School team Thursday afternoon Herbert Moore fell and struck his knee against a stone and severely injured it so that Moore is now confined to the house with water on the knee. His injury will confine him to the house for several weeks and he will be unable to play with the team. His absence from the position of left half will be greatly felt.

The football enthusiasts exhibit great interest in the Crescent-Orange Athletic Club game this season. The Crescents now have Ohl and Colm of Cornell, King and Brown of Princeton, Pratt and Hasked of Amherst, several Harvard men, and some good material from the neighboring teams. It has been said by an old Princeton player that Wheeler, Holly, and Trenchard of the Princeton team are expected to begin practice at Bay Ridge soon, preparatory to playing regularly with the Crescent team.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Miss Scully, of East Millstone, is visiting Plainfield relatives.

Edward Hooley, of Rockview avenue, has gone to Atlanta, Ga.

Rev. E. L. Hyde, of Hyde Park, Mass., is visiting friends in this city.

Miss Jennie Scelly, of Brooklyn, is visiting friends on East Fifth street.

Letter-Carrier William Sharp has returned to work after enjoying his vacation.

J. H. Havens and family, of Plainfield avenue, will spend the winter in New York.

William Worth, of Grove street went to Philadelphia on a business trip today.

The Misses Anthony, of Crescent avenue, have returned from their European trip.

Miss Bessie Booker, of Richmond, is visiting Miss Dryden, of West Seventh street.

Miss Schenck and Miss Lines, of the borough, were the guests of Dunellen friends yesterday.

Bertram Pittis has successfully entered Columbia college and has now began the study of law there.

SWIFT RETRIBUTION.

HUGO'S ACCOUNT OF AN INCIDENT OF THE RIOTS OF 1830.

How a Cowardly and Unprovoked Murder by a Disguised Police Agent Was Summarily Avenged by Enjolras, a Young Student, Leader of the Mob.

In that wonderful book, "Les Miserables," Victor Hugo devotes considerable space to descriptions of the riots of 1830, which were of such importance that they are often termed a revolution. He was an eyewitness of the events and says of them:

The facts we are going to record belong to that dramatic and living reality which the historian sometimes neglects through want of time and space, but they contain, we insist upon it, life palpitation and human quivering. Small details apparently unimportant are, so to speak, the foliage of great events and are lost in the distance of history.

Bands of rioters, it is well known, resemble a snow ball, and as they roll along agglomerate many tumultuous men who do not ask each other whence they came. Among the passersby who joined the band led by Enjolras, Combeferre and Courfeyrac there was a man wearing a painter's jacket, much worn at the shoulders, who gesticulated and had vociferated and had the appearance of a drunken savage. This man, whose name or nickname was Le Carbuc and entirely unknown to those who pretended to know him, was seated in a state of real or feigned intoxication with four others round a table which they had dragged out of the wineshop. This Carbuc, while making the others drunk, seemed to be gazing thoughtfully at the large house behind the barricade, whose five stories commanded the whole street and faced the Rue St. Denis. All at once he exclaimed:

"Do you know what, comrades, we must fire from that house. When we are at the windows, hang me if any one can come up the street."

"Yes, but the house is closed," said one of the drinkers.

"We'll knock."

"They won't open."

"Then we'll break in the door."

Le Carbuc ran up to the door, which had a very massive knocker, and rapped. As the door was not opened he rapped again, and no one answering he gave a third rap, but the silence continued.

"Is there any one in here?" Le Carbuc shouted. But nothing stirred, and so he seized a musket and began hammering the door with the butt end. It was an old, low, narrow, solid door made of oak, lined with sheet iron inside and a heavy bar, and a thorough postern gate. The blows made the whole house tremble, but did not shake the door. The inhabitants, however, were probably alarmed, for a little square trap window was at length lit up and opened on the third story, and a candle and the gray haired head of a terrified old man who was the porter appeared in the orifice. The man who was knocking left off.

"What do you want, gentlemen?" the porter asked.

"Open the door," said Le Carbuc.

"I cannot, gentlemen."

"Open, I tell you."

"It is impossible, gentlemen."

Le Carbuc raised his musket and took aim at the porter, but as he was below and it was very dark the porter did not notice the fact.

"Will you open—yes or no?"

"No, gentlemen."

"You really mean it?"

"I say no, my kind"—

The porter did not finish the sentence, for the musket was fired. The bullet entered under his chin and came out of his neck after passing through the jugular vein. The old man fell in a heap without heaving a sigh; the candle went out, and nothing was visible save a motionless head lying on the sill of the window and a small wreath of smoke ascending to the roof.

"There," said Carbuc as he let the butt end of the musket fall on the pavement.

He had scarce uttered the word ere he felt a hand laid on his shoulder with the tenacity of an eagle's talon, and he heard a voice saying to him:

"On your knees."

The murderer turned and saw before him Enjolras' white, cold face. Enjolras held a pistol in his hand and had hurried up on hearing the shot fired and clutched with his left hand Le Carbuc's blouse, shirt and suspenders.

"On your knees," he repeated.

And with a sovereign movement the frail young man of 20 bent like a reed the muscular and robust porter and forced him to kneel in the mud. Le Carbuc tried to resist, but he seemed to have been seized by a superhuman hand. Enjolras, pale, bare necked, with his disheveled hair and feminine face, had at this moment I know not what of the ancient Themis. His dilated nostrils, his downcast eyes, gave to his implacable Greek profile that expression of wrath and that expression of chastity which, in the opinion of the old world, are becoming to justice. All the insurgents had hurried up and then ranged themselves in a circle at a distance, feeling that it was impossible for them to utter a word in the presence of what they were going to see. Le Carbuc, conquered, no longer attempted to struggle and trembled all over. Enjolras loosed his grasp and took out his watch.

"Pray or think," he said. "You have one minute to do so."

"Mercy!", the murderer stammered, then hung his head and muttered a few inarticulate execrations.

Enjolras did not take his eyes off the watch. He let the minute pass and then put the watch again in his fob. This done, he seized Le Carbuc by the hair, who clung to his knees, with a yell, and placed the muzzle of the pistol to his ear. Many of those intrepid men who had so tranquilly entered upon the most frightful of adventures turned away their heads. The explosion was heard; the assassin fell on his head on the pavement, and Enjolras drew himself up and look around him with a stern air of conviction. Then he kicked the corpse and said:

Enjolras, silent and collected, his virgin lips closed, stood for some time at the spot where he had shed blood in the motionlessness of a marble statue. His fixed eyes caused people to talk in whispers around him. Jean Prouvaire and Combeferre shook their heads silently, and leaning against each other in an angle of the barricade gazed with admiration, in which there was compassion, at this grave young man, who was an executioner and priest and had at the same time the light and hardness of crystal. Let us say at once that after the action, when the corpses were conveyed to the morgue and searched, a police agent's card was found on Le Carbuc. The writer had in his hands in 1848 the special report on this subject made to the prefect of police in 1832.

APOSITE TEXTS.

SCRIPTURAL SELECTIONS TO FIT SPECIAL OCCASIONS.

They Do Not Always Harmonize, However. Business Men as Well as Clergymen Make Use of the Bible to Point a Moral. Several Pointed Illustrations.

Some clergymen have a peculiar knack of selecting apposite texts for almost every possible occasion, but the most amusing instances of appropriateness are just those undesigned coincidences which sometimes occur when the preacher's intentions are far enough away from any desire to raise a smile.

It is reported of the late Mr. Peter Esslemont, once an M. P. and subsequently chairman of the Scotch fishery board, that when he was appointed provost of Aberdeen he was expected to attend church with the other magistrates, in accordance with the usual custom. Something, however, occurred to detain him, and the congregation was much astonished, and, as may be supposed, not a little amused when the minister gave out as his text, "Now there was no small stir what was become of Peter."

A good story is told of the Rev. J. Bateman, rector of South church, who died not long ago at the advanced age of 91. He was a strong low church partisan, and, much to his displeasure, had a son who favored ritualistic practices. The son had often asked his father to occupy his pulpit, but the father refused for a long time. Ultimately he consented, and when he ascended the pulpit he gave out as his text, "Lord have mercy on my son, for he is a lunatic," and on this rather strong passage based a vigorous attack on his son's tendencies. The feelings of the son may be better imagined than described.

There is a certain vicar of whom it is told that, preaching at a recent cyclist church parade, he took for his text, "The spirit of the living creature is in the wheel." When in an East Yorkshire church a new stove was put in; next Sunday the text given, very appropriately no doubt, was: "Aha! I am warm; I have seen the fire." In the same church when the squire had given warm scarlet cloaks to a dozen poor old women, the clergyman selected as his text, "Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these," which was rather hard on the recipients of the charity.

The story told of the Rev. Dr. Howard, rector of St. George's, Southwark, and chaplain to Princess Augusta, has been frequently quoted, but will bear repetition in this connection. This gentle man was fond of good living and was continually in debt with many of the tradesmen in his parish. Specially for the benefit of his creditors, he one day preached from the text, "Have patience and I will pay you all," expatiating at great length on the virtues of patience, and finally wound up with the words, "I now come to the second part of my discourse, which is 'and I will pay you all,' but that I shall defer to a future occasion."

When the minister was struggling to put on a fourfold extra starched collar and the perspiration was starting from every pore, "Bless the collar," he muttered, "oh, yes, bless it! bless the blessed collar," to him entered his wife, who at this particularly opportune moment propounded the simple enough query, "My dear, what is your text for this morning's sermon?" To which the sorely tried parson replied, in short gasps: "T-Twenty-first v-verse, f-fifty-fifth Psalm. 'The w-words of his m-mouth were s-smoother than b-butter, but w-war w-was in his heart.'"

But not only as the pegs whereon sermons are hung are apposite texts used; they are also brought forward in other connections, of which many instances might be given. When Dr. Pierson was requested to take charge of the Metropolitan Tabernacle some time ago, he communicated his acceptance in a manner both unique and economical. His cablegram ran as follows: "Philemon 22. Pierson," and the text in question reads, "But withal prepare me also a lodging, for I trust that through your prayers I shall be given unto you," the code being thus manifestly a very efficient one.

Texts may be and frequently are wrested very far from their proper use. As an example, take the case of the church going merchant who found that one of his collectors had fraudulently retained some of the money. To the merchant's indignant inquiry as to the meaning of his disgraceful action the bold offender replied that it was the result of his following the injunction of the Bible. Astonished beyond measure, the merchant asked, "What injunction is that?" receiving the reply, "That which reads, 'Hold fast that which is good.' Money is a good thing to hold on to, isn't it?"

Far better was the Glasgow policeman's remark when asked for his views on the subject of police pensions. He said that Burns, when an exciseman, had put them exactly in his famous toast, "Here's to the last verse of the last chapter of the last book of Kings." Nothing more would he say, and his querist on reaching home turned up his Bible and found the passage ran as follows: "And his allowance was a continual allowance given him of the king, a daily rate for every day, all the days of his life."

Early in the century there was a sect of religionists known as the "Ranters." One of the sect, a Newcastle baker, had a tall, strong young man as one of his apprentices. One day the master, displeased with something he had done, laid hold of him and gave him an angry blow with his clinched fist, accompanying the chastisement with the text, "If a man smite thee on the one cheek, turn unto him the other also." But the apprentice, equally versed in Scripture, replying, "With what measure ye mete it shall be measured unto you again," knocked his master down.

A tradesman once defended his habit of charging higher prices to the well to do by quoting the apostolic words, "Charge them that are rich," while an American firm got into trouble by sending out bills to debtors of long standing in black bordered envelopes, bearing in small type in one corner these three texts: "Let us walk honestly," "Owe no man anything," "Many days and years shall ye be troubled," this novel procedure being manifestly an infringement of the law forbidding requests for payment of debts to be sent in envelopes bearing outward evidence of the contents.—Household Words.

Hasheesh.

Hasheesh, or the Indian hemp, is a resinous substance produced from the tops of the plant in India. Some authorities state that it is gathered by men who dress themselves in leather clothing and run to and fro in the hemp fields, afterward scraping off the resin from their garments, while other authorities say that it is gathered by rubbing the tops in the hands and afterward scraping the hands. Its properties are well known.

ADS. IN STREET CARS

A BIG FORTUNE EXPENDED IN THE BUSINESS EVERY YEAR.

An Important Feature With the Advertising Agencies—Handsome Revenue For the Street Car Companies—How the Cities Rank as Desirable Fields.

The yearly expenditure for street car advertising in the United States has grown in five years from $300,000 to $3,000,000 and is constantly increasing.

The street car companies derive a handsome revenue from the leasing of their advertising spaces. One corporation, controlling several good lines in a neighboring city, receives annually $75,000 from this source, and over $65,000 annually is paid for the advertising privileges of the Boston street cars. But Boston is deemed by advertisers an exceptionally desirable field for them. It is indeed considered the best city in the country from this point of view, and Philadelphia ranks next. Chicago is third. Several factors enter into the problem of determining the hypothetical value of either a city or a car line to advertisers. The best line is that patronized most by observant, intelligent, English reading passengers, who have money to spend and are liberal in spending it—in brief, good average Americans, and the city in which those characteristics are distinctive is in like manner held to be best. Even in the several sections of a city, there is a sharp discrimination exercised by the experienced advertiser—as, for instance, between the east and west sides of New York, the latter being deemed worth much more than the former. In this case, the distinction does not imply that there is less intelligence on the east side, or that there is less money perhaps. But a great proportion of the passengers on car lines east of the Bowery are foreigners, many of whom do not read English, and who are habitually frugal in their expenditures for other things than what they deem the necessaries of existence.

As a whole, New York does not rank high in the category of the advertiser's choice, and this is from two causes. In the first place, this city offers abundant space everywhere, on dead walls and billboards, for display advertising, which is not the case now in compactly built up Boston. There such conveniences are to be found only on the outskirts of the city and in the suburbs, and the advertiser has, outside the newspapers, no other means than the street cars of reaching the public. And, in the second place, it is enormously expensive to cover the street car advertising of New York. For $600 one can put a card in every street car in Boston and keep it there for a month. For a similar sum he can cover Philadelphia in like manner. But to put a card in each New York street car, including those on the elevated railways, for a month would cost from $1,800 to $2,000. Consequently advertisers are generally in the habit of making contracts only covering certain specified lines of New York cars and shifting about from one to another.

As a rule, all over the country the advertising privileges of street car lines are primarily leased to local speculators, who sublet the spaces, so far as possible, to local advertisers. It is seldom practicable for them to fill more than one-third, or at most one-half, of the 16 spaces in each car by the exclusively local patronage they are able to command. Then, as they would lose money by allowing the remaining spaces to remain empty, they are anxious to lease on whatever terms they can get all that are left. It would be difficult, if not impossible, for the local speculator in car spaces to deal directly with the big general advertisers, who are scattered all over the country and would not be bothered by a multiplicity of small local contracts, the faithful keeping of which they could in nowise be assured of. He must, therefore, seek an intermediary possessed of the capital to buy his space, the courage to take the risk of filling it, the influence to do so and the system to make sure of getting all the service it contracts for. This is the field of a corporation which now controls all of a great part of the advertising space in 11,380 cars—in New England, 1,551; middle states, 3,807; southern states, 1,494; Pacific states, 970; western states, 4,306, and Canada, 222. Three-fourths of those cars are on trolley lines, and very few in the smallest and most remote places are drawn by horses.

Some difficulty was, at the outset, encountered in the concentration and systemization of all these local fields for the use of the general advertiser, in consequence of the various sizes of car spaces, which necessitated a multiplicity of cards of diverse forms and dimensions. Now, however, car builders have adopted a uniform scale of 16 card spaces, each 11 by 21 inches, which gives ample opportunity for handsome display. And it is indicative of the rapidity with which these handsome, big modern cars have supplanted those of older types that only about 9 per cent of the cars now in use have the old spaces, 10 by 24 inches. Helena, Mon., still has an exceptional dozen having the odd size of 12 by 18 inches. This is a more important matter than might readily be recognized, since many of the cards now prepared for street car display are expensive litho or zinc prints, in colors, artistically designed in form, and balanced in tints and shades to give as much effect as possible. To make them of various sizes would impose an almost prohibitive increase upon their cost.

To have assurance that the cards of its advertisers appear as contracted for the corporation referred to maintains agents in 127 cities, whose duty it is to keep watch upon the car service and make frequent reports of the most elaborate character, setting forth every fact of possible interest in full detail and with the nicest exactitude. The number of each car upon every line in which an advertiser's card appears, the number of days it is in service during the month, and the number of its runs a day and number of passengers carried, any omissions that may occur, the excuses offered for them and the compensatory service rendered, are only some of the matters covered by these reports.—New York Sun.

Against the Cigarette Fiend.

Passengers on the Bay Ridge ferryboats have never tired of looking at Governor's island and making remarks upon its beautiful situation. The other day a small party under the escort of a lieutenant in the army were having pointed out to them the various places of interest on the island.

"What is that little house on the hillside, for?" a young lady asked.

"That is the powder magazine," the lieutenant explained.

"And what is the fence around it for?"

"To keep the officers from throwing their cigarette stumps into the powder," was the solemn reply. The party took it all in seriously, and the lieutenant tipped a sly wink at an old soldier not many feet away.—New York Press.

STRICKEN DOWN SUDDENLY.

MISS MINNIE FRENCH TAKEN ILL AND EXPIRES IN A SHORT TIME.

Attended a Social Last Evening and Retired in a Happy Frame of Mind Only to Awake With Fatal Illness—A Favorite

The angel of death entered the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. M. French, of Craig place, last Tuesday, at an early hour, and removed one of the borough's most esteemed young women, Miss Minnie Jackson French.

For the past two years Miss French has not been in the best of health, but her illness was not considered alarming, as she was always able to be about attending to her duties. Last evening she was present at the reception given by the Dorcas Society, King's Daughters, at the home of Dr. and Mrs. H. H. Lowrie, of Park avenue, and was feeling unusually well. She returned home about ten o'clock and retired an hour later. Nothing was noticed or said to indicate illness. At twelve she was taken suddenly sick and the family was awakened and learned that the illness was a serious one.

Treatment was given, but no relief resulted. Anxiously they watched her until Drs. D. C. Adams and O. L. Jenkins were summoned a little later and were with her, together with the family, till she died at 3:45. Death was caused by congestion of the lungs. The family are grief-stricken over the sudden death of their loved one and the sympathy of the entire community is extended to them in their sad bereavement.

Miss French was born twenty-four years ago in North Plainfield and was the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. M. French. Her entire life was spent in this city, except in the year 1890, when she attended the Woman's College at Baltimore. She was a particular favorite among those who knew her for her loving disposition, Christian character and excellent womanly qualities. In the First M. E. church she was an active member and in the Sunday-school she was a faithful teacher in the primary department.

The funeral services will be held Thursday afternoon at 2:30 from her late home.

MAY BE MADE A WAR SEAT.

UNCLE SAM THINKING OF ESTABLISHING A CAVALRY POST HERE.

The Cavalry on Governor's Island to be Supplanted by a Company of Infantry and the Former May be Moved Here.

Those in this vicinity who are interested in military affairs will be glad to know that the Government is thinking seriously of establishing a military post in Plainfield. The subject has been under consideration for sometime and those who are in a position to know, say that it will be decided upon at an early date.

The government is going to do away with the Cavalry Post at Governor's Island, and station an Infantry Post there in its place.

The cavalry post will then be moved to a point on the Central railroad of New Jersey, and Plainfield appears to be the most desirable from the fact that the country is so level, and the railroad facilities for the quick movement of troops are excellent.

Plainfield is certainly well adapted to the needs of such a post, for plenty of good level ground could be obtained on which the drills could be held. A cavalry post composes about 640 men, including the officers. Then besides a large number of horses are used. If the post should be established here a building will be erected, the cost of which will not be less than a half million. A quartermaster's department would also be established in connection with it.

The advantages of such a post in Plainfield are incalculable and it is sincerely hoped that the government will decide to locate it here.

The location is exceptionally good, and ground could be secured at a reasonably low figure.

PREPARING FOR THE KIRMESS.

The Drills Being Organized and Practice Soon To Begin.

The Kirmess held during the Y. M. C. A. fair last winter was such a great success that the Women's Auxiliary of the Muhlenburg Hospital, in search of some way to raise money for the hospital, have settled upon Kirmess.

It is to be held the second week in November at the Crescent Cycle Academy and promises to be still more of a success than the one last year. The plan will be much the same, only perhaps more elaborate. There will be drills represented to be from all the leading nations and the women of the auxiliary are now hard at work in trying to secure the necessary number of young people to take part in the drills.

To Work at Night.

Street Commissioner Meeker has his men today cleaning up the mud on the principal streets in town. It is his intention to have the steam roller at work on Front street in a few days. The roller will be run nights on the latter street.

FIREMEN'S FAIR A SETTLED THING.

The Committees Meet And All Are In Favor of It.

The firemen's fair is a decided thing and now Plainfield has another big event added to the list to those to look forward to. The committees from the different fire companies met in the parlors of No. 2 Hose Company last evening and organized. L. M. Dunavan was elected chairman, and R. B. Rogers secretary. It was decided to hold a fair, and a committee of four, consisting of Abner Bartlett, of Alerts, Charles Johnson, of No. 1, Charles Smith, of No. 2, and Charles Glenzer, of the Hook & Ladder Company, were appointed to look into the matter of a hall and music. A meeting of the companies will be held Monday evening to give the committee full power. The committee meets Thursday evening.

The fair will probably be held during the first or second week in December in the Crescent Rink. It will last a week and will include dancing.

Better Postal Service.

Commencing October 25th, the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad will run a new fast mail service daily between New York and St. Louis, leaving New York at 4:30 a. m., thus taking the New York daily papers. The new contract is one formerly carried by the N. Y. Central and Pennsylvania Railroads, and is a great feather in the N. J. Central and B. & O. roads. Six hours time will be saved to St. Louis by the new contract.

TALK OF THE TOWN!

AND EXPLANATION WHY

Amos H. VanHorn

LIMITED,

73 Market st., Near Plane Street,

are doing all the business. Our stock is the largest, prices are the lowest and terms the easiest in the city. Just give it a passing thought that you can get an antique oak bedroom suit, 8 pieces, for $15, $20, $25 and $30, including a woven wire bed spring and a mixed mattress. No house in the city offers such inducements.

And then to think again that you can get tapestry Brussels carpet for 50, 60, and 70 cents a yard, made and laid with paper, which is a saving of 15c per yard. Where is there a house in the city that will offer such bargains?

And then imagine and wonder how we can afford to give away a moquette rug or parlor table with a parlor suit for $20, $30, $40 or $50.

Some of our competitors say that our ads are too much sameness and that this ad. is old. Well, we will admit it, but as long as it does the business and saves the people money we will continue to run it.

EMMONS MAY SUE THEM.

MADE ARRANGEMENTS TO FURNISH STONE FOR MACADAMIZING.

He Was the Lowest Bidder, But After Overcoming Unforseen Difficulties Finds That the Borough Will Do the Work.

At the borough council meeting held one week ago Friday night bids were received for the macadamizing of Harrison street from John Emmons, Thos. Doud, Smalley Bros., and J. Y. Wilson. The proposals and specifications contained no clause by the committee to reserve the right to reject any or all bids, and it was generally understood that the work would be let to the lowest bidder. John Emmons' bid was 62 cents per ton for crushed stone; Thomas Doud, 65 cents; Smalley Bros., 75 cents, and J. Y. Wilson, 82½ cents. Mr. Emmons' efforts to purchase stone from the local dealers who run crushers was very unsatisfactory. One firm wanted to charge him 90 cents per ton for stone at the quarry, which they were selling to other parties delivered at 90 cents, and another declined to furnish him stone at any price, while dealers in Scotch Plains and Dunellen treated him likewise. Mr. Emmons could furnish ample security and concluded to hustle on his own account, and knowing parties who owned a movable stone crusher in Warren township paid a visit there and made arrangements for the use of the machine. He also contracted for a twenty-acre lot of mountain property, near Somerset street, which contains stone enough to macadamize all roads in this section. Friday, the chairman of the street committee, Councilman W. C. Smith, informed Mr. Emmons that the committee, which he is chairman, had decided to do the work themselves.

Mr. Emmons is very indignant and is considering whether or not he shall bring suit against the borough for the loss of time and expense that he has been put to in making arrangements to carry out the contract which he expected to receive as the lowest bidder.

The council at its meeting on Friday evening last by a unanimous vote ratified the action of the street committee.

The bids that were furnished the borough council on Friday evening, May 12th, 1895, were as follows: A. I. Smalley, all sizes, 2½, 1½ and 1, with dust, 75 cents a ton; delivered, 93 cts. a ton, with dust. J. Y. Wilson's bid was: top dressing, 90 cents a ton; No. 1, 82½ cents; No. 2, 80 cents; tailings, 75 cents; delivered, at the crusher 10 per cent less. J. Y. Wilson was granted the contract to furnish stone for the borough for the ensuing year.

Why Mrs. Boice Asks a High Price.

Mrs. Josephine Boice states that the reason she asks $1,000 damages for the use of her property for the Watchung avenue extension is that besides 12½ feet which will be cut off the lot, the house will have to be moved six feet and the expense of readjusting the plumbing, building new foundations, etc., justifies, she believes, in asking $1,000 for the property. Though the map does not show that the house will have to be moved, the owner claims that measurements have been taken and it will be necessary.

Tried to Clean Out the Saloon.

John Gorman and Wm. Fahey, a little the worse for liquor, made things lively in Rafferty's saloon on Park avenue Saturday afternoon until Sergeant Kiely marched them off to the lockup. Yesterday afternoon they came up before Judge Coddington, who suspended sentence on both.

John Callahan, who was found drunk on Watchung avenue by Officer Flynn, was treated in the same manner.

The Witness Was Not There.

On account of the absence of one of the most important witnesses the case of the Albany Hardware and Iron Company against Frank S. Rose, of this city, which came up before Judge VanSyckel at Elizabeth, Monday, was adjourned until the next term of the court. W. B. Codington represented the plaintiff and George W. DeMeza acted as counsel for Mr. Rose.

STRUCK A FLOWING WELL.

SCOTT PRESS WORKS TAP THE UNDERGROUND RIVER.

Two Large Steam Pumps Could Not Keep the Water Level Below Twelve Feet—Volume of Cedar Brook Increased By It.

The Scott Printing machine works having found their water supply lower than ever before and requiring an increased supply for their condensing engines concluded to drive a new open well. Having previously experienced the difficulties attending such work they adopted a new plan. Instead of building the walls of the well on a wooden platform and digging the earth from underneath it, as is usually done in sinking large fire wells in this town, they constructed a cast iron cylinder, ten feet in diamater, made up in sections and bolted together so as to form a cylinder ten feet deep, the cylinder having numerous holes, one inch in diamater to let in the water.

On reaching a depth of fifteen feet, a stream was struck running in a southwesterly direction. So great was the flow, the the combined efforts of two large steam power pumps, and a three inch steam syphon, could not keep the water below a level of twelve feet. On starting up their condenser pump, which has a piston of 16 inches in diameter the water level was reduced to fifteen feet. Under this conditon the well was sunk to depth of twenty feet, working in five feet of water.

Cedar brook is completely dry north of the Scott Works. The flow during this week in the lower end of the stream has come from the pumps of the Scott Works, running day and night.

NOT A POLITICAL BATTLE.

FANWOOD BOROUGH'S FIRST ELECTION A NEIGHBORLY CONTEST.

Three Tickets in the Field—All But Two of the Independents Elected—T. S. Young is the New Mayor—Other Officers.

The new borough of Fanwood held their election Tuesday. Politics did not seem to figure prominently in the contest, it being more of a neighborly fight for supremacy.

The greatest struggle was between Thomas S. Young and Benj. Urner for mayor, and Ambrose I. Harrison and Alfred Beeken for member of the council.

There were three tickets in the field, the Independent, Conservative and Citizens. The Independent ticket was elected with the exception of Harrison for member of council. Beeken being the choice, receiving 38 votes. Harrison received 36. Benj. Urner received 33 votes for mayor, and Thos. S. Young 37. Below will be found the result:

Mayor, Thomas S. Young, 37.

Councilmen, George Kyte, 62; Harry C. Christianson, 72; Ambrose I. Harrison, 36; Alfred McKown, 41.

The trophy which he will receive if he is successful is a valuable one, but will remain his only as long as he maintains the record. He will be paced by the Hy-Lo tandems. The probable riders on the tandems are: R. G. Betts and A. Oatman; R. H. Butsch and J. Nonnenbacher; A. J. and W. N. Thompson; J. W. Foster, Jr. and E. Fischer.

Great Catch of Eels.

On Monday morning and early on Tuesday morning there was nearly 300 pounds of eels taken from the forebay at Sebring's Mills. They clogged the wheel which furnishes power for one of the dynamos, and no one can ever remember of such a large amount of eels ever being before taken in this section of the State. Old fishermen say that the fish run up streams in the early spring and return to the rivers late in the fall. Mr. Sebring's friends were furnished with eels enough to last for several days. They were all large ones, and much labor was exerted in capturing them.

THEIR THREATS MADE GOOD.

BOROUGH WILL INSTITUTE SUITS FOR GREEN BROOK POLLUTION.

Counselor Reed So Instructed By the Borough Board of Health—A Red Hot Letter as to the City's Health Board.

The Borough Board of Health Monday made good their threats of taking legal action against thore who are emptying sewage into Green brook. Besides the city being made a defendant in a suit, all other private citizens whose sewage empties into the brook will also be involved in actions to punish them under a State law of 1893 which provides a fine of $1,000 or two years imprisonment for violations thereof.

This action was taken at a full board meeting last night when a set of resolutions were introduced and unanimously passed instructing Borough Counsel Charles A. Reed to institute suits against all who run sewage into the brook, and asking the Borough Council to co-operate with them in the prosecution.

Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh was also talked with and asked what most probable line of defense the city would offer in any action brought by the borough. All that Mr. Marsh would say was:

"The city especially forbade the running of any sewage into Greenbrook as soon as the law of 1893 was enacted, and the city cannot be held responsible for the acts of private citizens."

The city sewer was built several years ago and up to the time the law prohibiting the polution of any public stream was passed, collected an annual tax, but since that time those who had connections have paid nothing.

The borough Board of Health have prepared the following letter for publication to set forth their side of the case:

As is well known, the citizens of the borough have for years vainly protested against Plainfield's sewering into Green brook, and have especially objected to the Watchung avenue sewer, which begins at the erstwhile Elkwood Hotel, and runs through North and Watchung avenues to the brook. In January, 1893, at our request, there was a joint meeting of the two Health Boards over which Mayor Gilbert presided, and at which the Plainfield board agreed to have all house connections with the brook severed on their side, and also to flush the Watchung avenue sewer twice daily, thus reducing to a minimum the evils arising from said sewer. To the best of our knowledge and belief, no such flushing has ever taken place, and the sewer's condition today is worse than it was when the agreement to flush it was made. Six months thereafter, having good and sufficient reason for believing that many house connections on the Plainfield side had not been severed, our Board employed two reliable men to examine the raceway from its outlet near Grove street to French's mill, and there were discovered thirty-one connections, nineteen of which were in active operation. We afterwards understood that the city's Street Commissioner made an examination for himself and found one more connection than our agents discovered. When notice of these connections was furnished to the Plainfield board, they promised to remedy the evil, but the work was imperfectly done, as an examination four months thereafter clearly showed. Another notice was sent to them, after which we were told the connections were all severed.

Last summer, believing it to be necessary to free the brook from the weed that grew rank between the Grove street and Washington avenue bridges, forming a resting place for the sewage matter that found its way into the brook, we, on our own responsibility, and at the time assuming all the expense, had the said weeds dug out, and the stream thoroughly washed out by the Warren Engine Company, under the supervision of one of our own members. Half of the expense was finally paid by the Plainfield board. A few months ago, deeming the condition of the brook to be again inimical to the public health, we requested the Plainfield health board to cleanse the stream, informing them that we believed that all connections on our side had been severed, and that the unhealthy condition that existed was due to the actions of citizens on their side, and should therefore be remedied by them, but the board refused to take any action. We then appealed to the Common Council, as the public know.

As to the statement that there are more house connections on the borough side than on the city side, we have the assurance both of our present and late health inspectors that there is not a single house connection on our side. Of course it is possible that we are mistaken, but if any reliable information is furnished us that there is a single connection of that kind, we promise to have it severed within a week, or suit commenced against the offender. But even if every house in North Plainfield, contiguous to the brook, should empty its sewage into its waters, it would not pollute them as much as does the Watchung avenue sewer alone.

As to the dump on the Borough side of Watchung avenue, it consists of one or two small loads of rags, with some tinware thrown there one night between ten and eleven o'clock by a Jew, who left next morning for parts unknown. Its condition is about the same as the Plainfield side. As to the statement that no complaint concerning the brook's condition has been made by those living on Front street, we can easily prove that the contrary is true.

When a mayor publicly confesses that the city over which he presides has for years been violating a State law, he having full knowledge of the existence of said law, and of the complaints against its violation, it ill becomes him to attack his law-abiding neighbors, who in the conscientious discharge of their bounden duty are striving to protect the community from an evil that depreciates the value of property, endangers health, and jeopardizes life.

HUMOR AND PATHOS AMUSE.

CAPTAIN CRAWFORD CAN TELL A FUNNY STORY IN A FUNNY WAY.

The Poet Scout Says the Yellow Covered Novel Has Carried Many a Boy to Ruin—Philosopher as Well as Story Teller

If the rest of the star course of entertainments of the Y. M. C. A. this winter are as enjoyable as the first, the association hall will be far too small to hold the throng that will gather there to attend them. The first of the course was held last Tuesday, and for over two hours Captain Jack Crawford, better known as "The Poet Scout," either sent his audience into roars of laughter or almost brought the tears to their eyes. He kept their attention throughout the evening, and that his entertainment was much enjoyed, was shown by the hearty applause that burst forth on every possible occasion. Capt. Crawford certainly has the faculty of entertaining an audience, for from the moment that he came on the stage everyone in the hall was all attention. His dialect stories were especially well told. He began his entertainment by starting to tell how he came to give his first public entertainment, but diverged from the subject to tell of the squirrel hunting exploits of a stuttering young man, which at once sent his hearers into roars of laughter. He recited several of his own quaint poems, the spirit of pathos in which touched the hearts of his hearers. He told of some of his varied experiences among the Indians and the rough characters of the "wild and fuzzy west," as he termed it.

He spoke strongly against the writers of the dime novels and the bogus great Indian killers which have excited the imagination of the youth of the land and started them on the road to ruin. The prisons of the west, he said, were filled with eastern boys who had been led astray by these false representations of life in the west.

It would be impossible to tell any of the amusing and pathetic tales with which he kept his audience spell bound, as they lose their force when coming from the lips of any but the "Poet Scout," but certainly in all the crowd that comfortably filled the hall, there was no one who did not enjoy himself and was not sorry when Captain Crawford said good night.

During the evening he introduced Prof. Spencer, an old and valued comrade of the plains, who gave several delightful selections on the violin and guitar. During the course of the evening, Captain Crawford gave one of "Pony Bill's" quaint cowboy sermons.

Captain Crawford appeared dressed in regular cowboy fashion with a six-shooter placed in his belt which he handled in an apparently careless manner while illustrating some of his stories.

As the two hours drew to a close he told how Wild Bill killed two soldiers who tried to rob him of his earnings. One was seated opposite him at a table and the other one behind him, so the story ran, and both drew their revolvers as a pretext for a quarrel was found.

"His only way," said Captain Crawford, "was to shoot the man opposite him and then shoot over his shoulder at the other soldier, like this," and the next instant everybody in the hall jumped as he fired two shots from his revolver very rapidly, one to the front and the other over his shoulder. The last was pointed in the direction of a little boy in the gallery, who was almost asleep, and when the bang came the lad sprang into the air in a most surprised manner.

"I didn't say that I was going to do it before, for the ladies might have fretted, you know," the smiling speaker explained. Then, after a few closing words, he bade his audience good evening.

THE GRADUATING CLASS MEET.

The Class of '96 at Leal's School Select Colors and a Pin.

The class of '96 of Leal's School held a meeting Thursday afternoon, and Raymond A. McGee was chosen chairman. The meeting was called to select class colors and pin. It was decided that each member should bring in at the next meeting his favorite combination of colors and that several of the most popular should be sent to designer to get up designs for a pin. William Tracy was elected President of the class. Another meeting will probably be held next week.

Every mother should know that croup can be prevented. The first symptom of true croup is hoarseness. This is followed by a peculiar rough cough. If Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is given freely as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even after the cough has developed it will prevent the attack. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, corner Park and North avenues.

FROM A FAMILY OF PUGILISTS.

PETER JACKSON, THE GREAT, HAS A COUNTERPART IN THIS CITY.

A Colored Acquaintance Called Olmstead Jackson Sundry Names, and He Promptly Divested Himself of Apparel and Fought.

Two colored men who are employed by prominent West Seventh street residents had a lively little scrap last Friday and last Monday the aggressor, Olmstead Jackson, appeared before Judge Coddington at his office in the Babcock building. His story was that while passing by the corner of Seventh and Liberty streets Henry Carter, who works in one of the neighboring houses, called him insulting names. Now Jackson is not a little man, but evidently comes from the same family as the great pugilist of the same name, judging from the appearance of the other man's face. Jackson took off his coat, hat, collar and necktie and went for the other darkey. According to his own story the reception was not very pleasant and his opponent whacked him over the head with a stick.

"Where is the mark on your head where you were struck with the stick," asked Sergeant Kiely. The negro hummed and hawed and scratched his head as if to find the dent.

"It's on the stick, probably," remarked the Judge.

The stories of the two colored men were so conflicting that it was impossible to learn very much about the quarrel except from those who viewed it at a distance.

The Judge finally decided that Jackson was in the wrong and gave him his choice of paying $15 to the city or visiting Elizabeth for sixty days. Jackson did not care to go visiting so he paid his fine.

The other prisoner who came before the Judge was Harry Honan, one of sewer contractors. He paid off a gang of Italians at the corner of Front street and Park avenue Saturday evening and the men, in their hurry to secure their ducats, took up all the sidewalk. Honan was charged with obstructing the sidewalk, but the Judge decided that he was not guilty and discharged him.

AN APOSTLE OF HYPOCRISY.

The Sweat Shop News Editor in an Ridiculous Position.

That apostle of hypocrisy, the News, whose editor cries for protection to the American mechanic and then employs compositors whom he pays $2.50 a week and docks at a $12 week rate for lost time, put itself in a ridiculous position Monday with its much vaunted claims of accuracy, when it printed the report of Dr. Rodman's anniversary. Last Thursday The Daily Press exclusively announced the completion of twenty-five years of service by the eminent rector, and in the article relative thereto erroneously printed that of the original 122 communicants in the church when Dr. Rodman assumed the pastorate, only two remained. It should have been of the 122 ministers in the diocese of New Jersey only two still remained in the service besides Dr. Rodman. But the News editor, who runs his office on sweat shop principles by making his reporters do the work of four ordinary men, thought it would be cheaper to filch from the Daily Press of Thursday than to assign a reporter to the anniversary services. Hence the mistake that stamps him as an apostle of hypocrisy.

—The committees from the Red Men on securing a new wigwam are still at work and a report is expected in a short time.

There is no medicine so often needed in every home and so admirably adapted to the purposes for which it is intended, as Chamberlain's Pain Balm. Hardly a week passes but some member of the family has need of it. A toothache or headache may be cured by it. A touch of rheumatism or neuralgia quieted. The severe pain of a burn or scald promptly relieved and the sore healed in much less time than when medicine has to be sent for. A sprain may be promptly treated before inflammation sets in, which insures a cure in about one-third of the time otherwise required. Cuts and bruises should receive immediate treatment before the parts become swollen, which can only be done when Pain Balm is kept at hand. A sore throat may be cured before it becomes serious. A troublesome corn may be removed by applying it twice a day for a week or two. A lame back may be cured and several days of valuable time saved or a pain in the side or chest relieved without paying a doctor bill. Procure a 50 cent bottle at once and you will never regret it. OLD SCARLETT'S BURIAL PLACE.

In Peterborough Cathedral, of Which He Had Been Sexton Many Years.

If the visitor to Peterborough cathedral enters the building through the famous west entrance, which has so often, and with good reason, been called the most magnificent portico, not only in England, but in all Europe, and turns abruptly to the left, before proceeding down the nave, he will see upon the wall before him a striking portrait and quaint inscription which mark the burial place of old Scarlett, under the floor of the cathedral, just beneath.

The tombstone, set in the floor, explains, as the inscription on the wall says that it will, that he died in 1594, aged 98 years. His office, that of sexton of the cathedral and the town, is indicated by the keys which he carries and by the spade, pickax and skull beside him. A close examination of the picture shows a leathern whip hanging from his belt, and it seems that the reason for this was that one of the duties of his office was to look after truant and naughty children. It is in connection with this that he is described as having a "scarebabe mighty voice," and it is interesting to note that this is the only record of the use of the word "scarebabe" known in the English language.

The statement that "he has interred this town's householders in his life's space twice over" does not mean that he resurrected and reinterred them, but merely that his own length of life, 98 years, was so great that he buried two generations of his neighbors. All this might have been true of old Scarlett, though, and he have been forgotten long ago, were it not for the fact referred to in the line "He had interred two queens within this space." These were Katherine of Aragon, buried here in 1536, and Mary, queen of Scots, in 1587. It was a strange chance which sent for burial to this same church the bodies of those two unhappy, foreign born queens, perhaps the most pathetic figures in all English history.

Queen Mary's mutilated body was brought here as the nearest suitable church to Fotheringay castle, where she was beheaded, only a few miles distant. Her body lay here for about 25 years, until her son, then become James I of England, had it removed to Westminster Abbey. There still hangs, framed and glazed, upon a pillar near the vault where she was buried, the letter which King James sent to the dean of Peterborough, asking for the removal of the body.

The burial place of Queen Katherine is unmarked except for a small brass plate in the floor bearing her name. When King Henry VIII was asked why he did not build her a suitable monument, he is said to have replied that he left her the grandest monument which ever woman had, meaning the cathedral which, in his war against the Catholic churches, he spared because she was buried there.—New York Times.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

The Minister Thought There Was a Good Deal Before He Finished the Job.

Just after the battle of Perryville, in October, 1862, Dr. Savage, a strong Union man, was at one of his appointments to baptize some children. There was a large crowd, and a southern matron brought her four children to the altar.

"Name this child," said the Union preacher, laying his hand on the child's head.

"Simon Bolivar Buckner," was the reply, which caused a smile to come over the congregation, but the brave preacher went on with his duty.

"Name this child," taking the next in order.

"Pierre Gustav Toutant Beauregard," and the smile grew into a snicker, while Dr. Savage became red in the face. He baptized the young namesake of the engineer soldier and went on with the ceremony.

"Name this child," he gasped, reaching for the third.

"Albert Sidney Johnson," came the answer.

The smile became audible. Heaving a sigh of relief, he took the fourth, a girl, whose gender he fondly supposed would preclude a continuation of heroic reproductions, and said:

"Name this child."

"Mary Stonewall Jackson Lee," came the response that set the congregation into a roar, while the Union parson thought he had held in his arms the whole Southern Confederacy.—Troy Times.

British Columbia Lakes.

Little Shuswap lake is stated to have a flat bottom, with a depth varying from 58 to 74 feet, measured from the mean high water mark. The deepest water found in the Great Shuswap was 555 feet, about six miles northward from Cinnemousun narrows in Seymour Arm, though the whole lake is notably deep. Adams lake, however, exceeds either of the Shuswaps, as its average depth for 20 miles is upward of 1,100 feet, and at one point a depth of 1,900 feet was recorded. In the northwest corner of this lake, at a depth of 1,118 feet, the purpose of the scientific explorers was defeated by the presence of mysterious submarine currents, which played with the sounding line like some giant fish and prevented any measurements being taken.

It is a complete mystery how the currents could have been created at this depth, and scientific curiosity will no doubt impel either public or private enterprise to send a second expedition to the scene this summer to endeavor to solve the riddle. As the height of the surface of this lake is 1,380 feet above the sea level, its present bed is therefore only 190 feet above the sea, although distant 200 miles from the nearest part of the ocean. Dr. Dawson and his associates believe that the beds of some of the mountain lakes in the region are many feet lower than the sea level.—Vancouver World.

To Keep Bread Fresh.

In Swiss and German farmhouses, where the baking takes place once a fortnight or certainly at fairly long intervals, such a thing as unpleasantly stale bread is almost unknown. It is put away in a peculiar manner, which tends to preserve its freshness. Sprinkle flour freely into an empty flour sack, and into this pack the loaves, being careful to have the top crusts of two loaves touching. Where they have to lie bottom to bottom sprinkle flour between them. Tie up the sack and hang it up in an airy place, not against a wall, but so that it can swing. The day before the loaf is wanted take it out, brush off the flour and stand it in the cellar overnight. In this way bread remains edible for three or four weeks.

His Apology.

"You ought to have apologized to the lady for stepping on her foot," said his mother, after the caller had gone.

"I did," answered Willie. "I told her I was sorry she couldn't keep her feet out of my way."—London Tit-Bits.

GENERAL FOR FIFTEEN MINUTES.

In Command of the Army of the Potomac While Grant Got a Mint Julep.

The cobbler who mended my shoes was named Bigly, and he was always called general, which somehow did not quite comport with my idea of the cobbler. True, he had been a soldier during the whole of the rebellion, but just what kind of a soldier I did not know. True, also, he had lost his leg at Gettysburg, but it was a dozen years after the war in the accidental upset of a traction engine dragging a thrashing machine into the field. Still he was "General Bigly" in the common parlance, and one day I asked him about it.

"Weren't you in the army?" I inquired.

"Yes, sir," he answered proudly and promptly.

"See much fighting?"

"From April, 1861, to September, 1865."

"I notice that everybody calls you general. What was your rank? Were you a general?"

"I was in command of the Army of the Potomac, sir," he said, as truthful in tone as any man I ever heard speak.

"Oh, come," I laughed, "I never heard of a General Bigly in command of that army. You are giving me guff, as the boys say."

"It's true as gospel," he insisted.

"Tell me about it, if it's all the same."

"Well, you see, it was this way," he said, pegging away at the shoe in his lap, and not looking squarely at me. "I was in the Army of the Potomac when General Grant took charge, and I was a sergeant. I used to know the general out in Galena when he wasn't so much, and he was mighty friendly with me and made me his orderly. I used to go every place with him, riding over the field and that kind of thing, and sometimes there wasn't nobody but me and the general riding around for miles together. Well, one day we had rode out along the road and we come to a little place where a man lived that could make the finest mint julep in the whole state of Virginny. I knowed about the place and so did the general, and when we struck it, I could kinder see his mouth watering, for mint juleps didn't grow on trees in them days in Virginny. When we got opposite the gate, the general sorter stopped his hoss and looked over at me, and I shut down one eye soft and easy.

"'Bill,' says he—he always called me Bill in private—'Bill, will you do me a favor?'

"'Anything on top of earth, general,' says I. 'What is it?'

"'Will you be kind enough to take command of the army while I go in here and get a mint julep?'

"'Of course I will, general,' says I, straightening my back as if I had a ramrod stuck down it and coming to a salute.

"'Thanks,' says he, 'and please hold my hoss at the same time.'

"'Then he went in, and for about 15 minutes I sat there on my hoss like Napoleon crossing the Rubicon and was in command of the Army of the Potomac, and ever since that time the boys have called me 'General,' and I didn't see any use of saying they shouldn't."—Washington Star.

TO BE IN GOOD SOCIETY.

Culture and Refinement to Have Precedence Over Birth and Rank.

High moral character and education, whether it be of booklore or that of observation and good example, polish of manner and good habits, are the requisites of good society. One whose ideas of social equality were rather democratic than exclusive was heard to remark, "One man is born just as good as another and a great deal better than some." Unless the son of a gentleman be a gentleman he is no more entitled to the name suggesting refinement than a man is entitled to the name of general whose father before him was a general. One must win his own laurels or go uncrowned.

Birth to a marked degree is an accident, and those who are considered to be well born are ofttimes the most objectionable elements of society and the most dangerous associates. One need but watch closely the daily record of those on both sides of the Atlantic whose birth gives them prestige in society, to prove that education and cultivation of high morals and manners go farther toward making refined society than all the good or blue blood that ever flowed through the veins of royalty and the nobility. Of course, it would be the height of absurdity to argue that all men are born equal and it would be as illogical to argue against the superiority of blooded animals of the race course over the ordinary draft horse. However, the nobility of culture and refinement should have precedence over the nobility of birth and rank.—Philadelphia Press.

An Odorless Region.

"In that country once known as the 'Great American Desert,' embracing a portion of Texas and Arizona, there are no odors," said a citizen of Dallas to a reporter. "There luscious grapes and many other fruits grow, especially near the cross timber country, but there is no perfume; wild flowers have no smell, and carcasses of dead animals, which in dry seasons are very plentiful, emit no odor. It was always supposed to be a treeless plain, upon which no plant could grow or breathing thing could live, but a large part of it is now successfully cultivated, and but for the rarity of the atmosphere, causing the peculiarity I have named, and the mirages, which are even more perfect than in the desert of Sahara, no one would look upon it as a barren country now. Another singular feature common to the desert land is that objects at a great distance appear greatly magnified. A few scraggy mesquite bushes will look like a noble forest. Stakes driven into the ground will seem like telegraph poles."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Veracious.

A young man whose veracity is unimpeachable tells the following touching story to the Monticello (Fla.) Constitution: On a plantation a few miles from the city there lived in great felicity a pair of ducks. But the old drake, being of a rather pugnacious disposition, was sentenced to be shot. Several hours after the sentence was executed his mate was observed to droop, and shortly thereafter she died, unquestionably of a broken heart. The truth of this story is vouched for.

The Spectroscope.

In ordinary chemical analysis the one hundred and twentieth of a grain approaches very nearly the lowest limit of practical determination. The spectroscope, however, is so sensitive that it can tell the presence of a substance when the quantity is nearly 2,000,000 times less than this, or one two hundred and forty millionth of a grain.

God overrules all mutinous accidents, brings them under his laws of fate and makes them all serviceable to his purpose. —Marcus Antonius.

CYCLING WHEN SNOW FLIES.

THE OLD CRESCENT RINK NOW A MODERN BICYCLE ACADEMY.

The Floor Placed in the Building and Extensive Arrangements Made for Winter Riding—Will Prove Popular.

The largest cycle academy in the vicinity of New York, or in any of the Eastern States for that matter, is to be opened in the old Crescent Rink building on Watchung avenue, on October 15th, under the name of the Crescent Cycle Academy. The proprietor of this new enterprise is Joseph Wiseman, who made such a success of the cycle academy at Asbury Park of late years, giving with the aid of his assistants, seven thousand lessons in the three summer months this year.

The main room in the old rink building is to be used for riding and instructions, and it has assumed an entirely new appearance. The hall is 80x125, and is now floored over with yellow pine, which has been laid on a level with the raised platform around the outer edge. Arc lights will be used for the illumination, and at the rear end of the hall special bath and toilet rooms have been constructed, while the entire woodwork has been repainted.

The centre part of the floor will be partioned off by a railing and in here the instructions will be given. In this department a corps of competent instructors composed of Milton Clemenson, Harry Wiseman, James Woodward, Hugh Decker, Alex. Decker, Fred Barker and Walter Jerome, will be in charge. They were employed at Asbury Park by Mr. Wiseman during the summer and are thoroughly versed in the art of teaching. They are a gentlemanly corps and are at the top of their profession.

The space outside of the railing will be reserved for cyclists who know how to ride and a feature will be made of winter riding. The room to the left of the entrance hall will be reserved for storing wheels, and those who care for winter riding may leave their wheels there and ride in the hall whenever they so desire. Wheels also may be hired for riding. To the left of the entrance to the hall will be the repairing department, which will be completely equipped with all the latest machinery needed in that line. Special care will be devoted to this department which will be under the supervision of Roy James, an expert machinest.

Work is now in progress at the entrance where a sales room is to be placed, which will be in charge of the genial Robert Wyckoff, who is well known to the cycling fraternity in this city.

Mr. Wiseman has leased the building for three years from its present owner, Charles H. Hand, who has put the building into a first-class condition before turning it over to Mr. Wiseman.

FUNERAL OF B. E. GAVIN.

Last Sad Rites Over the Remains of a Respected Man.

The funeral of the late ex-Street Commissioner Benjamin E. Gavin, who passed away at his parents residence on Columbia avenue, North Plainfield, on Monday, took place this morning in St. Joseph's R. C. church, when the pastor, Rev. Father Miller, paid a glowing tribute to the deceased before a large number of relatives and friends who were there assembled.

Mr. Gavin was only a few days beyond thirty years of age and was a very popular young man. The scene at his bedside when the end came and the vital sparks of life were parting was very pathetic. He breathed his last in his mothers arms and his death was peaceful.

Mr. Gavin spent last winter in the south where he had gone for the benefit of his health and returned to his home in North Plainfield late in the spring, where he has since resided.

A devoted and a fond and loving mother and an affectionate sister have been tireless in their constant attention to his wants. Mr. Gavin was engaged to be married to an estimable young lady whose attentive care was greatly appreciated by the deceased. The home ties of Mr. Gavin were those of a faithful, honest and a favorite son. The floral offerings were numerous. The body was interred in St. Mary's cemetery and an unusually large number of carriages followed the remains to their last resting place. The pall bearers were John McLaughlin, David T. Kenney, George Hughes, John Daly, John Powers and W. H. Meaney.

Those Awful Italians.

Complaints are made frequently that Italians gather Sundays on the first mountains near Johnson's Drive and spend the day in shooting.

It is reported that last Sunday one Italian was seen in that vicinity with twenty-one robins which he had shot. As it is unlawful to shoot robins, these people should be looked after, and the incessant Sunday shooting should be stopped.

TALKS AND HANDSHAKES.

That Is How the Somerset Republican Ended Their Convention.

The coroners nominated yesterday by the Republicans at their convention at Somerville were Adonis Nelson, of Branchburg township, Abram P. Mosher, of Montgomery township, and Aaron Stillwell, of Bridgewater township. Assembly Candidate C. A. Reed was brought before the convention and made a speech. He paid an excellent tribute to the Democratic candidate for Governor, Chancellor McGill. He was loudly encored. Frank Somers, the nominee for County Clerk, also spoke to the delegates. Chairman Place used for a gavel a small piece of wood and specially asked the reporters to not notice the same, which of course they will not do. The afternoon session was quite largely attended and one who did as much handshaking as anyone there was the Democratic candidate for Sheriff, Calvin D. McMurtry, who was all over and everywhere.

Over Thirty Thousand Dollars Sent to Foreign Fields During the Past Year—Missionary Pierson Speaks—New Officers.

At 1:30 Thursday afternoon in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church the eighteenth annual meeting of the Woman's Synodical Society of Foreign Missions in the Synod of New Jersey was called to order by the president, Mrs. W. P. Stevenson, of Roselle. After the usual devotional exercises and a prayer by Mrs. R. H. Young, of Matawan, the roll was called by the Recording Secretary, Mrs. Paul Babcock, of Montclair. The minutes of the last meeting were then read by the recording secretary. The report of the Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. Chalmers Martin, of Princeton, showed that during the past eighteen years over $1,000,000 had been raised by the New Jersey Society for foreign missions, and that during the past year over $30,000 had been collected.

Miss E. M. Colton, of Elizabeth, the treasurer, did not present her report owing to illness which detained her at home.

Mrs. C. N. Thrope, of Philadelphia, was then introduced and spoke words of greeting which she brought from the Philadelphia society. Her remarks were exceedingly interesting.

Rev. George Pierson, of Japan, followed with a very fine address on the work in Japan. He told the women in an interesting manner how the work of saving souls was progressing, of the discouragments that were met and how they were overcome. After the singing of a hymn, Mrs. George Pierson addressed the society telling of her work from an educational standpoint. She related many personal incidents in connection with her school life in Japan.

The nominating committee presented the list of officers selected for the next year, and they were elected as follows: President, Mrs. W. P. Stevenson, Roselle; Vice-Presidents, Monmouth Presbytery, Mrs. Joel Parker, Freehold. Mrs. R. H. Young, Matawan; Jersey City Presbytery, Mrs. S. R. Forman, Jersey City, Mrs. J. H. Owens, Paterson; New Brunswick Presbytery. Mrs. J. J. Davidson, New Brunswick, Miss Mary S. Gummere, Trenton; Newton Presbytery, Miss S. D. Thompson, Newton, Miss Isabel Stewart, Washington; West Jersey Presbytery, Mrs. S. E. Ware, Salem. Mrs. John Moore, Clayton; Elizabeth Presbytery, Mrs. Petrie, Plainfield, Mrs. H. C. Folger, Elizabeth; Newark Presbytery, Miss A. M. Carter, Newark, Mrs. William I. Rusling, Newark; Morris and Orange Presbytery, Mrs. Robert Aikman, Madison, Mrs. R. L. S. Paton, East Orange; Corresponding-Secretary, Mrs. Chalmers Martin, Princeton; Recording Secretary, Mrs. Paul Babcock, Montclair; Treasurer, Miss E. M. Colton, Elizabeth.

The question "Is the Synodical Useful and Helpful?" which was laid over from last year for decision was brought up at this time, and a unanimous vote in the affirmative resulted.

A resolution, thanking the women of the Crescent Avenue church for their generous hospitality in the use of the church and the entertainment provided, was also unanimously adopted.

After singing a hymn, the benediction was pronounced by Rev. Dr. Richards and the meeting was brought to a close.

The society decided to accept the invitation to meet in Paterson, October 12th, 1896.

Adjourned Until Monday.

"ME WANT NO LAWYER."

AN ITALIAN ARGUES HIS OWN CASE IN POLICE COURT.

But It Was An Argument that Contractor Honan Had to Interpret to the Court—Pays His Fine and Reforms.

The trial of the four Italians, who were arrested Sunday for general disorder, was set down for last Monday at ten o'clock at the city court. Yesterday morning Walter L. Hetfield, representing the Italians, asked for a jury trial, but as Captain Grant did not return until almost evening a jury could not be summoned in time. Judge Coddington then postponed the trial until next Friday at ten o'clock and granted the request of Counsel Hetfield that his witnesses be paid for appearing today.

Then Michael Honan, one of the sewer contractors, said that two of the men, who were in his employ, wanted to come up at once as they had no lawyer. The Judge looked rather surprised and so did Lawyer Hetfield.

"I understood that you represented all of them," remarked Judge Coddington.

"So did I," answered the lawyer.

"Oh no!" shouted out 'Billie Williams,' one of the two Italians, "I ask no lawyer, I want no lawyer. I haven't done nothing, I not fight or be drunk, what I want a lawyer for?"

"I was asked to defend all four, but if they do not wish it, why all right," said Lawyer Hetfield, and left the two prisoners to their fate.

"Now tell me what happened," said the Judge to "Billie Williams."

The question brought out a storm of expostulations and exclamations which the Italians rattled off at a three-minute gait. It was half Italian and half English, so Michael Honan, who understood the drift of the eloquent address, explained it to the Court. The men had been to a christening and had been drinking a little, dancing and having a good time, as they understood it.

"Were you ever arrested before?" queried the Judge.

"No arrest in this place at all" gabbered the Italian. "Was once at Chester."

"How was that?" said the Judge.

"I was a little drunk like, you know," and Billie grinned.

The Judge gave them their choice between paying $3 apiece or going to jail for ten days. Honan gave them the money to pay the fine, and as "Billie" laid it down on the Judge's desk, he said, with a grin from ear to ear, "I tender it with much pleasure to you." The Judge smiled back and dismissed them.

"Me no more dance" confided the irrepressible Billie to Captain Grant.

"Much obliged to you, sir. Good bye!" he shouted as he followed his companion out of the courtroom.

CAPTAIN HUBBARD AN OFFICER.

The Plainfield Veteran Elected Vice President of the Volunteers.

The fifth reunion of the thirtieth New Jersey Volunteers took place at Rahway Thursday. The city was decorated to welcome them and every house along the line of march was draped with the National colors. One hundred and sixty veterans were present in the Opera House at 11 o'clock, when the meeting was called to order. The Rev. T. C. Mayham, of Rahway, offered up the opening prayer. Among the speakers were Comrade Brown, Captain Lanning, Comrade Wambolt and Comrade Branson, of the First New Jersey Cavalry. After the speakers came a distribution of badges. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Colonel Teneyck, of Somerville; Vice President, Captain Hubbard, of Plainfield; Secretary, and Treasurer, Captain Bowman, of South Bend. The 30th Volunteers was mustered in September, 1862. The first Colonel was J. M. Donaldson, at that time editor of "The Somerset County Messenger." He was succeeded by J. J. Cladek, of Rahway. The regiment suffered severe losses at Chancellorsville and Antietam, and fought with great bravery throughout the war.

Progressive Women.

The Plainfield Branch Alliance of Unitarians and Other Liberal Christian Women announces for the coming year a course of study as follows: November 12th, Lydia Maria Child; December 10th, Margaret Fuller and Sister Dora; January 14th, Lucretia Mott; February 11th, Helen Hunt Jackson; March 10th, Frances Power Cobbs; April 14th, Dorothea Dix. As in previous years an opportunity will be given after each paper for general informal discussion, and it is anticipated that much pleasure and benefit will be derived from the course. Meetings will be held on the second Tuesday afternoon of each month at three o'clock, and visitors are always welcome.

To no one is there more credit due for bringing the Christian Endeavor State convention to Plainfield in 1896 than E. E. Anthony. His efforts have been most persistent, and his arguments especially persuasive.

OSNARTIO CONVICTED.

DeMeza Did His Best, But the Testimony Was Too Strong.

One of the most exciting criminal cases that has come up before the Somerset County Circuit Court this term at Somerville was finished yesterday afternoon. It was the trial of the Italian, Angelo Osnartio, who was charged with highway robbery and the assault of Miss Wyckoff. The trial lasted two days and was held before Judge Bartine, two lay judges and a jury. The State was represented by Prosecutor Nelson Duncan, while George W. DeMeza, of this city, acted as counsel for the prisoner. The State put up a very strong case which was rebutted by DeMeza in a very able manner, but all his arguments could not win when a witness was brought on to the stand that swore that Osnartio had offered to settle. The case went to the jury at three o'clock, and after an hour's consideration brought in a verdict of guilty. The judge complimented the counsel for the defendant on the able manner in which he defended the case. The sentence will be pronounced later.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS IN ONE CHURCH.

Dr. E. M. Rodman Has Been There a Quarter of a Century.

Rev. E. M. Rodman today acquires an honor that is seldom thrust upon any man. He passes the quarter-century mark of service as rector of Grace Episcopal church, which will be celebrated at the meeting in the church next Sunday morning.

When he was called to Grace parish there were 122 communicants, and though the membership is now several times over that only two of the original members are connected with the church. Some have passed from this world, but a large number have moved away.

The Daily Press extends its congratulations to the clergyman, and trusts that his parishoners and the city at large may enjoy another quarter of a century of his amiable ways, liberal disposition and consistent acts. Such a man as Dr. Rodman is to be prized as a citizen of any community.

THE FOOTBALL LEAGUE TO DISBAND.

Dunellen Sends in Her Resignation and Westfield and Cranford to Follow.

Football may be popular in this district, but it appears that the interest is not great enough to support a football league. George W. Richardson, President of the Dunellen Club, has sent in the resignation of Dunellen from the League and states that Westfield expects to withdraw also. Cranford by not answering the different communications of the secretary has showed her intention of not remaining in the league. This leaves the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. as the sole member of the league and therefore the winner of the championship. But it is a hollow honor, however. The formal action on the resignation will take place at the meeting Friday evening.

More Boys' Races.

AMTHOR SUED FOR $10,000.

THE BROKER IN MORE TROUBLE OVER SHOOTING WILLIE VAN NESS.

Action Commenced in the Supreme Court Today by Reed & Coddington—Will Probably be Brought Up in January.

Reed & Coddington Saturday commenced an action by issuing summons in the Supreme Court in a $10,000 damage suit against Gustave E. T. Amthor brought by George G. VanNest, whose son Willie, Amthor shot while in a fit of anger several months ago. It will be remembered that it was alleged that young VanNest was playing about Amthor's door yard, when Mrs. Amthor remonstrated with him for meddling with a piece of hose, and that the lad applied a vile epithet to her.

When acquainted with this alleged insult on his return at night from his duties as a broker in Wall street in New York, Amthor worked himself into a temper and procuring a revolver started out to wreak vengance on the boy. He found him turning a switch for a trolley car on Monroe avenue, and after a few words, in which his passion seemed to increase, he leveled the revolver and shot the lad in the hip.

Young Van Ness was taken to the home of his assailant where he was cared for until he recovered sufficiently to be removed to his own home. Amthor was arrested and Justice Nash held him to await the action of the grand jury in $500 bail on the charge of assault with intent to kill. The grand jury is now in session, but as their labors are not yet completed, it is not known whether or not he has been indicted.

The summons in the case will be returnable in about ten days and the case will probably be ready for trial at the January term of court to be held at Elizabeth.

MR. HETFIELD WAS EMPLOYED.

But the Fickle Italians Wanted to Plead Their Case.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—In your issue of last evening under heading "We Want No Lawyer," it would appear that I represented two Italians yesterday morning before City Judge Coddington who didn't employ me. The truth is I was sent for at nine o'clock on Sunday evening last to appear for them and two others who were locked up in the station house, and because of there being no record of the charge against them I was unable to get them out until Monday morning at 9 o'clock, when I had them released and their case set down for yesterday morning, which was done in their presence and with their consent. They were perfectly willing to be represented and taken out of jail, but now it seems wanted to attend to their own case, to which I do not object, but do not want to be understood as appearing in any case for any one without first being employed. Walter L. Hetfield.

MARRIED MEN NOT IN IT.

The Bachelors of The Crescent Wheelmen Outbowl Them.

There was a lively time last evening at the bowling alleys of the Crescent Wheelmen when ten of the married men bowled against the same number of the single men of the club.

The two ball game was used which accounts for the low score. After a fight that only ended after the last frame had been rolled, the bachelors won by fifty-five pins, their total being 1,313, and that of their opponents, 1 258. The benedicts did their best to down the pins and J. F. Buckle, in particular, distinguished himself, but it was of no use, the strikes and spare were too many, and the single men gradually increased their lead as the game went on. Harry Van Emburgh made the high score of the evening, 162, for his single brothers.

A Crack Wing Shot from Jersey.

Charles Smith, of Plainfield, N. J., is in the city as the guest of Judge George Kemp, of the Hoffman house. He is one of the best wing shots in his State, and incidentally takes part in the Independent Gun club's tourney, not for a prize, but to show, in a sportsman's way, that he knows how to use and handle a gun. Mr. Smith made a remarkably fine record as a marksman at the shoot yesterday afternoon.—Reading Times.

Lack of Water.

The water supply in Elizabeth is low, owing to the prolonged drought, and were it not for the supply received from the artesian wells at Netherwood there would be a water famine in the city. A million gallons of water are obtained from the Netherwood wells, while the remaining two millions from this source go to supply Plainfield and the towns on the line of the New Jersey Central between the two cities.

A Spanish paper complains that children in Spain are becoming too precocious; that boys of twelve smoke and play cards, and girls of the same age abandon their dolls, go to theatres, and read love stories.

LEFT HIS OWN PROPERTY.

NOVEL GROUNDS TAKEN TO BREAK MRS. MANNING'S WILL.

The Husband Claims That His Wife Left Him That Which Was His Already and Now He Wants Some of the Other Values.

The contest of the will of the late Mary Manning, the evidence of which is being taken in the Surrogate's Court, was continued on Thursday at the office of Harry C. Runyon, Court Stenographer Herbert W. Knight being present to take down the testimony. The will is being contested by the husband, William H. Manning, who is represented by Craig A. Marsh, and a brother, Michael Hefferan, and a sister, Ann Kearns, whose interests are looked after by R. V. Lindabury, of Elizabeth. The other heirs, who were well remembered in the will are represented by Harry C. Runyon.

The cause of the husband's protest is, that by the will he is left a piece of property which, after investigation, is proved to be his already, so he wishes another property which was left to other relatives. The property was purchased by Mrs. Manning and during her life she supposed that it had been deeded to her. The brother and sister are left out in the cold, while most of the other property, including $1000 in the bank and the household goods, was divided between two other brothers and two nieces.

The taking of testimony will be continued in Harry C. Runyon's office on November 23d.

JURY UNABLE TO AGREE.

Twelve Men True and Good Stay Out Over a Day Without Result.

After being locked up from 3:30 Wednesday afternoon to 8 o'clock last night, and taking innumerable ballots, the jury in the case of Mary Whitehead against ex-Councilman Herman A. Weber, was unable to agree and were brought into court and dischrged, thus necessitating a new trial at the next term of court. The plaintiff was suing for money alleged to be due her for services as housekeeper, the particulars of which have already been told in The Daily Press.

In the charge to the jury at the completion of the evidence the judge cautioned them not to be moved by any sympathy for the plaintiff in rendering a verdict. It is understood that the vote stood nine to three, but which way it is impossible to learn.

Craig A. Marsh, of this city, who represented the defendant, states that in his opinion the sympaties of some of the jurors for Mrs. Whitehead were unduly aroused, and that if a verdict was given in her favor, it would not stand before any appeal court.

S. S. Swackhamer represented the plaintiff.

WOULDN'T PAY ONE POLICY.

The Metropolitan Insurance Company Said It Was Void.

The Metropolitan Insurance Company is the defendant in another suit that is to come up before Justice Mosher in a short time. The suit is brought by Mary Z. Perrine to recover the insurance due upon the death of her little six-year old child, Ardella, which occurred a month ago. There were two policies and one was paid, but the company refused to pay the other as they declared it was void as four weeks had elapsed without any payment being made.

The story that Mrs. Perrine tells is that the agent came the Tuesday that the four weeks were up and asked for the payment. Mrs. Perrine did not have the money and asked the agent to call in the evening which he promised to do. The money was ready at the time agreed upon but the agent did not come. Word was sent to him and he agreed to come on Saturday night but failed again. The child was then taken ill and died. Mrs. Perrine has placed her case in the hands of S. S. Swackhamer.

NO MEMORY OF PLAINFIELD.

Miss Clark Still Dazed and Sleeps Most of the Time.

Notwithstanding the reports published in some papers that Miss Lucretia Clark, the former principal of the Stratford School in this city, had entirely recovered from her fit of mental aberation the report published exclusively in The Daily Press that she was not much better than when found working as a house maid in Fitchburg, is correct.

James E Martine a day or two ago received a letter from Mrs. J. Edison Sweet, at whose home in Syracuse Miss Clark is staying, in which she states that her sister is still in a dazed condition, and sleeps most of the time. She writes that Miss Clark has no memory of ever having visited Plainfield or of any of her wanderings when she suddenly disappeared. In fact, her condition is truly a pitable one.

DEMOCRATS ARE NOT PHASED

THEY BELIEVE VICTORY IS THEIRS FOR THE HUSTLING.

County Executive Committee Meet, Call the Convention and Map Out an Active Campaign—Extraordinary Interest.

Enthusiasm was predominant at the meeting of the Union county Democratic executive committee in Elizabeth Thursday, when the attendance was the largest in the history of the committee. Among those present outside of the committee were R. V. Lindabury, J. E. Martine, Judge Green, H. R. Cannon, Judge Alward, Albert Carleton and Wm. Syckley. Brief addresses on the political situation were made by Hon. R. V. Lindabury, J. E. Martine, Judge Green, P. J. Ryan and others. The gist of the remarks showed the party organization to be working harmoniously for Democratic success. An active campaign will be inaugurated and meetings arranged for all through the county. After considerable discussion it was decided to change the ratio of representation in the county convention and allow one delegate for every fifty Democratic voters and one for every fraction over twenty-five.

The county convention was called for October 23d, at Elizabeth.

BEYOND THE WEEPING.

Impressive Services Over the Remains of Miss French.

A large and very impressive gathering of relatives and friends was present at the funeral services of the late Miss Minnie French, which were held Thursday afternoon at 2:30 from the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. M. French, 18 Craig place.

Rev. Dr. C. R. Barnes, of the First M E. church, officiated, assisted by Rev. Dr. Tuttle, of Newark, and Rev. Dr. Hurlbut, of New York, former pastor of the above church.

A beautiful selection, "Come Unto Me," was rendered by Mrs. Asa Collier, Miss Jessie Utter, B. T. Barnes, and Elmer E. Runyon, after which Dr. Hurlbut read the Scripture selection and Rev. Dr. Tuttle offered an effecting prayer. Dr. Barnes then made a few remarks relative to the Christian character of the departed, and of the excellent life she had lived. He spoke feelingly of her work in the church and Sunday school, and how she would be missed in those circles. To her Sunday school class a strong attachment had been formed, also strong ties of love and friendship that seemed almost unbreakable.

To the bereaved ones words of comfort and consolation were spoken. Dr. Barnes closed his remarks with prayer. Those present then took a last look on the form of one whom they had learned to love in life. Another impressive selection by the quartettee "Lead, Kindly Light" was rendered at the close.

The floral tributes were beautiful and consisted of a cross of white roses with the letters "I. H. N." from the Dorcas Society, King's Daughters, a large harp of roses and a number of bunches of choice cut roses. Neatly draped from one end of the casket was a broad satin ribbon on which was the inscription "Beyond the Smiling and the Weeping."

The casket was open full length and the beautiful form dresssed in white looked exceedingly peaceful and lifelike. Interment was made in Hillside Cemetery. Those acting as bearers were Charles French, Elston French, Warren Church and William Thiers.

A touching incident was the presence of the Dorcas Society, King's Daughters, who came in a body.

At the request of the decedent choice flowers were suspended on the front door ipstead of crepe, and a profusion of flowers were placed in the parlor, at her request, as she was partially fond of flowers.

Higher Yet in Plainfield.

The Central Railroad of New Jersey issued yesterday a circular announcing the following prices for anthracite coal in New York: Stove, $3.75 a ton; egg, $3.65; broken, $3.45; and chestnut, $3.50. These prices are f. o. b., and show an advance of ten cents a ton on stove and egg, thirty cents on broken, and twenty cents on chestnut over the prices last announced by that company. A prominent coal merchant in this city was seen by a Press reporter this morning and asked if this increase would affect retail prices in Plainfield. He said that it would probably not as the rates to dealers here were about twenty-five cents higher than those quoted above.

Educational Department.

The opening of the Educational Department of the Y. M. C. A., will be held in the Y. M. C. A. Hall, on Monday, October 14th, at 8 p. m. The exercises will consist of an address by H. Coleman, President of the Coleman Business College, of Newark, and mandolin and guitar duets by Mrs. and Miss Thorne, also of the same place. A brief statement of the educational work of the Plainfield Association will be made by the chairman of this department, Stephen Cahoone. The men and women of Plainfield are cordially invited.

WHITE CAPS BACK AGAIN.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS ARRIVE HOME FROM ATLANTIC CITY.

Great Time in the Convention When "Plainfield '96" Captured the Convention—Services on the Cars on the Return.

The beautiful weather, with which the Christian Endeavor State Convention at Atlantic City opened, continued through Thursday and Friday, much to the satisfaction of everyone.

During the noon recess Thursday services were held at the life saving stations, solemn, helpful meetings, which will long remain in the minds of those who took part in them.

In the afternoon Miss Alice B. Spangenberg, of this city, gave her report as Missionary Superintendent. The Junior rally was an especially interesting part of the session. But the most exciting moment of the whole Convention was when Rev. Mr. Spooner came forward to announce the Convention city for 1896. How the hall shook with applause at the words, "We are going to Plainfield."

In the evening the Plainfield delegates marched in a body to the Academy of Music, where the space was divided according to counties. The delegation from Union and Somerset counties made a fine display, nearly all wearing white caps, the motto of which, "Plainfield, 1896," had now proved a true prophecy.

President French presided, the convention sermon was preached by Rev. Charles Olmstead, of Cambridge, Mass., and the closing "Enduement Service" was conducted by Halsey Hammond, Secretary Central Branch Philadelphia Y. M. C. A. This was the solemn hour of the convention. Union county's response to the roll-call was a verse of "Take time to be Holy." No one present at the following moment of most solemn consecration, when hundreds promised to use every effort to win in the next year at least one soul for the Master, can ever forget the impression with which he left the convention hall for the last time.

At the close of the session the Plainfield delegation gave the other Endeavorers a reception at the "New England."

Friday morning, in spite of a few drops of rain, many Plainfielder's gathered on the beach soon after six for the farewell prayer meeting. At the close, all joined hands and standing in a circle sang "Blest be the tie that binds."

At train time, eight a. m., a hard rain was falling, and stages took the delegates to the train, sorry to leave Old Ocean and the place where all had received so much blessing, but ready to go home and work with new energy.

Devotional services were held again in the train, led by prominent Endeavorers.

The crew of the train were all members of the Christian Endeavor society and stayed at Atlantic City during the convention with the rest of the Endeavors. They were engineer, S. L. Jones, of Jersey City; fireman, Wm. McMahon, of Jersey City; conductor, M. L. Rarick, of Dunellen; baggagemaster, G. B. Van Nortwick, of Somerville; breakman, C. Van Derveer, of Jersey City.

HE LOVED IN VAIN.

He Wanted to Marry Her, But the Brother Objected.

A well-known Plainfield merchant has just passed through an experience which has left him a sadder but a wiser man. Some time ago a dressmaker came to the home of his sister. She was pretty and fascinating and soon had her Plainfield admirer fast in the meshes. He took her to entertainments and made her expensive presents until, at last, it was time for her to leave. She returned to her home in Baltimore, but the postal service still remained and they made good use of it. The lovers thought that they should get married and it was at length decided that they should meet in Philadelphia and there become wedded. But just before the expectant Plainfielder had started he received a note from his beloved, saying that her brother thought that she had better not get married just now. And now the Plainfield man is mourning over the faithlessness of the feminine sex in general.

CRESCENTS CHANGE BY-LAWS.

Dues Increased And Members Divided Into Two Classes.

The Crescent Wheelmen met last evening and adopted a new set of by-laws. By them the dues are raised to a dollar a month and the members divided into two classes, active and associate. The active pay $5 initiation fee, are members of the L. A. W. and have full privileges. The associate members pay $3 initiation fee and have all the privileges except of office holding and voting. One member resigned. The meeting was a very enthusiastic one.

The Newark Advertiser has got them. They compare Candidate Griggs' campaign to that of Napoleon. And Napoleon had a Waterloo, too.

WILD BILL HICKOX.

"Wild Bill Hickox was for a long time chief of scouts in my command." It was a retired army officer who was talking. He leaned back in an armchair at the Army and Navy club and became reminiscent.

"Hickox got his nom de guerre of Wild Bill at Independence, Mo., when he was about 19 years old. This was some time late in the fifties, when Independence was the busy end of the Santa Fe trail.

"Hickox was a mule skinner, freighting to Santa Fe and back, and in some street fight which occurred in Independence, in which Hickox had no original interest, he conducted himself with such limitless valor and appeared so utterly reckless of results that he was ever afterward called Wild Bill.

"Wild Bill was, like many of his sort, a profound, remorseless gambler. It was utterly useless to talk of work or reputable employment to Wild Bill Hickox. Through the war he was a scout for the Union army. He had few convictions, but being born and bred in Illinois, one of them was an intense antipathy to secession. It was thus he became a scout of the Union army. After the war, wherein he achieved considerable fame for daring energy and nerve as a scout, Wild Bill established himself at Springfield, Mo. It was there he killed Tutt, who had been chief of scouts in Price's army.

"Tutt, like Wild Bill, was a gambler, and they often met, and while they were in no degree in love with each other they managed to get along. Still there were more men of Tutt's political convictions in Springfield who were on the shoot than there were of Wild Bill's. They made up their minds to run him out or kill him. He owed Tutt some money as the result of a poker game. One night Wild Bill was playing poker with some friends. Tutt came up and stood looking on. Wild Bill's gold watch was lying on the table near him. Just as Tutt came up Wild Bill won a jack pot with something like $100 in it.

"'You seem to be flush, Bill,' said Tutt in a half ugly tone. 'Suppose you pay me that $40 you owe me.'

"'I owe you $30,' said Wild Bill, 'and here it is,' turning over three $10 bills to Tutt, who took them, put them in his pocket and then said, 'Give me the other ten.'

"'That's all I owe you,' said Wild Bill, 'and you have got it.'

"Tutt picked up the gold watch that was lying at Wild Bill's elbow, with the remark, 'Well, you still owe me ten, and I'll keep this watch till you pay it.' He put the watch in his pocket and turned to go. Wild Bill took it very coolly and said nothing. Everybody was somewhat amazed, if not disgusted, at the tameness of the young Union scout.

"Just as Tutt went out of the door he looked back at Wild Bill with a sneer and the remark: 'You don't seem to keer for this watch much, Bill. I'd supposed you'd have set more store by it. If you begin to feel like you need it, I am going to pack it across the square at noon tomorrow, and you might be there and get it, if you know how.'

"Wild Bill made no reply to what was understood by all present to be a challenge to a duel and calmly went on with his poker game, while Tutt departed. That night Wild Bill was found by a friend at his hotel very earnestly cleaning and loading his pistols.

"'What are you going to do?' asked the friend, who was an army officer stationed at Springfield.

"'I am going to kill Tutt tomorrow noon,' said Wild Bill, 'or he's going to kill me.'

"The next day at noon about all the male inhabitants of Springfield were in the square to see the fun. Tutt came into the square on the east side, while Wild Bill stood in front of the courthouse, diagonally across the corner of the square from Tutt. They were fully 150 yards apart, and all the lines ran diagonal to the line of fire between them. I mention it because it makes Wild Bill's shot all the more remarkable. The minute Tutt came in view he pulled his pistol, as did also Wild Bill. They were too far apart for Tutt, who had no idea that Bill could reach him at that distance. But he didn't know Wild Bill. He raised his gun and fired like a flash, and Tutt dropped dead with a bullet in his head, fully 150 yards away.

"Wild Bill was so sure of his aim that he never paused, but whirled on the crowd behind him, several of whom were friends of Tutt and had half drawn their pistols to revenge him. Wild Bill was too prompt and quick. He covered the gang in a general way with both his pistols and remarked:

"'Was that on the square, gentlemen?'

"The effect of such witchlike skill on the nerves of the crowd was too much. The general view seemed to be that the killing of Tutt was 'on the square,' and that ended the business. Wild Bill staid in Springfield as long as he pleased after that.

"Back in 1881 I met the man who was playing cards with Wild Bill when he was killed in the Black Hills. I forget the old fellow's name, but at the time I met him he was captain of a Missouri river steamboat called the Lady Lee running between Kansas City and St. Louis. The bullet that killed Wild Bill struck the old captain in the forearm after passing completely through Hickox's head.

"The old captain told me when Wild Bill was shot he was dealing the cards. They were all playing poker at the time. His assassin shot him in the back of the head. The bullet crashed clear through and came out under his eye, striking the old river pirate in the arm. Wild Bill never knew what hit him, and his taking off illustrates that aphorism of the Bible, 'They that live by the sword shall perish by the sword.'

"The remarkable thing about it all was that, although Wild Bill was dealing the cards and had not the slightest notice of the shot which took his life, yet when he was picked up off the floor both his pistols were in his hands and one was cocked. Some medical man, lecturing on the latent impulses of the nerves, might get a good lecture some time out of the fact that Wild Bill drew his pistols after he was dead."—Alfred Henry Lewis.

Bogus English Estates.

Ex-Consul General New reiterates the statement that there is no estate of any description amounting to as much as $1,000,000 in England, either in the Bank of England or in the court of chancery, in which American heirs are interested. The same statement has been made by indubitable authority a hundred times. But whenever a smart lawyer gets out of another job or wishes to take a trip to England at somebody else's expense the deathless "fake" of a vast English estate waiting for a number of guileless Americans to come over and get it is revived.—Chicago News.

THE PIRATE.

I was a bloody pirate once, full many years ago,
Though you that see my piety may scarce believe it so.
I've shot and butchered countless scores of helpless cherubims,
And hung their sighing mothers high upon the crosstree limbs.
Their fathers, fighting to the last, I've forced into the sea—
Ah, there is naught by evil wrought but has been done by me.
All this took place in that far time when I was still a boy,
Yet even now when I think how, with what bloodthirsty joy,
I scoured the wilds of Washburn's pond for merchant ships to burn,
I'd give a score of years—aye, more—to be allowed to turn
The faded leaves of time's old book back where they were that night
When father's slipper attacked my clipper and put my crew to flight.

AN ERA OF REFORM.

Won His Money and Then Barred Him Out Because He Was a Minor.

"I had an adventure in the City of Mexico when I was quite a youngster, not out of my teens, in fact, that taught me a useful lesson," said Mr. Jules Cohn of Philadelphia.

"There are two big gambling houses in the Mexican capital, run under government sanction, the houses paying very large sums into the public treasury for the privilege. I had seen enough of the game of monte to become infatuated with it, and during a sojourn of several weeks down there got to be a regular habitue of both sporting resorts. Occasionally I made a good winning, but on the whole lost more than I won. There is a Mexican law that forbids the entrance of minors into gambling places, but for a long while my going in and out was unchallenged, and I had no idea of ever being barred.

"One night following the day in which I had received my month's wages, $200 in gold, I sought the gambling place and was soon immersed in monte. Luck was very adverse to me that night, and when I left in the small hours the bank had cleaned me out of every dollar of my salary. Naturally I was pretty blue the next day; but, going to a friend, I secured the loan of $100 and determined to try to get back some of my lost cash.

"That night, on attempting to enter the place, the employee whose duty it was to see that no improper characters got entrance stopped me and asked if I were 21 years of age. On answering in the negative, he positively refused to let me go inside. I tried to reason with him, but to no purpose. He was inflexible and quoted to me the law. I told him it was a beautiful law that worked only one way, but that didn't move him.

"Well, I was so sore at my treatment that I called on the American minister, stated the case frankly and asked his advice. He said: 'You can undoubtedly make these people give back your money. The law would force them to do so, on account of your age. You have great provocation to take such a course, but I advise you not to do it. The best way to get square is to stop playing monte and all other gambling games.'

"The advice I knew to be good, and as I listened I acknowledged its soundness. I thanked the minister, and going out of his office made myself a promise that I have kept to this day."—Washington Post.

Why People Like Dogs.

And why do people keep such lots of dogs themselves and go in such numbers to see other people's dogs? Because the dog is at once the sincerest flatterer and the most successful cheerer that the human race ever had. A good dog always gives us the feeling that we men and women are a sort of gods. No other animal does anything of the kind. The cat treats us as an inferior, and the horse will treat us as a dear friend, not a divinity. The dog, moreover, imparts something of his peculiar gayety to us in a way that is irresistible. He mingles his suggestions of gayety with his flattery, for he not only leaves his dinner untasted to walk with us, but the mere fact that we are apparently giving ourselves the pleasure of a walk raises him into such a delirium of delight that the sight of it puts all our dumps and blues to such reproach that we shake them off in very shame. And when we don't walk, but sit moodily at home, the dog curls up lovingly at our feet and looks up now and then into our eyes and "glides into our darker musings with a mild and healing sympathy." Yes, there is a solid reason for the fondness of men for dogs, and it will never come to an end until either men or dogs become very different beings from what they are now.—Boston Transcript.

Witty and Graceful.

Dean Ramsay tells of a witty and graceful compliment paid by a Scotch minister to a young lady, daughter of a neighboring laird. It was the custom in this and other Scotch parishes for the minister to bow to the laird's pew before beginning his discourse. On one occasion the pew contained a bevy of ladies, and the minister, feeling a delicacy in the circumstances, omitted the usual salaam. When they next met, the laird's daughter, a Miss Miller, widely famed for her beauty and afterward Countess of Mar, rallied the minister in the presence of her companions for not bowing to her from the pulpit. "Your ladyship forgets," replied the minister, "that the worship of angels is not allowed by the Scotch church."

Flowers In the House.

This was Celia Thaxter's rule for arranging flowers in the house: "Large flowers of vivid tints can be put farther away from the looker on, and yet lose none of their effectiveness or be unseen. But a fine flower, liked the forgetmenot or a cluster of heliotrope, would be lost on a mantel or high shelf. Put the delicate blossoms where their dainty color, forms and perfume can appeal to every one, while the massed and gaudy splendor of the larger flowers may serve to deck a dull corner or light up a shady, somber room."

To Cut Stick.

To "cut stick," a euphemism for running away, is an expression found not only in English, but also in French, German, Italian and Spanish. It is supposed to refer to the practice among travelers of cutting a staff from a hedge or tree before beginning a journey.

The word scold was formerly applied to a quarrelsome person of either sex, but as women are notoriously more given to scolding than men, it has come to be limited to the fairer and more linguistically gifted half of the human race.

Progress, the growth of intelligence and power, is the end and boon of liberty, and without this a people may have the name, but want the substance and spirit of freedom.—Channing.

Monmouth and Somerset Democrats have put winning tickets in the field and will give great help in the election of Mr. McGill.—True American.

The Daily Press demonstrated its superiority again yesterday over the sweat shop sheet in the quick dissemination of news, when the announcement that the Christian Endeavor convention in 1896 would come to Plainfield was published a half hour earlier in The Press than in The News.

Plainfield has secured the Christian Endeavor State convention for 1896, and Plainfield can and will prove to the large number of delegates who attend the great gathering that the claims of "Plainfield '96" delegation at Atlantic City that the people are hospitable, that ample facilities and conveniences are at hand to accommodate the convention, and that, in a word, Plainfield is an ideal convention town, are nothing but words of truth.

A list of the casualties at the recent Republican primaries in Chicago is forty-two names long—of men with faces smashed, eyes gouged, stomachs kicked, and generally bruised and beaten. Ambulances were in great demand, while ballot-boxes were smashed, judges of election kicked out of doors, and a reign of bruisers inaugurated. The contest raged over the attempts of the rival city hall and county factions to capture the delegates to the county convention.

At the annual convention of the W. C. T. U. of New Jersey, which closed in Paterson yesterday, resolutions were adopted deprecating the fact that writers of fiction felt no compunction about introducing into their books characters that were in the habit of getting "full" of liquor, thus indicating to the readers of the books that there was no harm in drinking spirituous liquors. They protested against the publication of the figures of nude women in the magazines. Living models were necessary to secure such pictures, and that, they held, was baneful.

Ex State Senator Keyes, of Somerset, was one of the most enthusiastic Democrats who called at Democratic headquarters in Jersey City yesterday, says The World. He was elated over the outlook in that county, and predicted that Chancellor McGill would receive a handsome majority.

"Somerset," he said, with much enthusiasm, "is once more in its normal condition, and this fall will find it back in the Democratic column. The county ticket nominated at Monday's convention is a strong one, and will do much towards bringing to the polls the solid Democratic vote."

When a sensational politician happens also to have the habit of dealing with things religious, he is very apt to fall into the blasphemy perpetrated by Parkhurst. Fancy a decent-minded man saying, as Parkhurst has said, that the excise laws will be enforced "so long as God Almighty and Theodore Roosevelt are with us." Thus to make the Deity, whom Parkhurst pretends to preach, wait upon the coming of Mr. Roosevelt, and become impotent again when Mr. Roosevelt leaves, is a shocking piece of flippancy of a sort usually confined to blasphemous jests. A politician like Parkhurst is demoralizing to the pulpit. A clergyman like Parkhurst is hurtful to all Christian sentiment.—New York Sun.

It is calculated that 2,693,617,061 gallons of water fell on Manhattan Island Sunday, and yet Commissioner Roosevelt maintains that New York is dry on the Sabbath.

"The same old gang" cry of the Republican press and speakers gives evidence that the G. O. P. is sorely perplexed for an issue to wage against the candidacy of Chancellor McGill.

While the New York and New Jersey authorites are planning to preserve the Palisades, the stone contractors are cheerfully doing all they can to destroy them, says the Newark News.

The Middlesex county Democrats yesterday made the following Democratic Assembly nominations: Ephriam Cutter, Perth Amboy; Aug. Streitwolf, of New Brunswick; and Charles Muirhead, of South Amboy.

One would think that Editor Runyon of The News, who goes about with a wise look, claiming to have been a graduate of a college, would, at least, know how to spell penny, and especially so when it is considered that he docks his $2.50 a week compositors at a $12 a week rate in order that he may possess more coin. But his ignorance is demonstrated and his hypocrisy evident when he spells it "penney" in an article, written by himself, that is absolutely nauseating in its gushy sentences.

At a meeting of the Democratic State committee yesterday Senator Blodgett said the State committee had been very busy ever since its organization in feeling the pulse of the people and ascertaining correctly the feeling throughout the State. The result had been most gratifying. Never in all its thirty years experience in this State had he seen the Democratic party so thoroughly united and in accord as it is today for the success of the ticket. The nomination of the Chancellor had also given the people confidence in the Democratic party. From the information he had received, and he knew it to be trustworthy, he had no doubt that Alexander T. McGill would be elected.

Editor Pearsall, of the Westfield Standard, and A. Willis Lightbourn, also of Westfield, have been indulging in a wordy combat for the past few weeks through the columns of the Standard over the money question. Both had positive opinions, and neither would concede a point that might prove favorable to the argument of his opponent. The adjectives and exclamation points used to emphasize the editorials of the editor and communications of the correspondent were profuse. The editor proposed that Mr. Lightbourn assume the negative in a public debate with a gentleman to be named in the columns of the Leader on the following:

Resolved, That to confine the dollar of ultimate redemption to 25 8-10 grains of gold 9-10 fine (the present gold standard) is an injustice to the productive industries of our country.

Last week "Brother Lightbourn," as the silver inoculating editor tenderly addresses his opponent who has accused him of using bad English and writing ridiculous statements relative to the money question, agrees to accept the above proposition "without equivocation, hesitation, qualification or vaccillation." Editor Pearsall promptly names E. J. Whitehead as the gentleman to meet him in public debate, and announces that the place and date of the talking exhibition will be announced in a brief time.

Plainfield's Dago Accused.

The coroner's jury in the case of the Westfield Italian murder held an inquest at Elizabeth Monday, and after listening to the testimony, the jury retired and rendered a verdict that Salerno came to his death through the effects of a pistol shot wound inflicted by Ventozzi.

The murderer is still at large and the authorities have not yet secured any clue to his whereabouts. It is believed that he has succeeded in leaving this part of the country through the aid of some of his countrymen employed in Westfield.

The witnesses of the shooting are still in custody, and will be held for some time yet in the hopes that the detectives will apprehend the murderer.

BOND CONTRACT CANCELLED.

THE LOAN OF $100,000 WILL BE ADVERTISED FOR.

Common Council So Decided Last Night—Medical Association Recommend Improved Method of Collecting Garbage.

As one by one the city fathers entered the council on Monday evening, an unaccountable expression of indifference was noticable on each face.

It was an adjourned session and all of the members answered to the roll call except Councilmen Stockton and Bird.

Clerk MacMurray read the minutes of the last meeting, and on Mr. Erickson's motion they were laid over till next meeting for adoption, for the reason that the corporation counsel had failed to present a written report at the last meeting in regard to the purchase of certain portions of property for the sewage beds, and Mr. Ginna did not want the minutes to be read as though the sewer committee had recommended the purchase of the property, which was so intimated. The regular order of business was then suspended, and Mr. Dumont brought up the communication presented a week ago by Harvey Fisk's Sons, signifying their desire to cancel their contract with the city to furnish $100,000 at 4 per cent, and at his request the letter was read by the clerk.

Mr. Dumont then offered a resolution that the contract be canceled, and the money thus far borrowed be returned at the same rate of interest, thirty days after the adoption of the resolution.

The resolution was adopted. Another resolution by the same councilman was adopted, that notice be printed in the city papers, the Financial Chronicle, New York Tribune, and Evening Post, advertising for bids for the loan of $100,000 to the city, the same to be received Monday evening, October 28th. The notice read almost the same as the one upon which the money was secured from Harvey Fisk's Sons. Mr. Dumont also presented extracts from the state law on the subject, showing the authority upon which the transfer is done.

Mr. Fisk's request that he be excused from voting on the above resolutions was granted.

A motion was made by Mr. Fisk that 100 extra copies of the notices be printed and sent by mail to the principal bond houses in New York and the savings banks in New Jersey. The motion was adopted.

Mr. Dumont moved that the notice be printed twice in the Financial Chronicle and three times a week for two weeks in the New York Tribune and Evening Post. The motion prevailed.

Mr. Erickson made a motion, which was carried, that when Council adjourn it be to meet Monday evening, October 28th, when the bids for loaning $100,000 would be received.

On Mr. Fisk's motion the petition from E. C. Mulford for crosswalks at South avenue and Berckman street and Richmond street was granted.

Mr. Fisk stated that the steam roller had been purchased for $2,890, and Mr. Erickson reported that the chemical engine had been purchased for $1,800, $60 having been thrown off for cash. He also said that it would be delivered within ninety days.

The Plainfield Medical Association in a communication asked the Council to adopt some improved method for collecting garbage. The substance of the communication was exclusively reported in The Daily Press when the association held their last meeting. President See referred the matter to the sewer committee, but the latter thought that it belonged to the Board of Health. Mr Fisk stated that a special committee was appointed some time ago to look after the matter and he recommended that it be referred to them, which was done. The committee consists of Councilmen Fisk, Ginna and Bird.

Mayor Gilbert appointed Joseph Swick, H. W. Fraleigh and C. E. Harris special policemen, and after the Council confirmed the nominations it adjourned.

The tramp nuisance is again making itself felt along the Central Railroad. At Garwood the women are in a state of terror on account of the vagrants. DR. RODMAN'S ANNIVERSARY.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS RECTOR OF GRACE P. E. CHURCH.

Sketch of His Life and Work—One of the Three Remaining Pastors in the Diocese of New Jersey of 25 Years Ago.

It is usually a pleasure to recall the past, and to Rev. E. M. Rodman, rector of the Grace P. E. church, it is especially so as he has just finished his twenty-fifth year of faithful ministration to his flock, then a little gathering of God fearing people, but now grown to a large and powerful church.

Rev. Mr. Rodman was born in New York city in November, 1830. He entered Columbia College and graduated in 1850, and then completed his studies at the Seminary of Virginia. His first parish was at Norfolk, Va., where he remained seven years, leaving there in 1864. He came to Peekskill for three years and then spent two years at his birth place. On October 10, 1870, he entered upon his duties in Plainfield where he has remained ever since.

The church to which he came was the old frame building which is now used for the parish house at the corner of Sycamore and Sixth streets, but was then located on East Front street, near Richmond street. There was a congregation of about three hundred, which had been under the charge of Rev. Dr. Charles M. Fox. Under Rev. Mr. Rodman the congregation grew and twice additions were made to accommodate the increasing number. In 1876 the church was moved to its present site and here the services were continued until three years ago when the new stone edifice was built on the corner of Seventh and Sycamore streets to make room for the congregation which now numbers about seven hundred communicants.

When Mr. Rodman entered the diocese of New Jersey, there were one hundred and twenty two ministers on the list ahead of him, now death and resignations have reduced the number of those who have remained at their parish longer than Mr. Rodman to two, the Rev. Dr. Baker, of Princeton, and Rev. Mr. Phelps, of New Brunswick. Of the many families who were in the church in 1870, only ten now remain. They are the families of J. B. Dumont, Mrs. E. H. Depew, Mrs. C. J. Ames, Mahlon Vail, Mrs. E. L. Craft, the Misses Megie, Mrs. Ann McCarty, Mrs. Catherine Buxton, Mrs. Randolph Harriet, and Mrs. George Smalley.

During the last twenty-five years, the parish has raised for all purposes over $200,000, of which $30,000 was used in building the new church. The gain in numbers, during those years has been very marked, 405 have been baptised, while 327 have been confirmed and about 200 received from other parishes. The loss has been 42 by death and 141 by removal.

In 1870 there was one society in the church, the ladies parish aid society, and seventeen years ago that was merged into the present Guild. The other associations in the church at the present day are all about a year old.

In commemoration of his twenty-fifth anniversary, Rev. Mr. Rodman preached a special sermon yesterday morning. Owing to the storm there was not a very large number present, but those that did come were much interested in his words.

He took for his text the fifth verse of the seventy-seventh Psalm: "I have considered the days old and the years that are past." He spoke of the changes in the Diocese of New Jersey during the last twenty-five years, and then remarked on the growth of the parish and of the Episcopal church throughout the country in the last quarter century.

He gave some statistics which were very interesting, showing that during that time the number in the church at the present day was four times as large as in 1870, while the collections showed a corresponding increase. The clergy was almost doubled while the forty dioceses were enlarged to seventy-one of today.

He then told something of the work that had been done in the parish, over two thousand services having been held since his arrival, and also, in the Sunday-school; he spoke of the efforts of his congregation in building the present church and the good service they had done in church and benevolent activity.

He closed with an exhortation to continue the good work and to do good, and give according to their means.

Debating and Football.

The many friends of Oscar Campbell, formerly of this city, and a graduate of the High School in '93, will be glad to learn that he is progressing finely at the University of West Virginia. Besides his regular studies, he has joined the debating club and takes a great interest in the work there. He has also entered into a new line. He is now playing behind the 'varsity football team and is enjoying football very much.

BARRIER TO SUCCESS.

Opening of the Educational Department of the Y. M. C. A.—Preparations for an Active Season of Work in All Studies.

The educational department of the Y. M. C. A. opened last evening, and if the year's work is as successful as the opening, it will be a red letter year in the history of the society. The hall in the Y. M. C. A. building was partially filled with a crowd of interested listeners. Stephen Cahoone, chairman of this department, presided.

After an opening prayer by President W. D. Murray, Mrs. and Miss Thorn were introduced, and rendered in a most pleasing manner a mandolin and guitar duet. It was heartily applauded, and, after responding to an encore, Stephen Cahoone made a few opening remarks on the work that had been done in past years, and the work that had been planned for this year. M. H. Evans then gave one of his delightful whistling solos, Miss Mabel Maxson acting as accompanist. That thrilling recitation, "Asplee at the Switch," was next given by Miss Thorn in a way that brought tears to the eyes of many of the audience.

Then the speaker of the evening, Henry Coleman, president of the Coleman Business College, of Newark, was introduced. He made a very interesting address, speaking more particularly on perseverance and energy.

"The progress of this world," he said, "is due to the energy of a few. Don't let failure discourage you, but let it excite you to greater efforts. The poor boy has an equal chance with the rich one. There is always a chance for an industrious boy. The trouble with too many of our young men is that they want too big salaries."

He gave instances of boys who had risen from the ranks and dwelt on perseverance, bringing up as an instance, that of Field in laying the Atlantic cable.

At the conclusion of his address Mr. Coleman, who is a kind-faced old man with bald head and grey beard, sang a solo with a voice as clear and powerful as many a younger man. His first selection was "The Sword of Bunker Hill" and then, in response to the loud applause, he sang "There's Nothing as Good as a Hearty Laugh," and his laugh, which came in the chorus, was so contagious that the whole audience roared, too.

After another instrumental duet by Mrs. and Miss Thorn, most of the listeners went upstairs to enroll themselves in the different branches.

The opening sessions of the classes will be held as follows:

Bookkeeping, Wednesday, October 23d; Mechanical Course, Saturday, October 19th; Shorthand, Tuesday, October 22d; German, Friday, October 25th; Arithmetic, Tuesday, October 22d; a class in English Branches for foreign-speaking young men will be started when a sufficient number desire the instruction.

Floundered in the Sewer Trench.

While George Wilson was driving Hillier & Co.'s horse through Kensington avenue Saturday night, delivering laundry, he was very much surprised and startled to see his horse sinking in the mud. He jumped out of the wagon and by the aid of a light on the wagon saw that the animal had fallen into a sewer trench that had not been properly filled in. With great difficulty he got the horse out and took him to the stables. The horse is injured so that he cannot be used. Mr. Wilson says there were no lights in the street and he was unable to see the poor condition of the street.

Trolley Talk.

Surveyors are at work laying out the course to be taken by the trolley road which is to be built between Elizabeth and Summit. Preparations are also being made for a new line from that city to Plainfield, to pass through Cranford, Westfield, Lorraine and Roselle.

ELOPED AND NOW IN JAIL.

James VanOrten Has Time to Ponder on His Follies.

The climax to the romantic elopement of Mrs. Scofield and James VanOrten, the story of which was told exclusively in The Daily Press at the time the affair was on the gossipy tongues of the ruralites of the Passaic Valley, can now be seen in the careworn figure of an individual who languishes behind the bars of the Somerset county jail at Somerville. It is none other than the once frolicsome eloper, VanOrten.

To make a long story short the love between the elopers grew cold long before the weather did, and they separated, Mrs. Scofield, or the second Mrs. VanOrten, returning to her deserted domicle.

VanOrten's wife heard that her runaway hubby was in Sussex county, and while she did not want to live with him, she did want him to pay something for the support of herself and child. A warrant was issued for his arrest on the charge of desertion, and placed in the hands of Constable Ryman, of Warren township, who, after a brief search, found his man and brought him before Justice Austin. He was unable to furnish bonds for the support of his wife and child and in default thereof was remanded to the county jail.

GIST OF THE GAME LAWS.

Judge Coddington Writes a Clear and Condensed Construction of Them.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—For the benefit of our local gunners and field sportsmen, permit me space in your valuable paper to state that the game laws passed by the Legislature of New Jersey in 1895 make it unlawful for any person or persons at any time, either on their own property or that of others, to pursue with intent to injure, or in any manner attempt to take or injure any hare or rabbit, quail, (frequently called partridge), ruffed grouse, (frequently called partridge or pheasant), European pheasant, European partridge, European grouse, wild deer, buck, doe, or fawn, gray snipe (frequently called English or Wilson snipe), duck, brant, goose, dove, swan, gray, black or fox squirrel, woodcock, reed-bird, rail-bird, marsh-hen, grass or upland plover, or other game bird or game animal, excepting in the manner usually known as hunting with gun, or dog and gun, the gun being such as may be held at arm's length and fired from the shoulder without other rests and at such times as may be permitted by the act, under a penalty of fifty dollars.

WOULD NOT PAY ALL.

Duckworth Owed Hedden $200 and Paid All But $75.

Livery bills run up easily to one who drives most of the time, and Mansfield Duckworth, formerly of this city, is no exception to the rule. While he lived here he rented a rig from Albert Hedden, the East Fourth street livery man, and enjoyed a ride almost every day. The bill amounted to over $200, but he paid off all but $75 of it. He is now in business with his father at Clinton, and although Mr. Hedden tried to collect it, he claims that he could get no substantial response. At last he retained S. S. Swackhamer as counsel and took the matter to the courts. The case is called before Justice Davis at White House on next Saturday morning at ten o'clock.

A LIVELY FAMILY FUED.

BOROUGH FAMILIES QUARREL OVER A CHESTNUT TREE.

John Goodwin's Family Annoyed by Harry Watson's Children Who Gathered the Colic Producers—Grievances in Court.

The season for chestnuts has arrived and with it has come trouble, in one locality at least. It appears that on Manning avenue there stands a chestnut tree and the children in that neighborhood gather the nuts. There is often a considerable amount of noise made by the children.

John Goodwin and his family claim that they have been much perplexed by Harry Watson's family who live near by. Last Friday the Watson children were gathering nuts, when Fred Goodwin appeared, and Mrs. Watson claims that he took some nuts away from her daughter Jennie, at the same time hitting her on the hand. Mrs. Watson came out and talked sharply to the youngster, and also picked up a stick and hit him on the hand.

Then Mrs. Goodwin appeared and remonstrated, but Mrs. Watson told her she had better go in the house and mind her business. The families finally separated, but Mrs. Goodwin complained to her husband and he had a warrant issued for the arrest of Watson.

The hearing before Justice Crosley was held this morning, when a lively scene was witnessed as each side told their story.

Mr. Goodwin testified that Watson had used abusive language, while the latter claimed he had not molested him. The hearing ended amid much excitement, when Justice Crosley stated that he would fine Watson $5 and that he and his wife would have to sign a bond to keep the peace for six months. The Watsons claimed they could get no justice and said they were going to carry the case to a higher court. Watson told Goodwin that he had better get his life insured, for he might die.

ALLEN'S GREAT SCHEME.

It Did Not Result as Rogers Expected And Now He Sues.

When the pneumatic sulky first came out it especially pleased the eye of E. B. Allen, of Flemington. He came to W. H. Rogers, the bicycle dealer in this city, with a scheme which he said would benefit both of them. He proposed, it is claimed, that Rogers make one of the new sulkies, and each to stand half the cost. The rest of the plan was that Allen should take the sulky back to Flemington and there rent it out. The scheme looked feasible enough and Rogers therefore agreed to it. The sulky was built and sent to Allen, but the sulky was not rented and no money was forwarded.

After trying in vain to get his money, Mr. Rogers, represented by S. S. Swackhamer, took the matter to law. The trial is now set down for Monday, October 21st, when it will be held before Justice Davis at White House. The suit is for the entire cost of the sulky, which is $88.50, as it is claimed that Allen never rented it but used it for his own purposes.

Another Convention Coming.

Nothing but routine business was transacted at the meeting of the Grocers' Association last evening except to decide to hold a special meeting Monday evening to make arrangements for the semi-annual State convention of the Grocers' Association which is to be held in Plainfield some time during January.

IT IS THE FACE.

It was in Rome and at the season of the year when the old world city is full of strangers from every part of its globe.

The rush of visitors made little difference to Paul Rizeni, the wood carver, except that it brought him now and again a private order.

One day a stranger passed the little workshop and was attracted by a large unfinished panel that leaned against the side of the window, and glancing at the workmanship he noticed the worker within.

Paul lifted his head and met the gazer's eyes, and the stranger smiled and hurried on. But after that he passed the corner constantly, and Paul got to look for his honest, cheery face and kind blue eyes. He was an old man and English, every bit of him.

At last one day he knocked at the low door, and Paul admitted him.

"Could you execute a little order for me?" he asked. "I want to surprise my little granddaughter with one of your beautiful crucifixes."

"Certainly," Paul answered. "It will give me great pleasure, but I am very busy, and you must allow me some time."

"I want it for an Easter gift."

Paul calculated. "Yes, I think I can let you have it."

"I am hindering you, I fear," the old man said, "but I have peeped at your work so often through the window, and that was so unsatisfactory. You are a great artist!"

"Do you find me so?" he said in his foreign way. "That panel will sell for 4 francs, and I shall get one. Great artists are paid better than that, signor."

"Why don't you demand a just value?"

"Oh, why should I care? If they gave me 1,000 francs, it would be the same—I should only work on and on. Yes, signor, I love my art! Do you know the petal of that rose took me one whole week to bring to perfection?"

"I can imagine it. It is superb! But I like your faces best. Those angels on that shield"—

"Ah, but they do not satisfy me. My angel's face I have not attempted yet, but I have seen it. I go to benediction at St. Mark's every night to watch it and carve it on my soul, and one day I shall produce it."

The old man took his departure. But he came again and again, making each time some excuse to speak about the crucifix, and gradually he won Paul's confidence, and the carver told him his story.

He belonged by birth to the old Italian aristocracy, but his boyhood had been passed in troublous times, and his family had had to fly from the country. Gradually he had worked his way back to his native Italy, the seat of all art and beauty, and there he had settled down to his life's dreams.

That night in St. Mark's at benediction, when he knelt gazing at his angel's face, a sudden warm glow stole through his frame. His angel had turned her face and met his eyes, and she had flushed with emotion, and he realized it was the loveliness of a living woman, no ethereal spirit, as he had almost grown to believe.

His old friend wondered at his change, and at last Paul told him.

"I am in love," he cried restlessly, "and I must—I will possess her."

"But, my friend, I thought"—

"Yes, that is true. I only see her in church. We have never spoken."

"Most wonderful!" the old man muttered to himself as he walked home. "But I wish it hadn't happened. I—I have been so slow. I ought to have brought him to see Ellean before. Now it is too late. Ah, and they were so suited—both so pure, so beautiful, so ideal!"

"Grandpa," Ellean said to him one evening—it was Easter eve—sitting at his feet in her white silk gown and resting her beautiful arm across his knees, "grandpa, I want to confess to you. I am in love!"

"Eh? Eh? What's this?"

"Nothing, dear, for it is nothing! It is only a face—a face that haunts me night and day—that—that—oh! you cannot understand, but my soul goes out to that face."

"A gentleman to see you, sir. I have asked him into the salon. A foreigner, I think, sir—Signore Ritz—Ritz!"—

"I know. That will do. Excuse me a minute, my dear."

Paul was standing at his full height gazing into the fire, and the red glow lit up his distinguished features, and the old man, looking upon him, realized what a splendid man he was, and he wished Ellean could have seen him thus.

"How kind of you to bring the crucifix yourself, my dear friend. I see you have it."

With a cry of wonder, delight and amazement he seized it in his hands and touched the angel's face that stood out at the top of the cross.

"It is Ellean!" Then, recovering himself, he grasped the artist's hand. "I cannot thank you—it is all so marvelous—but come with me. Let her thank you—your angel, you know."

Paul followed the old man to Ellean's room in a dream and stood at the threshold gazing at the girl, who came toward them as if, after all, she could not be very flesh and blood.

"Ellean, my child! What is it?"

She was tottering toward her grandfather. "That—that!" she cried. "It is the face—the face I have loved so long!"—London News.

Honest Times.

At one time in the highlands of Scotland to ask for a receipt or promissory note was considered an insult, and such a thing as a breach of contract was rarely heard of, so strictly did the people regard their honor. The Presbyterian Witness tells a story of a farmer who had been to the lowlands and had there acquired worldly wisdom.

After returning to his native place he needed some money and requested a loan from a gentleman in the neighborhood. The latter, Mr. Stewart, complied and counted out the gold, when the farmer immediately wrote a receipt.

"And what is this, man?" cried Mr. Stewart on receiving the slip of paper.

"That is a receipt, sir, binding me to give ye back your gold at the right time," replied Donald.

"Binding ye indeed! Well, my man, if ye canna trust yourself I'm sure I'll na trust ye! Such as ye canna have my gold." And gathering it up he returned it to his desk and locked it up.

"But, sir, I might die," replied the needy Scot, unwilling to surrender his hope of the loan, "and perhaps my sons might refuse it ye, but the bit of paper would compel them."

"Compel them to sustain their dead father's honor!" cried the enraged Celt. "They'll need compelling to do right if this is the road ye're leading them. Ye can gang elsewhere for money, I tell ye, but ye'll find nane about here that'll put more faith in a bit of paper than a neighbor's word of honor and his love of right."

ENGAGED.

It was a little lonely at first. A man can't expect to shed the habits and usages of 40 years in a single night, as a cobra de capello sheds his skin.

But, upon the whole, I was very glad that I had instructed Swiggs, a real estate agent, to invest $12,000 in a desirable country home. Swiggs had shown good taste, only it was lonely.

"Jones," said I to my factotum, "who owns the property next door?"

"Don't know," Jones answered succinctly.

"I think I shall lay out a croquet lawn and build a boathouse, Jones."

Jones stared at me. "There ain't noth in like corn and potatoes for good payin crops, sir."

"Jones," I cried, "you are an iconoclast!"

"No, sir, I ain't," said Jones, highly scandalized. "I don't put no faith in none of them new systems of agricultur!"

I left to him to make out an order for nobody knows how many cartloads of plaster and guano and strolled down to look at my neighbor's fernery.

To my surprise I perceived that the fernery was not unoccupied this golden July morning. A young lady was there, working diligently with a little trowel.

I had come so directly upon her that there was no loophole of retreat. So I stood my ground bravely and said, "Good morning."

"Good morning," she answered. "I suppose you are my new neighbor, Mr. Raymond?"

"I have that honor," I said, bowing politely. "Your father has a fine place here."

"I have no father," answered the spirit of the flowers.

"I beg your pardon. I should say your husband."

"Nor husband either."

"May I say your brother?" I persisted, feeling hot all over, but sticking bravely to my guns.

"Not if you have any regard for the strict truth," she answered, with a sort of demure enjoyment of my perplexity. "I never had either brother or sister. Now, don't guess any more, and I will introduce myself. I am the owner of this place, and my name is Bertha Joycelyn."

I started a little. "Bertha Joycelyn!" This, then, was the fiancee of Richmond Kent, the wealthy broker, of whose eccentricity and talent I had heard so much. Truly Kent had chosen well.

We went together over the fairy domains. We investigated the conservatories, tested the gold and purple contents of the graperies and looked at the gardens. The house itself was all verandas and awnings and cool glimpses of fluttering muslin curtains and cream colored matting, but the grounds were like a chapter out of the "Arabian Nights."

"If you will come over tomorrow, and if you aren't afraid of mosquitoes and sunburn," said Miss Joycelyn independently, "I'll take you down the river to my water lily plantation."

"With pleasure. Shall I bring Jones along to row us?"

"Thanks," with a little shrug of the white muslin shoulders. "I always row myself."

I felt myself nobody. I would straightway begin to practice with the oars, I inwardly decided. A girl to excel me in manly sports! Never!

As I sat on my piazza that evening puffing my solitary cigar I thought with a singular pang what a fortunate fellow Kent was. A wife like that! What more could a man need?

It was a sultry September afternoon when I met him on Broad street. The city seemed hotter, dustier, more intolerable than ever. I wondered how men could breathe and thrive in an atmosphere like that and secretly longed for the time to come in which I might bury myself once more in my rural solitude.

"Hello, Raymond! Why, where have you been hiding all this time?"

"Kent, old fellow," and we shook hands in genuine American fashion.

"So you've been turning ornamental farmer, have you? Well, I never had any very great fancy for that kind of life. Upon my word, you've grown as brown as a berry. Make any stay in town?"

"No; I go back tonight."

"Sorry. I should have liked to have you to dinner at our house this evening; got a cook who is great, and there's an article of 'dry' that I can really depend upon. Besides I should have liked to introduce you to Mrs. Kent."

"Your mother?"

"No, my wife."

I stared vaguely at him.

"Married last month—an English girl without a particle of nonsense about her. You would like her, Raymond, I know." And his face beamed as he looked at me.

"But—Bertha Joycelyn?"

"Oh, Bertha Joycelyn!" He looked a little discomfited. "That's an old affair. She was a splendid girl, a regular princess, but we never were suited to each other."

I went home as lightly as if I were treading on air and surprised her, sitting by one of the windows, her chin in her hand and the down falling hair veiling her face, just as when I had first looked upon her.

"Bertha!"

She started. There were tears on her cheek in the mellow glow of the harvest moon.

"Bertha, you have been weeping!"

She tried to smile. "I—I believe I have been a little low spirited."

Was not this a romantic lovemaking to blossom over a Wall street broker's dry life. My old grandmother used to say there was a romance in every existence, and I believe she was right.—Exchange.

Wanted to Fit His Coffin.

There is not in Europe a more magnificent burial place than the mausoleum in the park of Hamilton palace, where the late Duke of Hamilton is interred. This mausoleum was built about 60 years ago by the late duke's grandfather (Duke Alexander, the son-in-law of Beckford) at a cost of £150,000, and Italian artists and workmen were principally employed. It is a square building, surmounted by a round tower and a stone cupola with bronze gates, which are copied from those of the old baptistery at Florence.

Duke Alexander, who died in 1854, is himself buried here in the alabaster sarcophagus of an Egyptian queen, which he purchased early in life when traveling in upper Egypt. This he always intended to be his own coffin, and it was kept in Hamilton palace for many years. The duke frequently lay down in the sarcophagus, and finding it to be too small for his body he left another direction that if necessary his breast bone should be sawed through, so that it might be doubled up and the corpse laid in the coffin which he had so carefully preserved for its reception. The sarcophagus was an exquisite piece of work and covered with hieroglyphics.—Westminster Gazette.

RED MEN AND PALE FACES MIX

An Enjoyable Programme Rendered—A Speech by the Great Junior Sagamore—Dance and Collation End the Anniversary

To those that do not know the Red Men the fact that a band of braves was gathering in the heart of our city last Friday might have been alarming, but to those who were present at Red Men's Hall to attend the sixth anniversary of Miantonomoh Tribe, I. O. R. M., last evening; there was none but the most pleasant memories of that great order.

The hall was crowded with the braves from the Miantonomoh and Paugh-Caugh-Naugh-Sinque tribes, the members of Iona Council, Degree of Pocohontas, and the numerous friends of all three. Besides the visitors that thronged the hall to overflowing there were four of the great chiefs of the order seated on the platform with Master of Ceremonies William A. Westphal. They were Great Sachem William Forsyth, of Jersey City; Great Sannap William Smythe, of Long Branch; Great Chief of Records Daniel M. Stevens, of Camden; Great Junior Sagamore David Peterson, of Paterson. District Deputy Sachem Charles Ulrich, of this city, was also seated at the place of honor.

The hall itself was decorated with bunting and flags while the chandelier was tastefully hung with Chinese lanterns. The committee which so successfully arranged the anniversary exercises consisted of Councilman William A. Westphal, chairman; Fred TenEyck, Charles Holdstein, David C. Allen and Michael Lealey.

After an opening selection by Prof. Guitman's orchestra, Chairman Westphal, who also acted as master of ceremonies, spoke a few words of welcome. The regular programme then opened with a piano solo by Mrs. Fred Canfield. B. T. Barnes sang Will Scarlet's forging song from "Robin Hood" which was loudly encored. George Leighs also brought forth hearty applause by his well rendered recitation of "The Stowaway." A vocal selection was delightfully rendered by Mrs. W. A. Westphal, and after she had responded to the loud applause, Great Sachem Forsyth was introduced.

He made a few apt remarks, and closed by saying that Brother Peterson, Great Junior Sagamore, was the speechmaker of the great chiefs and so he would leave the floor to him.

Mr. Peterson spoke of the origin of the order of Red Men in the colonial times when a band of young men, disguised as Indians, raided the English vessels and threw the chests of tea overboard. He told of the benefits of the order, the friendship of its members, and the large number that already belonged.

A violin solo by Joseph Sattells was the next number on the programme which was much appreciated as was shown by the applause. A tenor solo by Elmer Runyon was also encored, and was followed with a very enjoyable cornet solo by Mrs. J. D. Anderson. A song, with guitar accompaniment, by Harry Drier was listened to with interest, and a banjo solo by Will Force brought the programme to a close.

The floor was then cleared of seats and a dance and collation followed for which Prof. Guttman furnished the music.

HIGH VALUATIONS.

Property Owners Ask Big Prices for Watchung Avenue Extension.

A member of the Borough Council in speaking of the amounts desired by the various property owners along the proposed extension of Watchung avenue said that nearly everyone placed an exceedingly high valuation on their property. In some cases a slight strip would be sacrificed, yet the owners want $500 or $600 for that little strip.

In the case of St. Joseph's church the new street will pass between the church and the house owned by Mrs. Josephine Boice, leaving both on a corner, yet the church wants $1,200 and Mrs. Boice asks $1,000.

It seems as though it will be necessary to appoint commissioners to settle the whole affair.

Postponed Until Next Saturday.

The love-feast and shooting match that was to have taken place this afternoon in the farmer orator's (James E. Martine) orchard is postponed until next Saturday. Then there will be a large attendance, as there would have been today, weather permitting.

Pleasantly Surprised.

A pleasant surprise was arranged and given by Mrs. H. E. Gayle, of 18 Vine street, on Thursday evening to her husband. The occasion was the anniversary of his birthday, and while he was busily engaged writing, about twenty-five of his friends appeared. He was completely surprised but proved himself equal to the occasion. The time was pleasantly spent in congratulations, playing games, singing, etc., after which a bountiful collation was served.

OWNERS STATE THEIR PRICE

HOW MUCH IS WANTED FOR WATCHUNG AVENUE EXTENSION LAND.

Borough Councilmen Think That the Prices Are Too High and Commissioners of Appeal Will Probably Be Appointed.

Owing to the absence of Mayor B. A. Hegeman, Jr., Friday's adjourned meeting of the Borough Council was called to order by Councilman Lounsbury. The Mayor, however, came in later, having been detained on account of business.

Councilmen Peck, Howell, Schutt, Smith and Valiant answered to the roll call by Clerk Arnold.

A communication was then presented, signed by H. N. Spencer and others, asking that repair be made on Johnston's drive uniform with those made by the township.

The pay roll amounting to $19.50 was presented and later ordered paid.

Councilman Smith reported that the streets and public health committee had examined Harrison street and had decided that the borough could macadamize that thoroughfare for a lower figure than that offered by John Emmons, and later in the evening Councilman Howell offered a resolution which was carried that the committee be authorized to do the work. In regard to Johnston's drive, Councilman Smith stated that the street committee had looked into the matter and decided that the repairs should be made.

A resolution offered by Councilman Valiant gave the committee the power to go ahead and do the work.

President Lounsbury then stated the object for which the meeting was called, which was to hear from the property owners along the line of the proposed extension of Watchung avenue.

Borough Counsel Charles A. Reed then called off the names of the property owners, and the following owners or their representatives responded:

Miss Mary Maglone, Mrs. Elizabeth Mair, C. W. Taynor for Elmer E. Taynor (estate Nathaniel Taynor, and Mary E. Adams; Charles Daley for Mary E. Daley, Margaret Daley and Mrs. Roth; George Taynor, Lewis Bird, Fred Becker, Thomas Rutledge, Mrs. Josephine Boice, George White, Henry Strauss for Hannah Derlach and Ferdinand Strauss; Mrs. Messerschmidt, and Rev. Father W. H. Miller for St. Joseph's R. C. church.

The President then announced that the Council was prepared to hear from the above-named persons, and as their names were called they came forward and made a statement.

Mrs. Maglone said that she wanted $500, that being the amount of her damages. About fifteen feet would be taken off her property leaving it in such condition that the remainder would have to be filled in, on account of the ground at that point being so low.

Mrs. Elizabeth A. Mair, with a lot 32x100 on which stands a house, was willing to accept $2,600 for house and lot or $1,800 for lot.

Charles Taynor representing three lots offered them to the borough for $800 each, that being the lowest figure, and Charles Daley, representing three owners, placed a value of $600 on their property.

George Taynor wanted $2,000 for his house and lot which is right on the line.

A portion of the property owned by Lewis Bird, which is needed, was valued at $1,800 on account of it being on a corner.

The lot owned by Fred Becker was valued at $800, because his house would have to be moved.

Mrs. Mary E. Schenck valued her property at $1,000, for the reason that it would be on a corner, and 3½ feet would be taken off the front, and eight feet off the rear. Her house would also have to be moved.

Mrs. Josephine Boice, represented by her husband, wanted $1,000, as her property would stand on a corner.

George White valued his property along the line at $600.

Mrs. Messerschmidt was willing to sell her house and lot for $4,000, or the lot for $3,000.

For three houses on one lot John Rutledge asked $3,500.

Rev. Father Miller for St. Joseph's church, asked $1,200 for damages as the church would stand on a corner, not in his opinion very valuable to the church.

Henry Strauss, representing Hannah Derlach and Ferdinand Strauss, was not able to place a value on their property till he had learned something more in detail. The property is where the bridge that will span the brook will stand. He said that he would report in a few days in the matter.

This concluded the hearing, and Mayor Hegeman stated that the Council would have to consider the valuations and ascertain whether commissioners would have to be appointed.

In most all cases the members thought them too high.

Mr. Valiant then brought up the subject of Green brook, and quoted the remarks of Mayor Gilbert made at the last City Council meeting.

He thought that if the borough was emptying sewage matter in the brook it should be stopped, and if not the city should be made to prove their assertions.

Mayor Hegeman stated that Dr. Honeyman, from the borough Board of Health, had informed him that the borough Board of Health had challenged Plainfield to produce a single sewer pipe running into the brook from the borough.

Mr. Lounsbury thought the borough should demonstrate facts and not let the matter drop. He also thought that Mayor Gilbert had acted rather cool in regard to the matter.

It was decided to let the matter rest for the present until it was seen what effect the City Council's action would have on the brook.

Mr. Lounsbury then offered a resolution, which was carried, that the license and marshal committee purchase overcoats for the marshals at a cost of $18 each.

Council then adjourned.

Mary A. Livermore.

The School Suffrage lectures which include Mrs. Livermore for October 15th, bring to the citizens of Plainfield a rare opportunity. With great fitness Mrs. Livermore has been designated the queen of the American platform. Emerson says, "There is no true eloquence unless there is a man behind the speech." Mrs. Livermore's eloquent utterance is doubly effective because of the force of womanly character, of rarest quality, behind it. Her early interest for the abolition of slavery; her self sacrificing labors during the war in connection with the Sanitary Commission; her influential efforts for enlarged opportunities for women; her service in the cause of purity; her examplification of the choicest type of wifehood and motherhood, all combine to render her present platform service of very exceptional interest and value. She is a pioneer of the "new womanhood" in the best and highest sense. All who can do so, especially the young people of Plainfield, should improve the present opportunity to hear her.

A Successful Business Firm.

Marsh, Ayers & Co., the East Front street painters and decorators, have just finished painting the exterior of M. Estil's house on Grove street. It presents a handsome appearance and Mr. Estil is well pleased with it. On Monday they commence the painting of the exterior of the Dunellen Presbyterian church, which will give George Bilyeu, their high climber, another spire to paint, the second one he has done for this firm in a month.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher, That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

A SUBURB'S AWFUL PLIGHT.

NO OFFICERS TO RESTRAIN LAW BREAKERS.

South Plainfield Is Said to Be Without Protection Because Republicans Won't Serve and Refuse to Elect Democrats.

The New York World on Saturday contained the following:

The burglars who have so stirred up the people of Somerville are also operating along the entire lower end of the Jersey Central and Lehigh Valley Railroads. The easiest town they have yet found is South Plainfield, on the Valley road, about twenty-five miles from New York. Investigation into a recent robbery there reveals a truly startling condition of affairs. Although the place has nearly 500 inhabitants there is absolutely no local government. There is no peace officer within its precincts. At New Market, three miles away, there is a solitary constable.

Patrick Fitzgerald, hotel keeper, explains the situation thus: "The Republicans are in the majority here, and all of them are too proud to serve as Constable or Justice of the Peace. A Democrat would serve, but, out of spite, the Republicans won't elect one of 'em. That's why we haven't any government."

Other people, however, say the place is Democratic, and that the reason why no one cares to be a town official is because the fees would amount to practically nothing. There have been elections, nevertheless, and the latest successful candidates were Hiram H. Kelly for Justice and Daniel Sofield for Constable. Neither has ever taken out papers, and the official positions have consequently lapsed.

South Plainfield has more to complain of than burglars, however. There is no fire department, and not even a ladder or any part of a fire apparatus. Within a short time seven homes have been burned to the ground, all efforts of the bucket brigade to save them proving fruitless. And this is not all. Since there are no local officers, license of action is thus restrained. Plainfield, four miles away across country, is a strict and orderly place. It has twelve policemen, and the saloons are always tightly closed on Sunday. The rough element of Plainfield make pilgrimages to South Plainfield to drink and brawl. Two saloons, running night and day, afford ample facilities for orgies. Sundays the church people are jeered at and insulted.

Would Add Zest to Society Affairs.

The possibility of the establishment of a military post in Plainfield has excited local interest in a marked degree concerning the future movements of Uncle Sam's cavalry now stationed at Fort Myer, Va. Many people believe that a dash of military life would add to the attractions of the town and lend zest to local society affairs. It is unquestionably true that the government is considering the location in Plainfield of the calvary troop mentioned, and it is reasonably certain that the troop will go into barracks in some town along the Central Railroad of New Jersey.—New York Tribune.

Whistling to Keep up Courage.

Charles Hand, a Plainfield Republican, wagered a considerable amount that Griggs will not be elected, even before the Democratic nomination was made, which is evidence that he is willing to back up an opinion that doubtless the large mass of Republicans of the State secretly entertain, though they are "whistling to keep up courage."—Rahway Democrat.

Dr. Riggs' Lecture.

Rev. Dr. James F. Riggs, D. D., of New Brunswick, who preached so acceptably during the illness of Rev. C. Schenck in the Trinity Reformed church the past summer, has agreed upon Thursday evening, October 31st, as the date for his lecture on "Constantinople" under the auspices of the Ladies Christian Work society of the church.

THREE PRETTY WEDDINGS SOLEMNIZED YESTERDAY AFTERNOON.

Two Were Quiet Home Affairs, and the Other a Brilliant Church Event—All Popular Young People—The Details.

From the Press of October 12.

One of the prettiest weddings that has been witnessed in this city for some time was performed in St. Mary's R. C. church yesterday afternoon at five o'clock, when Miss Mary E. Ward, daughter of Mrs. Mary A. Ward, of Clinton avenue, was united in marriage to George J. Tobin, of West Fifth street.

The church presented a scene of rare beauty, with the choice arrangement of palms and roses. The altar and chancel were brilliantly illuminated with the numerous candles that surround it.

While the guests were entering the church, Miss St. Leger, organist, and Prof. Lowanzo, piccolo, rendered a choice selection of classic music. When the appointed hour arrived there were fully 600 people seated in the vast auditorium. At this time Rev. Father Smyth entered, accompanied by Rev. Father Stafford, President of Seton Hall College, South Orange, and Rev. Father Murphy. While they were standing in front of the altar, Mendelssohn's favorite wedding march pealed forth, giving the signal for the appearance of the bridal party.

First came Mrs. T. McGrath, of Brooklyn, gowned in white satin, trimmed with point lace. She was accompanied by Miss Mamie Dunigan, of Brooklyn, who wore a gown of Nile green silk trimmed with pink roses, and Miss Mamie Riordan, of New York, gowned in lavender silk, trimmed with green velvet and violets. Following was the bridemaid, Miss Kittie Riordan, of New York, on the arm of the groom. She was beautifully gowned in pink silk, covered with pale pink chiffon, and carried American Beauty roses. Then came the bride, leaning on the arm of her brother, Chas. Ward, who was best man. She was gowned exquisitely in white satin entrain, trimmed with duchess lace. She also wore a tulle veil and natural orange blossoms and carried a pearl prayer book.

The ceremony was impressively performed by Rev. Father Smyth, assisted by Revs. Father Stafford and Murphy, after which the bridal party retired from the church while Lohengrin's wedding march was being rendered. The party was taken to the home of the bride's mother on Clinton avenue, where a reception was held at eight o'clock. Mr. and Mrs. Tobin received costly and handsome presents from their many friends, including three silver service sets, china, silver knives and forks, banquet lamp, bric-a-brac, oil paintings and silver in many useful articles.

An elegant wedding supper was served by Max Wiertz during the reception. Mr. and Mrs. Tobin left on the 1:17 train last night for a three-weeks trip in the South. On their return they will reside for a time at the home of the bride's mother on Clinton avenue.

The ushers at the church were Joseph Tobin, of New York, brother of the groom, and John Ward, of this city, brother of the bride.

During the reception Rogers furnished excellent music for dancing, and the guests listened with pleasure to two soprano solos by Miss Keely.

Mr. Tobin has an established and successful plumbing business on North avenue, and his large circle of friends wish for him and his wife a most successful journey through life.

Day-Thorne.

It was chilly outdoors yesterday afternoon, but the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Thorne, of 411 La Grande avenue, was full of warmth and life. At four o'clock the marriage of their daughter, Miss Antoinette Gaines Thorne, and Mortimer Lincoln Day of this city, took place, and the house was full of happiness and good cheer in honor of it. The floral decorations were most beautiful, the predominant colors being pink and green.

Promptly at four o'clock the bridal party entered the parlor to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march and formed around a bower of palms, smilax and American Beauty roses. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. William R. Richards, and the bride given away by her father. The bride was charmingly attired in a gown of white faille silk and chiffon, and carried white bridal roses. Her veil was caught by a diamond sunburst, a gift of the groom, and a diamond lace pin, the gift of her uncle, Hon. Smith Ely, of New York.

The maid of honor was the bride's sister, Miss Katharine Rogers Thorne, who wore a gown of pink moire and satin and carried pink roses. The best man was J. Albert King Parker, of New York, and the ushers were Frederick Westervelt Day, of New York, and Frederick Green Smith, of this city. The presents were very numerous and costly, although the wedding was a quiet affair on account of the recent death of the sister of Mrs. H. A. Thorne.

The bridal couple left for a two-weeks tour in the northern part of New York State, after which they will take up their residence in New York.

Grover—Dalziel.

The marriage of Miss Mary Whitall Dalziel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Dalziel, of 117 Plainfield avenue, to James Grover, of Philadelphia, was performed yesterday afternoon at 2:30 at the home of the bride's parents by Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards. Mr. and Mrs. Grover left about four o'clock for a wedding tour. They will reside in Philadelphia.

THE HOME MISSIONS SYNOD.

PRESBYTERIAN WOMEN WORKERS MEET IN ANNUAL SESSION.

Address of Welcome by Rev. Dr. Richards—Reports of Officers Show a Flourishing Society—Officers Elected.

From the Press of October 11.

The eighteenth annual meeting of the Woman's Synodical Society of Home Missions in the Synod of New Jersey was called to order this morning at 9 o'clock by the President, Mrs. W. E. Honeyman, of this city, in the Crescent Avenue church.

The devotional exercises were conducted by Miss S. D. Thompson, of Elizabeth. After prayer was offered by Mrs. G. W. B. Cushing, of Newark, the Recording Secretary, Mrs. J. R. Gibson, of the same place, called the roll of delegates.

Rev. W. R. Richards, D. D., pastor of the Crescent Avenue church then spoke a few words of cordial greeting, giving all a most hearty welcome to the church, to which the President Mrs. W. E. Honeyman responded to in an appropriate manner, thanking the pastor and the church for their hospitality.

The report of the treasurer of the contingent fund, Mrs. J. H. Manning, was then read and showed the society to be in a flourishing financial condition. The report was received and filed as was also the report of the year's work by the corresponding secretary, Mrs. J. F. Pingry, of Elizabeth. The last report showed that much earnest work had been done.

Papers were then read by Miss M. K. Jones, of Englewood, on Young People's Work, and by Mrs. William Nelson, of Paterson, on Our Literature. Both were well prepared and interesting.

President Mrs. W. E. Honeyman followed with a brief talk on Prospective Work of the Society. She gave an outline of what the society ought to do along important branches of home mission work.

The next number was a stirring address on 'Our Country's Perils,' by Mrs. Darwin R. James, President of the Woman's Executive Committee, of New York.

A selection by the church choir was then rendered while the offering was being made. An interesting feature followed, a question box conducted by Mrs D. E. Finks, editor of the Home Mission Monthly. Many valuable questions were asked and answered, concerning important points in the work.

Mrs. M. C. DeVore, of Alaska, was then introduced and gave a brief talk on her work among the Alaskans, which was thoroughly interesting.

The nominating committee then made their report and as a result the following officers were chosen for the ensuing year:

President, Mrs. W. E. Honeyman, Plainfield; Vice-presidents, Mrs. J. H. Owens, Paterson; Mrs. G. W. B. Cushing, Newark; Mrs. C. H. Langdon, Elizabeth; Mrs. J. M. Paul, New Brunswick; Mrs. Charles Brearly, Trenton; Mrs. D. C. Blair, Belvidere; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. J. F. Kelley, Elizabeth; Recording Secretary, Mrs. J. R. Gibson, Newark; Secretary of Literature, Mrs. Wm. Nelson, Paterson; Young People's Secretary, Miss M. K. Jones, Englewood; Treasurer Contingent Fund, Mrs. J. H. Manning, Plainfield.

The meeting adjourned after the singing of a hymn and the benediction. About 300 were present. The delegates then retired to the Sunday-school room, where lunch was served. This afternoon is being devoted to foreign missions.

STOLE TWO BICYCLES.

A Thief Makes Way With the Wheels of Somerset Street Young People.

A bicycle thief visited the woodshed in the rear of the residence of J. A. Blatz, of Somerset street, and now Miss Etta Blatz and Frank Blatz are both mourning the loss of their Apollo wheels.

The wheels were placed in the woodshed as usual last evening and this morning they were gone. The lanterns which stood near by were not taken. The woodshed door was not locked, and the thief had no difficulty in making his entrance. The police have been notified and active steps will be taken for their recovery.

—The Victor Wheelmen will hold an entertainment at T. A. B. Hall on October 22d.

NATIONAL FANTASTIC STEPS.

ALL THE COUNTRIES TO BE REPRESENTED IN THE KIRMESS.

Elaborate Arrangements Being Made for Its Opening and It Will be the Big Society Event of This Season.

"Shall I take part in the Kirmess?," is the question that is worrying the minds of many of the young people of Plainfield today, for the list of those that are to take part in the drills are being made out and all the preparations are being actively pushed.

The Kirmess, which is to begin on Monday evening, November 11th, and continue through the rest of the week, will be unlike the one held last winter in several respects. It is to be held at the Crescent Cycle Academy and a stage is to be erected at the far end of the large hall. On the stage the drills will be held, while around the sides booths will be arranged, each representing some country. At the booth of the nation they represent those taking part will gather when not on the stage and at the conclusion of the drills a sort of fair and social will be held, when refreshments and fancy articles will be sold at the different booths and an informal social gathering held.

The drills will be given under the direction of Miss Stewart, of Middletown, N. Y., who has just conducted a Kirmess at Scranton at which $9,000 was realized. The rehearsals begin Monday evening and will be continued up to the the opening of the Kirmess.

Miss Stewart will be kept busy arranging and rehearsing the participants. As yet, of course, nothing has been done except to select the dances and place them in the hands of different Plainfield women. It was the original plan to give one drill to each church to look after but several of the churches were unable to secure the requisite number and so the original idea had to be changed. The drills and those who have been appointed to look after them are as follows: Military, Mrs. George B. DeRevere and Miss Verdon, of the Roman Catholic church; Indian, Mrs. H. M. Blish, of the First Presbyterian church; Scotch, Mrs. Charles P. Leggett, of the Trinity Reformed church; Tarantelle of Italy, Mrs. S. P. Cruikshank; Gypsy, Mrs. F. H. Andrews; Spanish, Mrs. James Scott; German Harvest, Miss Schipper; Minuet, Mrs. Walter Stewart; Pardon of Brittany, to be selected later.

Besides these drills there will be others for the younger set, which will be only in the afternoon. The drills and those in charge are: May, Mrs. S. P. Huntington; Hornpipe, Mrs. Chas. E. Brooks; Flowers and Bees, Mrs. Edward Perkins; Carnival, Mrs F. S. Martin; Japanese, Mrs. Charles W. McCutchen.

The Plainfield Bicycle Club has given the use of its club house for the holding of the rehearsals and here they will begin on Monday. The Kirmess is to be given by the Women's Auxiliary of Muhlenberg Hospital, the executive committee of which has the arrangements to make. The committee is composed of Mrs. D. T. VanBuren, chairman; Miss Cock, Miss Nettie Haviland, Mrs. John Bushnell, Miss Shipper, Mrs. Roland Cox, and Mrs. S. P. Huntington. There will be no outside talent in the drills and all the Plainfield dealers will be exclusively patronized.

The summer has been a busy one at the hospital and the expenses have kept pace with the number of patients.

The Kirmess is for the benefit of the hospital and, as it is the only one between Trenton and Elizabeth, it is hoped that the people of the surrounding towns will give their support. Arrangements will be made regarding special trains and rates for the week of the Kirmess and everything arranged so that those who come may pass a pleasant evening, besides aiding a very worthy cause.

BOTH KNEW THE VALUE OF TIME.

So They Helped Themselves to Watches and Other Property.

Two houses were broken into last evening, one at each end of the town. Someone entered the home of George W. Kennedy, of West Third street, and left as silently as he came, accompanied by fifteen chickens and a gold watch. The silverware was left untouched.

The other robbery occurred at the home of Mrs. Scherenbeck, of Terrill road. The thief helped himself to the eatables in the pantry, selected a bundle of clothes and appropriated a watch and chain. He also left for parts unknown. The police have been notified and are working on both cases although there is little clue to the thieves.

Board for Prisoners.

The Somerset Board of Freeholders on Tuesday fixed the price of board for prisoners in the county jail at thirty-five cents a day to take effect with the beginning of the next sheriff's term of office. A small brick building is to be erected for the use of tramps. The County Collector was authorized to borrow $10,000.

A CRITIC.

She wanders through St. Peter's
And makes herself at home,
She shudders at the altar,
But she quite approves the dome.

With coldly cultured glances
And discriminating frown
She calmly does the Vatican
And turns old masters down.

An "Unknown" nymph may please her,
If "rapturously Greek,"
But Raphael is "spotty"
And lacking in "technique."

He doesn't "satisfy" her,
But Titian was "a dear;"
Del Sarto "knew his colors,"
And she likes his "atmosphere."

To hear her on mosaics
Or frescoes or on jade
You never would believe her
A breezy western maid,

Or dream, before she went abroad,
With wild, expectant joy,
She'd never traveled twenty miles
From Cairo, Illinois!

Unexpected Effect of the Story About Washington and the Cherry Tree.

On Sunday afternoon Daddy November and Uncle Luke were seated on the deck of "de lilan steamboat wot run between Chalston en Sulliban lilan en stop at Mount Pleasant when e gwine en when e come back." Daddy was telling a story.

"Befo' de wah," said he, "w'en I been slabe, my ole massa lib een big house een Rutledge street, close to de street wot call Calhoun now, but use to be call Boundary street. Dr. Parkhurst's Early Training.

If I speak confidently and feelingly upon this point, it is because I know how much I owe personally to the fact of being brought up in a home where I was taught to appreciate the greatness of righteous authority, the vastness of its meaning, the advantage of submitting to it and the serious risk of resisting it, writes the Rev. Charles H. Parkhurst, D. D., in The Ladies' Home Journal. No anarchist could ever have graduated from the home I was born, loved and chastised in. Such experience makes me pity the children who know no discipline but that of caresses and sweatmeats and makes me more than pity the parents who have neither the discernment in their mental constitution nor the iron in their moral constitution to perceive that nothing which a child can know or can win can begin to take the place of sense of superior authority and of the holy right of that authority to be respected, revered and obeyed.

The moral strength of a man is measured pretty accurately by the cordial reverence with which he regards whatsoever has the right to call itself his master. Estimated by this criterion the average American boy is a discouraging type of humanity and is a severe reflection upon the crude attempts at manhood manufacture evinced by the typical American home. If our homes cannot turn out children that will respect authority, there will be no authority in a great while either at home, in the state or anywhere else that will be worth their respecting.

The Harvard Cross.

The iron cross, burnished with gold, which is over one of the entrances to the Harvard college library (Gore hall) was at the time of the 1745 siege of Louisburg taken from a Catholic chapel there and brought to Massachusetts as one of the spoils of the victory. In 1877 Justin Winsor, the librarian of Harvard College library, found it in the cellar of the library and had it gilded and placed in the position which it now occupies. The fact that an entrance to one of the main buildings of the oldest and most distinguished college in once Puritan Massachusetts should be thus adorned with a religious symbol which is usually to be found only on Roman Catholic buildings or on Anglican churches of an extreme type argues religious liberality in these days which would make some of the anti-Catholic crusaders who took part in the Louisburg expedition lift their voices in stern rebuke of the degeneracy of their countrymen. But the world outgrows such baneful religious and partisan zeal.—Boston Transcript.

Weight of a Cubic Foot of Gold.

If some millionaire agreed to give you a cubic foot of pure gold if you should put it in a sack and carry it across the Eads bridge and back do you think you would be equal to the task? Certainly you are confident of your ability to perform the task, but I want to tell you that there would not be the least danger of the man of money losing his gold cube. Such a lump of virgin gold would weigh a few grains over 1,203 pounds.—St. Louis Republic.

To know by rote is no knowledge. It is only a retention of what is intrusted to the memory. That which a man truly knows may be disposed of without regard to the author or reference to the book from whence he had it.—Montaigne.

New York stands first in hops with 20,063,029 pounds, Washington being second with 8,313,280 pounds and California third with 6,547,338 pounds.

It is believed that the value of the personal property of this country equals if not exceeds that of the real estate.

HOME CHARITY.

Aminta, charming and aristocratic, in the vastly becoming dress of an order.

Marcia, ditto, ditto, in the vastly becoming dress of another order.

Scene—A coffee palace in the east end.

Aminta—You here! The very last person I should have thought of seeing. What in the world brings you to these parts? And what a sweet little love of a bonnet and cloak!

Marcia—You, Aminta! You can't think how deliciously refreshing it is to see somebody you used to know before you had an object in life! I wish I had known before I made up this costume for myself that there was an order with such a perfect dream of a dress as yours. I don't think it interferes with one's moral influence and—er—power over the masses to be properly got up, do you? Come and have some tea—a penny cup—and tell me where you are staying and what you are doing and everything.

Aminta—Two lumps? I gave up sugar last month, on principle, you know—I haven't an idea what principle—and now quite dislike it, which is a perfect blessing, because the self denial goes on all the same, you see, and the unpleasantness doesn't. Oh, I'm living in Henrietta street, and I'm elevating the people. I must have been doing it almost three weeks, I think, and papa said—fathers are so unsympathetic—that it was only a freak and wouldn't last. It is so horribly clean and respectable that I assure you for the first week I was perfectly miserable.

Marcia—Yes, I know that feeling myself, where I am in Powers court. A court sounds beautifully immoral, don't you think? But I assure you there hasn't been a single brawl or even a drunken Irishman since I have been there, while some of the children actually have a clean pinafore once a week and a bath every fortnight. How do you elevate your masses?

Aminta—Well, I don't know exactly. A man from Oxford—such an exquisite, intellectual face, only rather spoilt by the most frightful boots—gives the sweetest little classes on Swinburne and Rossetti and that sort of thing. I go to keep the masses in order, only there never have been any masses, quite fortunately for me, except one smash, who was a costermonger, who came in because of the stove, he said, and went to sleep all the time. And then there are teas for feathers and fringes, and you have to try to drop in a few refining words with the sugar. And what is your order for, Marcia?

Marcia (readily)—Oh, it's called the "Society For the Amelioration of the Condition of the Poor In Their Own Homes," and it means that you call on them and tell them not to hang out their washing to dry in the sitting room—they haven't anywhere else to hang it, you know, but that's not your fault—and how to bring up 14 children on 10 shillings a week and that kind of thing, which would be easy enough, only it is so dreadfully discouraging when you find out, as you always do, that the poor really seem to know more about their own business than you do. What—er—made you go in for elevating, Aminta?

Aminta (with confusion and a slight blush)—Go in for it?

Marcia (putting down her cup and looking up with interest)—Yes.

Aminta—Oh, I don't know exactly. Lots of things. The world seems always rather hollow at the end of the season, don't you think? And we were going to be buried alive for the rest of the year in Hampshire, where, mamma said—mamma is so effete, you know—I should find lots of duties awaiting me, which was enough to discourage any girl. And I looked over somebody's articles—I forget whose—in a magazine—I forget which—all about woman's work, Woman with a capital, you know, and—

Marcia (with a sigh)—How odd! It was just the same with me.

Aminta (sympathetically)—With you?

Marcia—Almost exactly. I'd tried everything, you know. I had been in for golf and skirt dancing and literature and rational dress and new womanhood and reciting and cooking and novel writing and bicycling and everything, but it was—all—

Aminta (sentimentally)—Bran and sawdust.

Marcia—I wasn't a bit hasty, I assure you. So when I found out that in the Society For the Amelioration, etc., you know, you could choose your own dress and only had to do with the refuse of the population I had the sweetest selection of caps and bonnets and decided finally.

Aminta (with tender admiration)—How brave of you!

Marcia—Well, it was rather. My people persecuted me dreadfully. And Tom would say, when people remarked to him "How sweet of your sister," "Oh, she's been crossed in love, I suppose. They all do it."

Aminta (with a start and a blush)—Tom! And that's just what Charlie—you used to know Charlie when you were in the world, didn't you?—says about me.

Marcia (with a blush)—Charlie?

(There is a long pause.)

Aminta—Was it Charlie, Marcia?

Marcia—Was it Tom, Aminta?

(There is the longest pause of all.)

Aminta—Because if it should have been Charlie it wasn't that he did not care for you, but that until Uncle Julian most thoughtfully died last week he hadn't enough money to say he cared for you.

Marcia—Was it that? And if it should have been Tom, Aminta, until he got his commission, you know, a sense of honor—such an inconvenient thing, isn't it?—prevented him from telling you his real feelings.

(A pause.)

Marcia—Can you come to tea with me tomorrow? Five, Powers court, you know. Tom might be there too.

Aminta—I shall be delighted, if you don't mind my bringing Charlie, who is coming to see me in Henrietta street.

Marcia (as they part)—Shall you much mind coming down from your elevation, Aminta?

Aminta—Shall you dreadfully miss your society for ameliorating, Marcia?—Black and White.

The Industrious Man.

There was a very hardworking and steadfast man. And he arose at daybreak, and he took needle and thread, also a button, and he sewed and he sewed. When nightfall came his task was ended. The button was well attached to his breeches, and as the man looked at it he felt conscious pride in his work, for he had labored long and had sewed on a single button, and when he went to rest that night he said unto himself, "This has been a good day, and my task it has been accomplished." And he slept well and soundly and in perfect peace with himself and his surroundings.—Parco Mola's Inventions.

THE DOGS OF BRUSSELS.

In That City Ten Thousand Canines Are Made Into Beasts of Burden.

In this country the dog is, in nine cases out of ten, the master of the man. In continental Europe the reverse is the case, the dog there being too often the martyr of the man. In Belgium is this especially noticeable, for one of the first things that impresses the stranger in Brussels is the immense number of dogs employed in drawing barrows and small carts about the streets. In that city alone over 10,000 dogs are so engaged, and the total number of draft dogs in the whole country is probably not less than 50,000.

Generations of servitude have made the Belgian dog a race apart. For his size he is said to possess the greatest pulling power of any animal, four times his own weight being considered a load well within his power. Taking his average weight as half a hundredweight this means that something like 5,000 tons are daily dragged about by canine labor in Belgium.

The economic importance of the Belgian dog and his inability to give effective expression to his own grievances have caused the Royal Society For the Protection of Animals to undertake an agitation for the amelioration of his lot. It is urged that the animals are frequently overloaded and often cruelly treated and that in many cases they are given no opportunity for resting when the cart or barrow is not actually in motion. Among the reforms demanded are (1) the abolition of the whip and severe penalties against the brutal practice of kicking tired out dogs; (2) the raising of the minimum shoulder height for dogs of burden from 20 to 22 inches; (3) a penalty against drunkenness when in charge and against the employment of children as drivers, and (4) the compulsory arrangement of harness and shafts so as to permit the animals to lie down when the vehicle is at rest. Although there is no demand as yet, by either the dogs or their biped friends, for an eight-hour law, there can be no doubt that the adoption of these planks in the platforms of canine emancipation will be hailed with gratitude throughout weary dogdom in the domain of King Leopold.—Baltimore News.

A RISKY BUSINESS.

The Habit Indians Have of Sewing the Lips of the Deadly Cobras.

A large cobra de capello was sent home several years ago to Sir Joseph Fayrer, who wanted a supply of venom for analysis. It bit the spoon repeatedly without yielding any, and upon examination was found to have none to yield, not only its fangs but the poisonous glands having been extirpated. A protective operation still more cruel is sometimes practiced by novices in the art of charming and consists of securing the mouth with a stitch of silk passed through the lips in front.

To perform this the poor beast's head is held tightly pressed to the ground by a short stick on which the foot rests, while the other foot restrains the writhing body, leaving both hands at liberty for the needle. Eleven apparently healthy cobras were on one occasion received at the London Zoological gardens. They refused to feed and grew thin. When one died it was discovered that its mouth was sewn up with stitches so fine as to be invisible to any but the closest scrutiny. The rest of them did well on being restored to their normal condition.

In connection with this subject I may mention that a rattlesnake was sent to me from up the country when I was in Demerara, with the history that it had killed a cooly on one of the plantations. It had been badly injured about the spine, probably in capture, so that on reaching me it was not only dead, but decomposed, and I was not able to make any very complete dissection, but I found that its lips were tied together with stitches—obviously the effort of an unpracticed hand, since the work was very coarse.

This had apparently been preceded by an unsuccessful attempt to extract the long, erectile, needlelike fangs, for one of these was twisted half round with its bony base and had penetrated the lower lip when the jaws were forcibly closed. It is hardly possible that the duct was not occluded, but enough venom must have remained within the tube of the tiny, delicate syringe to inflict a fatal scratch.—Exchange.

A Scientific Enthusiast.

It is a common error to think of science as opposed to all the poetry of life and scientists as the most cold and matter of fact men. In reality the true scientist is almost always a poet at heart, and the greater he is the more certain is he to be a pure enthusiast and of a deeply reverent spirit. Kepler, exclaiming in the moment of his great discovery, "O God, I think thy thoughts after thee!" is a type of this.

Professor Farrar, who occupied the chair of natural philosophy at Harvard university two-thirds of a century ago, was a man possessed of this enthusiasm for his work, and was beloved by his pupils, whom he inspired with something of his own spirit.

One day the class entered the lecture room and found the professor walking backward and forward, with kindled eye and working face, holding a ball in his hand. Presently he stopped and confronted the class and exclaimed, suiting the action to the word:

"I toss this ball into the air; the earth rises up to meet it and the stars bow down to do it reverence!"

Probably no member of the class who heard these words ever forgot their absolutely accurate lesson—that action and reaction are equal; that the apple which falls to the earth at the same time draws the earth to itself in the exact ratio of their relative weight, and disturbs even the course of the planets and stars. Still less could they forget the grandeur and unity so vividly expressed in that brief imagery.—Youth's Companion.

A Hint to an Advertiser.

An up town firm recently advertised for a lady stenographer, requesting each applicant to state her age. Among the numerous answers was the following epistle:

"To ask a lady her age is considered highly improper, and you people ought to know so, but you don't. Why don't you advertise you want a lady of such and such an age? Please bear this in mind."—Philadelphia Call.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

By Committee on Re-indexing county Records, etc.:

The committee that was especially appointed for the purpose of considering the question of re-indexing the County Records and to report to the Board the most feasible plan, do respectfully report that they have thoroughly considered the matter, have seen and discussed various plans which have been presented to them, and we are unanimously of the opinion that the system owned by the William F. Murphy's Sons Company, of Philadelphia, is by far the best system for the needs of our County.

Under this system we will eventually need between fifty and sixty books, these books will cost twenty-five dollars each, and are of a very high grade of workmanship and material. The system is a patented one, and the patentees have stated their willingness to indemnify the County against any loss which might be incurred, if the same should hereafter be declared an infringement upon any other patent.

They have also agreed to make what changes it may be thought advisable to make, in the printing and spacing. Your committee have also considered the question of cost for labor in transcribing from the original deeds to the new indexes, and we are of the opinion that the work can be properly done at a cost of seven cents per line of the new index, or seven cents per name, counting the Grantor and Grantee as one name. In our opinion the work cannot be completed in much less than three years, and it will not be necessary for us to procure the books any faster than they are needed and a yearly appropriation of four or five thousand dollars will give the County in a few years, a system as good, if not superior to any in the State.

We therefore recommend that the William F. Murphy's Sons Company's system be accepted, and that the committee be empowered to contract for the labor, at an expense not to exceed seven cents per name, or line.

Very respectfully yours,
George W. Littell,
James C. Ogden,
Addison S. Clark,
Committee.

Freeholder Haliday moved that the report be received and recommendation adopted. After some discussion and an explanation by County Collector Wood of the need and benefits of the proposed system, the motion of Freeholder Haliday was on roll call unanimously adopted.

THE NEW IDEAL OF WOMAN.

MRS. MARY A. LIVERMORE HAS ORIGINAL AND INTERESTING VIEWS.

She Says the Woman of the Present Time Believes in Physical Development and Cares Not for Newspaper Ridicule.

Those who failed to hear Mrs. Mary A. Livermore lecture in the chapel of the First Presbyterian church Monday evening missed a rare opportunity of hearing a talented woman. The chapel was filled with a cultured audience, who thoroughly enjoyed the lecture. The talented woman entered the room accompanied by David P. Hall, who introduced her in a few well chosen words, in which he said that her work on behalf of woman and education had endeared her to the hearts of all. Mrs. Livermore's subject, "A Dream of Tomorrow," was certainly an ideal one in every respect. She commenced by giving a most vivid description of a vessel starting on a voyage, how every need of the ship and the crew is amply provided for, and the course she is to sail laid out. This she likened to the human voyage. Continuing, she said in part:

That man sails a mysterious voyage under sealed orders. It is not possible to forcast the future. Every age, race and generation has left something of real value, until today the civilized nations know something of this great voyage, which knowledge has been gained through the grand thinking of lofty thoughts of noble men.

There never has been a time when there has not been a belief that better things are coming. We are comforted with this hope that there are better things beyond. Every summer I take a trip to the White Mountains and I enjoy looking at the face of the "old man in the mountains," who seems to be looking ahead into the deep future. We are anchored up to our necks in trouble and surely there is something better to look forward to. The best thinkers tell us there is. German scientists tell us that man has a sixth sense, commensurate with the world's progress which makes it possible for him to be cognizant of higher intellectual obtainments.

Man has been surrounded with labor saving machinery, simply because it was not intended that he should work himself to death, but have more time to build himself up intellectually.

The great advantages of the press, telegraph or telephone are incalculable. They tell us what Congress is doing or not doing, of the things that happen in foreign countries, and sometimes before the people in those countries know it themselves. Recently I was riding on a railroad train to Boston when I met an eminent railroad man who told me that in five years the principal roads in the country would be equipped with electric motors in the place of engines.

Mr. Edison told me recently that electricity would be used at an early date to take ships across the ocean and instead of 3,000 tons of coal being used, 250 tons would answer the same purpose.

Physical development has grown to be a fad, and women have taken to the wheel. Newspaper criticism on the subject has failed for the first time to destroy woman's enjoyment, for they act indifferent to the criticisms and cartoons that are incessantly brought before them. This fad has grown so that the gymnasium is preferred to the library. But the cycle and gymnasium can be abused, and injure the heart so that it cannot be cured.

Before long it will be a passion among women to grow strong, healthy and robust. There was a time when it was decidedly offensive to be so, and women would boast of being delicate.

When I was a young girl there were fourteen occupations open to women; now there are 350. People talk of unsexing women, but I don't understand it. When a girl starts out on her wheel for a ride I don't believe she will come back a boy. In Massachusetts there are 100,000 more marriageable women than men. After twenty years of married life I discovered that I was masquerading about in my husband's things and he found it out the same day I did. He went to the bank to draw some of my money on an order I had given him. When he presented it the cashier told him the order wasn't necessary, for according to the laws of Massachusetts everything that a married woman had belonged to her husband.

Mrs. Livermore closed her lecture by stating that Christianity was better understood today than when Christ taught it on earth, and after repeating a beautiful bit of prose the evening's enjoyment was brought to an end.

Mr. Hall then announced the fourth lecture in the course for the benefit of school suffrage for New Jersey women, which will take place Tuesday afternoon at four o'clock in the Y. M. C. A. Hall by Miss E. Marguerite Lindley, on "The Coming Girl and How Shall We Rear Her?"

A WEDDING ANNIVERSARY.

Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Clifton Celebrate the Sixteenth Year of Wedded Life.

It cleared off last Tuesday just in time for the relatives and friends who gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Clifton, of West Second street, to celebrate the sixteenth anniversary of their wedding. The evening was spent most enjoyably with music, recitations and conversation. The house was handsomely decorated for the occasion. Later in the evening a dainty supper was served, after which the party broke up, all having spent a delightful evening.

Among those present were: Dr. H. G. Wagoner, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Dakin, Arthur Walton, and P. Dakin Wagoner, of Somerville; Mr. and Mrs. William G. Wagoner and Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Wagoner, of Newark; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Baynon, of Orange; Mr. and Mrs. William C. Ayers, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Morse, Miss M. G. Morse, Miss Eda Beekman, and John V. Beekman, Jr.

HE KNOWS BETTER NOW.

But Someone Is Wearing His Daughter's Shoes and Enjoying the Mistake.

There is one Plainfield man that is minus a pair of shoes but he has gained considerable knowledge. Monday morning he started for the shoemaker's shop on Madison avenue, between Front and Second streets. When he arrived there he found that the shop had not opened yet, but in front of it stood a man whom he supposed to be an assistant. He gave him the pair of shoes and explained what was to be done. Then he went on his way to his work. In the evening he returned and went after the shoes but, sorrowful to relate, the shoes were not there and had not been seen. There was no assistant in the shop and the man that stood in front of the store in the morning was missing.

THEATRICAL.

"Cupid's Chariot," a minstrel farce comedy, is to play in Music Hall on Monday night, and from all reports will be one of the season's biggest novelties. The company is composed of a score of pretty girls and clever comedians, and is staged on an elaborate scale with elegant costumes and beautiful scenery. The cast is a very strong one, among its members can be found such universal favorites as George Thatcher and George Powers, the autocrats of negro minstrelsy, Raymon Moore, the world's best ballad singer, Miss Alma Earle, the clever soubrette, the famous Claflin Sisters, Edith Arnold, Selma Langdon, Dan Waldron, William Ritchie, B. S. Carnes, and others.

A THRIVING BUSINESS.

Edsall's Commercial Palace Making Additions to Stock.

Edsall's Commercial Palace is enjoying a thriving business just now with a flattering prospect of a genuine "boom" as soon as colder weather sets in. Mr. Edsall says that his house has never before offered such remarkable inducements as now. Goods of all kinds were never so cheap as at present, and his buyers in the different departments have bought direct from the manufacturer and importer the choicest and most desirable goods, which enables him to compete successfully with the large stores in New York or Newark. The preparation for the fall, winter and holiday trade is immense. A truckload of dolls and toys arrived today, and will soon be exposed for sale in a special department, which is being fitted up in the big basement, about one hundred feet long by twenty wide.

LIMITED.

are doing all the business. Our stock is the largest, prices are the lowest and terms the easiest in the city. Just give it a passing thought that you can get an antique oak bedroom suit, 8 pieces, for $15, $20, $25 and $30, including a woven wire bed spring and a mixed mattress. No house in the city offers such inducements.

And then to think again that you can get tapestry Brussels carpet for 50, 60, and 70 cents a yard, made and laid with paper, which is a saving of 15c per yard. Where is there a house in the city that will offer such bargains?

And then imagine and wonder how we can afford to give away a moquette rug or parlor table with a parlor suit for $20, $30, $40 or $50.

Some of our competitors say that our ads are too much sameness and that this ad. is old. Well, we will admit it, but as long as it does the business and saves the people money we will continue to run it.

MOST PEOPLE GO TO CHURCH

VALUABLE CHURCH STATISTICS GATHERED BY THE MINISTERS.

An Interesting Table Showing the Number of Families Attending Church and Whether They Prefer One Denomination

During the summer a church canvass was made of Plainfield and North Plainfield, under the direction of the Ministers' Association, from which the following figures have been compiled, which may be of interest to the general public. The figures given are for families, and not individuals, except in cases where there is but one member of a family in the city. The first column shows the number of families who attend one of the churches of the denomination named. The second column shows the number of families who have a preference for the church named, although they do not call themselves regular attendants at the church:

	Attend	Preference
Baptist	674	45
Seventh Day Baptist	76	1
Congregational	93	11
Episcopal	361	41
Methodist Episcopal	422	34
Presbyterian	826	74
Trinity Reformed	278	17
Other Protestant Churches	256	30
Salvation Army	21	2
Total families attending Protestant Churches	2,967	255
Roman Catholic Churches	473	8
Total families attending Christian Churches	3,440	263

Against these 3,440 families who attend Christian churches there are 523 families who do not attend:

Families expressing a preference merely	263
Hebrew Families	24
Families expressing no preference and without church affiliation	236
	523

These figures are as nearly correct as an ordinary census can make them. Possibly the Roman Catholic churches are not credited with their full number of attendants.

MRS. BRUNN'S SIDE.

She Says She Never Drinks But Takes Good Care of Her Children.

There is generally two sides to every story and so it is with the trouble between Peter Brunn and his wife. Borough residents who have interested themselves in the case seem to differ as to which of the couple is to blame. Many say that the husband is the one, instead of the wife.

Mrs. Brunn, accompanied by two of the children, whom it was endeavored to take to New York yesterday, called at The Press office this afternoon and said that she was very much injured to feel that anyone should accuse her of drinking and neglecting the children. She said that she never does this, but works out every day in order that she may be able to support and send them to school. She claims that the children do not want to leave her. The oldest girl, who has a remarkable growth of hair, added here that what her mother stated was true—that she nor her sisters did not want to leave their mother.

Mrs. Brunn claims that her husband has spent the money that she has earned, and that he does not now live at home and that he contributes nothing to her support.

Sewage Beds Soon to Be Finished.

"Many of the citizens of Rainsville, Indiana, are never without a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house," says Jacob Brown, the leading merchant of the place. WORK OF THE GRAND JURY.

A THREE-WEEKS SESSION AND FIFTY-FIVE INDICTMENTS.

Justices of the Peace Censured for Unnecessarily Burdening the Courts With Trivial Cases—No Liquor Men Indicted.

The Union County Grand Jury, after a three-weeks session, came into court at noon Monday with fifty-five bills of indictment, which they presented to Judge VanSyckel. There were also three presentments which were not made public. The jury reported failure to find any true bills against Michael Kildea and Henry Sampson, two waiters who were accused of starting a riot at the Beechwood Hotel, Summit, and resisting an officer.

No indictment was found against Larry Sheridan, of Summit, charged with forgery, or Michael McDonald, of the same place, who was charged with assault and battery at Roselle.

Henry Pendleton, of Westfield, and Mary Sullivan, both charged with assault, also escaped indictment. All these were held prisoners in the county jail and Judge Van Syckel ordered their release.

The arraignment of persons against whom indictments have been found will begin on Wednesday.

The Grand Jury also brought in a general presentment against the various Justices of the Peace in the county for the manner in which they unnecessarily burden the courts with trivial complaints that should never be sent to the Grand Inquest to consider. Another presentment was in reference to the complaints lodged by the Christian Citizenship Union, of Elizabeth, against several prominent local saloon-keepers who were charged with Sunday selling. The Grand Jury pointed out that it required proof of three consecutive sales, or violations of the law, to convict the accused dealer, and that where there was a city ordinance governing the the sale of liquor on Sunday, as in Rahway and Elizabeth, the Common Pleas Court had no jurisdiction in the matter.

A third presentment called the attention of the Union Township Board of Health to the existence of a nuisance in that township which steps are now being taken to abate.

MARRIED AGAINST THEIR WILL.

An Old Couple Furnish Amusement for a Tipsy East Front Street Man.

An East Front street resident took a drop too much Sunday evening and it left him in a jolly mood. He called an old woman, about sixty years, who boarded at his house, and his hired man, about seventy-five years of age, and informed them that he was going to marry them.

Both the old people strenuously objected to the ceremony, but the imbiber of strong drinks was boss and he read the marriage ceremony, and told the old couple that they were man and wife. The old man started off to the barn, without a word, and slept there that night.

"I wouldn't live with him as his wife if I were paid for it," declared the indignant woman as she departed in the other direction.

The East Front street man thought the whole matter a splendid joke.

Death of Prof. Bartow.

Prof. Bartow, of Bound Brook, who is well known all over the United States as a musician of rare ability, died very suddenly at his home Monday night of diabetes. Mr. Barlow's son was playing in Music Hall and received a telegram to come home immediately. He passed away soon after his son's arrival.

The latter was to have been married tomorrow evening in Brooklyn and the event will probably be changed to some future date. Decedent was Chancellor of Somerset Lodge, No. 56, K. of P., of Bound Brook, and the lodge will take charge of the funeral services.

CANDIDATE GRIGGS SPEAKS.

THE EX-SENATOR ADDRESSES THE REPUBLICAN MASS-MEETING.

Hon. Roswell G. Horr Also Talks and Tells Funny Stories—Ex-Judge Codington Made a Short Address—Vice-Presidents.

The great ratification meeting of the Republicans was held last Monday in Music Hall, and a representative throng of citizens with their wives, sisters and sweethearts filled every seat. The especially large number of the gentler sex was remarked by all. The meeting was called to order by ex-Judge W. R. Codington, chairman of the city executive committee, and Frank E Marsh was named as chairman of the meeting. Mr. Marsh made a few opening remarks and declared that it was not a fight between Republicans and Democrats, but between the people and the State House gang. When he mentioned the name of Charles A. Reed in his speech it was loudly applauded. J. B. Coward then read the list of vice presidents, which was as follows:

Hon. Alexander Gilbert, Hon. B. A. Hegeman, Jr., ex-Mayor Chas. Place, Elias R. Pope, J. Fred MacDonald, B. A. Hegeman, Sr., W. G. E. See, J. W. Murray, A. D. Shepherd, S. A. Ginna, Chas. J. Fisk, C. W. McCutchen, C. B. Corwin, L. N. Lovell, Hon. George Kyte, Edward Willis, Dr. J. B. Probasco, George D. Patten, L. B. Woolston, D. M. Demarest, W. W. Coriell, W. H. Moore, L. V. F. Randolph, Geo. W. Rockfellow, J. Frank Hubbard, Craig A. Marsh, Rev. A. H. Lewis, Rev. W. R. Richards, Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Dr. O. L. Jenkins, E. R. Ackerman, Dr. E. W. Hedges, Harold Serrell, James K. Arnold, James F. Buckle, Wm. Fisher, W. N. Spencer, C. A. Baynon, Newton B. Smalley, Andrew McArdel, Wm. Westphal, Henry McGee, Emil Woltman, Wm. Newcorn, Wm. Messerschmidt, Edwin F. Maynard, F. Hibbits, Dennis Carney, L. L Coombs, Lewis Peterson and Charles Sorenson.

The secretaries were J. T. MacMurray, Horace J. Martin, and B. Frank Coriell. The officers were all asked to take seats on the platform, which most of them did.

W. R. Codington, candidate for Assemblyman in Union county, was introduced and spoke as follows:

C. A. Reed, candidate for Assemblyman in Somerset county, was received with applause, but he would not speak.

Hon. Roswell G. Horr, a citizen of this city, and one of the foremost political orators in the field, was announced as the next speaker, and received a loud and hearty welcome. His bright, pithy sentences were very much enjoyed, and his speech was accompanied with rounds of applause. He spoke of the condition of New Jersey four years ago and the improvements in the State government since the last election.

"Times are not what we like to have them," he remarked, "but they are better than before, and when we get men to manage the country that know what managing is like we will be all right. You have no right to expect more than is in a man."

Then followed some of Mr. Horr's characteristic humorous remarks in which he told the audience not to expect of President Cleveland and other prominent Democrats more than they were capable of doing and suggested that it might be a good thing to put those in power who were capable of doing the work. He then spoke of the present campaign. He told something of the methods of the Democrats who were "not good" and declared that he believed that they would abuse an angel if the Republicans should nominate an angel.

While Mr. Horr was speaking, ex-Senator John W. Griggs, with a body of friends, appeared on the scene and a general ovation followed. Senator Griggs then took the floor. He spoke very gratefully of the cordial reception he had received from all sides.

"I find here as I did at Elizabeth," said the candidate for governor, "an unusual number of ladies present. There is nothing that so encourages us as to know that the women are with us. We have nothing to be ashamed of, we are waging a campaign for pure government."

He then went back in the political history of New Jersey and told of the work of the alleged awful ring that had reigned supreme. He made the same point in his discourse as Horr of separating the Democrats into two classes—the good and the bad.

The party which accompanied him consisted of Hon. Foster Voorhees, Surrogate George Parrott, Assemblyman Charles N. Codding, Freeholder J. Martin Roll, candidate for Assemblyman in Union county, and Hon. Frank Bergen. They had all attended a mass meeting at Elizabeth and were brought here on a special car in the remarkably fast time of eleven minutes. Charles J. Fisk and William T. Kirk accompanied them from Elizabeth, and here they were met at the station by J. B. Coward and G. D. Patten.

The Senator's speech was somewhat lengthy, and did not receive the enthusiasm that Horr's address did.

Hon. Foster M. Voorhees gave the next address, and spoke very highly of Senator Griggs and declared that Union county would give him her entire support. He also gave the past legislators a severe drubbing.

After a few words from J. Martin Roll the assemblage broke up with three cheers for Griggs.

WHO'LL BE CITY JUDGE?

With Codington Out, the Contest for Republican Nomination Will Open.

The fight for the Republican nomination for city judge is open again by the withdrrwal of ex-Judge W. R. Codington. His acceptance of the nomination for Assemblyman, of course, withdraws him from the fight. Those left in the field at present are George W. DeMeza, Harry C. Runyon, James P. Powers and Winfield S. Angleman, but the contest has not progressed far enough to tell who has the best chances.

Sparkling Music Comedy.

"Little Trixie," which plays at Music Hall tomorrow evening, is a sparkling musical comedy that has met with success wherever it has been given. Everywhere praises of its entertaining features are sounded and it is endorsed by the press and public in all the large cities as one of the very best. The star of the company, May Smith Robbins, is a charming little Irish girl, who is a favorite with all who know her. She is a talented impersonator, a sweet singer and a wonderfully graceful dancer.

There is no medicine so often needed in every home and so admirably adapted to the purposes for which it is intended, as Chamberlain's Pain Balm. Hardly a week passes but some member of the family has need of it. A toothache or headache may be cured by it. A touch of rheumatism or neuralgia quieted. The severe pain of a burn or scald promptly relieved and the sore healed in much less time than when medicine has to be sent for. A sprain may be promptly treated before inflammation sets in, which insures a cure in about one-third of the time otherwise required. Cuts and bruises should receive immediate treatment before the parts become swollen, which can only be done when Pain Balm is kept at hand. A sore throat may be cured before it becomes serious. A troublesome corn may be removed by applying it twice a day for a week or two. A lame back may be cured and several days of valuable time saved or a pain in the side or chest relieved without paying a doctor bill. Procure a 50 cent bottle at once and you will never regret it. For sale by Reynold's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

—John Hand Camp, No. 28, S. of V., will give an entertainment at their hall on Friday evening.

A SENSATION AND SURPRISE.

C. N. CODDING REFUSES TO ACCEPT AN ASSEMBLY RENOMINATION.

Copies of the New Jersey Herald Attacking Him Distributed—Nominated But Refuses—W. R. Codington Selected.

The Union County Republicans held their county convention at Elizabeth Tuesday afternoon, says the World, and nominated the following ticket:

Members of Assembly—Henry C Clauss, of Elizabeth; J. Martin Roll, of Springfield; William R. Codington, of Plainfield. Coroner—Charles B. Holmes, of Rahway.

The convention was presided over by ex-City Attorney Frank Bergen, who later entertained Candidate John W. Griggs with a dinner at his home. Editor Charles C. McBride, of Elizabeth, and Mr. Anderson, of Rahway, acted as secretaries.

There was much excitement in the convention over the advent of two newsboys, who distributed among the delegates copies of a new local paper, the New Jersey Herald, which contained an attack on Assemblyman Charles N. Codding, Chairman of the Union County Republican Executive Committee, and who had called the convention to order. The paper denounced his legislative record and called upon the convention to defeat him for a renomination.

Mr. Codding, however, was nominated. He strode down the aisle and while the delegates cheered him he insisted on speaking. "Gentlemen," he said, "as I do not care to be made the target and victim of two or three calumnious curs whose history is well known I positively decline to accept the nomination."

In spite of this Mr. Codding amid great applause, was nominated by acclamation. He still refused to accept, and in much confusion a recess was taken for ten minutes. The delegates swarmed around Mr. Codding and implored him to reconsider.

It was no use, however, as he declared his mind was made up. "I will not submit to a campaign of calumny," he remarked, "as my business interests would suffer by it. I am sincerely grateful to the convention for its expression of confidence in my legislative actions, but I won't run again, and that settles it."

It is said the A. P. A. and American Mechanics were back of the opposition to Mr. Codding.

Ex-Judge Codington was substituted. Police Justice Frazee, of Rahway, made a good fight for the nomination against the Plainfield man. Elizabeth presented Henry C. Clauss, and the township's choice was Freeholder J. Martin Roll, of Springfield.

The convention was briefly addressed by John W. Griggs, who told of his South Jersey travels, and predicted a big vote from that section. He called on Union County Republicans, he said, to give loyal support to the ticket.

An English Cart.

While Charles L. Case, of Central avenue, was traveling in Europe this summer he purchased a genuine English cart. It arrived in this city last Saturday. The cart is something of a novelty, as it has two small wheels in front and two larger ones the rear, and contains one seat. The cart is at Blair's livery, and Mr. Case is going to have it repainted in the latest style before using it.

Farmer Martine in Demand.

"Farmer" Martine, of Plainfield, is doing good work for McGill, and he is one of the most sought after speakers on the State committee's list, says The World. He is down for a speech at Junction, Hunterdon county, Saturday. He will make a tour of Warren, Hunterdon, Sussex, Somerset and Morris counties, speaking two or three times a day.

Notice.

A public meeting will be held in the Guild room of Grace church, Sycamore and Sixth street, Thursday evening, the 24th inst, to consider the expediency of inviting one of the professors of Rutgers College to deliver a course of lectures in Plainfield. All persons interested are invited to attend.

Appeals to the Charitable.

A public meeting of the Citizen's Organized Aid Association will be held in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue church Monday evening. There will be music and addresses.

Every mother should know that croup can be prevented. The first symptom of true croup is hoarseness. This is followed by a peculiar rough cough. WHAT TO DO WITH THE GIRLS

MISS LINDLEY HAS PRONOUNCED IDEAS ON THE SUBJECT.

She Believes the Country Is What the Women Have Made It and Much of Its Future Progress Depends Upon Them.

The fourth lecture in the course given under the auspices of the Plainfield women interested in securing school suffrage for New Jersey women was given by Miss Marguerite Lindley, of New York, Monday afternoon at four o'clock in the small hall at the Y. M. C. A. building.

The hall was hardly large enough to accommodate those who were in attendance. Mrs. David P. Hall was present and introduced Miss Lindley, after telling the object for which the lectures were given. The familiar motto "Know Thyself" was placed in a conspicuous part of the hall and it is safe to say that every woman present knew herself better at the close of the lecture than previous.

Miss Lindley's subject was "The Coming Girl and How Shall We Rear Her?" and she spoke in part as follows:

The coming girl must be educated to fully know her rights and that man is her brother and protector.

The country today is what the women have made it. She has softened the ire of the savage tribes. The future of this country rests on the coming girl, and the question is "How shall we rear her a correct all-round woman?"

If a mother wants to place corsets on her daughter, let her try it on her son or husband and see how they like it. Plenty of fresh air takes away that craving for unhealthful food. Nowadays health is a phenomenal thing in the majority of our homes. It is a headache, backache, or a pain of some kind, and simply because there has been a violation of the laws of Nature. Business, social and all other relations must be set aside till we feel better. This brings out the fact that there should be hygienic rearing of children. Systematic mental training should be looked after, but at the same time we should not think that the mind is everything, for the body is to be attended to fully as much as the mind.

Her environments cover all influences. She must exercise and bathe, the latter not strictly essential from a cleanliness point of view, but from the fact that it gives better circulation to the blood and makes one healthier. The best method is a cold sponge bath in the morning, which brings every part of one's body into action. She must have the bicycle and the dance, not to excess, but in proper doses. The wheel is new to woman and its possibilities are as yet unknown. She must exercise the upper as well as the lower part of the body.

Her dress must be fashionable and healthful. She doesn't want to dress out of date and be odd.

At this point the speaker exhibited a skeleton, and spoke specifically of the circulatory, respiratory and digestive organs, and how they should be cared for.

Continuing, she said, jumping and dancing, if abused, will in time injure the brain. Our girls must learn cause and effect. She must not wait till the body is loaded down with disease and then ask "What shall I do to be saved?"

Women are the natural educators of children, and I hope that New Jersey women will not leave one stone unturned till she gets control of the schools.

We should not speak of bad women as fallen women, but as uneducated, for it is through ignorance they submit to certain influences that mark them for life, and the same way with the boys, they are not altogether to blame. They are brothers, and their mothers feel too delicate in speaking to them on certain subjects. Masculine women and feminine young men are monstrosities, and proper training is needed in this respect.

A girl is not any more immodest when riding a wheel than when walking. As the home is so is the country.

Mrs. A. M. Powell then announced that the next lecture would be given on Tuesday evening, October 29th, by Prof. John Gifford on "Forestry." It will be illustrated.

THE SPIRIT OF MILITARISM.

Questions That Are of Interest to All Deep Thinking Men.

If Mr. Spencer were now to rewrite the "Principles of Sociology," there can be no doubt that he would find in the United States an illustration scarcely less striking. Most of what he tells us of the changes in England is a matter of history here. That the immediate result of the late war of rebellion was a tendency of the military officialism to take the place of civil officialism no one will deny, and, though it may perhaps not be said that we have military heads of all the various departments, still the disposition to fill all administrative offices with military chieftains, so strong immediately after the war, was in the same line—the result being "a style of administration which asserts authority more and regards individual claims less." At the same time the revival of the predatory spirit in regard to external affairs has been clearly discernible here, too, for although the sin of aggressive warfare on weaker or barbarous nations cannot be laid at the door of our government the constant cry for coast defenses and for the strengthening and increasing of army and navy are clear indications of the same spirit.

But what chiefly must strike us as familiar facts are these: The spirit of sanitary dictation and the usurpation of exclusive privileges by certain professions (prominent among them the medical); poor law, and, we may add, tramp law, administration in various parts of the Union; the demand for municipal distribution of water, gas and coal, as well as for governmental ownership of railroads and telegraphs; the ever increasing influence of "a coercive philanthropy" invoking state power to improve people's conduct, etc.—in short, the strong impetus imparted to the socialistic tendency of modern times is nothing but that same military spirit clamoring for the right of the state, or the commonwealth, if you please, to regulate the private affairs of the citizen in every department of life.—A. B. Ronne in Popular Science Monthly.

THE PARADISE OF TOTS.

A Lesson Is Taught About Babies to Other Countries by Japan.

Japan has been called "the paradise of babies." In many ways it seems that the Japanese treat their children more wisely than the more sophisticated but really less civilized nations of the west. The babies are born polite. They seem to inherit manners. There is in all Japan nothing corresponding to our city hoodlum or to the gamin of Paris. The Japanese child, even of the poorest parents, has plenty of pure air, frequent new toys and the love and attention of both parents. As a natural result, when he grows up, he treats his old parents with the utmost filial respect. No man with children feels uneasy in Japan because he has no money laid up for his old age.

The Japanese child is better tempered than the American, largely because he never has meat to eat. His food is light and simple and his digestion unimpaired by pasty pie crusts and heavy meat. The politeness of the Japs is strong testimony to the theory of the vegetarians that meat eating brutalizes one. Yet that the Japanese who never tasted meat in their lives are both strong and plucky the Chinese are now well prepared to testify.

Mr. Lafcadio Hearn, after teaching in a large Jap school for two years, says, "I have never had personal knowledge of any serious quarrel between students and have never even heard of a fight between my pupils, and I have taught some 800 young men and boys." He had never seen "a man strike another or a woman bullied or a child slapped." Yet the Japanese, with their perfect courtesy and sunny kindness, have been from time immemorial a nation of warriors always ready to avenge insults in blood.—Philadelphia Press.

Got His Deserts.

A poor little girl was peddling apples in a railway station. A train was about starting, and almost at the last moment a tall, ruffianly passenger stepped off the car steps and called for 15 cents' worth of the apples. The girl counted them out, the man took them, and then, as he moved toward the car, began feeling in his pocket as if for the money. The change was not forthcoming, he was on the steps, the train began to move, the girl ran eagerly after it, and there stood the man on the platform laughing at her.

By good luck the mayor of the city happened to be among the bystanders—a war veteran, with a tender heart and a contempt for all meanness. He ran at once to the superintendent's office and said:

"I'll give you $100 to stop that train and have it backed into the station."

The offer was promptly accepted, a telegram was dispatched, and very soon the player of the joke found himself in the hands of the police. He paid the girl her 15 cents, of course, and offered to pay her a good deal more, but the officers were inexorable, and to the gratification of the lookers on he was marched off to jail.—Youth's Companion.

Not Familiar With Blessings.

There is a musical association in one of our suburban towns which, contrary to the general run of such bodies, found itself recently with a surplus of cash on hand. The members accordingly determined to give themselves a dinner and invite their wives. When they were assembled at the table, they stood rather awkwardly behind their chairs until the president, who seemed also embarrassed, finally called on one of the members in this wise, "Brother Waters, will you please ask a blessing?" This was something that in all his varied experience Brother Waters never had done. He drew a long breath, rolled his eyes once more in despair and in a tone in which triumph and uneasiness were blended said, "Go." They went.—Boston Herald.

Not Inherited.

"Yes," remarked a youth to his tailor, "it's not a bad thing for you to have me among your patrons, you know."

"Perhaps not," was the rather doubtful response.

"My family name, being so well known in the community, is quite—ah—quite an advertisement for you. My forefathers, as you are doubtless aware, were early settlers."

"Yes, I've heard so. But I must say, sir, that in that respect you don't seem to take after them in the least."—Chicago Record.

A Much Divided Village.

The municipal geographical curiosity of the United States is the little village of Griffon, N. C., which lays claim to more divisions than any other town, large or small, in the world. It is located in two counties, three townships, two congressional districts and two senatorial and two judicial districts.—St. Louis Republic.

STRUCK BY THE TROLLEY.

MRS. ROSETTA KNOCKED DOWN AND QUITE BADLY HURT.

She Was Deaf and Did Not Hear Or See the Approaching Car—Motorman Higgins Blameless for the Accident.

The first serious accident in this city resulting from the trolley car in which a person was injured, occurred on Thursday. About ten o'clock Mrs. Cecelia Rosetta started from her home at 127 Watchung avenue and went to MacDonald's grocery store to purchase some articles. Mrs. Rosetta is a stout woman of about fifty-eight years of age and is quite deaf. On several occasions she has narrowly escaped being struck by a car as she is unable to hear the warning bell. Mrs. Rosetta's home is on the east side of Watchung avenue, and at Front street she crossed over on to her own side. When she had almost reached her home for some reason she started to cross the street again.

As she left the sidewalk, an electric car turned the corner from Front street. Motorman Morris Higgins saw her and rang the bell, but she paid no attention. Then seeing that she did not hear him, he put on the brakes with all his might, ringing the bell and shouting at her all the time. But Mrs. Rosetta went on and had just passed the middle of the track when the car which had not quite stopped struck her and knocked her down. Then just as Motorman Higgins stopped the car, the wheel-guard struck her in the hip. The car backed off, and Frank Vermeule and the conductor and motorman assisted her to her home.

Dr. Long, who happened to be passing, came in, but seeing that she was not dangerously injured, awaited the arrival of the family physician, Dr. O. L. Jenkins, who had been sent for. He arrived and soon after Dr. Fritts, president of the railroad. The physicians examined her and found that her shoulder had been sprained, her body was somewhat bruised, while there was a small cut on her leg.

Every effort was made by Motorman Higgins to prevent the car from striking her and he is in no way to blame for the accident.

MOSTLY RAIN WATER DRAINS.

Street Commissioner Meeker Investigates the Pipes Running Into Green Brook.

In the interest of the Plainfield Board of Health, Street Commissioner Meeker made an investigation a short time ago of the drains running into Green brook and the mill race. He found one more drain than the inspector of the borough did, and with the aid of a tape line located the drains exactly. He then located them on the surface and found that over two-thirds of them were merely to carry off the rain water from the roofs. The others were supposed to be sewer drains and the owners were ordered by the board to break their connections. Whether the orders of the board have been complied with is another question.

Greatest Convention Ever Held.

The news bulletin sent out by the New Jersey Christian Endeavor convention has the following to say about Plainfield '96:

Plainfield '96—Plainfield came down to Atlantic City, 241 strong, to fulfill the pledge made to their successful rivals of last year, and to secure the convention for next year. Both ends were accomplished; they were a most important factor in the convention and to their delight were awarded the next convention by the executive committee. Although the committee had to weigh most carefully the pleas of the claimants, the other one being Paterson, before reaching this result, Paterson was sent home, as Plainfield was last year, to lengthen the ladder in order to reach the coveted prize. Plainfield is laying plans for the greatest convention ever held in New Jersey, and the leaders are men who know how to count the cost. May success crown their efforts.

Miss Staats is an accomplished young lady and will be welcomed to Plainfield by a host of Mr. Powers' friends.

MARTINE SPEAKS OF GRIGGS.

The Farmer Orator Refers to the Vacillating Record of Griggs.

There was a rousing Democratic ratification meeting in the Lafayette Wigwam, Jersey City, last night, under the auspices of the Lafayette Democratic club. Dr. Mortimer Tompson, chairman, introduced J. E. Martine, of this city, as first speaker. Mr. Martine attacked the Republican Legislature for repealing the Werts Election law and for the passage of the Personal Registration act. He said the law would prevent thousands of workmen from voting, as they could not find time to register.

"Griggs, the Republican candidate for Governor," said Mr. Martine, "does not know where is at. In Monmouth he is the immaculate candidate that stands for prohibition. When he strikes Newark he visits the realms of Bachus and pats the brewer on the back. In Hudson he takes his beer, and in Camden he drinks water, and this is the man who asks your support."

Mr. Martine spoke of Griggs' record on the labor and race-track questions and made many allusions to his interest in water syndicates.

THE INVINCIBLE PARKS.

Elizabeth Whist Players Go Home With Defeat.

A team from the Elizabeth Whist Club came to this city last night to attempt to win from the crack four of the Park Club whisters the silver trophy of the New Jersey Whist Club, but when the almost unbroken record of victories of the Plainfielders are considered it seems almost superflous to add that the Elizabethians returned empty-handed.

The contest was a challenged one and playing was commenced at eight o'clock and continued until eleven o'clock, when the score showed the Park Club were the winners. The Park Club team was composed of Messrs. Rogers, McCutchen, Townsend and Howell.

At the conclusion of the playing Steward Jones served light refreshments to the whisters.

NOT LIKELY TO SUE.

Mrs. Rosetta Was Mostly to Blame for the Accident.

Mrs. Rosetta, who was injured yesterday by a trolley car on Watchung avenue, suffered intensely last night. This morning Drs. Jenkins and Fritts called and prescribed to alleviate her pain. As yet the seriousness of her injuries cannot be determined. It was reported that Mrs. Rosetta would probably bring an action against the railway, but when a Press reporter made enquiries at the residence this morning a member of the family said that no suit would be brought, because Mrs. Rosetta was negligent and careless in trying to cross the track without first looking to see if a car was approaching, and especially so when she is so deaf.

Pleasantly Surprised.

A pleasant surprise was arranged and given by about thirty little friends of Miss Mamie Thatcher at her home on West Seventh street last evening. The little hostess was completely surprised, but proved herself equal to the occasion. The time was pleasantly spent playing games and other amusements, after which a bountiful collation was served.

Does Better Work Every Day.

The steam roller is now working on Plainfield avenue, between Seventh and Eighth streets, and appears to improve with every day's use. The condition in which it leaves the streets is very satisfactory.

TEN YEARS OF GOOD WORK.

ANNIVERSARY OF TRINITY REFORMED CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR SOCIETY.

A Good Suggestion Made by E. E. Anthony that Associate Members Be Induced to Join the Church, the Same as Last Year.

Ten years can make a vast difference in a Christian Endeavor Society, as was shown at the tenth anniversary of the society of Trinity Reformed church last Thursday, comparing the large and enthusiastic gathering with the little band of consecrated workers who first gathered in October, 1885. The exercises were held in the church and a goodly number of the members and their friends were in attendance. The meeting was presided over by W. A. Crawford, the president of the society, while Horace J. Martin led the singing. The programme was arranged by a committee consisting of E. E. Anthony and W. A. Crawford, while H. W. Marshall, E. S. Garretson and J. A. Love, made very efficient ushers.

After an opening service of song and a few words of welcome by President Crawford, Rev. Cornelius Schenck, the pastor, read a selection of Scripture and made a short prayer. A male quartette, composed of E. E. Runyon, L. S. Bond, L. R. Allen and F. S. Cutter, next rendered a very pleasing selection. Then E. E. Anthony, one of the charter members, gave a brief history of the society. In a few well-chosen words he sketched the changes of the last ten years and concluded by saying: "Last year we brought all the associate members into the church and then had to get a new stock; let us do the same this year." The secretary's report was then read by the secretary, Miss Ella Gardner, and showed an ever increasing growth of both senior and junior societies. There was also much work to tell of.

Edgar Sheppard read his report as treasurer, and after a well rendered solo by Miss Etta Krymer, Rev. F. B. Everett, of Trenton, president of the Christian Endeavor State Board of Evangelism, was introduced and made the address of the evening. Rev. Mr. Everett is a very young looking man, but his listeners forgot all about his looks as they listened to his address, which was full of practical hints and of that enthusiasm which has made the Christian Endeavor society so well known. He cautioned his listeners about being Christians all the week instead of only on Sunday and warned them to be careful of all their actions, as the rest of the world was watching closely for something to criticise. "Too much organization" he said, "is another fault found with our society. Too much work is given to the committees instead of being done by the whole society so that the members will only work when serving on a committee assigned to a special duty. I believe in directing our effort along specific lines. We are all specialists today. Find the work that your society is best capable of doing, conform and concentrate your ideas on something that conforms with our surroundings. The Junior Local Union, of Trenton, has done special work among the firemen, while the coast societies work among the life saving crews." He then spoke of the evangelistic work to be done in this State, only forty per cent of whose inhabitants are members of the church.

After another selection by the male quartette, the meeting closed with a hymn and the benediction.

Most of the audience then adjourned to the lecture room where ice cream and cake were served and a social time was enjoyed. There was a very amusing recitation by Miss Mary A. Lucky given in her customary excellent manner.

Land of the Rising Sun.

An illustrated missionary lecture on "The Celestial Empire and The Land of the Rising Sun." will be given by Rev. Frank S. Dobbins, of Philadelphia, in the First Baptist church, under the direction of the Christian Endeavor Society, on Friday evening, October 18th, commencing at eight o'clock. A cordial invitation is extended to all. No charge for admission.

Front Street Purchase.

Walter Scott has purchased from Charles Hyde the property on East Front street between the J. L. Ludlum and ex-Mayor L. V. F. Randolph's property. It takes in a portion of the brook and a brick barn. Just what Mr. Scott will do with the property has not yet been ascertained.

Sentence Suspended on Martoni.

The two Italians, James Martoni and son, who were arrested on the charge of keeping a disorderly house, came up before Judge Coddington yesterday afternoon. Walter L. Hetfield, their counsel, pleaded non vult, and asked for a suspension of sentence which request was granted.

To Improve the Traps.

At the regular meeting of the Dunellen Gun club held last evening, it was resolved to improve the interior of the shooting house and make other improvements outside at the traps.

AN EVENING NUPTIAL EVENT.

The Ceremony Performed in Mt. Olive Baptist Church.

The Mt. Olive Baptist church was the scene last evening of a pretty wedding. The contracting parties were Miss Agnes Crawley, of this city, and Archie Jones, of New York.

The ceremony was performed at 8:30 by Rev. P. S. Gibson, pastor of the church, during which music was rendered on the organ.

The maid of honor was Miss Belle Flanagan and the best man Joseph Bolden, both of this city.

The bride wore a gown of white flowered silk, with tulle veil looped with lilies of the valley, and carried a bouquet of white roses, while the maid of honor was gowned in white silk, trimmed with duchesse lace and carried pink roses. Immediately after the ceremony the bridal party were taken to the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. George Randolph, on West Front street, where she gave a reception to the couple and their friends.

During the evening a supper was served.

The bride and groom were the recipients of many valuable presents. They left the city on the 11:25 train for Harlem, where the groom has furnished a suite of rooms which will be their future home.

The ushers at the church were Fred White, Wm. Burden, Geo. Anderson, of this city, and J. Murray, of Bridgeport, Conn.

MANY CANDIDATES IN UNION.

Numerous Republicans Willing to Run for the Assembly.

Candidates are looming up for the Republican nominations for Assembly in Union county, says the Newark News. The list of prospective aspirants now embraces Freeholder J. Martin Roll, of Springfield; ex-Attorney Clarence D. Ward, Justice William R. Frazee, ex-Mayor Chamberlain, and ex-Councilman Joseph Potter, of Rahway; General George H. Rhodes, Freeholder Fred Miller, and ex-Alderman Augustus Y. Pool, of Elizabeth, with Plainfield and half a dozen other townships yet to hear from.

The Democrats cannot boast of such a wealth of material to pick from, as up to date the only name mentioned is Judge Green of Westfield, who ran last year and was beaten. Ex-School Commissioners Samuel Williams or Charles H. Moore each could get the nomination if they made a bid for it, but they positively decline to be candidates, as they say it would interfere with their business. Outside of Judge Green the Democrats just now appear to be at sea as to who will be their selection.

BAPTISTS ENTERTAINED.

The Ladies' Aid Society Gives a Social at the Residence of C. A. Haynes.

The congregation of the Park Avenue Baptist church were entertained at the residence of Charles A. Haynes, of First place, last evening, by the Ladies' Aid Society of the church. An informal programme of vocal and instrumental music was given during the evening. There was a piano duet by the Misses Neva Dimmitt and Alice Coard, several songs by Will Runyon and Mrs. H. E. Ryder, and a violin solo by Lindley Hillman, who was accompanied by Miss Alice Coard.

The rest of the evening was spent in conversation and enjoying the refreshments which were served by the women.

Johnson's Guilt Doubtful.

The conviction of Jacob S. Johnson, who is in jail in Somerville awaiting trial for the murder of Annie Rogers, of Newark, now seems very doubtful to those familiar with the details of the case. The chain of evidence deduced against Preacher Johnson at first seemed conclusive, and he was promptly indicted. Subsequently, however, an entirely different chain of circumstantial evidence was brought to light by which it would seem practically impossible that he would have committed the crime for which he is to stand trial. The counsel for the defence claim that they are prepared to show that the crime was not committed by Johnson.

Miss Lucy King, formerly of Alfred, Allegany county, New York State, and who for a year past has been in the employ of the American Seventh Day Tract Society, whose headquarters are in the Babcock building in this city, will be united in marriage on Wednesday, October 23rd, at her home in Alfred, to Alvord B. Clarke, the superintendent of the Celadon Terra-Cotta Works, of that place.

A Westfield Wedding.

The marriage of Miss Alice Fairbairn to Thomas Allen Worth, both of Westfield, took place yesterday afternoon at 5:30, at the home of bride's brother, Robert Fairbairn, at Westfield. There was a very large number of guests present, including Mr. and Mrs. Robert Rushmore, Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Timpson and Mr. and Mrs. James H. Hallock, of this city.

THE BROOK CLEANED OUT.

ARTICLES OF VARIOUS KINDS AND USES UNEARTHED.

A Large Amount of Refuse Found on the Borough Side—A Tricycle in Good State of Preservation—Channel Clear.

Green brook received its long needed cleaning yesterday by a gang of Street Commissioner Meeker's men, as was exclusively announced in yesterday's Press. The work was begun at French's dam and was continued as far as Cadmus' pond. The gravel bars were cut out and the weeds, grass, trees and logs removed, giving the water a clear passage. The worst spot was under the Somerset street bridge, where, on the borough side, there was a large pile of refuse vegetables. The brook was found to be a regular dumping ground. There were enough old shoes there to supply a small army, while articles of every conceivable kind were found throughout its length. A pair of shears were discovered, snugly hidden among the stones. A number of toy cap pistols were found, while for tools, a cooper's adz and a coal chisel, both in fair condition, were discovered. The men also fished up a coil of wire over two hundred feet long and several old tennis rackets with the gut rotted out. But the find of the day was a child's tricycle, not at all injured by its bath, which one of the men took home to his children. The brook is now in a good condition and the water has a free passage way.

SLATER ESTATE SETTLED.

A. D. Thompson Buys a Livery Stable on Which They Had a Claim.

Some time ago Reed & Coddington brought suit in the Court of Chancery for the executors in the estate of Wm. H. Slater for foreclosure proceedings on two mortgages against William J. O'Brien, of Jersey City, and yesterday at the sheriff's office in Jersey City the sale took place to satisfy the claims, amounting to $3,000.

Lawyer Coddington was present and bid in the property, consisting of a livery stable, house and lot and vacant land, for $3,300 for A. D. Thompson, of this city. The proceeds were sufficient to satisfy the claim.

In Orphans court at Elizabeth this morning, Judge Coddington appeared and gave a final accounting of the Slater estate, which was passed upon by the court, and on application of Reed & Coddington they were allowed $713.32 for counsel fees and commissions.

WHEELMEN TO ENTER POLITICS.

Will Probably Prepare to Enter the Campaign in the Municipal Election.

The wheelmen of this city are considering seriously the idea of entering politics this fall in the city election. They are advocates of certain rights and principles which they claim are denied them, and they think the best way to solve all problems regarding the riding of a wheel is to take a hand in politics. A meeting of all the wheelmen in this city and vicinity will be called immediately after the November election with a view to organizing for the December election.

The vote of the wheelmen in this locality would be a strong one if united and they will probably assert their influence in a substantial way at the polls.

WHO WROTE THE EDITORIAL?

EDITOR RUNYON THE LAUGHING STOCK OF THE COUNTRY CLUB.

Permits the Use of His Columns to Injure Mr. Peterson's Reputation As a Caterer—A Contemptible Dirty Trick.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—In Wednesday's issue of the Plainfield Courier-News the following so-called "editorial" appeared:

Elizabeth is to have a Country Club, like our own Union County Club. One of the first requisites in a successful club is a steward who knows better than to serve sandwiches and sardines after ice-cream. Come up to Plainfield and get points.

I would not have noticed the "editorial," if my attention had not been called to it by several members of the Union County Country Club, who declared it a blow aimed at me directly, in order to destroy my reputation as a caterer. Since a certain party has threatened to run me out of the club, simply because I did my duty in trying to preserve the dignity of the club, I have taken up the gauntlet thrown to me by the author or perpetrator of this infamous article.

The fact of the matter is that at the last summer dance, held on September 16th at the Casino, I made a contract with the committee to furnish lemonade, consomme, with small rolls and ice cream, and cakes, but as several gentlemen expressed their desire of having more substantial refreshment than ice cream and cake, I put up gratis four large plates of sandwiches fit to be placed on any royal table. Amongst them, I admit, were small pieces of bread covered with French sardines. But the fact that nothing but the empty plates remained was evidence enough that these sandwiches were highly appreciated. The only fault that anyone could find with me would have been that I neglected to put up a sign "These sandwiches must not be eaten after the ice cream." I am certainly not to blame if the author of the article gorged himself with ice cream and then partook too freely of the sardine sandwiches.

My reputation as a caterer has been established for the last ten years in New York city and also at the Union League Club, of Jersey City, where I have been manager for over two years. I have references from General P. F. Wanser, Mayor of Jersey City, and Hon. Thomas McEwan, jr., member of Congress and secretary of the Union League Club, in which these gentlemen express themselves as knowing me to be a most competent caterer.

It is astonishing to me that the editor of the Courier assumes the responsibility of the article, which is witho ut doubt written to injure me in my business, thereby shielding the real author, whose sole motive is revenge, and depriving me of the opportunity to invite the author to call on me for points on "How to Behave as a Gentleman, Especially at a Club House!"

Very respectfully,
Henry E. Peterson,
Manager of the Union County Country Club.

BROKE TWO RIBS.

William Addis Sr., Falls Into a Scuttle Hole in the Bank Building.

William Addis, Sr., who has the contract for the plumbing work on the First National Bank building, narrowly escaped fatal injury Thursday while working on the top floor of the building. In moving about on the floor he slipped through the scuttle hole, but caught himself before going all the way down. A workman nearby saw the difficulty and assisted him. Mr. Addis received several bruises, and thought it advisable to consult Dr. Hedges. The latter found that two small ribs were broken. Although Mr. Addis feels very sore over his shaking up, nothing serious is expected to result. If he had not caught himself he would have fallen through the building a distance of over fourteen feet, and would probably have been badly injured.

BOROUGH GRADUATES ORGANIZE.

Officers Elected and Meetings to be Held Every Other Week.

The class of '96 in the North Plainfield Public School held its first class meeting yesterday afternoon. Clifford Braider called the meeting to order and then election was held. John H. Van Winkle, Jr., was elected president and Miss Adel H. Kirby secretary. After some discussion orange and white were selected as class colors. The question of class meetings was brought up and it was decided to hold them every other Friday.

Carried Through Italy.

Messrs. Hall and W. E. Gibbs, of Fanwood, entertained a large and cultured audience last night in the Fanwood clubhouse with an illustrated lecture on Italy. The entertainment was for the benefit of the fire company and was a great success. The scenes of Naples, Rome and Venice were exceptionally good. There were also some excellent views of Spain. After the entertainment a dance followed that was an enjoyable feature of the affair.

LAND OF THE RISING SUN.

REV. FRANK S. DOBBINS TALKS OF THE EASTERN COUNTRIES.

Japan Compares Favorably With Other Countries in the Matter of Civilization, But Not So China—Customs of Natives.

The next best thing to going anywhere is to see a picture of it, and as most of Plainfield cannot visit China and Japan, the Rev. Frank S. Dobbins in his lecture on "The Celestial Empire, the Land of the Rising Sun," brought a large and interesting audience as near as possible to those countries Friday night in the First Baptist church, with the aid of numerous views and a stereopticon managed by Walter H. Freeman and Charles E. Vail, of the Plainfield Camera Club.

Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes opened the service by reading a selection of Scripture from the screen and then offering prayer. He then introduced Mr. Dobbins, a returned missionary from Japan. A few views of China were first shown, and then the women of the country were illustrated.

"These are the new women," he said, as he pointed out their costumes which were like those of a man. He then told of the Chinese widows and the awful life they live after the death of their husbands. The fearful deformity of the Chinese woman's feet was spoken of and illustrated. The home life of the Chinaman next came in view, and the great aversion of the Chinese for water was described.

"It is not the common people of China that dislike the missionaries; it is the mandarins that hate the Christians because they bring to the common people the light, who then refuse to be ruled so absolutely. They tell the people that the Christians want to get their children into their schools to make oil out of their bodies and send it to America. The Emperor of China owned up that it was the corruption of his officials which accounted for his defeat." The pictures of some of the horrible figures of the heathen gods, the most repulsive of which was Buddha, were shown.

"The priests of Buddha are a great power against the missionaries," said Rev. Mr. Dobbins.

He discussed the other religion of China, the worship of Confucious, and told of the way in which its workers had spread it abroad.

"When they are converted," he said, "they make splendid missionaries."

A number of photographs of the workers in China were shown on the screen, and he said of them: "They are winning their way against all those great odds until now there are 40,000 Christians in China. Many of the missionaries were driven out by the riots, but they will all go back, they'll risk their lives in the work of their Saviour. But they don't all escape. But we are not deterred by all that," continued the returned missionary, who then summoned up his remarks on China.

The second part of the lecture was devoted to Japan and other Asiatic countries. "I will take you first to the Japanese home," said the lecturer. "Some think that they would like to live like the natives, but there are difficulties in the way to a foreigner, especially in the line of eating and sleeping. They sleep on a pillow that looks like a log with a sausage on top."

He next told of the household gods of Japan. After a number of views of street life and church life, he told of the various industries in old Japan and the great improvements made recently.

"The earth has shrunk," he exclaimed, "Japan and China are not as far away today as Ohio was seventy years ago."

Speaking of the married life he said: "It is not wedlock, it is padlock, for the wife is merely a high rank of servant."

In concluding about Japan he said: 'In the last war Japan showed that she is in line with the other civilized nations and that Christianity has obtained a firm grasp on her. There is still needed greater work to keep up the progress of civilization."

He ended with a brief sketch of the work in India, on the Congo and in the southern Asiatic countries.

THE FIRST CHORAL.

Max Bruch's "Arminius" and "Midsummer Night's Dream" to be Rendered.

The Choral Society will meet for its first rehearsal on Monday evening in the Y. M. C. A. hall, when the chorus will begin the study of Max Bruch's "Arminius" and Mendelssohn's "Midsummer Night's Dream" which works are to be given at the first concert of the season on Thursday evening, December 19th. Miss Gertrude Stein, of New York, will be the contralto soloist and Max Heinrich, of Boston, the baritone. The latter is unquestionably the finest baritone in the United States and it will be a rare treat to Plainfielders to hear him.

In the rendition of "Midsummer Night's Dream," there will be reading, probably by George Riddle, of New York, besides the solo and orchestral work. There is no doubt but that the concert will be the finest ever rendered in this city.

GRIGGS ON TAXATION.

HIS RECORD, TAKEN FROM THE SENATE JOURNAL, SHOWS THAT HE IS RUNNING FOR GOVERNOR UNDER A FALSE PRETENSE.

He Defeated Equal Taxation In 1883, 1884 and 1888, and It Is by His Work That the Corporations Have Been Enabled to Shift Their Share of Taxation Upon the People—Read the Record as It Is Printed In the State Library and Judge For Yourselves.

Senator Griggs has discovered that he originated the idea of taxing the railroad and canal property of New Jersey. As a matter of fact, the legislative record shows that no man ever did more in the state house to prevent an equal distribution of the public burdens. Fifty years ago it was considered the proper thing for the state to take a paternal interest in railroad and canal companies. The projectors of the Morris canal were promised absolute exemption from taxation, while several of the charters granted to railroad companies of New Jersey contain craftily worded exemptions and limitations. Prior to 1884 the $150,000,000 worth of railroad and canal property in New Jersey escaped all taxation for county, city or township purposes. The growth of the railroad systems added annually to the value of the exempted property, and the burdens of private owners were correspondingly increased. The only tax paid by these corporations on property used for railroad and canal purposes was a nominal one to the state. The total amount was so small that to pay the expenses of the state government a tax was laid on the property of private owners.

The last general state tax was levied in 1882 and collected in 1883. The condition of affairs in 1883 was this: Railroad and canal property was assessed one half of 1 per cent for the state government and nothing for school tax, nothing for county tax and nothing for any form of municipal tax. To the expenses of the state government the individual taxpayers were forced to contribute the sum of $495,549.22 in 1883. Governor Ludlow insisted that relief should be given by forcing the railroads to pay their share of the public burdens, and his message was supplemented by the voice of the people from the Delaware to the Hudson. A bill for equal taxation was passed by the house of assembly, and it looked as though justice would be done. At that time Mr. Griggs was a member of the senate. His claim that he was in favor of equal taxation is exploded by the record. Instead of taking up the assembly bill and amending it, if amendments were necessary, or urging its passage, if it properly represented the principle of equal taxation, Senator Griggs insisted upon introducing a bill of his own. It did not even have the merit of originality, being copied from the tax laws of a western state, but its introduction served the purpose of preventing the consideration of the house bill. No one has ever questioned the senator's legal ability, and as a lawyer he knew that a bill for taxation could not originate in the senate. He knew that under the state constitution the taxation of corporations could be accomplished only through a bill originating in the house of assembly. He introduced his bill on the 26th of February, 1883, and it became known as "senate bill No. 200." It was entitled "An act to impose a uniform state tax upon the property of railroad and canal companies." If the title had been amended to express the real object of introducing that bill, it would have read, "A bill introduced to side track the question of equal taxation for the year 1883." The committee held the bill nearly three weeks, reporting it on the 13th of March. Before it was reported the legislature had agreed to adjourn sine die on the 23d of March.

Now, let it be remembered that the senate of 1883 was Republican and therefore in political sympathy with Senator Griggs. He could at any time have forced a report on his bill. He could at any time have corrected the mistake made in introducing it as a senate bill by incorporating its provisions in amendments to the bill passed by the house of assembly. He was not a new hand at legislation. The committee gave no reasons in making their report. The senate journal shows that report as follows: "The committee on revision of laws reports senate bill No. 200 adversely." Those who listen to Mr. Griggs, candidate for governor, as he tells how he labored for equal taxation, may imagine that he sprang to his feet and called for a statement of the reasons why senate bill No. 200 was adversely reported, but they are mistaken. Let it be remembered that this adverse report was made on the 13th of March, and that the legislature had agreed to adjourn on Friday of the following week. As soon as the chairman of the committee on revision of laws had made his laconic report Senator Griggs moved to lay the matter over until the 19th of March, and on that day he had it further laid over until the 20th. On the 20th he moved to send the bill back again to the committee, but his fellow senators smiled at him as they voted this motion down. No further action was taken. "Senate No. 200" had done its work. Equal taxation was shelved for the year 1883, and the people were denied relief.

In 1884 Leon Abbett came to the governorship. In his inaugural address he insisted upon equal taxation. Mr. Griggs set to work at once. A joint committee on taxation was appointed, and it fussed with the question until the people feared a repetition of the trickery of 1883. The introduction of a bill in the house of assembly hurried the steps of the committee, and a bill for equal taxation was reported. It was introduced as "assembly bill No. 313," and it provided that the property of corporations should be taxed at the same rates as the property of private owners.

Senator Griggs signed the report of the joint committee recommending the passage of this bill, and he was bound in honor to give it his support when it reached the senate. The bill passed the house of assembly, and was referred to a special senate committee, of which Mr. Griggs was chairman. Now did the gentleman from Passaic resume his manipulation. As the bill was reported by the committee, as it passed the house and came to his hands, it provided for equal taxation. His first step in the way of alteration was to insist upon an amendment that exempted the roadbeds, waterways, tracks, depot buildings and all personal property of the railroad and canal companies from all forms of local taxation, and imposed upon them only a tax of one-half of 1 per cent for state uses. This amendment accomplished, there remained but about $40,000,000 out of $150,000,000 of railroad and canal property to contribute local taxes. But the senator was not satisfied. He insisted that the local taxes imposed on the $40,000,000 of property should never exceed 1 per cent, no matter what the rate of tax should be imposed upon the adjacent property of private owners. Some of the true men in the senate made a bitter fight against those amendments, but the corporations and Senator Griggs prevailed, and his amendments were incorporated in the bill. The house of assembly refused to concur in the amendments, but the corporations had the upper hand in the senate, and the house was forced to recede or to adjourn without affording the people relief. So the amendments went upon the statute book. This is the record of the Republican candidate for governor during the years 1883 and 1884. It is taken from the official records. Those records are open to the inspection of every citizen of New Jersey, and can be obtained in the state library. His record for 1883 will be found in the senate journal of that year, the reader being referred to "senate bill No. 200" in the index of that journal. The record of 1884 will be found in the senate journal on pages 634, 540, 802, 862, 880, 886, 892, 893, 894, 896, 899, 901, 902, 943, 955 and 968. But Mr. Griggs did not stop here. He remained in the senate until 1888, and every year he resisted all attempts to impose equal taxes.

In 1888, his last year as a senator, an amendment was introduced to provide that the property of corporations should pay the same taxes as individual property. Senator Griggs gave his vote to aid in killing this amendment. Then Senator Edwards, who represented a county in which millions of dollars' worth of corporation property escapes taxation, determined that the people should be informed of the exact truth from official sources, and he introduced an amendment providing that the state board of assessors should annually report a statement showing what the corporations would pay in each municipality if their property was taxed as the property of private owners is taxed. Senator Griggs and the corporations knew that the annual publication of this statement would give the truth to the public, and he and they desired that truth suppressed. His vote killed the amendment. Now, for argument's sake, let us say that Senator Griggs believed that the property of the corporations should escape taxation, that it is right that they should escape. Admit that he believed that. Does this excuse him from refusing to allow an annual statement from official sources to the people showing how much this exemption is worth to the corporations? Why should the truth be concealed? Can anything be more preposterous than the claim of the man who voted for these exemptions and in his last moments in the state senate voted against giving the people the information which would show the state of their burdens—the claim that he makes upon the stump and that his partisans make through the press that he was in favor of equal taxation?

GRIGGS' CAMPAIGN.

The manner of campaigning conducted by John W. Griggs is an insult to the intelligence of the people of New Jersey. He is going up and down the state asking for votes because in 1889 election frauds were committed in Hudson county. Those concerned in those frauds were indicted by a Democratic grand jury, tried and convicted by a Democratic petit jury and sentenced by a Democratic court. Can Mr. Griggs show why, on this record, any Democrat should vote against Chancellor McGill? Mr. Griggs also wants Democrats to vote for him because a Democratic legislature passed acts legalizing betting on horse racing. What has this to do with the Democratic candidate for governor, who, as presiding judge of the court of errors and appeals, declared the act of 1887, passed when Mr. Griggs was a member of the senate to effect similar legislation, to be void? Mr. Griggs wants votes because he says that the legislature of 1892 tried to legalize the "coal combine." What reason is this to urge against the chancellor who smashed that combine in a decision that has been praised wherever the English language is spoken? The acts of a few individuals do not constitute the platform of a party. Chancellor McGill is running on his own record and not on that of any other man, and the bitterest partisan on the Republican side has not been able to even insinuate that there is a blemish on the record of Alexander T. McGill. He was nominated by the masses of his party, and the reason for his nomination was his eminent fitness for the office of governor. He has worn the judicial ermine with credit to New Jersey, and his record on the bench is the best evidence of the fact that he will be one of New Jersey's greatest, purest governors.

LABOR DAY.

As a member of the state senate John W. Griggs opposed the creation of the holiday known as Labor day. He could see in it neither rhyme nor reason. He could not see that it gave a dignity to labor unsurpassed by any enactment in the history of legislation. He could see only the side of the employer. Now he is asking the wage earners of New Jersey to give him their votes. There were only two votes cast against the bill making the first Monday of September a legal holiday. One of these was cast by Senator Griggs. On the 5th of November he will find that the wage earners of New Jersey have long memories.

ALEXANDER T. M'GILL.
[Democratic nominee for governor of New Jersey.]

THE TRUTH.

At each meeting addressed by Mr. Griggs, he has called off a list of furniture, and insisted that Democrats should vote against Chancellor McGill because excessive prices were paid for desks and chairs used in the statehouse. That such excessive prices were paid is a fact, and it is not the work of the Democratic party of New Jersey to shield those who did this work or to extenuate their fault. Dishonest men can be found in any party. It would be as reasonable to argue that Mr. Griggs would prove dishonest because Republican State Treasurer Sooy robbed New Jersey of nearly $100,000 as to argue that Chancellor McGill should be held responsible for the acts of Barney Ford. The Democratic platform meets this question fairly and squarely when it says:

"We denounce as maliciously false the statements of the Republican state platform that the government of New Jersey has been conducted by the Democratic party in a dishonest or extravagant manner. The senate committee, after an investigation costing thousands of dollars and involving the scrutiny of every expenditure made under Democratic administration, reported that in the purchase of supplies for the state there had been extravagance or malfeasance on the part of two or three state employees.

"In the condemnation of those wrongs every good citizen joins, but the attempt to charge the misdoings of a few individuals upon the Democratic party or the Democratic administrations of this state is not warranted by the evidence and is a violation of the rules which common decency requires to control political discussion between citizens of a state. The facts that our state is without debt, that millions of dollars have been expended during the past 12 years in the improvement of state institutions, and that during that time not a dollar of state tax has been levied upon the property of private owners, are in themselves a sufficient answer to the charge of extravagance.

"During the past 25 years the governor of New Jersey has been a Democrat, and during that period the finances of the state have been collected, invested and expended with a care and integrity that have resulted in giving New Jersey the deserved fame of being the most economically governed state in the Union. When an official proves recreant to the trust reposed in him, he is no longer a Democrat, and the records of New Jersey show that the members of our party intrusted with the administration of the law have never allowed the plea of partisanship to protect a dishonest official from prosecution and punishment."

Candidate Griggs asks the Democrats of New Jersey to walk to the polls and declare that they desert the principles of their party because Ford paid excessive prices for supplies. We predict that he will not get a single vote on this invitation. Under Democratic governors New Jersey has grown to a position which is the envy of her sister states. In over ten years not a dollar has been collected from individual taxpayers to pay the expenses of the state government. Today New Jersey is the only state in the Union that is out of debt. If her institutions had not been economically managed, this condition would not exist. No party can underwrite the honesty of every man who professes its faith and manages to get into public office, but the Democratic party of New Jersey, after being intrusted with the administration of the laws for 30 years, can truthfully say that the party has never been used to shield a wrongdoer from the consequences of his acts. Mr. Griggs is not running against Ford. Why doesn't Mr. Griggs attack the record of Chancellor McGill? That is the record put in evidence by the Democratic nomination. That is the record which the people are called upon to judge. Mr. McGill was a member of the legislature. Why doesn't Mr. Griggs attack his legislative record? Mr. McGill was district attorney of Hudson county. His record in that office is not mentioned by Mr. Griggs. Mr. McGill has held judicial office over ten years. Why doesn't Mr. Griggs present a flaw in the record of the judge or chancellor? Simply because Mr. Griggs knows that no man can truthfully say anything but praise for the record of Mr. McGill. And that is the record which the people are going to give their verdict upon.

NOT ONE.

John W. Griggs served two years in the house of assembly and six years in the senate. During that time he devoted his energies to securing favors for corporations and passing bills to put the water rights of New Jersey under the control of a syndicate that is now oppressing the large cities of the state. There is not a law on our statute books drawn by Mr. Griggs that gives the slightest evidence that he entertains the slightest sympathy for the small property owners of the state. Not one. He knows this, and leaves his own record severely alone, arguing that the people should elect him because Barney Ford paid too much for a chair or a desk. There is not a fact in the record of Mr. Griggs that entitles him to the vote of a single Democrat. Not one. He has not advanced a reason why he should receive a single Democratic vote. Not one.

IT WAS A TOUGH TOWN

AN ENGINEER'S REMINISCENCES OF THE OLD DAYS OUT WEST.

The Famous Grape Story—How the Ministers Played Poker and Lost About Everything They Had With Them—The Stranger Who Declined to Drink.

Coming down through the California desert, the train was disabled and had to be laid up above the Cajon pass. It was at a little town that in old times when the railroad was new had accumulated history faster than it could be recorded. The engineer entertained some of the passengers by telling about it.

"I don't know," said he, "whether you have heard the famous grape story, but this is the original station and there is the barroom," indicating a shanty ahead. "When the Grand Duke Alexis was over here, the government paid him a good deal of attention. They got up big hunts and detailed troops of cavalry to guard them and gave the visitors a great send off. After it was all over they separated, and some of the big guns came this way. So the story goes, one of the noblemen wandered in here one morning and walked up to the bar, where Jimmy Fogarty was selling red eye whisky, and ordered drinks. It's a tough place now, and then there wasn't a blade of grass or a green thing in sight except the man at the bar. Seeing the floor littered with grapeskins, the visitors said to Jimmy:

"'Is it possible you raise grapes in this desert spot?'

"'No, your highness,' said Jimmy. 'Them ain't grapes; they're eyes that was gouged out in the fight at the ball here last night.'

"What the Russian said the story don't tell, but they say in a book he wrote on American customs in the far west he mentioned gouging as the national method of fighting and gave that case as an example.

"In the old days every man carried his life in his hands, and what with jumping claims and other things there was a good big death rate every day. Every man went armed, and there was only one word to describe it, and that was tough. I was on the late run one night and was about 20 miles outside of the town when I saw a man on the track signaling with a lantern. I slowed up and jumped down with the fireman to see what was the matter.

"'Nothing's the matter,' said the man. 'Me and my friends merely want to ride into town.' And with that four men stepped out, leading their horses, and began to tie them with long lariats to the baggage car. 'Now,' said the leader, poking a six shooter into my neck, 'steam on, and if you go fast enough to trip up them bronchos, why, it will be a question of planting you in the sand.'

"So we started ahead at a rate of about five miles an hour, and every once in awhile a bullet would whiz through the cab and one of the party would come along and intimate that we had better give the horses a rest, and once they made us water them.

"Meanwhile they had gone into the sleeper and found there were some ministers there who were coming from some convention. They made the porter rout everybody out and fix up a table, and then they forced the ministers to open up a game of poker. Some wouldn't play at first, but a ball fired six inches from your ear is a good persuader, and soon they were playing as if they had been at it all their days. The boys showed them how and made them bet their money, watches and other things. As the car got full of smoke from the cigars the boys would pull out their six shooters and with one in each hand fire shots through the roof to let the smoke out. By the time the train rolled into town every minister was dead broke, and some were rigged out in old corduroys. The authorities tried to find out who did the mischief and finally caught one of the boys, but when the case came up the judge, who was a tough citizen himself, asked one of the ministers if it was a square game. The minister said he supposed it was, but he was forced into it. The judge wouldn't believe that, so they failed to convict.

"I never saw the gang here phased but once. There was a fandango, and all the boys from the camps were in, about the toughest crowd the sun ever set upon. About half the men were sitting around the dancing ring, when in walked a small sized man, thin, but wiry. You could see from his dress he was a tenderfoot, just in on No. 14 that stopped there to water. The minute he got inside the door a yell of 'grass' went up, and half a dozen of the boys asked him to drink. For a second the stranger seemed nonplused; then he said:

"'Much obliged, gents, but I don't drink.'

"'What! don't drink?' yelled the boys.

"'No,' he said, jerking away from one who had him by the arm.

"'Oh, yes, you will,' said another, hauling out a shooting iron. 'You drink whisky or lead, and take your choice quick.'

"By this time the place was in an uproar, and Red Jack, who was a leader, sung out:

"'Tenderfoot wants to speak. Give him a show,' and pushed him into the dancing ring. The stranger took off his hat and said:

"'Gentlemen, you have invited me to drink, and I have declined, and I want to say right now that the man don't live that can make me drink if I don't want to. I'm an invalid, seeking health in this country, and I have no shooting irons, but as some of you insist on my drinking I'll make a proposition. Clear the ring and give me a fair show, and if there is any man with his fists that can make drink, why, I'll drink.'

"As there were a dozen or more spoiling for a fight the tenderfoot was soon accommodated. They formed a ring, and Red Jack claimed the honor of cleaning the new man out. The stranger took off his coat, shirt and shoes, turned up his pants and stood the prettiest looking figure you ever see, and after a minute they came together. Red Jack sailed at him like a mad bull, but the youngster stepped back, dodged him quick as a beam of light, and as Jack went by he socked it to him right under the jaw and simply drove him head first into the crowd. Then another fellow jumped in, one of the best fighters in the country. He made a feint and tried to grab the tenderfoot by the legs, but before he could move the little man butted him on the forehead so hard that he dropped like a log. Two others he laid out at quick notice. His fists seemed to glance from one to another, and they never hit him. In this way he topped off six men, and when no one else entered the ring he asked if they were satisfied that he didn't want to drink. You may be sure they were. The joke of it was that he was the champion middleweight fighter of Australia, and it was all practice to him."—Pasadena (Cal.) Cor. New York Sun.

With such harmony and enthusiasm as was evinced at the county convention yesterday, the Democrats of Union county go into the campaign with a good omen for success at the polls on election day.

The nominees of the convention are men of sterling characters, whose election will mean that the interests of their constituents will be conscientiously looked after. They are candidates who should receive the vote of every member of the Democratic party, and with this condition of affairs existing on election day their election is assured.

If there is one thing worse than being a woman, it is the trying not to be one.—Iota.

There is one thing worse still, the trying to look like a man.—Evening Sun.

The Hudson County Board of Freeholders have adopted a resolution providing that employes of the county who fail to pay their debts, be discharged.

Verily, the "Reform" government of New York city is quite a farce. Wednesday night Mayor Strong, at a public meeting at Walhalla hall, was lashing Tammany Hall, and Street Commissioner Waring was seated on the platform smiling his approval of the Mayor's speech, and all the while guilty of having over eighty per cent. of Tammany men under his employ in the street cleaning department.

The Consolidated Society of Oranges which has for its avowed object the consolidation of all the Oranges into one city, has opened its campaign for the season and has a bill which will be introduced in the Legislature early in the session. It is probable that the decision will be made contingent on a favorable vote of the people in the municipalities affected. The sentiment in favor of such a consolidation is growing rapidly.

The present attitude of Editor Runyon towards those employed on the Daily Press resembles the street urchin who has a fancied grievance against a playmate, and attempts to get even by calling names. Editor Runyon needs to have his mouth washed out with soap—that is the way boys of immaturity are treated when their words display evidence of depraved thoughts. It has been a good many years since Editor Runyon claims to have been a student at college, but the effect of the stories for which he was famous as a relater of seem to still permeate his character. What a revengeful, hateful and vile disposition Editor Runyon exhibits when he indulges in such epithets as "sissy," and all because the Daily Press maintains the lead in furnishing live news. Calling names is boy's play.

The deadlock in the Elizabeth City Council over the payment of bills was broken last night, ten councilman just the requisite number, voting for the payment of all outstanding claims against the city. The disputed salary bills of the six new policeman, which were the original cause of the dead lock, were also ordered paid.

The Common Council of Newark have decided to investigate the charges of fraud made regarding the purchase of land in Grove street, Clinton township, for a disinfecting station. The price paid for the land was $15 000. It is charged that the land is worth only $10,000.

The acquital of John Mullins, the Jersey City furniture dealer, for alleged complicity in the State House frauds, is a sad criterion on the much vaunted Legislative investigation of the Republicans last winter. Not a single conviction has been made before a court from the evidence furnished by this investigation.

R. V. Lindabury telegraphs to the Democratic State committee that "the prospects for the election of McGill are brightening every day. There was at first some distrust and perhaps a little ill feeling among certain elements. But both have now completely disappeared. The welcome change in sentiment is largely due to the personality of Chancellor McGill."

The New York Sun this morning has a column editorial on the New Jersey Gubernatorial situation and finishes with the following:

Let Griggs talk if he will! McGill is the man to vote for. If by his useless eloquence Griggs is entitled to wear a laurel crown for oratory, who objects? On January 20th, 1896, inauguration day, we believe McGill will do all the necessary talking. Until then his Democratic partisans in New Jersey will furnish the oratory, the arguments, and the votes.

Jerseymen and Democrats! This is a year for action, not talk!

The annual report of the State Board of Education shows that the school property of the State is valued at $11,751,222. The schoolhouses will accommodate 291,844 children. The number enrolled is 264,507. There are 720 male and 4,314 female teachers. The census of school children is 439,228. There are 10,166 children attending private schools, and 7,782 employed in factories. The colored children number 12,350, and the deaf mutes 193.

The management of the State Insane Asylum at Morris Plains, N. J., will probably investigate the charge of abuses made against the asylum by Albert F. Chadwick, principal of a public school in Paterson. Superintendent Coman and Dr. Smith of the asylum say that the reports which have been recently circulated about abuses in the asylum have been exaggerated. They deny that they allow the keepers to abuse the patients. In some instances the management admits that the keepers have used undue force when trying to subdue violent patients.

R. V. Lindabury spoke in Jersey City last night and made the following arraignment of Candidate Griggs' position on race-track legislation:

In 1887 the most infamous race-track bill ever enacted was passed, with Senator Griggs in his seat dodging the bill, which later the Supreme Court killed, or it would have debauched the entire State. When Senator Griggs dodged the vote he had a retainer from the Associated Race-Track Association in his pocket, and the retainer sealed his lips when honor called on him to vote. I agree with my friend, Judge Garretson, that as a lawyer Mr. Griggs had a right to take a retainer and act as counsel, but he owed a higher duty than that to his State when he was in his seat in the Senate. He is the man who is going about the State asking Democrats to vote against Chancellor McGill on the race-track issue.

The payment of a five per cent. dividend to the New Jersey State Agricultural Society stockholders emphasizes the fact that the Waverly Fair is a money-making institution, and that with attention to its possibilities in that direction, it can be made even more profitable. The increased convenience of access to the grounds which has come with the completion and operation of the Newark and Elizabeth Electric Railroad will make them more available for all sorts of open air sports and exhibitions, and the directors have shrewdly decided to put the property in condition to profit by this advantage.—Newark News.

ALEXANDER T. M'GILL.

Alexander Taggart McGill is descended of Scotch-Irish ancestry on both the paternal and maternal sides of the house. His paternal grandfather, being imbued with that great love of civil and religious liberty so characteristic of the true Milesian, as well as a hatred of the British government and its methods in Ireland, determined to cast in his fortunes with the infant republic of the western continent and emigrated to the United States from the north of Ireland in 1788, settling in the western part of Pennsylvania.

In 1807 Alexander Taggart McGill, Sr., the father of the chancellor, was born in Washington county, Pa. After graduation from college in 1826, he went south and settled in Milledgeville, Ga., where he studied law and was admitted to the Georgia bar in 1831, being also about this time elected clerk of the Georgia house of representatives. His health failing, he returned to the north, abandoned the profession of the law, studied theology, and became in his day and generation one of the most distinguished and learned teachers of theology in the country, serving as professor in the divinity schools at Allegheny City, Pa., Columbia, S. C., and Princeton, N. J.

The maternal grandfather of Chancellor McGill, General George McCulloch, was a native of Kentucky. He settled in Pennsylvania in his early manhood and became noted later in life as a state senator, member of congress and major general of Pennsylvania militia.

On the maternal side the chancellor is also descended from colonial and Revolutionary stock. Colonel Thomas Turbett, his great grandfather, being an Indian fighter of note in Pennsylvania, and later in life he distinguished himself as an officer (lieutenant colonel) of the Continental army under Washington, taking part in the battles of Trenton and Princeton.

Alexander Taggart McGill, the subject of this biographical sketch, was born in Alleghany City, Pa., in 1843. At the age of 11 years he removed to Princeton, N. J., where his father had been chosen to fill a chair in the Princeton Theological seminary.

After pursuing a preparatory course at the old Edgehill Grammar school at Princeton, he entered Princeton college and was graduated therefrom in the class of 1864 with the degree of A. B. After his college course was finished, the Chancellor determined to take up the study of law. In 1866 he was graduated from the Columbia College Law school, New York city, receiving the degree of LL. B.

In 1867 he was admitted to the New Jersey bar as an attorney, and three years later he was made a counselor. For about a year he practiced law in Trenton in the office of the late Judge Scudder, with whom his name had been entered as a student for three years. In 1868 he located in Jersey City, where he soon after formed an association with the late Attorney General Robert Gilchrist, which association soon developed into a partnership. This partnership continued until 1876, when the Chancellor decided to sever his relations with Mr. Gilchrist and practice alone.

During 1874 and 1875 he was elected corporation counsel for Bayonne. In 1874 he was nominated by the Democrats of the old First assembly district of Hudson county to be their candidate for assemblyman, and although up to this time this district had always been Republican by a safe majority of 300 or 400, he carried it by nearly 200 majority, and again, in 1875, being renominated, he carried it by a greatly increased majority. While in the house of assembly Chancellor McGill served on several very important committees and made an enviable record for intelligent, honest and faithful service. In 1878 Governor George B. McClellan appointed him prosecutor of the pleas for Hudson county, and upon the resignation of Hon. A. Q. Garretson as law judge of Hudson county Governor Ludlow appointed him to fill the vacancy.

On March 29, 1887, the late Governor Robert S. Green appointed him Chancellor to succeed Chancellor Runyon, and two days later he was unanimously confirmed by the senate. On May 1, 1894, his term of Chancellor having expired, he was reappointed by Governor George T. Werts, a Republican senate confirming his appointment without reference, a deserved and just compliment.

From Rutgers college Chancellor McGill has received the honorary degree of LL. D., and from Princeton college, his alma mater, the degree of A. M. in course and also the honorary degree of LL. D.

Socially the Chancellor is very popular. Affable and courteous to all with whom he comes in contact, genial and warm hearted to his friends, he inspires all who know him with the charm of his personality.

In all the public positions that Chancellor McGill has been called upon to fill, he has proved his ability and competency, and has discharged the duties of the various offices he has held in a way to excite the admiration and commendation of his fellow citizens.

Fearless and honest in the discharge of these duties, he has always acted for the good of society, the preservation of law and order and the protection of the rights of the people.

On principle opposed to all forms of monopolistic oppression, he has stood between the people and rapacious monopolies and guarded the public interests with tireless fidelity.

Honorable and upright in private as well as in public life, a half century of his life has passed, and his character and reputation are without spot or blemish, pure as unsullied snow.

Consistent in all things during his past official life, he is not now confronted by a record of inconsistencies while in office which would force him on the defensive and stain what otherwise might have been a brilliant career.

GUESTS OF FARMER JAMES.

MR. MARTINE AND HIS FRIENDS HAVE A GLORIOUS, GOOD TIME.

Democrats and Republicans Were There as Friends of the Farmer Orator, Who Treated Them Royally—The Features.

Farmer Jim Martine and his friends had a time of it Saturday afternoon in the orchard of Cedar Brook farm. It is superflous to say what the Farmer Orator's politics is, because every one who has ears to hear and has ever heard the name of Jim Martine knows that he is an unterrified Democrat. But not so all his friends, though it is not the fault of his persuasive arguments that it is thus, but rather what some philosphers might term the eternal fitness of things—that is, if there were no Republicans the Democrats wouldn't have a chance to talk.

But Saturday afternoon a large number of Democrats and Republicans relegated their political complexion to the innermost part of their souls and remembered only that they were friends and guests of Farmer Jim. And what a host was he. He was here, there, everywhere and all over at the same time, grasping the hand of every one who walked, rode or wheeled, and making all feel that he was a royal good fellow.

Not in a long time has there been such a representative gathering of Union county citizens in Plainfield as there was at this event of Saturday. There were people there who held office, who had held office and who wanted to hold office. There was but little politics talked of outside of now and then two Democrats or two Republicans casually remarking in a confiding manner to one another that the chances were good for their particular ticket to win. The only thing that could possibly be construed as savoring of politics was the fact that a lithograph of Chancellor McGill greeted the vision of the visitor as he entered the orchard, and small cards with the proverbial crowing and victorious rooster, with the following inscription printed thereon were distributed about:

HURRAH FOR M'GILL!

PLAINFIELD, N. J.:

Jim Martine's Orchard, October 19, 1895.

Nearly every man on the grounds wore one of these little cards stuck in the band of his hat or pinned on his coat. Editor McBride, of The Elizabeth Journal, doubtless expressed the sentiment of nearly all the Republicans present with reference to the propriety and consistency of hurrahing for McGill when he remarked that when "I am among the Romans I do as the Romans do."

The weather was perfect, not too chilly nor too warm, but just about right.

The principal sport was the shooting of live pigeons, and several crates of these birds were provided by Mr. Martine for the men of steady muscle and good aim.

The refreshments were plenty—both of a solid and liquid nature. On the end of the first table sat seven and a half gallons of what the Farmer Orator termed as "invigorating liquids," while arrayed along the tables extending towards the other end of the orchard were sandwiches, cookies, crackers, bologna, pickles, cheese, and, as the auction bills say, other articles too numerous to mention. Over a sizzling fire a big tin boiler of coffee provided a thirst quencher and invigorator for those who cared not for the other liquids. A barrel of oysters were also consumed, while a sawbuck supported a half barrel of amber-colored fluid that the producer finds necessary to buy a stamp for from Uncle Sam. But all these things were there to be eaten and all one had to do was to help themselves.

About four o'clock a wagon was drawn out into an open space and Mr. Martine, whose duty it was to act as master of ceremonies was surrounded by a few of his friends and lifted bodily into the wagon, as was also all the other speakers. Mr. Martine's extreme modesty led him to cover his face with his hands, but finally he broke forth and gave his distinguished audience such an eloquent address that they were spellbound. He said that he was sorry a local paper had termed the affair a political gathering for it had been the farthest thought from his mind. It was a gathering of his friends, both Republicans and Democrats, and he hoped that no feelings of partisanship would enter. He spoke of his allegiance to his party and was sorry that all present were not of the same faith. His hearty words of welcome were felt by everyone.

Editor C. C. McBride, of the Elizabeth Journal, was the next one to be placed on the platform, and said among other things, that he was glad that this was not a political gathering but a meeting of friends. Continuing, he said, that he counted Mr. Martine one of his warmest personal friends, and had the highest regard and respect for him. There would be no better Republican than he, if he would only come into the fold. He hoped that in the future his party would treat him better and place him in a position where they would hear from him. He concluded in speaking in high terms of Mr. Martine's hospitality and thanked him for his kindness.

Mr. Martine then introduced Editor Thomas Lane, of Summit, by saying that he had lost his bashfulness two weeks ago when he asked a winsome young lady for her hand and secured it, a lovely Kentucky blue grass belle. He also said that he had been fortunate to come out of a law suit and and only pay six cents damages. Mr. Lane was warm in his praise of Mr. Martine's hospitality.

J. J. Matthews, of Elizabeth, came next and also testified to the warm open-heartedness of the host.

Fred Marsh was with much difficulty placed in the wagon. He said that he was interested in the shooting and was losing money every minute he was staying away from the traps.

Hon. T. M. Kelly, of Elizabeth, Judge Green, of Westfield, Alford B. Cook, of Rahway and W. O'Brien, of Morristown, followed, and all spoke of Mr. Martine's generous treatment and everyone was glad that it was not a political gathering, and hoped that James would not forget them next year.

George R. Nichol, of Scotch Plains, spoke and was warmly encored.

JOHNSON'S TRIAL POSTPONED.

An Important Witness In the Somerville Murder Case Missing.

In court at Somerville this morning Jacob Johnson, the colored evangelist, who is charged with the murder of Annie Rogers, also colored, at Somerville some time ago, was arraigned for trial before Judge McGee. He was represented by Meehan & Steele, of Somerville, who asked that an adjournment to January 6th be taken on account of an important witness of the defence being in Chicago. The counsel stated that they did not wish to proceed with the trial until this person could be brought to Somerville to testify. The court granted the adjournment.

FLIM-FLAMMED BY A ROOM-MATE.

A Dilapidated Suit of Clothes Left in Exchange for Valuable Articles.

A very clever theft was committed at Anderson's boarding house on Somerset street, Saturday afternoon.

A man going by the name of William recently came to Plainfield from New York and secured a position with Horace J. Martin, the blacksmith. He secured lodging at Anderson's place and was put in a room with a man named Connolly, the two sleeping together.

Saturday afternoon both happened to be idle and they lounged about their room. Connolly feeling a little tired reclined on the bed and took a nap. Just previous to his taking a snooze William offered him a drink from a bottle, which he accepted, and which he afterward learned belonged to him. When he awoke he found that his room-mate had skipped, taking a new suit of clothes, a valuable gold watch and $3 in money, leaving an old suit of clothes in the room.

Connolly did not speak of it till late yesterday and little hopes of capturing the thief are entertained. He was in town, however, yesterday, but left toward night for parts unknown.

PROGRESSIVE WOMEN.

A Society Organized to Discuss Parliamentary Rules.

A novel and promising club was organized this morning at the home of Miss C. R. Yates, on West Seventh street, the object of which is to study parliamentary rules.

The idea was brought forth by Miss Yates, as there are many women in Plainfield who are often called upon to conduct meetings and decide questions, and do not feel thoroughly capable from a strictly parliamentarian view. The club is composed entirely of women, and they will meet the first and fourth Thursdays in each month at ten o'clock, in the Y. M. C. A. hall. This morning the club elected the following officers:

President, Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson; Vice-President, Miss C. R. Yates; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. Martin I. Cooley; Recording Secretary, Miss May Cahoone; Treasurer, Mrs. Carman Parse; Superintendent of Press, Mrs. S. K. Krom. The initiation fee is twenty-five cents and anyone can join by applying to the Executive Committee, which consists of the officers.

The club starts off with the following members: Mrs. Griffin, Mrs. J. W. Johnson, Mrs. S. A. Cahoone, Mrs. R. K. Case, Mrs. J. M. McNaughton, Mrs. M. C. Dobbins, Mrs. Carra Peck, Mrs. S. R. Krom, Mrs. Martin I. Cooley, Miss Grace Cooley, Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, Miss Mary Maire, Mrs. Carman Parse, Miss May Cahoone and Miss C. L. Yates. A short constitution and by-laws were adopted to govern the club. The members will take time in conducting the meetings in alphabetical order and Roberts' rules of order will be used. The next meeting will be held Thursday morning next at 10 o'clock in the Y.M.C.A. building and every member is urged to be present.

Herald-Democrat Changes Hands.

The Herald-Democrat, of Elizabeth, a daily paper, changed hands yesterday afternoon and will henceforth be run as an independent Republican newspaper. It has been purchased by a syndicate, and will be known as the New Jersey Herald. This leaves the Democracy of Elizabeth for the first time in twenty years without an English local daily.

JUNIOR Y. M. C. A. SPORTS.

A STRONG WIND PREVENTED FAST TIME AT THE OVAL SATURDAY.

The Events Were Hotly Contested—Wm. Whiting Won the All-Around Championship—The Victors and Summaries.

But for the strong wind from the northwest, Saturday would have been an ideal day for the athletic sports of the Junior Y. M. C. A., although it grew rather cool as the afternoon advanced. The events were hotly contested and the crowd that did brave the chilling blasts, was an enthusiastic one. William Whiting won the all around championship, winning the standing broad jump easily, taking in both the one hundred yard dash, closed and open, and finishing third in the two hundred and twenty yard dash. Hazlewood Keller won both of the closed runs without trouble.

At the conclusion of the games, John C. Whiting, assistant secretary of the Y. M. C. A., ran four hundred and forty yards in one minute flat, paced by Wilbur Cornwell on a wheel. Wilbur F. Cornwell then tried for the High School one mile bicycle record of two minutes and fifty seconds, paced by William M. McCutchen and Thomas A. Cuming on a Cleveland tandem. Despite the high wind, he finished easily in two minutes and thirty-nine seconds. Webster Littell refereed the games. The summaries of the different events:

100 yard dash. Won by Hazlewood Keller; Will Whiting, second; Haward Roome, third. Time, 13 seconds.

One-third mile bicycle race. Won by Homer Smith; Frank Talmadge, second; Donald McGee, third. Time, 55 seconds.

Standing broad jump. Won by Will Whiting; Wm. J. Roome, Jr., second; Stanley Peck, third. Distance 7 feet, 7 inches.

220 yard dash. Won by Hazlewood Keller; Howard Roome, second; Will Whiting, third. Time, 30 1-5 seconds.

One mile bicycle race, open. Won by Morris Dumont; Frank Talmadge, second; Homer Smith, third. Time, 3 minutes, 43-5 seconds.

100 yard dash, open. Won by Morris Dumont; Will Whiting, second; Raymond Smith, third. No time was taken, as the race finished at the wrong place.

Two mile bicycle handicap. Won by Frank Talmadge; Homer Smith, second; Stanley Peck, third. Time, 7 minutes, 33 seconds.

These games will be held semi-annually.

SUING FOR BOARD OF HORSES.

The Plaintiff Claims to Have Received No Pay and the Defendant Vice Versa.

The case of Stryker against Brock, on contract, came up in Justice Crosley's court this morning. Lawyer Walter Hetfield represented Mr. Brock and Lawyer Roselle, of Marlboro, represented Mr. Stryker, of the latter place.

It appears that Mr. Brock took a horse and colt to Mr. Strykers' place previous to his going to Europe and wanted the latter to pasture them till his return. A verbal contract was made, but Mr. Stryker claimed that the board for the colt had not been paid, while Brock claimed it had. In consequence he brought suit for the money. The case was tried before the following jury: P. A. VanArsdale, P. Hansen, C. Frank French, Jacob Voehl, Julius Stahl, J. M. Smalley, L. E. Barkalew, W. A. Wilson, H. Chamberlain, F. S. McGann, Isiah Coriell and H. C. Reynolds.

The case was given to the jury at about 1:30 this afternoon and they returned in five minutes with a verdict for the plaintiff for the full amount, $83.75.

A MEN'S CLUB ORGANIZED.

The Men of St. Joseph's Church Unite to Form a Social Club.

A men's club was organized at St. Joseph's church yesterday afternoon under the title of the Holy Name Society. Seventy one names were enrolled as charter members in the club, which will be a social organization. There is some talk of making it a mutual benefit association.

The following officers were then elected: President, Thomas Neeley; Vice-president, L. H. McCollough; Secretary, Harry Watson; Treasurer, Richard Boice. The society will meet again on the third Sunday in November.

The Boys' Brigade.

There were seventeen members of the Boys' Brigade present at the meeting held in the First Baptist church Saturday night, and three new members joined. L. H. Biglow, Jr., is the president, with C. M. Evans as assistant. An advisory committee from from the church consists of R. K. Case, G. H. Batchelor and E. L. Bonny. YOUNG LADIES' TROUBLE.

FACTS MADE KNOWN TO FRIENDS

Lady Stenographers, Typewriters, and all Working Girls Interested.

(SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.)

This class of women are more or less afflicted with illness brought on by constant application in one position. Therefore all will be interested in the candid expression of this bright young lady of Denver, Col., who writes Mrs. Pinkham as follows:—

"This is the first opportunity I have found to write and thank you for the good your Compound has done me. I feel better than I have for years. It seems a seven days' wonder to my friends. Where I used to be pitied, everything is the opposite, and there is not a day but what some one wants to know what I have done to work such a wonder.

"Before taking the Compound I had constant headaches; was constipated; bloated; eyes weak, with watery whites; bearing down pains; pains in the small of my back and right side; took cold very easily, which always caused intense pain in ovaries. I did not want to go anywhere or see any one.

"I was called cross, but I could not help it, feeling as I did. I could not lift anything or do any hard work without suffering for days afterward. Menstruation lasted from eight to ten days, the first two or three days being in almost constant pain, day and night.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has made a new girl of me; am now well, happy, and strong." Yours truly, A STENOGRAPHER, Denver, Col.

FOR THE BUILDING FUND.

A Large Sum Received and the Tea Was a Complete Success.

The spacious parlors at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Matthews, of Grove street, were crowded Saturday afternoon with those who went there to attend the tea given by the Guild of the Church of the Redeemer. The guests were received by the following reception committee, Rev. Dr. Jocelyn Johnstone, Mrs. Charles Matthews, Mrs. B. A. Hegeman, Jr., Mrs. Emile Woltmann, Miss Kate Embury, Mrs. George P. Dupee, Mrs. Frank Browne and Mrs. Samuel Townsend.

The tea room was most artisticly decorated and here presiding over a very prettily arranged table were Miss Bessie Day and Miss Davis, while Miss Alice Barlow, Miss Daisy Elsburg, Miss Brown, Miss Helen Phillips and Miss Alice Thompson, served the tea and chocolate.

The table of fancy articles was under the charge of Miss Woltmann, Miss Stevens, Miss Lizzie Hasbrock, Miss Emily Thompson, Miss Phillips and Miss Pond, and the candy and cake booth was looked after by Miss Grace Brown, Miss Horne, Miss E DeKlyn, Miss Mary Embury and Miss Barlow.

The tea was a great success socially as the attendance was much larger than was expected. The financial part was especially pleasing as, about $200 was received which goes toward the building fund.

Bright, Breezy and Funny.

Dainty May Smith Robbins, who appears at Music Hall next Thursday evening in the musical comedy "Little Trixie," is fast gaining recognition as one of the most versatile soubrettes now before the public. She is said to be one of the greatest little dancers in America, and her comedy work is far above the average in its quaint humor and charming artlessness, being particularly attractive to lady audiences. The play is bright, breezy and funny, and at the same time refined, interesting and pleasing.

TOM COLTAR USED A KNIFE.

WM. CASEY WAS HIS HOST, BUT THAT MADE NO DIFFERENCE.

Coltar Imbibed Too Much and Then Refused to Go Home—Cut His Friend on the Head—Held for the Grand Jury.

On complaint of William Casey, a resident of Manson place, Justice William Newcorn issued a warrant on Saturday for the arrest of a man named Thomas Coltar. The charge was assault and battery.

The facts are on Friday night Mr. Casey had a social gathering at his home and among the guests was Coltar, who had lingered too long over the flowing bowl and in consequence became rather noisy.

Casey finally told him that he had better go home and get to bed as he had to work the next day and would probably feel better. He then took hold of Coltar and escorted him to the front piazza. Coltar was obstinate and refused to go. Casey insisted on his going. Suddenly the former took a knife from his pocket and cut Casey severely about the head. He then skipped.

Casey went to Dr. Hedges and had several stitches taken in the cuts.

Sergeant Kiely was notified to capture Coltar and finally succeeded in finding him at the Pond Machine Tool Works where he worked. He was locked up and yesterday morning had a hearing before Justice Newcorn. Coltar pleaded guilty to the charge and was placed under $200 bonds to await the action of the grand jury. Bail was furnished by his friend, Thomas Lyons.

FARMER CLARK SHOOTS.

And He Put Buckshot in the Village Cobbler's Leg.

For some time past Farmer Ben Clark, of Scotch Plains, has been missing the product of his corn field with great regularity, but whether it was a two or four-legged robber he has been at a loss to determine. The particular field in which the raids were made on was located in the rear of the James T. Lyons estate on Park avenue, and in this field last night Mr. Clark kept a watch as soon as dusk commenced to fall.

He carried a shot gun, and at 7:30 came upon the crouching figure of a man in among the shocks husking corn, and with his bag almost filled to the top. He called upon him to cease his nefarious operation, but the individual did not show much disposition to do this, so Clark leveled his gun at the man and gave him a charge of buckshot in his leg, at the same time remarking that he would shoot him dead if he didn't quit.

The man quit and Clark proceeded over to where he had been husking and found that he was George Stillger, the village cobbler. He confiscated the bag of corn and took it to the hotel, and this morning threatened to have Stillger arrested if he did not settle for the corn that he had missed, which amounts to several bushels. Though Stillger was not seriously injured by the charge of buckshot, he is compelled to walk with a limp today.

THE GREAT DELUGE.

SOME OF THE MANY AND VARIED VERSIONS OF THE FLOOD.

The Most Skeptically Inclined Must Believe That Something of the Sort Actually Occurred, For It Has Been Perpetuated by Almost Every Nation and Race.

One of the most powerful and vivid descriptive portions of the book of Genesis is that devoted to the wonderful story of the deluge. Together with the accounts of Adam's fall, the slaying of Abel and the burning of Lot's wife into a pillar of salt, every one remembers from childhood how Noah was warned of the doom impending over the children of men and how he constructed a huge ark in which he did live, himself and his family and two of every beast of the field and fowl of the air, for the space of 190 days, or until the waters subsided and the dry land appeared. But the biblical recital of this terrible visitation of divine wrath is by no means the only one. In fact, the most skeptically inclined must believe that something of the sort actually occurred long ago, for it has been perpetuated not only in the Talmud and Koran, but in the legends of almost every nation and race that ever lived on the face of the earth, including the Chinese, the ancient Aztecs of Mexico, the Indian tribes of North and South America and even the savages of Africa.

The story, of course, varies materially in the multitudinous traditions, but the gist of it remains substantially the same—namely, that the earth was once visited by a great flood in which nearly every living thing was overwhelmed and lost. Thus in the Koran we read that Noah constructed the ark with divine assistance and was railed at for his pains by the wicked. When the time prescribed for the punishment of mankind arrived, water was seen to flow from the burning oven of Noah's wife, and immediately all the veins and arteries of the earth broke and spurted out water.

Noah was then admonished in these words: "Take and bring into the ark two couples of every kind of animal, male and female, with all your family, except him who has been condemned by your mouth, and receive the faithful and even the unbelieving, but few only will enter." The Koran also says that the ark was built in two years, and that it contained three stories, the upper one for the birds, the middle one for the men and the provisions and the hold for the beasts. Canaan, the son of Ham, refused to be saved. Therefore Noah cursed him, and his posterity became black and were enslaved. The Persians assert that Ham incurred his father's malediction as well. When six months had passed, the ark rested on the top of Mount Djendi (Ararat), after having made the circuit of the world. Tabari says that two sorts of animals left the ark which had not entered it—the pig and the cat. Concerning the latter we have this interesting piece of information: When the rats began to make trouble, the voyagers complained to Noah. Whereupon the patriarch "passed his hand down the back of the lion, who sneezed, and the cat leaped out of its nose. And the cat ate the rats."

According to the Talmud, Noah and his family and one pair of each kind of beast were to be saved in the ark, but of every clean beast seven were to enter in. The rhinoceros, however, had to be left out, for the simple but sufficient reason that its neck alone was three miles long. Nevertheless all the rabbinic writers agree that the rhinoceros survived the flood; hence it is reasonable to suppose that the huge beast was taken in tow by a rope attached to its horn. Some authorities likewise declare that Noah extended his hospitality to another outsider in the shape of Og, the giant, who climbed on the roof of the ark and received his daily food through a hole bored in the side of the vessel.

Ararat has been known under this name for 3,000 years, and an Armenian writer declares that an entire country was so called after Arai the Fair, an ancient Armenian king, who lived about 1750 B. C. He fell in a bloody battle with the Babylonians, and the scene of his death was thenceforth known as Arai-Arat, or the Fall of Arai. Josephus refers to the mountain as Nazuana and declares that the remains of the ark were there to be seen carefully preserved.

Almost all the Asiatic traditions closely resemble the Biblical account. Berosus in his Chaldee history (B. C. 260) speaks of ten kings, who appear to correspond to the ten patriarchs in Genesis before the flood. The last of these kings was called Xisuthrus. Berosus relates that "Kronos appeared to Xisuthrus in a dream and warned him that all men would be destroyed by a deluge on the 15th of the month Daesios and commanded him to write down all the learning and science of men and to hide it in the sun city Siparis, and then to build a ship and enter it along with his family and relatives and nearest friends, and to take into it with him food and drink and beasts and winged fowl. When he was asked whither he was about to sail, he was bidden to reply, 'To the gods to pray them that men may prosper.'" Xisuthrus did as he was commanded, and when the flood showed signs of abating he sent out three birds in succession. The first and second came back, the latter with mud on its feet, but the third returned not. Soon after this the ship was stranded on a mountain, and Xisuthrus disembarked with his family, offered thanks to the gods and vanished. Subsequently the remaining survivors heard his voice in the heavens, bidding them fear God and to take his writings out of Siparis and from them instruct men.—New York Post

He Took Her Back.

A witty and popular London clergyman had an unpleasant experience. One Sunday he was going up the steps of his church when he was asked by an old lady (who, of course, did not know him) to help her up the steps. With his usual good grace he complied with her request.

On reaching the top she asked him who was to preach.

"The Rev. Mr. Jelf," replied he, that being his own name.

"O Lor!" exclaimed the old lady, "help me down again. I'd rather listen to a man sharpenin a saw. Please help me down again; I don't care to go in."

At first he was inclined to refuse, but then he gently helped her down again, remarking, as he reached the bottom, "I would not go in either if I was not paid for it."—London Tit-Bits.

Music.

Music may be classed into natural, social, sacred and martial. It is the twin sister of poetry, and, like it, has the power to sway the feelings and command the mind. In devotion it breathes the pure spirit of inspiration and love; in martial scenes it rouses the soul to fearless deeds of daring and valor, while it alleviates the cares and enhances the innocent and cheerful enjoyments of domestic life.—Acton.

CHURCH WORKERS' REWARD.

HOPE CHAPEL PRESENTS MR. AND MRS. SQUIRES WITH TOKENS.

Short Addresses By a Number of the Older Members While the Younger Ones Were In Evidence With Costly Gifts.

In spite of the fact that The News, in their endeavor to be enterprising, prematurely announced the surprise reception given to Superintendent H. G. Squires, Hope chapel, Friday evening, the affair was a complete success. Between 400 and 500 people gathered at the chapel, and when Mr. and Mrs. Squires arrived they were greatly surprised to see so many present. They were escorted to the front seats and the pastor, Rev. G. Kennedy Newell, took charge of the programme. In his usual happy manner he spoke a few words of welcome, after which he called on S. R. Struthers.

Mr. Struthers said that like the leaders of Bible times Mr. Squires had been chosen by the Lord to lead the people of Hope Chapel, and that it was at his suggestion that the name of Hope was given. He spoke of the vast amount of good that had been done at the chapel and all through the blessings of God on the Superintendent who had been led to choose wise assistants in the work. Amos Andrews was introduced and related in an interesting manner a short history of the chapel from its birth to the present time. How they used to meet in a small building when the membership was small and how he was accustomed to wade through mud in getting to the chapel.

Benjamin Hand who was closely identified with the chapel work for the first three years gave an interesting talk of his experience during the early part of the chapel's history. A change was then made in the programme, and Mr. Newell introduced Miss Firstbrook who rendered a pleasing piano solo.

Following this F. H. Andrews was called upon and related several amusing stories, and at the close said that the teachers and scholars of the Sunday-school wanted to give Mr. Squires something as a token of their esteem for his faithfulness. He then on behalf of the members presented him with a handsome silves water set complete, with this inscription on the tray: "Henry C. Squires, from the teachers and scholars of Hope chapel, October 18th, 1895."

Mr. Squires was completely overcome and for a minute words failed to express his thoughts. Finally, he said that his wife had insisted on his coming to the chapel, but he was not able to tell why she was so anxious. Continuing, he said in part:

I have been greatly touched with the remarks this evening, and I thank God for what He has done. There is no place that I love more than Hope chapel. Everybody finds a hearty welcome here, no matter how rich or poor. I trust God may continue His blessings, and I thank you all very much for this evidence of your love and affection. All joined in singing "Blest Be the Tie that Binds," after which Mrs. S. R. Struthers was asked to say a few words, which she did in a very amusing manner.

At the close of her remarks she presented Mrs. Squires with a beautiful marble clock, which was gracefully accepted. Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards was introduced and said that he supposed he would have have to talk about Mr. Squires because the rest had done so. He said that where man and wife had lived many years together they often grew to resemble each other and he thought that this was the case with Mr. Squires and Mr. Newell, because they had been associated together for a long time.

Following Dr. Richard's remarks Fred Wharton, on behalf of the Young Men's League, presented Mrs. Squires with a bouquet of choice roses. Everybody was then invited to another room where long tables were spread with excellant refreshments. The balance of the evening was given up to a genuine social time. The women who had charge of the refreshments were Mrs. S. R. Struthers, Mrs. Page, Mrs. Canfield, Mrs. McComas, Mrs. Higgins, Mrs. Sweeney, Mrs. Stewart, Mrs. Amos Andrews, and Mrs. Joseph Randolph.

Go and See Her.

Perhaps you don't know May Smith Robbins who comes to Music Hall next Thursday. There are people on earth whom one don't care to know, but they don't stand in May Smith Robbins' French button boots. Managers Rich & Maeder know a good thing when they see it and they propose to intoduce to the citizens of this city a soubrette star who can do more singing and dancing to the square inch than has been seen here in many a moon. Come and see her and you'll take off your hat.

CONVERSED ON VARIED SUBJECTS.

A Pleasant Time Enjoyed by Grace M. E. Church People.

The women of the Grace M. E. church have always been famous for their hospitality, and at the sociable af the Women's Home Missionary Society held at the home of the president, Mrs. A. A. Taft, of Westervelt avenue, last evening, they did not lose their reputation. Quite a number of the congregation turned out for the sociable, and all those who did spent a most enjoyable evening.

The programme opened with a very interesting talk by Rev. Dr. H. K. Carroll. A paper on the work of the deaconesses of the church was next read by Mrs. E. P. Stevens. Then followed a conversation party. Dainty little cards with the list of subjects were given to each of those present, the subjects on which were as follows; Weather, Home Missionary Work, Last Book Read, Flowers and Window Gardening, Fashions, How Shall We Improve Our Society? Bicycles and Walking, Vacation Trips, Work Which Should Be Done at Home, and Pets. This new kind of entertainment proved a great succes, and formed a very pleasing feature of the evening.

The committee in charge consisted of Mrs. A. A. Taft, Mrs. Edward A. Vermeule, Mrs. Shepherd, Mrs. E. Winkler and Mrs. Henry Voehl.

FRIENDS IN NEED.

Daniel Manley's Benefit a Big Financial Success.

The benefit given by the Pond Tool Social Club to Daniel Manley in T. A. B. Hall last evening was a great success. Mr. Manley is very ill at his home and has suffered considerably, but the substantial way in which his friends assisted him last night will be a great consolation to him.

It is believed that fully $175 will be realized for Mr. Manley.

The officers of the club are Samuel Flynn, president; Edward Coffee, secretary; Daniel Crowley, treasurer; and the committee of arrangements S. Langdon, C. Reagan, S. Stewart, D. Keefe and D. Morning. Samuel Flynn and D. Keefe were the efficient floor managers. Dancing to the latest variations from O'Reilly's orchestra was kept up till a late hour when all departed for home feeling satisfied that a worthy brother would be much relieved.

SMASHED THREE FINGERS.

A Children's Quarrel Ends With a Serious Accident.

Two little East Fourth street boys had a fight all of their own yesterday which resulted in serious injury to one of them. John Varden and Clarence Angleman quarreled over some little matter and Johnny, the largest of the two, chased his opponent all over until at last young Clarence picked up a stone.

"I double dare you to throw it," cried Johnny, and it was thrown, but missed him. A second was sent with no better aim, but the last, a stone almost as large as Johnny's head, caught Johnny on the hand, smashing three fingers.

The marriage of Miss Quereau, of Scotch Plains, to Edward Field, formerly of Fanwood, but now of New York, will take place in New York next Wednesday.

CHANGE OF TIME.

The 7:58 Express to Leave Five Minutes Earlier Next Monday.

Commencing next Monday the express train on the Central Railroad which leaves the North Avenue station at 7:58 will be scheduled to leave five minutes earlier, or at 7:53, arriving in New York at 8:47. This change has been made at the solicitation of a large number of Plainfield commuters who were frequently unable to get to their place of business by 9 o'clock, owing to being a minute or two late in catching the right ferry boat to land them at Liberty street in time. This change of schedule will make the connections easier and the Central's patrons in this city are greatly pleased with Mr. Baldwin's recognition of their requests for a change in the time of this express train. It is just such little favors as these towards their customers that makes the Central services so satisfactory and popular.

POETRY FOR THE WHITE HOUSE.

Five Verses of Rhyme on the Three Little Cleveland Maids.

Some time ago a Plainfield man made a fishing rod which he presented to President Cleveland, and now a Plainfield woman has written a piece of poetry concerning the three little Cleveland tots and sent it to Mrs. Cleveland, upon the receipt of which the White House mistress replied in a pleasing little note to the authoress such as only a woman can write. The poetess is Miss C. Moran, of 631 South Second street, and the verses follow:

Three little maids in the white house,
Three little maids at play,
Laughing, singing, frolicing,
All the live-long day.
Calling for papa Grover,
Laughing aloud with glee,
As they tumble over
When climbing upon his knee.
The loveliest little maidens,
All in this broad fair land,
Is Ruth, Esther and Marion,
A famous little band.
When Grover goes out fishing,
They feel so sad and lone,
And ask their beautiful mamma,
Why papa don't stay home.
And papa Grover feels so proud,
That it does him annoy,
When he recollects the papers say,
That Grover wants a boy.

FRAZEE HEIRS WIN.

W. A. Coddington Was Successful and Obtained the Order from the Chancellor.

Several months ago Lillie A. Keepers brought suit against Theodore R. Munn and others in the Court of Chancery through her counsel, McCarter, Williamson & McCarter, of Newark. The heirs of the late Eleanor L. Frazee, of Plainfield, were made defendants and they employed Reed & Coddington to look after their interests in the case. There was considerable property involved in the law suit and on Tuesday last William A. Coddington appeared before Chancellor McGill, in the Chancery Chambers, at Trenton, and was successful in obtaining an order from the Chancellor for the payment of the money due his clients. Yesterday a check was received for a handsome sum made payable to the order of Reed & Coddington and now their clients will receive the amount due them.

Let Them Smile.

Some people were inclined to smile when they heard that 300 pounds of eels stopped the machinery at Sebring's Mills recently. In a Connecticut town a few days ago, one eel did the same thing and the damage was even greater than in North Plainfield.

A DISPUTED BILL.

Results in a Law Suit Between An Administrator and a Physician.

The case of George D. Morrison, administrator of R. W. Rice, against Joseph F. Berg, on contract, was tried before Justice Newcorn yesterday afternoon.

The action arose over a disputed bill which Mr. Morrison presented to Dr. Berg for payment. The account was opened in December, 1894, through the solicitation of Henry T. Williams who owed the doctor a bill for medical services. Williams was at that time in the employ of R. W. Rice & Co., and urged the doctor to trade out the amount of his claim with the firm and told him that he would settle with R. W. Rice & Co. for the amount of the bill. The doctor accepted the agreement and supposed the matter settled. Williams failed to account to the firm or to inform them of the transaction; and Mr. Morrison finding the account opened upon the books was compelled by Dr. Berg to bring suit for collection.

After hearing the testimony Justice Newcorn rendered judgment for the plaintiff. Lawyer R. P. Bell, of Elizabeth, represented Dr. Berg, and Lawyer C. L. Murphy, the plaintiff.

THE BOWLING SEASON TO BEGIN.

The Y. M. C. A. Will Have a Team and May Enter a Tournament.

This winter promises to be a lively season for the bowlers, especially at the Y. M. C. A. Practice will be continued in good earnest and a team selected. Already word has been received from the Y. M. C. A's, of Trenton, Newark, New Brunswick, and Orange, asking that Plainfield enter a team in a tournament with the other teams. There is plenty of good material in the association, and Physical Director McPhie seems heartily in favor of putting a team in the tournament.

With the reopening of the classes in the gymnasium, the bowling alleys are used most of the time and the experts are rapidly getting into good form again. Several of the new members are well up in the game, and bowling promises to hold a prominent position in the athletic department of the association.

A First-Rate Offer.

Shorthand is a study at once fascinating and useful. As a means of advancement in business many young men have found it valuable. The Young Men's Christian Association offers to its members a course in this study as complete and practical as can be had in Plainfield. Now is the time to join, as a $5 member of the Association and begin with the phonography class on Thursday evening of next week.

Work on Sewage Beds Started.

Washburn & Washburn, the sewer contractors, started work on the sewage beds last Tuesday.

Miss Margaret Wierenga Becomes the Wife of Joseph Hyland.

There was a large gathering of relatives and friends at St. Mary's R. C. church Thursday afternoon at 4:30 when Miss Margaret Wierenga, the youngest daugter of Mr. and Mrs. John Wierenga, was united in marriage to Joseph Hyland. While the bridal party was entering the church Lohengren's wedding march was rendered by Miss St. Leger.

The groom and bridemaid, Miss Minnie Welsh, entered first, and were followed by the bride leaning on the arm of the best man, Joseph Porter, of New York. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Murphy.

The bride was charmingly gowned in white silk with tulle veil and a wreath of orange blossoms, and carried white roses, while the bridesmaid wore a gown of white albatross, trimmed with satin ribbon. She also wore a large white hat and carried pink roses. Mendelssohn's wedding march was rendered as the bridal party left the church.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the groom's home on the Rahway road, where the couple will live in the future.

A costly and handsome collection of presents were received by the bride and groom. Excellent music was furnished by O'Reilly, and it was late when the happy event came to a close. Mr. and Mrs. Hyland left about midnight amid a shower of rice and old shoes, to take the 1:17 train for Washington, where they will remain for a time. Guests were present from New York, Massachusetts, Elizabeth and Plainfield.

A PUGILISTIC MILL.

"Gentle Willie" Murphy and John Morecraft Have a Scrap.

A prize fight took place in the suburbs of this city Sunday night, and Gov. Werts was not asked for a license, either. The principals were "Gentle Willie" Murphy of baseball renown, and John Morecraft, a carpenter by trade, but who has not been working for some time. "Gentle Willie" has been in town for several weeks, employed as an assistant by a city drayman. Some time ago a difference arose between the erstwhile ball player and Morecraft, and last week the ill-feeling between the two became so bitter that they decided to have it out in a ring in true pugilistic style.

Sunday night, accompanied by a number of friends, they went to Scotch Plains, where in an isolated spot an improvised battle-ground was pitched and the two men fought out their differences. Which one was victorious it has been impossible to learn, as the affair has been kept very quiet by those who witnessed it.

The Killing of McCarthy's Horse.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—The item in your paper last night contained several errors, and instead of correcting the item I shall state the case as it happened. I was called to adjust a sewing machine at Mrs. Peter Kunz's, who lives near Bound Brook, on the Opossum town road. I arrived there at 6:30 in the evening and tied my horse to a fence opposite the house. I remained in the house half an hour, when I found the horse was gone. It was very dark, and Mr. King went as far as the corner with a lantern, and we saw that he had turned towards home. I started for home expecting to find the horse when I got there. I arrived about nine o'clock and found that the horse had not arrived. I got a bicycle and started back to look for him. I went by the way of Dunellen to Mr. Close's place, through Cedar lane and over Eagle's crossing, and back to the house of Mr. Kuhns, and from there up the Opossum town road to Nelson Giles. Then to New Market, where I inquired of the gateman if he had seen anything of a horse and wagon going by. He stated that he had not.

It was then about 11 o'clock; I went to the other crossings and roads that I thought he might be on and arrived at home about 2 o'clock in the morning without having any tidings of him. The next morning Bennett Brittin and myself started and drove to New Brunswick and back but got no trace of the horse. At about 6 o'clock that evening John Kenney came and informed me that my horse had been killed the night before at Blackford's crossing at Samptown. On the following morning I investigated the affair and learned that he was killed at 10:50 the night he went away by a fast freight. I could trace him along the track for nearly four miles to about half a mile from Eagle's crossing. I went to the crossing and found that he had crossed the L. V. R. R. and then turned to the right between the C. R. R. and the L. V. R. R. and stood there for some time and then went along the side of the cut for half a mile. He must have stood in the place between the two railroads both times that I went by the crossing not twenty feet from the road and I did not see him. T. A. McCarthy.

Fifty Years Married.

WEDDED AT SCOTCH PLAINS.

MISS ROBISON BECOMES THE WIFE OF A BROOKLYN MAN.

The Ceremony Performed Amid a Floral Display and Admiring Friends—Gowns of the Fair Members of the Bridal Party.

A charming wedding was witnessed in the Scotch Plains Baptist church Thursday afternoon at four o'clock, when Miss Grace Robison, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Robison, became the wife of Wm. Bridges Noble. Long before the appointed hour the handsome edifice was filled with relatives and friends of the bride and groom. Palms and choice flowers were prettily arranged in the front part of the church, forming an attractive scene.

Miss Hayes, organist of the church, rendered classic selections while the guests were awaiting the arrival of the bridal party. Precisely at four o'clock the first notes of Lohengrin's wedding march were heard, as the bridal party entered the church. The ushers preceded the maid of honor, Miss Louise Robison, sister of the bride, who was becoming in a gown of green broadcloth, trimmed with green velvet and Persian buttons. She carried a bouquet of daybreak carnations. Then followed the bride leaning on the arm of her father. She was gowned in golden brown broadcloth trimmed with sable fur, and carried a bouquet of white chrysanthemums.

They were met at the altar by the groom, best man, William Stoddard, of New York, Rev. J. S. Braker, the pastor, who performed the ceremony of the Episcopal church. The responses by each were noticeably clear. The bride was given away by her father and the marriage was performed with a ring.

As Mendelssohn's wedding march was being rendered the bridal party retired from the church just the reverse of entering.

Mr. and Mrs. Noble were brought to Plainfield in a coach and took a train at the North Avenue station for a bridal tour. On their return they will reside in Brooklyn for the winter. Mr. Noble has an excellent position in a New York bank and both he and his wife are exceedingly popular among a large circle of friends. An informal reception to the friends and relatives was held at the house after the ceremony, and greatly admired were the beautiful and costly presents which included a quilt from the groom's mother which was a present to her forty years ago when she was married, silver knives and forks, paintings, china, banquet lamp, onyx table, fancy work and a pocket book containing $50 in greenbacks. There was also a handsome carving set and several choice pieces of glasswere.

The ushers at the church were Richard Robison, brother of the bride, Arlington M. Drake, Charles Patterson, of Scotch Plains, and Irving Quereau, of New York.

WHO THEY ARE.

A List of the Class of '96 at Leal's School.

The members of the class of '96 at Leal's School met again yesterday afternoon. It was decided that a class pin or ring be adopted, and that a New York designer be asked to make some original designs, using colors which do not belong to any prominent college.

The class is composed of the following: Willard Tracy, Joseph Wadsworth, Raymond A. McGee, Benjamin O. Bowers, Jr., Gilbert Lovell, J. Vincent Rittenhouse, W. Kirby Dwight, Herbert Johnson, and William M. McCutchen.

To the Friends of the Childrens' Home.

The treasurer's report of the Childrens' Home shows that they only have money enough for six weeks expenses. Tuesday afternoon I had applications for the immediate admission of seven children from three families. In two cases the father's had left the family without any support. In one of these the mother is dead and there is no one to care especially for the children. The last is a domestic now in service, who would pay partial board. Money may be sent to Miss Ella Serrell, 625 West Front street, or Mrs. M. E. Kimball, 219 East Fifth street. Fruits, vegetables and groceries, new or second hand clothing in good order, will be acceptable. M. E. Kimball, President.

Woman's Club' Elect Officers.

The Sorosis Club has elected the following new officers: President, Mrs. Horace Kimball; Vice-President, Mrs. A. C. Patterson; Secretary and Treasurer, Mrs. H. A. Halloway. Mrs. Kimball and Mrs. Halloway were elected delegates to the State convention to be held at Newark October 24th and 25th. The alternates are Mrs. A. C. Patterson and George H. Goddard.

Dancing on Election Night.

The third annual ball of the Fourth Ward Social Club is to be held at T. A. B. Hall on the night of Tuesday, November 5th, (election day.) Prof. O'Reilley will furnish the music.

THE HIGH SCHOOL GAMES.

DAILY PRESS MEDAL CAPTURED BY GEORGE PROCTOR SMITH.

Had a Close Competitor in Young Richardson—A Record Broken—Summaries of All the Events—The Officials.

Ninety-nine was the winning class at the field day of the Plainfield High School Athletic Association held at the Crescent Oval Thursday afternoon, and George Proctor Smith, a member of that class, was the winner of The Daily Press medal and the all round championship. He scored 31½ points, and was the victor in five events. Herbert L. Richardson, of '96, was his nearest competitor, scoring 27 points.

The contest between the two was very exciting. At the start, Richardson showed up in fine style winning the first two events, but the lack of training told on him, while Smith was in a very good condition, barring a strained neck. Smith and Richardson met first in the hundred yard dash and Richardson came out ahead by a foot. Lederer and Dolliver tied for third place.

In the third mile bicycle race, Richardson won by about ten yards. Smith got the best of Richardson in the two hundred and twenty-yards dash and finished first without much trouble.

Runyon rode in his old time form in the one-mile handicap, but was hard pushed by Hillman who showed that he is a rider of no mean ability. Richardson took another first in the high jump, his big handicap giving him the victory. Carroll, the scratch man, jumped in splendid form, except in his last jump.

The three-legged race was another neck and neck contest, but the crack '99 team won by a trifle. The record of fifteen seconds, made by Fish and Cornwell last year, was broken by two fifths of a second. Another record went in the pole vault when Smith cleared the bar at eight feet, six inches, breaking Cornwell's record of eight feet, four inches. V. F. Green astonished his friends and himself by vaulting seven feet, three inches, without any practice.

The closest finish of the day was in the four hundred and forty yard run, when Richardson won from Smith by three inches. Many called it a dead heat. Hillman gave Runyon a tight finish in the two-mile bicycle race and succeeded in outsprinting Green.

The running broad jump was a cinch for Smith, as Walter Serrell, the scratch man, was satisfied with second place.

The class relay race was not run, as '96 was the only class that had a team in the field.

Ninety-nine wins the class trophy, scoring sixty-seven points to the forty-six scored by '96. The teams of '97 and '98 did not contest.

The nearest contestants for The Daily Press medal to Smith and Richardson were Walter Serrell, eleven points; Carroll Runyon, eleven points; Lindley Hillman, nine points, and Wilbur F. Cornwell, six and a-half points.

Webster Littell turned up with his pacewakers and everything all ready for his attempt at the record, but the wind was blowing a gale from the north and the trial was postponed until some less windy day.

Owing to the fact of the games being held in the middle of the week instead of Saturday, the list of officials had to be almost entirely changed. Those officiating were:

Referee—John C. Whiting.
Judges—D. A. McPhie, Webster Littell and W. Kirby Dwight.
Timers—T. A. Cuming, Charles Noble and Fred P. Taylor.
Starters—Volney F. Green and Elwood Sebring.
Clerk of the Course—Charles B. Morse; Assistants—Henry B. Drake and J. Hazelwood Craig.
Announcer—Raymond A. McGee.

TWO NARROW ESCAPES.

Chief Doane's Rig Almost Runs Into a Boy—Harness Broke Afterwards.

When Chief Doane's wagon started for his house Thursday as the fire alarm blew, there was a very close escape to a smashup. The wagon rounded the corner from North avenue into Park at full speed. It passed about a foot from the curb and into that space little William Sweeney rode on his wheel. He just grazed the hub of the wagon and was knocked onto the sidewalk. He was not injured, however.

After Driver Woodland had met the Chief and was on his way over Washington street to the fire, the two men had a narrow escape from an accident that might have proved more disastrous to them than did the one on Central avenue a short time ago. They were driving at fair speed when, as they reached Third street, the wagon plunged into a hole in the street and the rebound almost precipitated them from their seats. The sudden jar snapped a piece of the harness and the shafts dropped loose from the horse to the ground. Before the horse could get away, though, Driver Woodland hauled him up and after a time repaired the break.

There is a particular strong bill this week at Proctor's Theater, 23d street, in New York. The pretty Swedish equilibrists, the Sisters Anderson, from the Winter Garden, Berlin, have become great favorites. Nothing so graceful and adroit in the way of intricate pedal juggling has ever been seen in this country. The brothers Donaldson and Ardel continue their acrobatic animal grotesquerie "Scenes at the Zoo." Redding and Stanton, whose acting would grace any legitimate stage, present "A Happy Pair," one of the daintiest of comediettas.

Grief Made Him Insane.

The authorities of Rahway have been asked to place Henry Mann, a resident of East Rahway, in an asylum. About a year ago his eight-year-old son was accidentally drown in the Rahway river. The father was frantic with grief, and his mind has slowly given away. He has made several attempts to kill himself.

Thirty Years in the Department.

Chief Doane will shortly celebrate his thirtieth year of service in the city fire department. He originally joined Gazelle Engine Co., No. 1, who then possessed the pump engine now used at Scotch Plains and the total amount of hose owned by the department was 300 feet. All these years Chief Doane has been a fireman every inch of him.

To the King's Daughters.

The King's Daughters having given such valuable assistance at the last Muhlenberg Hospital fair, the ladies in charge of the stationery table again earnestly desire their help, and will be most grateful for all contributions sent to Mrs. John Gray Foster, chairman of committee.

New Brunswick Bonds.

Proposals for the issue of $65,000 worth of bonds of the city of New Brunswick to run twenty-five years, were received at City Treasurer Neilson's office on Tuesday. There were nine bidders, the highest coming from C. Zabriski, of Jersey City, who bid $105.17 at 4½ per cent.

A Contest Between Chiefs.

Among the principal features of the coming firemen's fair will be a contest between Chief Grunwald, of the New Brunswick fire department, and Chief Rabig, of the Elizabeth department, to determine who shall be the recipient of a chief's wagon, valued at $275.

Autumn Evening Festival.

An autumn evening festival is being planned to be held in the parish house of the Holy Cross church at an early date. It will be given to the members of the Sunday-school and an excellent time is being prepared.

A Saturday Luncheon.

Mrs. D. M. Demarest, of Crescent avenue, gave a delightful luncheon on Saturday afternoon in honor of her daughter, Mrs. M. A. Demarest, of New York. Among those present were the Misses McGregor, and Miss Acker, of New York.

Not Hard to Learn.

A great error is made in supposing that shorthand is a a difficult subject to master. Join the Y. M. C. A. class and they will show you that it is easily learned by persons of ordinary capacity. The class begins next week.

BEN'S BID.

"Why don't you raise chickens for the market?" suggested Hiram Bassett, the village storekeeper, to Ben Singer.

Ben was 14 years old. His mother had died a short time before. His father was a carpenter by trade, but had been crippled by rheumatism so that he could not work.

Ben started a chicken farm at once.

Slowly the flock of chickens grew. The first days of summer saw him with 70 young chickens, some of them able to scratch for themselves.

Only a few of them were lost. A prowling 'possum got several before Ben trapped the marauder. Cold and rains killed off a few more. But the 1st of September came, and more than 60 chickens were the boy's.

Ben planned to sell 30 or 40 in the early autumn and to keep the remainder till the next summer to stock his farm with afresh. He intended to go into it then on a bigger scale, and he hoped to realize enough from his sales to keep him through the winter with the part of his flock he retained.

Then one day in September as he and his father sat in the doorway of the cottage Ben noticed a couple of tears trickle down his father's face. He jumped up and threw his arms around his father's neck.

Presently Mr. Singer unclasped the boy's hands and looked him in the face. "Ben," he said, "I'm afraid we're in for hard times yet."

"What do you mean, dad?" asked Ben.

"The house is only rented," said Mr. Singer slowly. "They can't take that, but they can take all our furniture and everything else."

"Why, they belong to us!" exclaimed Ben.

"So they do, Ben, but the law gives another man the right to sell them and take the money they bring if we owe him money and can't pay it. There is some one to whom I owe money, a man I borrowed from when your mother was sick. I owe him $100.

"He was here to see me about it the other day, and I tried to get him to wait. But he says he's tired of waiting, and the sheriff'll come and sell us out."

Ben worried over what he had heard all night long, but he could find no way out of their difficulty.

The next day he took ten of his biggest chickens to the village store. He had already arranged with Mr. Bassett to have them sent to a commission merchant at Waynesboro and sold.

After he had delivered the chickens and Mr. Bassett had promised to get him the money for them as quickly as possible the idea struck the boy of asking the storekeeper about a sheriff's sale. "Mr. Bassett," he said, "how does a sheriff sell you out?"

Ben asked several questions before he left. Then he walked slowly home, and all the while in his mind he was turning over a dimly defined project which had been suggested to him by what he had heard.

A week later Ben received the money for his chickens, $3.80. He was a proud boy, and he would have shown his satisfaction more if it had not been for the impending trouble which made his father so miserable that he could not leave his bed.

On a Monday in the early part of the next month the sheriff, in pursuance of formal notice, arrived at the house to make a sale to satisfy Mr. Singer's creditor. Quite a crowd had gathered about the cottage and there was not one of those present who did not sympathize with the carpenter and his son. The sheriff mounted a box in the yard and began a description of the goods to be sold.

It was a pitiful array, after all. A few tools, a miscellaneous assortment of cheap furniture, a kitchen stove, with some cooking utensils and china and some linen and blankets.

But one item in the lot—the chickens—the sheriff counted on as his drawing card. Half a hundred of fine hens and marketable chickens were cooped in a near by pen, and upon the value of these the county officer dwelt at length. Then, when he thought he had the crowd sufficiently aroused, he named a starting figure in default of an actual bid.

"Sixty dollars for this choice lot of chickens and household goods?" he cried.

There was no response. He repeated the announcement, then dropped the figures to $50. Still no one spoke.

But the crowd was dumb. No one felt inclined to buy out the crippled carpenter and his son.

The sheriff tried again and again, dropping the figure lower and lower. He did not specially like the job, for he had been told about the case by some of the village people, but he had a duty to perform, and he knew he must get as much out of the sale as he could.

Mr. Singer's creditor evidently had no representative on the ground, and even the low prices were not taken up with.

The sheriff dropped his offer now $1 at a time, but apparently in vain. It looked as if the sale would come to nothing.

Nine, eight, seven, six, five, four! Not a response came from those about.

Three dollars! The sheriff was smiling at the ridiculous offer and was just about to name $2 and $1 in quick succession, hoping for no reply, when a boyish voice close at hand answered:

"I bid $3."

The officer looked down on the speaker and saw Ben. The boy held up three $1 notes in his hand. The sheriff smiled. More than one man in the crowd felt like cheering the bidder. But the officer knew that he could not accept the offer at once.

"Three dollars I am bid!" he announced. "Who bids four?"

Every one was silent, and $3 was the one bid offered, and after one expostulation the sheriff took the offer.

The chicken farm was saved, and the chicken farm proved a success. A year later, when Mr. Singer was once more working steadily and his rheumatism was gone, his creditor was paid in full the amount borrowed from him, and the proceeds from Ben's chicken farm did not a little to make up the sum required.—Exchange.

Queer Wells In Illinois.

Near Augusta, Ills., are two peculiar wells, each of which deserves special mention in a department devoted to accounts of things out of the ordinary. The first is a "bottomless well"—one which was sunk down until the immense running underground river was struck. The second is a well in which the water remains frozen in winter and summer. These two wonders, each of which may properly be referred to as "combined natural and artificial curiosities," are located at a distance of about a mile and a half apart. The frozen well is only about ten feet in depth, that of the other not stated.—Peoria Herald.

GRIGGS AND HOFFMAN

CONSISTENCY IS A JEWEL WHICH MR. GRIGGS IS NOT FAMILIAR WITH.

Having Addressed an "Indignation Meeting" to Condemn the Senator From Atlantic, Mr. Griggs Is Now Advocating His Re-election.

The Republican state platform arraigns those who voted to legalize betting on horse racing, yet the Republican candidate for governor has done as much as any man in the state to secure that legalization. As if this was not enough humbug for one campaign, the grand old party has renominated Senator Hoffman of Atlantic county, without whose affirmative vote the bills of 1893 could not have been passed. The bills of 1893 were vetoed by the governor, and it required 11 votes to override that veto. Six Democratic senators voted to sustain the veto, and the Republican senator, Hoffman, gave the eleventh vote, which put the bill on the statute book. Now Mr. Griggs, who says he "addressed an indignation meeting" to condemn those who voted for the bills, is advocating the re-election of Senator Hoffman. When Senator Griggs visited Jersey City to open his campaign, he attacked Mr. McDermott because he had, as counsel of the race track men, drawn the bills of 1893. In other speeches Mr. Griggs has insisted that Mr. McDermott is advocating the election of Chancellor McGill in hope of reappointment as clerk of chancery. As a matter of fact Mr. McDermott is not a candidate for reappointment and says that he would not accept the office for another term. The following letter touches on this point and treats the support which Mr. Griggs is giving Hoffman in a manner which exposes the ridiculousness of the difference between the pretensions and the actions of the Republican candidate for governor:

To the Editor of The True American:

Candidate Griggs is evidently determined to explain the record of Senator Griggs by abusing those who have the temerity to expose that record. He has declared that if he is elected he will not reappoint me to the office of clerk in chancery. Now, notwithstanding my belief that after election his appointing powers will be confined to their present scope, I beg leave to express my surprise at his declared intention of violating the principles of civil service reform. During the recent sessions of the senate investigating committee my clerkship was pretty thoroughly examined. My employees were quizzed, my office boys were cross questioned, and I am not quite sure that there was not a perscrutation of the cuspidors in my department. The committee wound up by examining me under oath, thanked me for my testimony and said that the office was properly managed. This being so, Mr. Griggs would probably hesitate before depriving the state of my valuable services.

Would Only Accept Under Griggs.

In truth, my only chance of continuing in that office would be found in the election of Mr Griggs. If he should then offer it to me, I would probably accept in order to keep some Republican from getting the position, while if Governor. McGill should insist upon my continuing to scratch my name as clerk, at so much per scratch, I would decline the appointment. These remarks are somewhat personal to myself, and I can justify the infliction of them upon your readers only by a desire to remove from the campaign the burning issue involved in the question of who will be the next clerk in chancery.

Griggs as Counsel For Poolsellers.

But my first object in this writing is to present to Mr. Griggs an opportunity which he may possibly overlook. Having declined to tell who paid him for the five years' fight that he made to legalize gambling on horse races in New Jersey, Mr. Griggs tells his hearers that after the passage of the racing acts of 1893 he addressed an "indignation meeting." I do not recall the meeting, and overlook the fact that I was not invited to attend. It must have been amusing to listen to Mr. Griggs that evening. If he had succeeded in having the act of 1887 upheld by the courts, the acts of 1893 would not have been written.

But Mr Griggs called no indignation meeting in 1857 nor during the six years following. Yet during that time the Passaic County Agricultural association was running six races a day for the encouragement of agriculture. His clients opened poolrooms in Paterson and Passaic, but Senator Griggs suppressed his wrath and deposited the checks of the wicked.

When Griggs Became Indignant.

The legislature of 1893 had a Democratic majority, however, and its action fired the soul of Senator Griggs, and he "addressed an indignation meeting." In the phonograph of my imagination I can hear him. Denunciation, satire, pathos, insinuation, accusation—all were poured out in a torrent well calculated to make those wicked legislators wish that their births had not been ordained. I didn't hear it, but I know that it was grand, and knowing this I want that speech repeated.

The senator is a very busy man just now. What with asking Mr. Hobart how far it is safe to speak on the water question and assuring Carl Lenz that the Biblical injunction to take a little water for the stomach's sake would have been modified to a recommendation of "bock" if breweries had existed in those days, he is kept very busy, and I am afraid that he may overlook the grandest opportunity of his life. I want him to repeat that "indignation" speech in Atlantic county.

A Republican Vote Saved Race Track Bills.

That this desire is a reasonable one I insist for the following reasons: In 1893 the legislature passed what have, for brevity's sake, been styled the race track bills. They were vetoed by Governor Werts. The house of assembly passed the bills over the veto. There were 16 Democrats in the senate and 5 Republicans. Six Democratic senators refused to vote for the bills, and they were passed over the veto by the votes of ten Democrats and one Republican.

If the Republican had voted "no," the bill would have been killed and Mr. Griggs would have been saved the wear and tear of that indignation meeting. The Republican who gave the decisive vote was Senator Hoffman of Atlantic county.

Will Griggs Denounce Hoffman?

Now we come to an interesting entanglement. When Senator Griggs held his indignation meeting, he must have denounced Senator Hoffman, for, without his action, the fountains of indignation would not have gushed, and I am justified in presuming, in the absence of a stenographic report of the meeting, that if Senator Griggs tore the Democratic senators into pieces he also tore Senator Hoffman into tatters. This was entirely justified by the indignation then swelling the soul of Mr. Griggs.

Nearly three years have passed, and we are told that Candidate Griggs is about to visit Atlantic county in a "whirlwind tour." I do not know just what a whirlwind tour is. A whirlwind is described in the dictionaries as a "moving atmospheric vortex" and "a funnel shaped column of air." It generally raises a great deal of dust and blinds people for a few moments, but the afflicted quickly recover their vision and invariably proceed to damn the dust.

Hoffman Again a Candidate.

But, whatever kind the tour, it is to include Atlantic City, and I want Senator Griggs to immortalize himself by repeating that indignation speech there, for Senator Hoffman, who gave the eleventh vote for those bills, has been renominated by the Republican party of Atlantic county. As you stand on the platform, Mr. Griggs, and Senator Hoffman looks at you appealingly, spare him not. Wither him with your glance, paralyze him with your scorn, douse him with your vinegar. Sink all partisanship as you gaze on the Republican candidate for senator of Atlantic county and recall that if he had voted to sustain the governor's veto the bills of 1893 would have been defeated.

You visited Jersey City and told my neighbors that I had been counsel to the race track men, but you haven't told who paid us. Now, I offer you an opportunity to redeem yourself and show that the soul of Griggs abhors deceit.

As your voice struggles with the roar of the Atlantic, whose resounding waves seem burdened with a demand that you play honest with the good people of Senator Gardner's town, let no mean question of policy hamper your utterance. Repeat that "indignation speech" and cry:

Freeman, arouse, and crush to nil
This man who passed the race track bill!

Respectfully,

ALLAN L. McDERMOTT.

Trenton, Oct. 14.

LET THE PEOPLE REMEMBER.

Facts For Voters to Think About on the Fifth Day of November.

Let the workingmen of New Jersey remember that there were only two votes cast against the bill to make Labor day a legal holiday. Those votes were cast by Senators Griggs and Large. Large has faded from public view. Griggs is running for governor.

Let the workingmen of New Jersey remember that Senator Griggs killed the bill which provided that the money due for labor rendered to corporations should be a first lien in cases of insolvency, a bill demanded in the interest of humanity.

Let the people of New Jersey who are being forced to pay for water by the gallon remember that the man who secured the nomination of Mr. Griggs is ex-Senator Hobart, who has engineered every water bill passed by the legislature of New Jersey during the past 15 years and who has defeated every bill calculated to give the people relief from those who have gobbled up the potable waters of New Jersey.

Let the people remember that when the bill was before the senate for the equalization of railroad property Senator Griggs insisted on exempting $110,000,000 worth of railroad property from all forms of railroad taxation for municipal uses, thereby imposing the taxes which would otherwise have been paid by these corporations upon the property of private owners.

Let the people remember that Chancellor McGill smashed the "coal combine." Mr. Griggs was not heard in opposition to that "combine" until he became a candidate for governor. Why? The answer is plain. Mr. Griggs has a very rich client named the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad company, and the directors of that company are not sitting up nights to discover how to reduce the price of coal.

Let the people remember that the man who argued before the court of errors and appeals that gambling had been legalized in New Jersey was John W. Griggs, the Republican candidate for governor, and that the man who delivered the opinion of the court, declaring that gambling was a crime in New Jersey, is the Democratic candidate for governor.

Let the Democrats of New Jersey remember that every Republican paper and speaker not crazed with partisanship admits that Chancellor McGill is an ideal candidate. Why should any Democrat desert the standard of a man to whom the opposition is forced to accord the highest tribute of praise?

Let the people of New Jersey remember that not $1 of state tax has been imposed on the private property of owners of the state in over 12 years. Let them remember that this has been brought about by the redemption of pledges made in the Democratic state platforms.

Let the people remember that the state of New Jersey is the only state in the Union that is out of debt and let them remember that this condition is due to the work of Democratic governors.

AMONG THE POLITICIANS.

It Is Said That the Republicans Will Renominate Codding.

The World this morning has the following political gossip from Elizabeth:

Ex-Freeholder John J. Donohue jumped into the field at the eleventh hour last night as a candidate for member of Assembly, at Elizabethport, and carried the delegates in some of the wards. The fight for the Elizabeth nomination will, therefore, lie between him and School Commissioner William D. Wolfiskeil. Donohue carried the First and Fourth wards, Wolfiskeil the Second. The delegates from the remaining wards were uninstructed.

There will be a grand Democratic mass-meeting Friday night at the Lyceum Theatre, Elizabeth. Richard V. Lindabury and Judge Carrow, of Camden, will be the principal speakers. There will also be addresses by the candidates nominated at Wednesday's convention.

The Republican leaders in Union county last night revised their programme and will renominate Assemblymen Codding and Burger today. With Freeholder J. Martin, of Springfield, as the third candidate, this is the programme as mapped out last night, and the bosses are confident of putting it through.

Y. M. C. A. Shorthand Class.

This class was started six years ago. More than thirty have joined at one time, and a number of the graduates are now occupying responsible and lucrative places in the business world. Several, besides, have used the knowledge and skill acquired in this class for their advancement in the profession of the law. So far as known there is not one who qualified himself as a stenographer in the Y. M. C. A. course who has not secured a situation. The course will be complete, two lessons a week for six months, under a competent instructor, and a splendid opportunity is presented to any young man desiring to acquire this most useful art. A $5 membership entitles to instruction in this class. Work will begin Thursday, October 24th.

Hope Chapel Entertainment.

The Young Men's League of Hope chapel will give an entertainment in the chapel Thursday evening at eight o'clock which will be worth going to see. They have secured Emil Closs, the well-known humorist, to appear, and it is expected the chapel will be filled to overflowing. Admission will be ten cents.

First Democratic Gun.

The first gun of the campaign in the Democratic camp in this city will be fired next Monday evening, when a big mass meeting will be held in Music Hall. The speakers of the evening will be Hon. R. V. Lindabury, of Elizabeth, and Hon. George L. Record, of Jersey City.

An Overhead Crossing.

Work was begun this morning by a large force of men to depress Main street in Bound Brook underneath the Central Railroad and the Lehigh Railroad Company's tracks. This was a very dangerous crossing and it was a frequent occurrence to find the road closed for some time during every day by the constant drilling and the regular train service.

are doing all the business. Our stock is the largest, prices are the lowest and terms the easiest in the city. Just give it a passing thought that you can get an antique oak bedroom suit, 8 pieces, for $15, $20, $25 and $30, including a woven wire bed spring and a mixed mattress. No house in the city offers such inducements.

And then to think again that you can get tapestry Brussels carpet for 50, 60, and 70 cents a yard, made and laid with paper, which is a saving of 15c per yard. Where is there a house in the city that will offer such bargains?

And then imagine and wonder how we can afford to give away a moquette rug or parlor table with a parlor suit for $20, $30, $40 or $50.

Some of our competitors say that our ads are too much sameness and that this ad. is old. Well, we will admit it, but as long as it does the business and saves the people money we will continue to run it.

ST FOOTBALL GAME A TIE.

M. C. A. AND WESTFIELD CONEST SATURDAY AFTERNOON.

eld Has a Lusty Eleven Who Up a Strong Game With Little Prac- Ball in Westfield Territory Mostly.

Plainfield Y. M. C. A. eleven Westfield Saturday with the ation of playing the first game Central New Jersey football pionship, but Westfield did not rstand it in that light. The re- owever was a tie, 0 to 0, so that s no difference whether it was a pionship game or not. Plain- went to Westfield with a team had never played together before, e the Westfield men have played eral games and have also had ty of practice. Considering the that the ball was in Westfield's tory most of the first half and all e second, the game can be looked in almost the light of victory.

infield won the toss and Captain nmaker choose the southern Westfield took the kickoff and the ball right into the hands of h who ran to the twenty-five yard before he was downed. The ball then passed to Serrell who circled nd for a gain of twenty yards. as he was downed, however, the as knocked from his grasp and field player fell on it. Then by ushes between guard and tackle ld gradually worked her way Plainfield's goal. She lost it downs and Plainfield tried k. Freeman made several uns and through fumbles the anged hands several times. seemed to be the best West- d, but continual bucking the s too much for him, and the eld boys held their opponents ree downs. The signal for a ame and Cathcart sent the ball own towards Westfield's goal. t was waiting for it, but no r was the ball in his arms than n was upon him and downed him ily. With varying success, both s rushed the ball back and forth estfield's territory until the fif- minute half was up.

e first half served to warm up e Y. M. C. A. players and they put a much better game in the second Cathcart kicked off and Voight ht it and ran fifteen yards before g downed. Westfield backed the with her superior weight, but y seldom tried to circle the ends, as as usually a losing game for them. ball changed hands continually, the running of Cathcart, Free- n and Serrell gradulaly lessened distance to Westfield's goal.

he playing of the Plainfield boys especially good in this half. Cum- who was new at centre, put up a game and several times broke the in time to tackle the runner be- he had rounded the curve. Cath- twice saved the day for Plainfield ckling a Westfield runner, who a clear field ahead of him. Smith Green deserve special credit for end work. Both teams played a game, and all of Plainfield's ks had to lay off for a few minutes ecover their wind. Gradually the was approaching Westfield's goal. when within ten yards of it, the ree called time and the game was r.

e referee, Strother W. Rice, was satisfactory to both clubs, and umpire, Jud Manghany, manager e Westfield club, apparently tried his best. The linesmen were W. and Mr. Condit.

e line-up of the two teams was as ows:

WESTFIELD F. A.		PLAINFIELD Y. M. C. A.
Griswold	Left end	T. U. Smith
Randolph	Left tackle	W. M. McClure
Wherry	Left guard	H. A. McGee
Bussing	Centre	T. A. Cuming

n the second half the teams were same, except that on the Westfield ven Roberts and W. Bussing hanged places.

A return game was to have been yed in Plainfield on election y, but Westfield notified Man- er Smith that they would be nable to play that day and asked or a game some Saturday in Novem- er. A game with some other team ill therefore be arranged for election ay.

There was a large number of Plain- d enthusiasts who went to West- to see the game and encourage r players with the Y. M. C. A. yell.

LAWYER POWERS MARRIED.

HE WEDS ONE OF ELIZABETH'S CHARMING YOUNG WOMEN.

The Ceremony Performed in the St. James M. E. Church—A Number of Plainfield People Attended the Event

The marriage of Miss May Matilda Staats, of Elizabeth, and James Pendleton Powers, of this city, was solemnized at St. James. M. E. church, on Broad street, Elizabeth, Tuesday evening. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Price, of Sing Sing. The bride was charmingly attired in white satin, with a tulle veil. She carried white roses. The bridemaids were all gowned in pink and each carried a bouquet of pinks. They were Miss Elsie W. Reed, of Somerville, Miss Bull, Miss McKenzie, Miss Snow, Miss Donne and Miss Beerbower, of Elizabeth. The ushers were Mr. Vreeland, of Princeton, Mr. Updyke, of Elizabeth, Fred N. Voorhees, of Bound Brook, Harry H. Coward, Harry Maxson and H. B. Reed, of Plainfield. The church was handsomely decorated.

The wedding reception was held at the home of the bride's father, Thomas A. Staats, and was attended by about two hundred guests. The decorations were very beautiful and consisted manly of palms and smilax. The dinner was an elaborate one and was served in an excellent manner. The newly wedded couple left late in the evening on their wedding trip. After their departure, the rest of the evening was spent in dancing.

The guests from Plainfield at the reception beside the ushers were: Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Shotwell, Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Randolph, Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Hance, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Bond, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Dunn, son and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Beerbower and daughter, Mrs. David Snediker, Miss Louise Snediker, George Snediker, Mrs. T. J. Gillies and Charles Moffett.

The newly-wedded couple will spend ten days at the Atlanta Exposition as their wedding trip.

OPERA COMIQUE AT CRANFORD.

The Alcæus Society Opens the Season With Surette's Pretty "Priscilla."

At the Cranford Opera House Monday evening the Alcæus Society began its fourth season, giving Surette's comic opera "Priscilla" before an audience which filled the cosy theatre to the walls and represented all of Cranford and Westfield, most of Elizabeth and a good deal of Plainfield. The cast was as follows:

Myles Standish	William Holmes
John Alden	J. T. Brennan
William Bradford	Chas. Roux
Hatebad Higgins	John Dunn. Jr
Squanto	George Taggart
Priscilla	Miss Ethel Voorhies Thompson
Barbara	Miss Lucie M. Miller
Faith	Miss Josie Fursman
Prudence	Miss H. Jackson
Resignation	Miss Nettie Hellerman

There are not a few weak spots in Surette's opera with its tricky musical modulations and its frail libretto, but the admirable performance of last evening was so nearly perfect that these weaknesses were hard to detect. Mr. Holmes, of this city, and Mr. Brennan, easily won the laurels among the men, and Miss Thompson and Miss Hellerman among the ladies. Mr. Holmes' work as Myles Standish must go as the best he has done in more ways than one, his vocalizing having very perceptibly improved of late and his acting in a serious role evidencing the unusual scope of his ability as a player. Mr. Brennan's John Alden was thoroughly effective both musically and dramatically. Miss Thompson was sweetly tuneful and bewilderingly pretty as Priscilla, and Miss Hellerman artistically successful in the ungrateful role of Resignation. The minor parts were in the main capitally done, and the chorus as acceptable vocally as from a standpoint of girlish beauty and manly good looks, which is saying a great deal. The orchestra, under the direction of Charles S. Day, was fully up to the requirements of its difficult task.

Besides Mr. Holmes, George Taggart and Bradley S. Hall, of this city assisted in the performance.

A TALK ABOUT THE TREES.

PROF. GIFFORD ENLIGHTENS AN AUDIENCE ON FOREST CONDITIONS.

His Lecture Made Easy to Understand by the Stereopticon Views Exhibited—The Cedar the Most Abundant in Jersey.

An audience that filled the large hall at the Y. M. C A. building listened on Tuesday with pleasure to an illustrated lecture on "Forests in Tropical America and Forest Conditions in New Jersey" by Prof. John Gifford. This was the last lecture in the course of five given for the benefit of school suffrage for New Jersey women, and was fully up to the standard with the four preceding ones.

Aaron M. Powell introduced the speaker in a few words well spoken. Prof. Gifford commenced his lecture by showing a view of the Palisades and said that they ought to be saved by all means from the woodman's axe. From there he exhibited excellent views of New Jersey, telling how in some places trees secrete acid, causing rocks to disseminate and make soil. He said in part that the red cedar was in abundance in this State, while the white cedar was more valuable and less abundant. As soon as the pure wood is cut oak commences to grow. This is caused by squirrels carrying seeds.

The white beechwood tree is very scarce in New Jersey and found only in Tuckahoe. At Seven-Mile Beach the sand destroys trees and is gradually creeping toward the woods at the rate of one foot a year. It will not be long before the trees will all die.

From New Jersey Prof. Gifford took his audience to the West Indias and exhibited some of the finest trees to be seen anywhere He explained the condition of the climate on forest products. He spoke of the "life weed" that would grow anywhere, even if it was put in your pocket. The tree of the "Sorrowful Night" located in Mexico, and which is said to be 5,000 years old, was also shown. The views used by Prof. Gifford were exceedingly fine.

At the close of the lecture Lewis S. Bond sang effectively "Woodman Spare That Tree," and was accompanied by Howard Case on the piano. Aaron M. Powell then stated that there were several specimens of wood and foliage on exhibition that had been gathered by members of John Dalziel's school, and upon his invitation many stopped to examine them.

The course of five lectures have been most successful, both from a financial and helpful point of view, and all regret exceedingly that they are concluded.

There is no medicine so often needed in every home and so admirably adapted to the purposes for which it is intended, as Chambertain's Pain Balm. Hardly a week passes but some member of the family has need of it. A toothache or headache may be cured by it. A touch of rheumatism or neuralgia quieted. The severe pain of a burn or scald promptly relieved and the sore healed in much less time than when medicine has to be sent for. A sprain may be promptly treated before inflammation sets in, which insures a cure in about one-third of the time otherwise required. Cuts and bruises should receive immediate treatment before the parts become swollen, which can only be done when Pain Balm is kept at hand. A sore throat may be cured before it becomes serious. A troublesome corn may be removed by applying it twice a day for a week or two. A lame back may be cured and several days of valuable time saved or a pain in the side or chest relieved without paying a doctor bill. Procure a 50 cent bottle at once and you will never regret it. COULDN'T FIX THE THEFT.

George Mobus Accuses Auguste Failly of Stealing His Pocketbook.

On complaint of Augustus Mobus for his brother George Mobus, Justice Mattison issued a warrant Saturday night for the arrest of Auguste Failly, charging him with stealing $19.25 and a pair of trousers valued at $2. Constable Taynor arrested Failly in a barber shop about twelve o'clock Saturday night, and this morning the case was brought before Justice Mattison, when the following facts were brought out.

George Mobus and Auguste Failly occupied two beds in one room at Mrs. Krieg's boarding house back of the Clinton Avenue railroad station. Friday night Mobus placed his pocketbook, containing $19.25, under his pillow for safe-keeping.

Saturday morning he awoke about 5:30, and went out to look after his team, leaving his money under the pillow. When he returned about noon it was gone, and he thought Failly had taken it.

At the hearing no evidence was produced to prove that Failly had committed the theft except that he slept in the same room, and Justice Mattison dismissed the case.

Improvements.

The Commercial Palace never looked handsomer than it did last Saturday evening. Seven display tables were erected, and the eye dazzled and its mind bewildered by this panorama of curioies, bric-a-brac, beautiful Dresden ware, and real French china. The children revel in the mechanical toys, crying babies, real steam yachts and moving trains of cars in fact it is a pleasure ground, from which both old and young depart with reluctance.

Democrats at South Plainfield.

A Democratic mass-meeting will be held at Friendship Hall, South Plainfield, on Friday evening of this week, at which Hon. Robert Green, of Elizabeth, and Hon. William Spear, of Jersey City, will deliver addresses.

CAPTURED A U. S. DESERTER.

A FORMER PLAINFIELD YOUNG MAN TAKEN BACK TO THE ISLAND.

Had Eluded the Police for Some Time, But Was Captured With Tramps Last Night—Will Be Tried for Deserting.

A crowd of tramps and drunken men came down to the "Tanks" at Greenbrook on the Jersey Central Railroad on Tuesday and took possession of the sand house and refused to budge, despite the efforts of the railroad employes to oust them. Railroad Detective Ritterbush telegraphed to Chief Grant and last evening they went down on a freight train. They found that the tramps had merely made a lodging place of the house and that several were employes of the company who had come there to sober up after a spree. There were several "knights of the road" in the party, and one young man for whom the police have been looking for some time on the charge of deserting from the United States Army. He was brought to Plainfield and locked up for the night. His name is Rufus Case, formerly of this city. He attended school in this city, worked in the Scott Press Works and finally enlisted in the army. He was quartered at Governor's Island and deserted some time ago and has been in hiding ever since. Chief Grant took him to Governor's Island this morning.

MONEY BY BIRTHDAYS.

Enjoyable Time Spent at the First Presbyterian Church Last Night.

A birthday party was given by the Sunday-school of the First Presbyterian church last Monday to all their friends and the chapel was crowded with young and old people who came to attend it. After allowing everybody to settle down, the programme opened with a selection by four little boys Vincent B. Miner, Harry Messerschmidt, Wm. Hepburn and Thomas DeMeza. An enjoyable recitation was next given by Miss Grace E. Overton, in her usual delightful manner. William MacKillop, rendered an excellent violin solo after which Miss Bessie Blair, gave a vocal selection in her usual charming way. After another amusing song by the four boys, entitled "Old Jack Frost," the programme concluded with a piano solo artistically rendered by William E. MacClymont.

The little bags which had been given away with the invitations were then collected, each containing the number of cents the giver was years old, according to months. While the bags were being collected, Miss Kellogg read selections appropriate to each month. Superintendent H. B. Lounsbury then announced that $64.12 had been taken in and that the most in one bag was $1.12.

CASH STEPPED ON HIS FEET.

And Jim, Who Had Been to the Cider Joint, Called Names.

Jeremiah Cash, an ex-special policeman, took a walk last Sunday evening down Cottage place, and as he strolled along he met Jim Williams, alias "Jim Ashes," and as Jim had been visiting the cider joint in the neighborhood, that sweet and harmless liquid seemed to incline him towards fighting. Jim says that the ex-policeman treaded on his pedal extremities, and then he spoke to Cash in language, not the most choice, to be careful where he was walking.

Cash complained to the police, and last evening Sergeant Kiely found Jim at the corner of Front and Somerset streets and assisted him to the jail where he spent the night.

This morning the colored man appeared before Judge Coddington and had to pay $5 for his language to Cash.

A Tennis Drill.

The young people of the Grace M.E. church are all practicing for an entertainment to be held in the church on Thanksgiving eve. A prominent feature of the entertainment will be a tennis drill by a number of the young women of the church.

High School Notes.

G. S. Gethen, of Jacob Reed's Sons, of Philadelphia, came to Plainfield and measured about thirty of the boys for their uniforms. The uniforms will be sent as soon as possible to the High School Cadets.

"Many of the citizens of Rainsville, Indiana, are never without a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house," says Jacob Brown, the leading merchant of the place. This Remedy has proven of so much value for colds and croup in children that few mothers who know its worth are willing to be without it. For sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, corner of Park and North avenues.

GOLFING ON ELECTION DAY.

FORMAL OPENING OF THE HILLSIDE COURSE NEXT TUESDAY.

Considerable Playing Was Enjoyed Last Saturday, Though—The Out-of-Town Golfers to Be Entertained at Tea.

The golf course of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club presented a very attractive appearance on Saturday afternoon and the green was dotted from start to finish with parties of two or three to half-a-dozen golfers with their clubs and caddies. The flags, discs and holes were all in place and the sod on the putting greens all laid, so that the game went on with energy from early afternoon until it became too dark to see the ball. Many people drove to the course and followed the game as best they could from the road, while others came on horseback or on their wheels.

It was originally proposed to hold the formal opening of the club on Saturday, November 2d, but the golf committee has decided to postpone it until election day, Tuesday, November 5th, as more players from out of-town can be present on that day. By that time the green will have become smoother and in better condition for expert play. A large number of guests are expected and a number of ladies will be asked to receive for the club, as in the tennis teas that have proved so successful in past seasons.

The out-of-town golfers will be entertained by the club and if the weather is favorable the affair should prove most attractive to Plainfield society folks.

HELPING TO PAY THE CITY NURSE.

Opportunity Circle of King's Daughters Raise $31.

The Opportunity Circle of King's Daughters, of the Crescent Avenue church, conducted a very successful cake and candy sale in the chapel of the church on Saturday afternoon for the purpose of raising money to pay their share toward supporting the city nurse at Muhlenberg Hospital.

The room was prettily trimmed with purple and white, as was also the various tables. During the afternoon many friends of the circle were present and assisted materially in making the affair a success.

The candy table was in charge of Mrs. Rabriskie, Mrs. Budlong and Mrs. Craighead, the cake and preserve table, Mrs. Ege and Mrs. Ford. The Misses May and Sophie Elliott presided at the apron table, while bouillon was daintily served by Mrs. A. Marsh, Mrs. Taylor and Mrs. Stiles.

It is thought that about $31 will be realized from the sale.

The officers of the circle are: President, Mrs. Frances Harder; Vice-President, Miss Sophia Elliott; Treasurer, Miss May Elliott; Secretary, Mrs. Stiles.

STREET RAILWAY TO GO THROUGH.

The Ordinance Will Be Ready for Adoption Next Monday.

The street railway extension ordinance will be brought up for final adoption at the meeting of the City Council Nov. 4th. The committee from the Council have been assured by Mr. Riker, of the company, that the consents of property owners will be properly filed on that date. According to the present outlook it appears that the matter will go through all right, and that Plainfield will have what she needs so much.

Bad Young Girls.

After the harvest festival was ended at the First Baptist church last Monday evening several of the ladies who left their wraps in the room in the rear of the pipe organ missed articles which had been left there within the wraps. When the receipts at the ice-cream tables were counted they were also deficient from the amount that should have been there. Suspicion pointed to two young girls who had attended the event, and yesterday they were confronted with the charges and confessed their guilt. They are both members of the Sunday-school, and on account of their parents the names are suppressed.

The New Jersey Contractor reports the following real estate transfers from Plainfield during the past week:

FACTS ABOUT MILK.

GERM CHANGES AND CONTAMINATION OF THE VALUABLE FOOD.

Information Important to Women—Housewives and Mothers Should Be Versed In Milklore—Sterilization and Pasteurization Simple Matters.

The present activity in enforcing the law for milk inspection is a point of great satisfaction to all persons intelligently interested in the health of the city. It emphasizes anew, too, the prolific source of danger which is harbored in this fluid, than which in its unadulterated and sterilized state no article of food is more valuable and life sustaining.

To this easy possibility of contamination must be added the equal case and about as serious menace of its adulteration. "Doctored milk," said a physician whose work lies in the east side tenement districts, "has been a Herod in this city that has annually slain thousands of children through infantile summer complaint and second summer diarrhea."

Against these grave indictments, however, is the grandly overbalancing knowledge that pure, microbeless cow's milk is an ideal food for the human system, and in the case of children more natural and life sustaining oftimes than the real nature's food that is secreted in the mother's breast. Since, then, it is so imperative that milk must be consumed, it is equally imperative that its various stages and conditions as affecting its nutritive and health giving value should be understood. In Boston you are expected to eat "educated" crackers, which means that you must be educated to the cracker that is made from whole wheat. By the same token educated milk only should be used, or, better, every house mother should be educated to the knowledge of what milk is proper to be consumed by the members of her kingdom.

It is said that the English and American peoples are about the only nations who seem to profit nothing by experience. They continue to drink milk uncooked and without protection from infection. It is true, though strange, that nearly every savage nation on the globe that uses milk at all has some method of protection, more or less effective.

Experience is often a better teacher than science—that is, if her teachings are considered—as, for example, the French dairymaid always scalds her milk before churning. Not because she knows anything about sterilization, but because she knows her butter will be better. She does not know that heating stops the growth of a kind of bacteria which would, if allowed to develop, reduce the richness of the milk by changing the fat globules into other properties. Observation has taught her, also, the effect of warm and cold weather upon milk. But little she dreams that cold merely stops the growth of bacteria, while warmth develops them.

The way milk is often served in Naples is another illustration of the way results may teach, with no knowledge of the causes which accomplish them. If the customer choose, he may order the milking done at his own door, in which case a freshly washed cow, with a tidy milker, appears, while he stands by and sees the fluid drawn and receives it unwatered and clean.

Milk, as used in large cities, is a very different article from that used by primitive man, who followed his flock about and to whom the contaminations of the stable and other modern surroundings were unknown. It is seldom perfectly fresh, pretty sure to be adulterated and almost always dirty. It is stated that somewhere in the Union there is a dairy where the cows and dairymen are obliged to "take a bath and part their hair in the middle" before milking hour. However true this may be, it is presumably a regime for the securing of clean milk, but scarcely a sufficient one.

A large number of yeasts and molds grow in milk. Kumyss is merely the production of lactic acid and alcohol, by the growth of the yeast plant. Some yeasts coagulate milk, while molds, which are a form of decay, give that peculiar flavor so much desired in Roquefort cheese.

All these germ changes in milk are, however, items of slight interest to the majority of persons so long as they are not disease producing. Could we be sure of perfectly clean milk from a perfectly healthy cow the laity might dispense with bacterial knowledge and information relating to germ growth and transformations. As this is almost an impossibility, even on one's own farm, much less in cities and towns supplied by tradespeople, we must lend our attention and take out our pocket dictionaries and fathom the meaning of new adjectives as the scientists tack them before or after the simple word of four letters.

Things that appear very difficult and mysterious are sometimes very simple "when you know how."

The writer was approached recently by a perplexed young mother for an explanation of the several terms now being applied to milk. She had a notion that some chemical was added to produce these various conditions. This error was equaled by her beautiful faith that milk which could be procured direct from a country farm must be pure. That the average country farm dairy is conducted on methods long since pronounced questionable by science was a revelation when it was explained to her.

Another surprise to this seeking woman was to be told that sterilization and Pasteurization were accomplished by simply raising the temperature of the milk to a sufficient degree of heat to destroy any disease germs which might be in the milk, chilling it suddenly to arrest the process at this stage and keeping it closely covered and protected from reinfection until it was used.

Until we are assured of absolute purity we should resort to a protection. Science has unmistakably established the importance of this. By heating the daily supply to 167 degrees F., in a double boiler, and then cooling rapidly, there need be no fear of disease germs for at least 48 hours. The process renders the infinitesimals quite harmless.—New York Times.

Prehistoric Egyptian Giants.

In 1881, when Professor Timmerman was engaged in exploring the ruins of an ancient temple of Isis on the banks of the Nile, 16 miles below Najar Djfard, he opened a row of tombs in which some prehistoric race of giants had been buried. The smallest skeleton out of some sixty odd which were examined during the time Timmerman was excavating at Najar Djfard measured 7 feet 3 inches in length and the largest 11 feet 1 inch. Memorial tablets were discovered in great numbers, but there was no record that even hinted that they were in memory of men of extraordinary size. It is believed that the tombs date back to the year 1043 B. C.—St. Louis Republic.

DANCES FULL OF ANIMATION.

DESCRIPTION OF A PORTION OF THE KIRMESS ENTERTAINMENT.

Nearly Every Nationality Will Be Represented and Add Splendor and Picturesqueness to the Scene—The Chaperones.

Two weeks from Monday Plainfield is to see the beginning of the Kirmess, which promises to be one of the largest and most popular affairs that has interested Plainfield for a long time, if Plainfield is anything like the other cities of her size where the Kirmess has been held.

For the benefit of readers who are not versed in Teutonic etymology, it may be well to explain what a Kirmess is. The word is an abbreviation or corruption of "Kirmesse," which translated literally means simply Christmas Fair. In the middle ages when travel was slow and fraught with danger of pillage, each hamlet found it the cheapest, safest and most convenient commercial gathering as the merchants migrated in a body with their goods from one Kirmess to another, and by co-operation found their measures of defence against robbers more secure and the expense lighter. But as the dangers of traveling grew smaller and communication became easier, the Kirmess lost its distinctively commercial character, and merry-making became the most important feature. The Kirmess generally occurred in the fall, after the harvests had been gathered in, and to the untutored foreigner looked very much like a jolly Thanksgiving, coming at about that time. There was a long line of booths where the lovelorn swain might acquire the ribbons and gloves and gay colored kerchiefs with which he was wont to express the love that his lips were unwilling to avow. For a week the young folks were deeply engrossed in songs, dancing and courting, while the confusion of violins, laughing voices and dancing feet was incessant. And then old and young would reluctantly resume their wonted occupations.

Plainfield's Kirmess is to be based on the same plan. For a week, the young people, and the older ones too, will gather in the large hall of the Crescent Cycle Academy, which will then present a far different appearance. Booths on every side and bright costumed young folks flitting about in every direction. The principal part of the Kirmess will, of course, be the dances, and the dancers are now at work under the careful supervision of Miss Lila Agnew Stewart, preparing for it.

The dances are supposed to be national ones. Hungary is first represented in the Gypsy dance when twenty-four dancers in the red and black costumes of the Gypsy, with tamborine, will follow graceful and intricate figures. Mrs. Fred H. Andrews acts as chaperone in this dance.

The German harvesters have finished their work and come upon the stage in rustic dress to dance together. This dance, which is said to be one of the most graceful of all the dances, will be given by ten couples, chaperoned by Miss Emilie Schipper and Miss Millie Tracy.

The Spanish Senors and Senoritas in their gay costumes will whirl away in graceful figures, with tamborines and castenets. Mrs. James T. Scott will chaperone the twelve couples in this dance.

The Tarantelle is the dance of the Italian fisher lads and lasses, and is named after that horrible creature, the tarantula, not on account of its hideousness, for it is one of the most beautiful, but because one of the number is supposed to have been bitten by that deadly creature, and the rest try to drive away the effects of the poison with their swift rushing dance. Mrs. S. A. Cruikshank is the chaperone.

The Indian braves and their squaws give their national dances. The squaws at first listen for the arrival of the braves, who soon appear and give a full-fledged war dance armed with tomahawk and knife. This dance is a very picturesque one and furnishes plenty of chances for originality. The chaperone for the Indians is Mrs. Henry M. Blish.

The Highlanders appear in the Scotch dance or Highland Reel and dance as they do in bonnie Scotland, chaperoned by Mrs. J. F. McDonald and Mrs. W. A. Woodruff.

The sedate and courtly minuet is given by sixteen young people elaborately costumed after the fashion of the eighteenth century. Russia is represented by the military dance. The ladies in their close fitting gowns and the stalwart soldiers in uniform and top boots give a dignified but graceful rendition of the dance. These dancers are chaperoned by Mrs. George B. DeRevere and Miss Verdon.

The other dances are for the younger set of young people and will be described in a later issue of the Daily Press.

May Purchase a Parsonage.

The consistory of the German Reformed church will meet Monday evening to consider the proposition of purchasing the property at 102 Duer street, occupied by J. H. Whitenack and owned by B. J. Shreve, for a parsonage for their pastor, Rev. George Hauser.

AN EVEN HUNDRED RAISED.

Financial Success of the Birthday Social Last Night.

It was not the birthday party of the Grace M. E. church, but rather a grand combination birthday party for all of the congregation that the Ladies Aid Society gave in the church last Friday. But even if it was to celebrate the combined birthday of all, every one was given a chance to make a present to the Ladies Aid Society. Little bags had been sent around and were brought in containing as many cents as the giver was years old.

The programme opened with an introductory recitation by Miss Winnie Carroll. A well-rendered piano solo by Miss Libbie Joseph followed, after which Mabel Loomis recited the pretty little story of "Doris and Anthony." A violin and piano duet were delightfully rendered by Dyckman Winckler and Miss Carroll. Little Miss Reynolds, accompanied by Miss Carroll, sang "The Wooden Shoes" very sweetly. After a recitation by Miss Lizzie Hoagland, the programme ended with a vocal duet by the Misses Alice and Grace Carroll.

Rev. Mr. Randolph then stated the birthday offerings would be received according to months. Mrs. A. A. Taft and Miss Grace Carroll read selections appropriate to the different months and then Mrs. L. A. Hummer received the little bags. July proved to have the greatest number of adherents. After all the bags had been emptied and the contents counted, Rev. Mr. Randolph announced the total as $68, but some of the men in the church put in their contributions and the total rose to an even $100. Bountiful supplies of delicious cake were followed by cups of coffee.

There was a large number present at the sociable. The entertainment was arranged by a committee composed of Mrs. L. A. Hummer, Mrs. H. Carroll, and Mrs. Elmer Winckler, whose successful efforts were plainly shown. The committee who provided the refreshments consisted of Mrs. A. Most, Mrs. J. Garey, Mrs. John Carney, and Mrs. William H. Lunger.

THE SPANISH BOOTH.

One of the Principal Features of the Coming Kirmess.

Mrs. S. A. Cruikshank, who has charge of the Spanish booth at the coming Kirmess will have associated with her Mesdames A. T. Slauson, T. H. Curtis, J. F. Wrechers, E. M. VanBuren, T. H. Hazell, M. S. Ackerman, the Misses Moore, Moser, Harriott, Patten, Lord, Kirkner, Horton, Meredith and others.

There will be cigars, cigarettes, candies and Spanish chocolate sold at the booth. The chocolate will be served by little boys and girls in costume. Nothing but the finest cigars will be sold and the candies will all be "home made" or Huylers. The ladies in attendance will all be in white, with the Spanish colors arranged as drapery, and will wear red roses in hair and as corsage bouquets.

There are two young men needed for the Italian dance. The next rehearsal is Monday evening at seven o'clock. Any who would like to join may report at the bicycle clubhouse on Sycamore street at that time.

PROGRESSIVE WHIST.

A Gay Party Entertained at the Home of Mr. and Mrs. Dickinson.

A progressive whist party was given last night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Caleb Dickinson, on East Fifth street, by a number of the lady boarders, and a very pleasant evening spent. Among those present were the following: Misses Billings, Reynolds, Filmer, Lee, Clawson and Sims; Messrs. Howland, Newton, Robbins, Sloan, Hall and Doane; Mr. and Mrs. Caleb Dickinson and Mr. and Mrs. Will F. Williams. For the lady's first prize Mrs. Dickinson and Miss Reynolds were tied, and in the draw Miss Reynolds was the lucky one. For the gentleman's first prize Messrs. Doane, Hall and Newton tied, and in the draw the former was the winner. The consolation prizes went to Miss Billings and Mr. Sloan. After the playing was finished refrrshments were served, and instrumental and vocal music indulged in.

Got Refreshments.

A wager was made a few days ago between Harrison Randolph and Wm. Ayers, expressmen, that neither dared to pull the other around the streets in a buggy. Randolph took up the bet which was for refreshments. Ayers got in the buggy at their stables on East Second street, and was taken through Park avenue, North avenue and back to East Second street. Randolph received his refreshments.

Sanitarium to Open Next Week.

Hugh Leslie & Co., of Jersey City, have just placed a large boiler in the Townsend Sanitarium which will be used in heating that building. The repairs and improvements are rapidly nearing completion, and all will be in readiness for the opening next week.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS STILL TALK OF THE STATE CONVENTION.

Intelligent and Helpful Comment on the Various Phases of the Big Gathering—Another Poem From Plainfield.

Christian Endeavorers who were not privileged to attend the State Convention at Atlantic City, but who were present at the Convention Rally held last night by the Christian Endeavor society of the Park Avenue Baptist church, listened to a very clear account of the convention, and received some of the spirit of earnestness and consecration which prevailed there.

Miss Emma V. Fish, president of the society, presided over the meeting, which was opened by the singing of the State hymn, and "Onward, Christian Soldiers," followed by a prayer by Miss Hawkins, secretary of the local Union. Six of the society's delegates to the convention then sang the following convention rally song, written for the occasion by Miss M. G. Morse:

From the glorious State Convention
Safely now we all have come.
With new hope and inspiration,
To our own beloved home.
Father, may we serve Thee better
For those days beside the shore,
And our lives be brighter, purer,
Than they e'er have been before.

Thou hast drawn us closer to Thee
Through the bright Convention days;
Thou hast given us showers of blessing;
Thou hast turned our hearts to praise.
May we spread the inspiration
Of that meeting by the sea,
Until all in our fair city
Shall be closer drawn to Thee.

Soon the swiftly-rolling seasons
Shall bring round to us the hour
When another State Convention
Waits the Holy Spirit's power.
Oh, our Father, bless our city;
Every heart prepare and fill;
Working, praying, pressing onward,
May we do Thy Holy will.

Mr. J. M. Hawkins described the Wednesday evening session in the convention hall, the Citizen's Rally, and the goodly showing made by the Plainfield delegation, in their white caps.

Miss Alice B. Spangenberg followed with an account of the Thursday morning consecration service, telling of the wonderful spirit of prayer which seemed to pervade the meeting and of the intense earnestness of the whole service.

The Baptist rally, held Thursday afternoon, was described by Miss Adelaide Runyon. It was held in the Baptist church, was led by Rev Mr. Cross, of Atlantic City, and was full of interest.

Mr. J. M. Hawkins next told of the Thursday evening session. President Dr. J. Clement French, delivered his annual address. He was received with the Chautauqua salute, and tremendous applause, and his talk on "The Pledge" was one of the strongest and most helpful parts of the convention. Miss Spangenberg followed with a few words concerning the service prayer meeting held Friday morning on the beach, an earnest, heart felt service, and a fitting preparation for the great day of the convention.

The noon-day services at the Life Saving Stations were commented on by J. M. Hawkins. He spoke of the desolate stations in a wilderness of sand, where the Endeavorers were so warmly welcomed, and of the earnest, long-to-be-remembered meetings, where not only the Endeavor workers gave their testimony, but captain and crew added words which showed their allegiance to the Endeavorers Lord.

Mrs. W. S. Lowery gave an account of the Friday afternoon session, mentioning especially the report of the missionary superintendent, Miss Alice B. Spangenberg, the exciting moment when the announcement of the '96 convention was made, and the delightful Junior Rally.

Miss Myra Runyon spoke concerning the Friday morning session in the hall, mentioning especially the magnificient singing, Rev. J. T. Kerr' address on "The Christian Soldier of the Twentieth Century," Mr. Spooner's report of the Junior work, and Rev. T. E. Murphy's rousing temperance address.

After the singing of "Sunshine in my soul," a short consecration service was held, conducted by Rev. J. W. Richardson. Heartfelt prayers, earnest words of re-consecration, and then the Mizpah benediction closed a meeting full of interest to all.

'TWAS COLD AND DARK.

But the City Objected to a Bonfire For His Benefit.

The moon had gone down and it was cold and dark, last evening, when a Dutchman, under the influence of liquor, became tired of walking around and started to camp out in the middle of Grant avenue. He built a bonfire to keep warm with but the light attracted the attention of Officer Totten and he took the inebriated individual to a place of rest for the night. He will appear before Judge Coddington this evening charged with breaking the city ordinance regarding building bonfires in the street.

FOUND IN ETERNAL SLEEP.

MRS. CONROY PASSED AWAY QUIETLY THURSDAY NIGHT.

Though She Had Been Ailing for Some Time Her Death Came Unexpected—A Member of the Park Avenue Church.

Death came silently and painlessly into the home of John H. Doane on LaGrande avenue Thursday night and removed from the cares of this world Mrs. Martha Conroy, mother of Mrs. Doane. Although Mrs. Conroy had been ailing for some time, her condition was thought to be improving and the suddenness of her demise brought the relatives a surprise of sorrow and affliction.

When Mrs. Conroy failed to appear at the breakfast table yesterday morning with the rest of the family, nothing strange was thought of it, as she frequently did not arise from her night's rest until the others had eaten their morning meal.

She failed to appear during the early morning hours, and towards noon her daughter became anxious as to the cause of her remaining in her room so long, but as Mrs. Conroy was in the habit of sleeping with the door locked she made no attempt to get in until her husband came for lunch. Then an admittance was gained to her apartment. The beloved mother was found in her bed as if resting in the quietude of slumber, but an investigation proved that was the sleep of the eternal, for some time during the night she had passed from this world into another.

Mrs. Conroy was born in New York in 1830, and moved to Plainfield with her husbend twenty-three years ago and has resided here ever since. Mr. Conroy died three years ago. She was a consecrated Christian woman, and when her health permitted, was an active worker in the Park Avenue Baptist church, of which she was a devoted member. The funeral services will be held from her late home at 423 LaGrande avenue, Monday afternoon at 2:30.

The Hoochie Koochie Band From Brunswick Render Vocal Selectio[ns] a Pleasing Way—The Other Num[bers]

The entertainment given by Hand Camp, No. 28, S. of V., in Gr[and] Army hall last evening, was succ[ess]ful in every particular. The la[rge] room was filled to overflowing with appreciative audience and sev[eral] were unable to obtain admission.

A comedy sketch in two acts, en[ti]tled "The Dutchman's First Visit Plainfield," was exceedingly fun[ny] and kept everyone in good hum[or]. H. S. Thatcher took the part of the Dutchman; Charles Stephens that of the hotel keeper; Victor Lorton impersonated a colored waiter; while Fred Sutton and Edward Smith were transient boarders.

Following this, Wm. C. Force gave one of his pleasing banjo solos, accompanied by George Rogers on the piano. Mrs. Charles Steiner amused all with a quaint and very funny recitation. Emil Closs was then introduced and kept the audience in continuous laughter with his comical sketches. A feature of the programme was the cornet solo by Benj. La Ver[ne] accompanied by Miss Lewis on the piano. The selection was finely rendered, as was also the recitation "Barbara Fretchie," by Miss Lind[ley].

The Hoochie Koochie band from Camp 20, of New Brunswick, the[n] made their appearance and delighted all with their rendition of "Star Spangled Banner" and "Marchin[g] Through Georgia." Their costumes were very attractive and all wore false faces and high hats. Their instruments were made of paper, excepting the drums, and cheese boxes were used as substitutes. Brother Snyder, who acted as drum-major, pleased those present by giving the various army calls on his bugle.

The last portion of the program[me] was devoted to "living pictures" by members of Camp 28. The consisted of the camp scene, the spy, charg[e] execution, Bunker Hill, and Camp [life] on parade.

Much credit is due the committee in charge who prepared such an interesting programme, and the treasury is enriched thereby to a considerable amount.

Increase in the Population.

Kean's Friends Are Wondering.

Ex-Congressman John Kean has not returned to Elizabeth yet from his trip to the Hot Springs. He was to come back Oct. 19th, and the look of anxiety of certain Republican leaders in Union county over his prolonged absence is painful to witness. It is hinted that Mr. Kean may get back just in time to vote.

E VAN BUREN-REINHART NUPTIALS AN ELABORATE AFFAIR.

The Ceremony Performed in Grace P. E. Church by Dean Rodman—Reception Afterwards at the Bride's Home.

The bright crescent moon was king in the west last Thursday en, amidst a throng of relatives friends, Miss Caroline Allison nhart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. ph W. Reinhart, and Edward is Van Buren, son of Mrs. Daniel an Buren, were united in mar- by Dean E. M. Rodman at the e P. E. church.

elite of Plainfield society and ay guests from out-of-town were sent at the ceremony and filled y pew in the church, while many forced to remain standing in the e aisles. The floral decorations the church were most beautiful. e wedding was a green and white e, and the decorations consisted incipally of white chrysanthemums, th smilax and palms. At the head every pew in the middle aisle was bunch of white chrysanthemums with a white satin ribbon. The ncel was a perfect bower. Palms e massed on the sides and rear, e overhead long streamers of lax hung down. White chrysanmums were artistically distribd through the bank of green.

The Episcopal service was used and s most impressive from the moment singing of the choir was heard in distance until the door closed on as they passed out after the y-wedded couple.

e bride's gown was a beautiful white satin, the waist of which d embroidered with pearls and re stones, trimmed with applique lu She wore a long tulle veil. On d ay to the altar, she carried a cl ivory prayer book in her hand, ight t of the groom, and returned ld h a bunch of lillies of the valley e wa hand.

ainfe maid of honor was Miss Mary r thirson Reinhart, sister of the bride. k was gowned in white silk trimmed d bands of gold embroidery and g e a short veil. She carried white on santhemums. The five bride ree ds were all dressed alike and they ked charming as they slowly moved wn the aisle to the soft strains of organ. They all wore white organdie over light green silk and long tulle veils, while each carried a large bouquet of white chrysanthemums. They were Miss Katherine Reinhart, sister of the bride, Miss Emilie Varet Reinhart, of New York, cousin of the bride, Miss Eleanor G. Bosher, of Richmond, Va., Miss May L. Evans, Plainfield, and Miss May G. Waring, Plainfield.

Laurens H. VanBuren, brother of the groom, was the best man. The chief usher was Fred W. Walz, of this city. The others were James L. Helmstein, of New York, cousin of the room, Whitfield Pressinger, of New York, Louis B. Ostrander, of New York, Howard W. Beebe and Wm. N. Runyon, of this city.

The service began with singing by the choir in the distance; then the bridemaids slowly came down the middle aisle to greet the bride. The bridesmaids, each wearing a small bunch of white chryanthemums, headed the bridal party and the grand strains of Lohengrin's march resounded through the church as rendered by the regular organist, Mrs. Freeman, and the well trained voices of the boy singers. Next came the bridemaids, the maid of honor and the bride on the arm of her father. The groom and the ushers then took their places.

The opening reading and prayer being over, the bride and groom followed the rector into the green and white corner prepared for them and there Rev. E. M. Rodman pronounced them husband and wife "until death do us part." The responses of the bride, though low, were clear and distinct. Then arm in arm, Mr. and Mrs. VanBuren moved slowly down the aisle to the door where they entered the coach awaiting them. The maid of honor and the best man followed and then the bridemaids and ushers, while the choir sang that grand wedding march of Mendelssohn's. As the last note of the singing died away on the evening air the crowd that completely filled the church gradually worked its way into the street.

The reception given by the bride's parents at their beautiful home on Belvidere avenue was beyond a doubt the most complete affair ever witnessed in Plainfield.

The interior of the house was transformed into a garden of rare beauty. The reception hall was exquisitely decorated with smilax caught up with LaFrance roses, yellow and white chrysanthemums, while in the recesses were a profusion of palms and autumn leaves.

The parlor decorations were perhaps the most admired. The ceiling studded with greens, white chrysanthemums and intermingled with different colored incandescent lights, shedding their soft mellow glows on the charming throng, was a picture beyond description.

The library was tastefully arranged with smilax and American beauty roses.

A picturesque portion of the decorations were the staircase and upper halls, where choice palms, white chrysanthemums and autumn leaves blended in presenting one grand scene.

The dining room also received special attention and the table was daintly spread with all the necessary requisites arranged in the most sumptuous manner.

During the hours of the reception the house was thronged with wealth, beauty and culture, all doing honor to the fair bride and her handsome husband.

In one of the delightful recesses, behind stately palms and rare flowers, Lander's orchestra was seated and rendered throughout the evening a programme of the choicest selections, which added grace and dignity to the occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. VanBuren were showered with the best wishes and congratulations of their friends for a life of complete happiness and boundless success.

On the third floor a large room was entirely devoted to the exhibit of presents. An attempt to give an adequate description of them would be fruitless. They consisted principally of silverware and cut glass. A complete silver service in an elegant cabinet was a gift of the bride's parents. Another beautiful gift to the bride was a gold enamel watch studded with diamonds, from S. W. Williams, vice-president of the Central Railroad.

A choice painting from the bride's uncle, C. S. Reinhart, who is an artist, was exquisite. The other presents included a silver tea set, Bohemian glassware, French, English and Dresden China, Russian enamel ware, banquet lamps, statuary, silver trays, ladles, a set of gold spoons, a silver punch-bowl, and lace fans trimmed with mother-of-pearl and gold.

The groom's present to the bride was a diamond fleur-de-lis pin and a white kid prayer book, trimmed with silver.

The supper served by Maresi was undoubtedly the best ever given in Plainfield and was simply perfect in every particular.

Among those present at the reception were:

The fair guests were exquisitely gowned and perhaps never before has Plainfield's best society been seen to better advantage. After the older people had retired the young set were invited to participate in a dance, which was enjoyed till a late hour. As each guest departed they were given a dainty box of wedding cake with the monogram R. V. B. neatly embossed thereon. Mr. and Mrs. Van Buren left the house soon after 11 o'clock for New York, where they will take an extended trip South.

People Who Assisted to Make the Nuptial Event Complete in Detail.

The service at the VanBuren-Reinhart wedding last evening was especially fine. The decorations at the church called forth great praise. They were arranged by Mrs. L. J. Denton, of Hillside avenue, and consisted of a floral avenue of white chrysanthemums, tied with white ribbons extending from the door to the chancel which was decorated with beautiful palms, chrysanthemums and southern smilax.

The large number of carriages at the wedding made it no easy matter to handle them, but Frank Hedden, aided by a corps of assistants, performed that duty in a manner satisfactory to all. There were one hundred and ninety-three cariages at the church.

FELL INTO SCALDING WATER.

Maxwell Rosenburg Tumbled Into His Mother's Wash Tub.

Death by fire is a terrible way to die but to be scalded to death is worse. Little Maxwell Rosenburg, the two-year old child of Abram Rosenburg, who lives near Berkeley Heights, in the Passaic Valley, had a narrow escape from that kind of death Thursday morning.

The little child was playing about the room while his mother was preparing to do the family washing. She had just filled a large tub with scalding water and turned away to other duties when she heard a stifled scream and a splash. She turned and to her horror, saw her little son struggling in the tub of water. Mrs. Rosenburg rushed to the rescue and dragged the child from the water.

Dr. Westcott, of Scotch Plains, was immediately sent for and found the child very severely scalded. He hopes to save his life, although the escape from death was very close.

Mr. Rosenburg is a farmer and peddler in the Passaic Valley.

UNCLE DAN'S RIG GONE.

A Stranger Hires a Horse and Buggy and Fails to Return.

A man giving the name of James Smith and his home in Germantown, Pa., walked into "Uncle" Dan Roberts' livery stable Thursday morning about 8 o'clock and said he wanted to hire a horse and buggy to drive to Samptown. His wife was there and he desired to bring her home.

Harry Roberts let him have a chestnut sorrel horse, 15½ hands high, main on top of head cut close, and a full spring black buggy with red stripes.

Since then he has not been seen or heard of. The man is described as having a dark complexion, with Spanish cast of features; scar under one eye; height five feet eight inches and wore a black derby and blue overcoat. When writing or reading he uses eye glasses. He is slightly round shouldered. He is about thirty-five years of age.

The matter has been placed in the hands of Chief Grant and he is busy at work on the case.

GRIGGS AND LABOR.

MR. M'DERMOTT SHOWS HOW THE G. O. P. CANDIDATE TREATED THE WORKINGMAN'S BILLS.

Kill All, His Motto—When Senator He Voted Against Labor Day, but It Became a Holiday Just the Same.

To the Editor of the New York World:

So far in his campaign Mr. Griggs has endeavored to impress the idea that he should be elected because one Barney Ford acted dishonestly in purchasing supplies for the statehouse. Can there be a greater insult to the citizens of New Jersey than the attitude of Mr. Griggs, who reads off a list of furniture purchased by Mr. Ford and asks for votes because excessive prices were paid for desks or chairs? The total amount of excess, as shown by the testimony, was less than the cost of the investigation, but if it had been ten times the amount what has this do with Chancellor McGill? Does Mr. Griggs claim that he is of superior honesty? Does he think the people of New Jersey would have a more honest government if the governorship were in the hands of Griggs, Hobart & Co. than they will have under Governor McGill?

Mr. Griggs is "running on his record," and if he has told a single truth about that record I have not observed a report of its utterance. For certain reasons I have taken considerable interest in the record of Mr. Griggs, and I propose to show to the readers of The World just what part he has played in the history of the state. He claims credit for the taxation of the railroads of this state. I will prove from the official records that the railroad tax shirkers never had a better friend. He says that he is willing that Jersey City should obtain a supply of decent water without being ruined by Mr. Hobart's water schemes. If Mr. Hobart has not had an understanding on this point with Mr. Griggs, then has Mr. Hobart lost his rapidity.

I will give Mr. Griggs' record on the water question. It will be interesting reading for the people of Jersey City. Before reviewing these questions, however, I beg space to print a few words of and concerning Mr. Griggs' record on questions of interest to the wageworkers of New Jersey.

Mr. Griggs served two years in the house of assembly and six years in the senate. During the entire time he was either an open or a covert enemy of every bill introduced in the interest of organized labor. He is now seeking the votes of the wage earners of the state. Many of them will be present at a meeting in Paterson where Mr. Griggs will speak in a few days. If he should devote the entire evening to the subject, he would not be able to cover, either by admission, denial or extenuation, the whole of his record, and I will therefore ask him to tell the good people of Paterson whether he yet has the idea that organized labor is a huge joke and to explain his record for the single year 1887. I select this year because it was the one in which the united efforts of labor organizations of the state accomplished the common object of obtaining legislative recognition of a day to be known as Labor day.

At the session of 1887 there was passed a bill entitled "An act to regulate the hours of labor of employees of surface and elevated railroad companies." It was approved by Governor Green on April 8, 1887, and provided that "12 hours' labor, to be performed within 12 consecutive hours, with reasonable time for meals, not less than half an hour for each, shall constitute a day's labor in the operation of all cable, traction and horse car street surface railroads owned or operated by corporations incorporated under the laws of this state for the employees of such corporations in operating such railroads."

Now, even so hardworking a man as Mr. Griggs will admit that 12 consecutive hours form a fair day's work. The bill passed the house and was referred to the committee on labor and industries. Mr. Griggs was chairman of this committee. The bill was amended, considered, reconsidered, laid over and fooled with until its advocates perceived that it was the intention of the corporation lobby to bury the measure. The demand for its passage was not acceded to until Monday, April 4, three days before final adjournment. It was considered immediately after the passage of senate bill No. 156, entitled "An act relating to the improvement of the water supply in cities and towns of this state."

In examining the legislative record of Mr. Griggs it will be found that he was always on hand and voting whenever a water bill was up for action. He voted for this water bill. The next bill taken up was the one to regulate the hours of labor of railroad employees.

Mr. Griggs was in the senate chamber and his name was called, but he dodged his vote. His patron, Senator Hobart, was interested in many roads affected by the bill, and Senator Griggs declined to vote for the bill. It was passed without his vote. (See journal of the senate, 1887, page 448.) In his speech at Paterson it will be well for Mr. Griggs to say whether he thinks 12 hours are now enough to constitute a fair day's work. If he has changed his mind, let him tell of his repentance. If not, let him tell why he refused to vote for the bill.

There are several thousand men employed on the surface railroads of New Jersey who will read that explanation with more or less interest.

The same year the house of assembly passed a bill to make wages a preferred debt in all cases of insolvency. Nothing fairer could be asked than the protection of workingmen from the sharks who take advantage of the insolvent laws. The bill was known as assembly bill No. 29.

When received in the senate, it was referred to the committee on labor and industries, of which Senator Griggs was chairman. He is yet considering it. Once in his hands, it was dead.

Will Senator Griggs tell the workingmen of Paterson why he refused to report that bill for action by the senate? Its provisions have since been enacted and have protected many a workingman in New Jersey.

On April 4, 1887, Senator Chattle of Monmouth introduced a bill entitled "An act to make Saturdays, after 12 o'clock noon, legal holidays." On Wednesday, April 6, Senator Griggs voted to kill the bill, and it was killed. As the senator could have his Saturday afternoons to himself, unless called upon to attend an important meeting of the directors of a water company, he could not comprehend why such legislation should be enacted. After Mr. Griggs had left the senate and the working people of Passaic had secured a better representative this bill became a law.

But his final fling at organized labor was the most remarkable one of the session. From Maine to California the trades unions and other labor societies had demanded that one day in the year should be set apart, to be known as Labor day, and in response to this demand the house of assembly passed bill No. 88, providing that the first Monday of September in each year should be a legal holiday, to be known as Labor day. The vote in the house was unanimous for the bill.

When it reached the senate, the classical features of the senator from Passaic were wreathed in scorn. The bill was a step toward anarchy. It would be just as sensible to set aside a day to be known as lawyers' day. On other bills he might be willing to hedge or skip his vote, but the Labor day bill was too much. From the day it reached the senate until it was sent to the governor for the approval which he accorded it, the bill for a Labor day received the untiring, unqualified opposition of John W. Griggs, senator from Passaic. He had nothing but contempt for the bill, nothing but scorn for its advocates. And yet every political economist who has written within the past five years has credited the setting apart of one day in the year as a tribute to the dignity of labor with being the work of true statesmanship. The creation of the day was not the work of demagogues. It was the work of the best citizens of these United States. Other states had taken the step, and New Jersey was asked to fall in line.

Mr. Griggs, who now loves the wage earners, loves them, in the words of the late Mr. Poe, with "a love that is more than a love," never worked harder in the senate chamber than he did to kill that bill. Happily he was not successful. But his anger at defeat made him less cautious than was his wont, and he went on record. The bill was put on its final reading on April 5, 1887, and was passed by the following vote:

Yeas—Chase, Chattle, Cranmer, Edwards, Fish, Gardner, Herring, Livingston, McBride, Noon, Rue, Werts—12.

Nays—Griggs, Large.

This is record enough for one year. I give it as a sample illustrative of the deep sympathy which fills Mr. Griggs when he is considering the problems of legislation affecting the condition of those who receive their pay in small envelopes. Respectfully, ALLAN L. MCDERMOTT.

GRIGGS' POPULARITY WHERE HE IS BEST KNOWN.

In all the calculations of Republican prophets immense figures are given to show what Passaic will do for her "favorite son." As a matter of fact, Mr. Griggs is not popular in Passaic county. The wageworkers of the county distrust him. They know that he is and always has been merely the legal tool of a lot of rich clients who have invested their money in those artificial persons known as corporations. In 1875 and 1876 he was elected to the house of assembly, and his constituents were so dissatisfied with him that they defeated him when he ran for a third term in 1877. In 1879 Garret A. Hobart was the Republican nominee for senator in Passaic, and he was elected by a plurality of 1,900. In 1882 Mr. Griggs was elected senator by a plurality of 182. In 1885 he was elected senator by a plurality of 857. After the wage earners of Passaic county have examined Senator Griggs' record, after they have considered the fine scorn with which he treated the bill to make Labor day a legal holiday and every other measure advocated by the labor organizations of the state, the majority in Passaic county will be found where it properly belongs, and that is against Mr. Griggs.

REPUBLICAN REASONS.

The Republican orators and press are furnishing the best of reasons why the people should support Chancellor McGill. They admit that he is honest, upright and true to the constitution. They admit that they have searched his record and found no flaw. What reason, then, is there that any Democrat should leave his party and support Mr. Griggs, who has devoted himself for 20 years to abusing the Democratic party, its leaders and its principles! What reason is there that any Democrat should desert the standard of a spotless candidate and support a man whose vinegary tongue has been heard in every county of the state denouncing Tilden, Hancock and Cleveland? New Jersey never had a better candidate for the office of governor than is furnished in the person of Chancellor McGill, and it would be the basest treachery for any one who believes in his political principles to desert him on election day.

RECALL THEM.

Democrats of New Jersey, recall the speeches John W. Griggs made against George B. McClellan, recall the slanders he uttered against Grover Cleveland, recall the fact that your party has never had a more violent slanderer of its men and platforms than this same John W. Griggs, who is now asking for Democratic votes. Was he right when he slandered McClellan? Was he right when he spoke against Tilden and Cleveland? Is he right when he slanders Chancellor McGill by saying that he is responsible for the acts of men who left the Democratic party when they did wrong?

ITS NATIONAL ASPECT.

During the past three years the people of the United States have been called upon to pay the price which ever follows a violation of the laws of political economy. The election of 1892 contained the protest of the common sense of the people against Sherman silver laws and McKinley tariff bills. Had the people shown as much wisdom in 1888 as they did in 1892 the hardships that have been endured during the past three years would have been avoided. When Benjamin Harrison was inaugurated in 1889, the federal treasury was full to overflowing. Under four years of a Democratic administration the land had been prosperous. In three years under President Harrison the treasury was emptied and the seeds sown for a period of cruel industrial depression. The "panic" was upon us in 1892. It has been sought to charge the hard times of the past three years to the Democratic party, and this charge is easily impressed upon the minds of those who do not understand governmental affairs or look only at conditions without examining for the cause. The panic could not have been caused by Democratic legislation, for it commenced when the government was in the hands of a Republican president and senate. The McKinley bill was the finishing touch, the straw that broke the camel's back. Its authors predicted that it would bring industry to the people and prosperity to the nation. It brought the reverse of these. It depressed both labor and capital. The seeds of the panic were germinated by the McKinley bill. They fell in ground too well prepared by a system of vicious financial legislation. It is impossible to choke the commerce of a country and destroy its financial standing among the nations of the earth without bringing distress and want to the homes of millions.

The result of Republican legislation continued during the first two years of President Cleveland's administration. The laws which produced the disaster could not be at once repealed. When the Democrats obtained control of the senate, it was by such a small majority as to render all remedial legislation a work of the greatest difficulty. Every obstruction known to parliamentary law was placed in the road of legislative reform. The battle was a long one, and while it was in progress the evils under which the people were suffering continued. But the battle was won. While it was in progress the people were taught by demagogues on the stump and in the press that the Democratic party was properly chargeable with the distress of the hour. This was but history repeating itself. Whenever General Washington lost a skirmish, his enemies called for his resignation. No more bitter words are recorded than those uttered in Philadelphia against Washington whenever his progress was delayed by the enemy. So during the battles for tariff reform and sound finances every setback was charged to the Democratic party. The people are very apt to charge the party in power with all existing evils, and those who sought in vain for employment during the years 1893 and 1894 followed but natural impulse when they charged their sufferings to the existing administration. They charged their ills not to the cause, but to the doctor who was engaged in purifying the system. The fight against the McKinley bill, opposed, step by step, by the men who had been legislated into millionaires, was stubborn and bitter, and the uncertainty which attended the debates upon every item in the schedules irritated every branch of business. But who was to blame for this? Was it the party that enacted the McKinley bill or the party that fought for relief? Who was to blame for the suffering caused by the long struggle to repeal the "Sherman silver bill?" Was it the party that enacted the bill or the party that repealed it?

The Republicans claim that the election of a Republican house of representatives in 1894 was an indorsement of McKinleyism. It was nothing of the sort. It was the protest of the people against the depression under which they were suffering, and they mistakenly credited that depression to the party that was seeking to repeal the laws that caused it. Now that those laws have been repealed; now that the national government has retired from the business of buying silver by the cartload for storage in the treasury vaults; now that the chains have been taken from the limbs of labor; now that the government has dissolved partnership with the Carnegies, every hour brings glad tidings of the revival of prosperity. Wages are advancing, while the prices of the necessities of life are decreasing. These United States have entered upon a prosperity that will prove increasing and enduring. Do the people of New Jersey desire that this prosperity shall be interrupted? Do they wish to return to the vicious system of legislating for the few at the cost of the many? Mr. Griggs, in his speeches, carefully avoids all allusion to the national question. He leaves McKinleyism severely alone. But this silence is only a trick. If Mr. Griggs is elected governor of New Jersey, it will be heralded from Maine to California that New Jersey has again repudiated the national policy of the Democratic party, and comfort and joy will be gathered to aid next year in the election of a Republican president. The cry that this is only a state election is false. It is an election of national importance. The Republican leaders recognize this fact, and Mr. Griggs is receiving the assistance of the national Republican committee. If the Democratic candidate for governor was an objectionable man; if his record was not as bright and spotless as light; if it was an issue joined upon questions of his fitness for the office, then it might be said that the battle was one upon local issues. But this is not so. No speaker, no paper, has had the temerity to say that Chancellor McGill is not a perfect candidate. No Republican will say that Alexander T. McGill will not make an upright governor, true to the constitution, true to the people and true to the high standards by which his life has been guided. With such a man in nomination the campaign in New Jersey becomes of national import. It is a fight between the Republican and the Democratic parties. If Mr. McGill is defeated, the Democratic party of the nation will be placed at a great disadvantage in the presidential campaign of 1896. No man who believes in the principles of the Democratic party will vote to bring this about.

There is one thing worse still, the trying to look like a man.—Evening Sun.

The Union County Republicans have selected Dr. Stephen J. Keefe, of Elizabeth, to fill the vacancy on the ticket caused by the discovery that Dr. Chas. B. Holmes, of Rahway, was ineligible to run for Coroner. Dr. Keefe is a member of the staff of the Elizabeth General Hospital.

Woman suffrage has few friends among Southern women, according to the Wilmington (N. C.) Messenger, which says: "We have never heard a Southern woman of any grade of intelligence or in any respectable social circle who expressed a desire to exercise the right of franchise. Those we hear refer to it have had an unspeakable disgust for the agitation."

Ex-Senator Keyes, of Somerset, reported at Democratic headquarters Saturday that he had been visiting friends in Burlington county, says The World, and that he was surprised at the strong McGill sentiment that prevailed there. "Burlington," he said "is a strong Republican county, but the indications are that this year the majority will be reduced one half." Senator Keyes said he was confident Somerset county would give McGill a majority.

With reference to the "same old gang" cry of the Republicans R. V. Lindabury had the following to say in his speech at Elizabeth last night:

It is claimed that the people should vote against Chancellor McGill because of the past misdeeds of certain members of the Democratic party. This claim leaves out of view the fact that evil exists in every party and in every community, and has existed from the beginning of the world. The pertinent inquiry is not who was in control of the party in bygone days, but who is in control of it today? Our adversaries admit this, and answer it by saying the "same old gang." This is simply not true. Look at the past record of the present State committee. Of its twenty-seven members only three have ever been on the committee before, and against those three no word of reproach has ever been heard.

No better indorsement of the policy of Mayor Gilbert and the Common Council with reference to the issuing of bonds for the loan of $100,000 could be desired than the proceedings of last night's session of the council. The great hue and cry raised by Editor Runyon over the contract originally made with the firm of Harvey Fisk's Sons for the loan of this money was the cry of an ignorant man, who entertains malice and jealousy against the city administration for personal reasons. Experienced in matters of finance the officials who arranged this loan of $100,000 from the Fisks, knew that they were working for the best interests of the city, and the failure to get better terms from any other firm, after a vast number had been made acquainted with the conditions under which the loan was to be made, demonstrates this fact in a most forcible manner.

Ex-Senator Fred Marsh says that Union county will give McGill 300 majority.

This is the season of put up or shut up. Corbett and Fitzsimmons are out of season, though.

Where are all those Plainfield people that The News proclaimed with great indignation would buy the sewer bonds if a chance was only given them?

The Jersey City News characterizes the statement of Editor Runyon that "Lindabury is to be Chancellor if McGill is elected Governor," as a blackguard falsehood.

The average Jerseyman is too intelligent to become biased against the candidacy of Chancellor McGill on the fanatical opposition of the A. P. A. over the Catholic Protectory bill.

Republican papers are taking great delight in circulating the report that Augustus Cutler refuses to support Chancellor McGill. But a far different aspect was shown last night when Mr. Cutler was chairman of a ratification meeting at Morristown and eulogized the Democratic ticket in the highest terms.

The return of Democratic good times in New Jersey is indicated by the late report of the Comptroller of the Currency at Washington, which shows that the people have nearly $57,000,000 on deposit in the national banks of the State. With so handsome a balance as this on call the business men of New Jersey have good reason to congratulate themselves and to praise the Democratic policy which has led to their present prosperity.—True American.

Commissioner of Pensions Lochren has submitted his annual report to the Secretary of the Interior. It shows that up to June 30th, 1894, there were 969,544 pensioners, and in the last year 39,185 new pensions were granted and 4,206 restored which had been dropped from the rolls, making an aggregate of 1,012,935. Unless further pension legislation is enacted, the Commissioner thinks that the appropriation of $140,000,000 will be sufficient for the fiscal year ending June 30th, 1896.

State Comptroller Hancock has stated that under the contract for State printing given out on Tuesday, if as many laws are passed as last winter, $124,000 will be saved the State over the expense of printing them under the old way. There are to be 25,000 sheets printed of the usual pamphlet size, and 8,000 are to be saved for binding as pamphlets at the close of the season. The rest are to be stitched together weekly or sent out in any form desired, to members of the Legislature and to other persons entitled to them.

Logically, the fight which the Republicans are making is a most absurd one. If they believe that "the same old gang" of Democrats will ride into power with McGill, it necessarily follows that the latter cannot be the man that they freely admit he is. If he is in all respects worthy of the office for which the Democrats have nominated him, then is it not preposterous and irrational to expect the people to believe that they have anything to fear from "the same old gang," or anybody else, while he is in the Governor's chair?—Hoboken Observer.

The tabulation of the New Jersey state census of 1895, which was taken last May, will not be completed before December. One of the noticeable things which the census will show will be the geat decrease in the proportion the Irish and the German population will bear to the total foreign-born population. When the law was first passed providing for a State census, it was decided that German and Irish were the only foreign elements that need be separately classified, there were by comparison so few of the other nationalities. But the influx of immigration from other countries during the past few years will have the effect, particularly in the large cities, of bringing the total of this "scattering" column up to a pretty high figure. In the city of Newark the number of persons who will appear in the column of "foreign-born exclusive of German and Irish" will be much larger than the number of Irish and almost as large as the number of Germans.

THE DEMOCRATIC ISSUES

R. V. Lindabury Effectively Replies to "the Same Old Gang" Charge of the Republicans — Secretaries, Vice-Presidents.

A large and representative audience of Plainfield's citizens crowded Music Hall last Monday to attend the mass meeting of the Democrats, and to listen to the addresses by speakers who have a State reputation as men who are thoroughly acquainted with the vital issues involved in the present Gubernatorial campaign.

A large number of ladies occupied seats in the hall. The stage was prettily trimmed with the Stars and Stripes, while pictures of Chancellor McGill and President Cleveland were prominently displayed. The stage was filled with prominent Democrats.

The following were chosen as secretaries: Lewis G. Timpson, George W. Bird, Charles P. Bull, Jr., Peter Flynn, Jr., John Kenney and Edward Birmingham.

The following vice-presidents were chosen: Hon. James Clark, Gen. William H. Sterling, Hon. William L. Saunders, Rev. Dr. E. M. Rodman, Rev. T. Logan Murphy, S. R. Simpson, Otto Arens, Rowland Cox, Edward C. Perkins, Walter E. Stewart, Charles P. Bull, Fred H. Wills, William A. Coddington, Hugh D. Knox, A. H. Atterbury, J. Oscar Stewart, Constantine P. Ralli, William Palmer Smith, Lewis E. Howard, John H. Van Winkle, Dexter Tiffany, Anthony J. Woodruff, Leonard Spangenberg, Walter L. Hetfield, Isaac P. Brown, Arthur T. Gallup, Vincent L. Frazee, Andrew Love, James Merritt, William B. Ostrom and John Mortimer.

The meeting was called to order by William K. McClure as vice-president of the Democratic Association, who named Hon. Joseph W. Yates as permanent chairman. Upon assuming the chair Mr. Yates said:

I thank you for the honor of being asked to preside at this meeting of Democrats and those who are here in the interest of the Democrats. This election is an important one. We have to elect a Governor in whose honorable and upright character the Democrats of this State have great faith. We also have to assist in electing representatives in this county who are the most honorable and faithful men the Democratic party could select and who were unanimously nominated by the Democratic people. The importance in electing these gentlemen is to elect a United States Senate in support of that faithful advocate of the Democratic party and of our country, Grover Cleveland, as an honorable and faithful adherent to the principles advocated by our fathers. The speakers who have been invited from the neighboring townships all of you well know. They came here to talk upon that very subject which I have introduced as your chairman, and I shall take pleasure in introducing to you the Hon J. J. Bergen.

Mr. Bergen spoke in part as follows:

The Democratic party represents as their choice for Governor Alexander T. McGill, a man against whose character, reputation and official conduct not a single Republican orator in New Jersey this fall has dared to say one word of reproach. He was brought up in the shadows of Old Nassau. He was a graduate of that college, was admitted to the bar and was appointed by Gov. McClellan as Prosecutor. He was then elected Judge of that county and has since been twice Chancellor of the State of New Jersey. He is a man above reproach who, "If Alexander McGill is elected Governor of New Jersey he will be the Governor of New Jersey and no one else," quoting from his own words to me. They have given you on the other side a man who was represented in the Senate of New Jersey. A man who was the first to proceed against local option law. I say that when a candidate for Governor criticizes and declares himself against local option that it does not represent that independent character which the people of New Jersey want in a Governor of New Jersey.

What is astonishing to me in analyzing the record of this Republican candidate as a member of the Legislature of the State of New Jersey, is that I can't find a single instance in which his vote was cast in favor of the laboring class of men. When the question of the first Monday in September being set aside as a workman's holiday, his vote was cast against it. Now my friends you have heard a great deal about the people behind McGill, but look up his record and you will see not who is behind him, but that in relation to benefiting the laboring class of people, he is foremost.

Who is in the Republican State Committee? The same old fellows who were there in 1888. The water monopoly in the State of New Jersey are advocating and securing the election of Griggs are grabbing up all the large water works in the State, making a great corporation of it and force on Jersey City a $6,000,000 job.

Now for Somerset county we propose to elect our County Clerk, our Sheriff and Charles W. Hoagland, our nominee for Assembly. We will send him along to stand by our next Governor, Chancellor McGill. When you vote for a member of the Legislature, you vote your politics. The Democratic party all over the State is aroused and on election day will see us marching to victory. Hudson and Essex counties will give us a good majority, but I want the majority all over the State made so strong and so certain that the people of the United States will understand that New Jersey will stand in the ranks of true Democrats at the next National election.

In speaking of Somerset county candidates Mr. Bergen spoke in the highest terms of Charles A. Reed, of North Plainfield, and said that if he was a candidate on the Democratic ticket he would walk twenty miles, if necessary, to vote for him.

Mr. Lindabury spoke in part as follows:

Ladies and gentlemen:—There are two things for which I thank God, and they are that I am not a politician, nor am I a candidate for office. There is no office which I would accept under any circumstances whatever from our next Governor. The Republican party need have no fear that I will try for an office. They are welcome to the offices if they get there.

One of the principal reasons given today why the Democratic party should not get in power is that the party has become corrupt, that it is dishonest, that the State in some instances has been cheated, and that evils have gathered about the ship of State as barnacles upon a vessel. I have not time to go into a discussion of that, and it is quite enough disproved of, but I wish to know if there are more evil-doers now than there have been in any administration of either party. Human nature is still weak. There is no better statement of affairs than there ever was. You well know that the greatest loss ever occurred to this State was when a Republican treasurer embezzled $60,000 to $70,000. I do not mean to indicate that the Republican party is more corrupt. It is as old as Adam and will exist always and everywhere.

It is alleged that the "old gang," as it is called, is still in control of the Democratic party and it therefore should not have the support of the people. Excuse me if I speak plainly to that charge. If I believed it I would not be here speaking for its candidate. Look at the facts. These charges will not do; proofs are what is wanted on our part.

What do the charges amount to? The members of the State Committee consists of twenty-seven members elected by twenty-one counties and appointed by the chairman of the convention. Out of these twenty-seven representatives of the people, three only have been on the State Committee before, and those three have been upbraided by the Republican speakers. Now they, with McGill at the head, are a new people, and it is not fair to say that they are the same old gang.

When you find such men as Paul Queen and Senator Kuhl representing the Democratic State Committee, you may feel assured that the committee are men who have always stood for what is desirable to the good of the State.

You know the fight we have had in this county against the race-track gamblers. Five years ago I had occasion to address you on this question. It was a coming evil and how awful it became, you learned later.

Two years ago I again addressed you on that question and it was thought in 1893 that the race-track question in this State was forever out of politics of this State. Let me tell you that from knowledge of which I am in possession, the race-track question is not yet settled. I know whereof I speak when I say that the race-track still exists.

I find that the race-track people are going about this State with interest unprecedented buttonholing men and asking them to vote for the Republican Governor and asking them, "Won't you consent to an honest racing bill?" It means an honest gambling bill. The means in New Jersey providing for honest racing are ample now. They could conduct honest racing without gambling if they wanted to. They want a bill like they have in New York by which the gamblers are prevented from cheating each other and not the public. That is what they refer to in "honest racing bill."

Gambling is now a felony in this State, therefore strenuous efforts are being made to modify that law which prevents them from gambling as they do in New York. And now the question is still unsolved and it becomes your duty to consider which party can send a man who is with the people in this great issue. And if you think with me you will cast your vote for a straight, honest Democratic ticket.

John W. Griggs was in the Legislature when this matter first came before the attention of the people.

In 1887 the worst racing bill that has ever been in Legislature in this country passed the Legislature with J. W. Griggs' name attached; in 1888 a Republican Legislature repealed the law against betting so that it could then be carried on openly.

You all remember a few years ago, that accursed disguised race-track bill which was passed and was only repealed on being called unconstitutional.

There was one man who from his own confession to me said that he knew what that bill was. He allowed that bill to pass the Legislature without one word of protest, a bill which, when the crafty nature of it became known, brought every respectable citizen to his feet with indignation. Although he knew what that bill was, not one word did he utter. That man was John W. Griggs. At that memorable time with the aid of God we won the victory and saved the State.

In Hoboken J. W. Griggs made a speech of encouragement to the henchmen of the race track gang, assuring them that nine-tenths of the people of New Jersey were with them and were only against winter racing. The attaches of Monmouth and of Clifton and other race tracks wear Griggs buttons and shout for Griggs and are spending all their time electioneering for Griggs.

They know that with this election will come the issue of race or no race tracks. It is their last hope and they rally for John W. Griggs. Under the circumstances it seems to me that you people of Plainfield with your moral character, and your intelligence cannot doubt where your duty lies in this campaign and I believe will know what to do—what you did five years ago and two years ago, lay politics aside and let your concience direct and guide your vote.

At the close of Mr. Lindabury's address John J. Green, of Westfield, James Febrey, of Elizabeth, and Nathan Mead, of Rahway, candidates for Members of Assembly in Union county, each made brief addresses.

Excellent music for the meeting was furnished by Guttman's band.

A COUNTERFEIT FIVER.

Spurious Bills Being Passed on Plainfield Merchants.

There are a number of counterfeit $5 bills floating around Plainfield, of which the merchants should beware. The distinguishing marks are: First, That with the B in the upper right hand and lower left hand corner the final number is odd; second, that Grant's vingette appears to be made of straight lines instead of dots; and, third, that the word Rosecrans is printed as Rosecians. The bills appear to be new, but the paper is friable and the silk weak. One of these bills was passed upon Mike Webber, the butcher, today, but fortunately for him he knows from whom he received it.

The Woman Was at Fault.

Deminick Vitell, the Italian, who was charged with abusing his wife, came up before Judge Coddington Saturday evening and told his story. After listening to both sides of the case, the Judge found that the wife had thrown her husband's clothes out doors and made life generally miserable for him, so he discharged the prisoner.

MORE GREEN BROOK TROUBLE

Borough Determined to Prosecute Those Who Sewer Into the Stream.

The borough Board of Health held a meeting last night and after a conference with Borough Counsel Charles A. Reed decided to go on and prosecute all people who are sewering into Green brook contrary to the law. The most probable line of action will be that injunctions will be procured and served on all who have connections with pipes running into the brook.

It was at first thought that the city would be made a party to the action from the fact that they were the constructors of the North avenue sewer and for some time collected a tax from all who had connections, but it is claimed that they are exempt from any suit on account of having notified all to stop sewering into the pipe when the prohibitory law was passed two years ago. It is reported, however, that the Central railroad would make a stand that they have a contract with the city to sewer in the pipe and that they would hold them to it. The city claims that this would be impossible as the law of 1893 nullified the contract. There are over fifty people who sewer in the North avenue pipe and who it would be necessary to serve injunctions on.

THE HEAD OF A TRUST COMPANY.

V. F. Randolph Selected to Run a New York Financial Institution.

The resignation of Mr. William H. Male from the presidency of the Atlantic Trust Company, New York, for personal reasons, has had the effect of placing that prosperous company in the hands of a gentleman fully competent. The new official is Mr. Lewis V. F. Randolph, who is well known in financial circles, and bears an enviable reputation for executive ability. This position calls for a high degree of capability in management, and it is generally recognized that Mr. Randolph is qualified to occupy the office to the best interests of the company. He was formerly treasurer of the Illinois Central Railroad, in which capacity he earned a name for good judgement as well as integrity, and was more recently engaged in looking after the affairs of the Samuel Tilden estate He proved invaluable as one of the executors and received much commendation for his work.

Mr. Randolph is a Jerseyman by birth, having been born in Somerville, in that State, in 1838. He was in his earlier life connected with a mercantile house, but in 1854 entered the American Exchange Bank, remaining with that institution until 1863. In that year he enlisted in the army, serving with credit and bravery. The following year (1864) he commenced his connection with the Illinois Central Railroad as private secretary to the president; in 1873 was made director and assistant treasurer. He resigned in 1885, the Illinois Central Board adopting suitable resolutions of regret and respect. The esteem in which he was held is marked in the town of his youth, for he was at one time Mayor of Plainfield, and served the people faithfully and with good results.

The Atlantic Trust Company gains an official who can thus give them the benefit of many years of financial training in the services of banks, railroads and estates. It is believed through the downtown district and wherever Mr. Randolph is best known, that he will add much to the present efficiency of the company and promote its prosperity.

The company is recognized as thoroughly stable, and as one of New York's most reliable organizations.—New York Freeman's Journal,

A HEROIC FIREMAN.

Captain Vaughn, of New York, Makes Chief Doane a Visit.

It was a very pleasant surprise to Chief T. O. Doane yesterday when his old friend, Captain Vaughn, of the Fire Patrol No. 3, of New York, and wife, dropped in to spend Sunday with him. Captain Vaughn is the youngest captain in the service and was a fireman who received a gold medal for bravery at the Hotel Royal fire, when he made a human bridge of himself and thus allowed many of the occupants of the hotel to reach a place of safety. He performed many other valiant deeds at the time and was as the hero of the occasion.

Miss Rugg's Surprise.

Miss Florence Rugg, of East Second street, was given a surprise party last Friday night by a number of her young friends. Those who were there were the Misses Mattie and Ida Hornhorn, Fanny Mills, Florence Taylor, Lillian Hope, Medora and Grace Aurich, Lillian Thorn, Mildred Tyrell, Cera Scull, Josie Vannatta, Lida Longborn, May Williams, Carman Stephen, Ralph Tolles, George Graves, Arnie Waters, Horace Martin, Frank Talley, Benjamin Schenck, Fred Lamy, Arthur McVoy and George Reynolds.

FESTIVAL OF AUTUMN TIME.

A SEASONABLE EVENT AT THE FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH.

Young Ladies' Missionary Society Show Dexterity at Making a Pretty Scene With Autumn Products—Those in Charge.

The Sunday-school room of the First Baptist church never presented a more pleasing appearance than it did Monday, when the "Harvest Home" festival opened under the auspices of the Young Ladies Missionary Society of the church.

The young women of this society have a peculiar knack of arranging the most successful affairs and extracting the desired gilt from the pockets of their friends, and the best part of it is that it all goes for worthy purposes. This time the money is to be used in supporting Miss Florence Dodge, one of their members, at the Chicago Training School where she is now studying to be a missionary.

The room looked charming in colors of yellow and white. Streamers of these colors were gracefully suspended from pillar to pillar, while at the several tables there was a nice arrangement of the colors, adding brilliancy to the scene. On the platform there was a familiar sight. Choice products of a well-kept farm were displayed, such as corn, apples, squash, pumpkins, turnips, cornstalks, etc., and they were carefully arranged.

On each side of the room at the windows the products of the same variety were to be seen, while at convenient points could be seen tall cornstalks guarding the smaller fruits and vegetables of the ground.

The efforts of the young women were well rewarded, for a large number were present last night and freely spent their allowance to help a worthy cause.

During the evening a programme was rendered consisting of a violin solo by Clarence Hillman, vocal solos by W. Runyon and recitations by Miss Grace Cooley, which were all well received.

Those in charge of the tables, pouring the tea and coffee, and the various committees are as follows:

At the tables—Mrs. Walter McGee, Miss Ida Yerkes, Mrs. Chas. H. Smith, Miss Anna Boice, Miss Florence Marsh, Mrs. Clinton Randolph, Mrs. McIntyre, Miss Mamie French, Mrs. James Manning, Mrs. Ransome.

Decorating and entertainment—Miss Edith Harold, Miss Helen Spear, Mrs. Frank Jones, Mrs. B. Vail, Miss Helen Shreve, Miss Grace Yerkes, Miss Mamie French, Miss Grace Cooley.

Candy—Mrs. B. Vail, Mrs. Frank Jones, Miss Nora Williams, Misses Alice and Bertha Needham, Alice and Susie Woodland, Miss Lizzie Smalley.

Ice cream—Miss Laura Runyon, Mrs. Simpson, Mrs. E. VanName, Mrs. Charles Conover, Miss Emily Corieil, Miss Love, Miss Lizzie Manning, Miss Louise B. Runyon.

Refreshments—Mrs. DeWitt C. Brokaw, Mrs. Harold Serrell, Mrs. John French, Mrs. King, Mrs. Harry Brokaw, Miss Mary Thorn, Miss Mollie White.

Lemonade—Mrs. Harry Brokaw, assisted by Miss Della Grant and Miss Edna Smith.

A regular harvest home supper was served at a nominal cost and all who partook thoroughly enjoyed it.

ATTACKED BY A COW.

Little Raymond Fuller Has Entirely Recovered From the Effects.

About three weeks ago Raymond Fuller, of Arlington avenue, had a narrow escape from death. He has now fully recovered from his injuries which were caused by an angry cow. The lad, who is about four years old, was playing with some of his comrades in a vacant lot. A cow was feeding in the same field and started on a run for the children. All but Raymond escaped and he, seeing that he could not, started to defend himself with his little wooden shovel. The cow knocked him down several times and would have probably killed him had not his older brother George come to the rescue and driven the animal away.

ROYAL GOOD FELLOWS.

Arcanumites Entertain State Officers in Great Style.

If there is one time during the year that the members of Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum, enjoy themselves better than any other, it is when the grand lodge officers pay their official visit. Such was the circumstances last night, and Plainfield Council certainly did have a royal time, as usual. Everybody was in the best of humor and speeches that were filled with good common sense and wisdom occupied a portion of the evening. The grand lodge officers were highly pleased with their entertainment, and the home members were benefited materially by the official visit.

Thomas Bartindale and Dr. Marsh, formerly residents of this city, and members of the Council, but now of Brooklyn, were present and were given a hearty welcome.

During the evening Grand Treasurer Nixon rendered a pleasing solo, and A. G. Carpenter furnished excellent music.

Refreshments were served by Stephenson, the caterer.

The grand lodge officers present were: Grand Regent, J. Day Otis; Grand Orator, C. J. E. Nolte; Supreme Orator, P. L. H. Charlock; Past Grand Regent S. J. Kallman; Grand Secretary, R. H. Alberts; Grand Guide, Samuel Drummond; Grand Treasurer, R. J. Nixon; District Deputies J. A. Gallagher and L. A. Lightfoot; Past Supreme Representative, P. S. Petler and Past Supervising Deputy and Grand Trustee, A. W. Rand.

THEATRICAL.

Colton & Ryno's great metropolitan production, "Lost in New York," comes to Music Hall next Friday and a magnificient scenic and realistic presentation will be given, with the original New York cast, scenery and mechanical effects. The management guarantees their patrons that all their scenery will be put up and used here, and the public may rest assured that they will receive value in full for the price paid to see "Lost in New York."

NO BETTER BOND TERMS.

THE MAYOR AND FINANCE COMMITTEE'S ACTION VINDICATED.

Though More Than a Hundred Firms Were Asked to Bid, Only Three Did So, and One of These Was Thrown Out.

When President See called the special meeting of the city council to order last Monday at 8:15 councilmen Fisk, Erickson, Dumont, Moore and Westphal were present. Mr. Frost came in later. The clerk read the call of the meeting which was to receive bids for loaning $100,000 to the city. Mr. Dumont was asked to assist the City Clerk in opening the bids, of which there were three, as follows: S. A. Kean, of Chicago, 100.25 and interest for bonds, providing the bonds run for five years or more. Dime Savings Bank, Plainfield, par and 4 per cent interest for $25,000. Pliny Fisk par and 4 per cent interest for $100,000. The last two were for notes, etc., as advertised. S. A. Kean's bid did not comply with the advertisement, for the city has no bonds to issue, and was in consequence thrown out.

The awards of the notes were on Mr. Dumont's motion $25,000 to the Dime Saving's Bank and $75,000 to Pliny Fisk, the bonds to be assigned when issued, pro-rata. All the members voted aye.

A communication was read from Corporation Counsel Marsh, regarding the purchase of the property for the sewage beds, in compliance with the request of Mr. Ginna, as the latter did not like the phraseology of the minutes on that point as recorded.

Mr. Erickson moved that the report of the Corporation Counsel be received and the minutes so amended as to conform with it. It was so ordered.

The special meeting then adjourned and the regular adjourned meeting was called. The minutes of the meeting of November 14th were read and adopted.

M. Honan & Sons asked for an extension of time owing to the delay in receiving pipe. They said they would be through by November 7th. Contractor Marsden also asked for an extension of time from November 1st to 30th. Both were referred to the sewer committee, and they recommended that the same be granted provided it met the approval of the Corporation Counsel; also that Marsden keep the foreman now in his employ till the work is completed. It was so ordered.

On Mr. Moore's motion $300 was ordered expended for police coats and trousers for the police, and the contract with the Plainfield Gas & Electric Light Co., was ordered renewed for another year on the same terms. Council then adjourned.

The market is full of cough mixtures but one trouble with most of them is that when they do a little good the patient has to take so much that he gets to loathe the taste. The Pineola Balsam is superior to other cough remedies because it is agreeable to the palate and its good effects are immediate. In a few days an ordinary cough is gone altogether. Bronchitis and asthma are more stubborn, but they too are cured by Ely's Pineola Balsam. A remedy worth trying. 25 cents is all it costs.

Its best use is before you fear consumption; when you begin to get thin, weak, run down; then is the prudent time to begin to take care, and the best way to take care is to supply the system with needed fat and strength. Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil, with hypophosphites, will bring back plumpness to those who have lost it, and make strength where raw cod-liver oil would be a burden.

...TER ...VES HIM RIG...

WHY GRIGGS IS 'COLDLY RECEIVED' WHEN HE GOES AMONG THE WAGE EARNERS.

The Workingmen of New Jersey Know That John W. Griggs Is Without the Slightest Sympathy For Them—Let Them Read the Record.

In every community will be found men who sneer when the efforts of the wage earners of the land are mentioned. The man who has inherited wealth or obtained it without great effort is apt to consider himself a rather superior sort of being. For centuries the toilers of the world were looked upon as an inferior class of mortals. History tells us that the fact that a man was forced to earn his bread by the sweat of his brow was only a few years ago a badge of disgrace. In this sentiment was found the root of slavery. The civilization of the nineteenth century is changing all this, and today the object of contempt, in this country at least, is not the man who carries a dinner pail, but rather the man who considers labor degrading. Here riches are not noble; labor is not ignoble. For ages the toilers of the world lived without hope. It was their lot to be born, to toil, to die. They worked; others enjoyed the fruits of that work. This has all been changed by the coming of freedom—freedom from tyranny, freedom from caste, freedom from forced deference to the favorites of chance. The working people of the country have at times been led astray by demagogues, but their councils have in the main been conducted with intelligence and discretion. Nothing has done more to advance the interests of those who earn their living than the organization of labor.

The union of workingmen has been sneered at by every superficial reasoner. It has been made the subject of jest and ridicule, but the real thinkers in the field of political economy, those who waited for results before rendering their opinions, are today a unit in their recognition of the fact that the organization of workingmen for the advancement of their mutual interests has made this a better world. Mistakes have been made at times, but this is true of every great struggle. At first requests for legislation were laughed at. Over the capitol of every state was found the legend, "No interference between capital and labor." Children were employed in unhealthy occupations, workmen were paid in orders for supplies, redeemable at oppressive prices for the necessaries of life, and every imposition was tolerated which brought a dollar to the pocket of the employer. These conditions grew worse with the increase of corporations. The miller who works with his men has a sympathy for them. He knows their wants. He at least becomes acquainted with them. The entrance of large corporations into every branch of business worked a change. The man who works for a corporation never gets acquainted with his employer. The change is for the worse in many instances, but it was one of the springs which moved the wage earner to organization. The demand for legislation grew. The first step was the regulation of the employment of children. The next was that wages be paid in cash. In every state laws were demanded and obtained for the protection of workmen whose wages were endangered, and the mechanic's lien laws of this country have saved many a home from want. These successes gave a dignity to labor. It was elevated by the laws passed in its interests. But these laws have not been passed without opposition. In every legislature there have been found those who scoffed at "labor bills," and it can be truly said that none ever gave those bills more persistent opposition than that waged by John W. Griggs, the Republican candidate for governor. This is assertion, but the record proves it. In 1887 he was called upon to vote on the following bill, which had been passed by the house of assembly, and will be found on page 147 of the laws of that year. That it is the law of the state is not to be credited to Mr Griggs:

A supplement to an act entitled "An act establishing legal holidays and regulating the maturity of commercial paper with respect thereto," approved June 1, 1886.

Whereas, It is fitting that one day in the year be specially dedicated to the wageworkers of the state which they may regard as peculiarly their own and as set apart for the observance of labor festivals and such other reunions as may to them seem proper, therefore

Be it enacted by the senate and general assembly of the state of New Jersey that the first section of the act to which this is a supplement be amended so as to read as follows: 1. Be it enacted by the senate and general assembly of the state of New Jersey that the first day of January, the twenty-second day of February, thirtieth day of May, fourth day of July, FIRST MONDAY IN SEPTEMBER (TO BE KNOWN AS LABOR DAY), Thanksgiving day, twenty-fifth day of December and any day upon which a general election shall be held for members of assembly in each year, and also any day set apart by proclamation of the governor of this state or by the president of the United States for the purpose of public observance, shall be a legal holiday, and no court shall be held upon said days except in the cases where said court would now sit upon a Sunday, and no person SHALL BE COMPELLED TO LABOR upon any of said days by any person or corporation.

The only change made by this statute is to add Labor day to the list of legal holidays upon which court shall not be held and labor shall not be compulsory. Mr. Griggs argued against the bill. It would, he declared, lead to idleness and drunkenness. He declared that the employers of his county were a unit against it and ridiculed it by asking why a day was not set apart to be called lawyers' day. He succeeded in getting but one senator to join him in voting against the bill. The name of the other was Senator Large, and the people of his county have relegated him to the obscurity to which he is entitled. The advocates of Senator Griggs are now trying to excuse his vote and explaining that Labor day was an experiment and that he was afraid to try it. This will not do. The excuse might be accepted if Senator Griggs had confined his refusal to recognize the interests of labor to his single vote against this bill, but at the same session he defeated a bill making the wages of workmen a first lien upon the property of insolvents. The passage of the Labor day bill of 1887 soured Senator Griggs, and when the session of 1888 came he threw aside all caution and fought every bill introduced to protect workmen. Let us look at the record of this year. Our readers will remember that we are not indulging in glittering generalities. We are writing from the record.

In 1888 the following bill was passed by the house of assembly, the vote there being unanimous:

An act for the protection of employees.

1. Be it enacted by the senate and general assembly of the state of New Jersey that it shall be unlawful for any corporation, manufacturing establishment or employer of any person acting for them to demand or receive from laborers or those who have been or may be in their employ any written instrument or document pledging or attempting to pledge such employees to withdraw from membership in any trades union or labor organization to which they may belong or in any manner seek to prevent them from becoming members of such organization.

2. And be it enacted, That all violations of the foregoing be punished by a fine of not more than one hundred dollars, or by imprisonment for not more than six months, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

3. And be it enacted, That all such violations shall be prosecuted by the county prosecutor of the county in which such violations occur, upon request of the chief inspector of factories.

This bill was demanded by the trade unions of the state because employers had attempted to have men indicted as conspirators when they joined the labor unions and had, in Passaic and other counties, refused to employ men or keep them employed unless they resigned from all organizations. Mr. Griggs was the leader of his party in the senate and was therefore placed on such committees as he desired. He was appointed a member of the committee on labor and industries. He controlled the committee. After holding the bill for some time and sneering at its advocates he reported it adversely and killed the measure. Now he wants the wage earners of New Jersey to give him their votes, so that he may be in a position to veto such legislation. The only argument he made against the bill was that it placed employers in the power of their workmen. It did nothing of the kind. It simply said to the employer, "You shall not interfere with your workmen if they desire to organize." Mr. Griggs' record on this bill will be found on page 702 of the senate journal for 1888. He cannot deny it or explain it away.

At the same session the house passed assembly bill No. 255. It read as follows:

A further supplement to the act entitled "A general act relating to factories and workshops and the employment, safety, health and work hours of operatives," approved April seventh, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-five.

1. Be it enacted by the senate and general assembly of the state of New Jersey.

That every owner of and employer in any factory the nature of whose business or trade requires the use of machinery shall, before employing any minor under the age of 18 years in the actual operating, working or attending of, upon, with or to such machinery, fully inform and instruct or cause said minor to be informed and instructed as to the nature and character of the machinery in or about which he is to be employed and its proper use and management.

2. And be it enacted, That every such owner or employer failing to comply with the provisions of this act shall be liable for any injury resulting therefrom to any said minor notwithstanding any agreement between said owner or employer and said minor previously made to the contrary.

3. And be it enacted, That this act shall take effect immediately.

Is there a voter in the state of New Jersey, other than John W Griggs or some employer too heartless to care whether a child is killed or not, who can present any objection to this bill? It does not apply to persons over 18 years of age. It does not require anything from the employer but what would be done by any employer entitled to be called a man, without the direction of the statute. The law says that employees who work where there is machinery accept all risks of their employment and cannot recover if they are injured because they have not sufficient knowledge of the dangerous character of the machinery. This bill simply imposed the duty on the employer of telling minors what dangers they would meet. It was as proper a bill as was ever introduced in any legislature of this Union. Unfortunately it was referred to the committee on labor and industries, and therefore fell into the clutches of Mr. Griggs. His fine sneer was soon in evidence. It was the business of employees to look out for themselves. Such a bill would prevent the investment of capital in the interests of his county. He reported the bill adversely and killed it. The reason why he had asked to be placed on the committee on labor and industries became painfully apparent. This is not the rambling assertion of stump oratory. The adverse report of the committee will be found on page 703 of the senate journal of 1888.

So far Mr. Griggs had shown himself an enemy of organized labor and wanting in common regard for the interests of his fellow beings, but the next item in his record exhibits a heartless brutality that is as rare as it is offensive. In 1888 the house of assembly passed a bill which was signed by Governor Green, and which can be found by reference to 149 of the laws of that year. It contains provisions which have been enacted by every state in the Union.

The objects of this bill was to provide protection for the lives of those who are forced to work in buildings over three stories in height. Its principal provision is that the owners of buildings, factories, workshops or manufactories more than three stories in height and in which 30 or more persons are employed "SHALL PROVIDE ALL SUCH BUILDINGS WITH A PERMANENT AND SAFE EXTERNAL MEANS OF ESCAPE THEREFROM, WHICH SHALL BE SO ARRANGED THAT IN CASE OF FIRE THE GROUND CAN BE READILY REACHED BY PERSONS OCCUPYING THE THIRD AND HIGHER FLOORS."

When this bill was received by the senate, Mr. Griggs set himself at work to kill it. It involved cost to several of his clients. He did not succeed. The bill was advocated by the representatives of the thousands of workingmen, women and children who are cooped up in factories and buildings with no possibility of escape from death in case of fire. He did not kill the bill, but he opposed it, and when it was passed the vote of Senator Griggs was one of the two cast against this humane measure in the legislature of New Jersey. It would take pages to tell the whole record of this man's opposition to the interests of the wage earners of New Jersey. He is their foe, and a heartless one at that. To vote for him they must lower their manhood.

THE NEGATIVE VOTE OF SENATOR GRIGGS WILL BE FOUND ON PAGE 546 OF THE SENATE JOURNAL OF 1888.

A senator who did not believe that Labor day should be created, who did not believe that minors should be instructed in the dangers of machinery about which they were to be employed, who did not believe that the wage earners of New Jersey should be protected in the right to organize, who did not believe that the lives of men, women and children should be protected—such a senator is unfit to be governor of New Jersey.

THE DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM.

In accepting the nomination of the Democratic convention Chancellor McGill unreservedly accepted the principles laid down in the state platform. He stands upon that platform, and it will be his guide in the administration of the office of governor. We commend the platform to the consideration of our readers. Upon national affairs it declares as follows:

"That we reaffirm the national Democratic platform adopted at Chicago in 1892 and cordially indorse the administration of President Cleveland, with whose determination to protect the people of this country from the evils ever attendant upon a debasement of the national currency we are in most earnest sympathy.

"We congratulate the people upon the revival of prosperity everywhere evident in our land, and we assert that the industrial depression with which we have been afflicted during the past three years is chargeable to the national legislation enacted by the Republican party. The purchase of silver to be stored in the treasury and the enactment of unjust tariff laws to enrich a few favorites by the oppression of millions of consumers were the main causes of the paralyzation of our markets. That paralysis, with an empty national treasury, was the legacy received from a Republican administration

"The battle against a system fostered in violation of self evident laws of political economy has been won. Every struggle against intrenched wrong is attended by privation and suffering, but these are never endured in vain. The lesson of cause and effect has been thoroughly learned, and we are willing to abide by the decision of an intelligent people, who are now entering upon a period of prosperity that will prove both substantial and enduring.

Every word here written is truthful. The panic of 1893-4 was not caused by Democratic legislation. It was born of McKinleyism and vicious financial legislation. Today this land is moving in the ways of prosperity, and the credit for the revival of our industries is due to the fact that a Democratic congress revised the tariff laws and took the Sherman silver act from the statute book. Republican legislation brought the panic to our doors. Democratic legislation has banished it. The calamity howlers deceived the people in 1894, but they will find it impossible to repeat their success in 1895. A recent issue of the New York Tribune contained an editorial declaring that the industries of the country had been ruined by President Cleveland. In the news columns of the same issue of that paper there were seven items reporting the revival of industry in different parts of the country and an increase in the wages of the employees in manufactories in four states. These United States are moving toward a long period of unexampled prosperity, and this movement is under the laws enacted by a Democratic congress. The trend of Republican legislation was toward the creation of millionaires. The Wilson tariff bill was enacted for the benefit of the masses.

Let the people remember that, although he was in the house of assembly two years and in the senate six years, Mr. Griggs has been unable to allude to a single measure that he ever introduced or advocated for the benefit of others than the railroad and water companies of New Jersey.

POLITICS OF SUNDAY-SCHOOL

REV. H. C. CRONIN WOULD EDUCATE BOYS WHILE THEY ARE BOYS.

Let Him Train the Children and He Cares Not What the Laws Are—End of the Sunday-School Convention—The Officers.

The afternoon session of the Union County Sunday-school Convention was largely attended by Sunday-school workers from all parts of the county.

The opening exercises were in charge of Rev. W. A. L. Jett, pastor of the Reformed Episcopal church of Murray Hill. Miss Jessie Utter, the organist, presided, and D. E. Titsworth led the singing.

Two branches of Sunday-school work was then reported by the County Secretary, Rev. C. S. Converse, of Union. He showed that the county was doing much in Sunday-school work, that there was an increase of interest in all of the departments and that the financial outlook was better. The different schools appeared to be waking up to the importance of the work and the future prospect was gratifying. Of course, there were drawbacks and in some localities and much more could be accomplished, which he hoped would be.

Next came the report of the State Secretary, Rev. E. M. Fergusson. As a speaker Mr. Fergusson is exceedingly interesting. He told those present just what they wanted to know, that is, what is being done throughout the State and he told them even more, what they ought to do. He said that New Jersey stood second to none in the State in Sunday-school work, and other States throughout the Union were seeking points from this State. New Jersey, he also said, had raised $18,756 among one hundred and one schools during the past year. He strongly advised schools giving two per cent toward the State work, and said that $300 was needed from this county this year, and he urged that the work be done this year along more definite lines.

Following this Mrs. Ella D. Pettit, conducted a conference on the subject of primary unions. This work has become a great factor in New Jersey Sunday-schools, and is now being recognized as such.

Miss Nettie Beeching, of Washingtonville, gave a thoroughly interesting talk on the formation of the Plainfield Union, which is now six weeks old and doing efficient work.

Mrs. Powlison, Mrs. Harold Serrell and Miss May Howlett each told in a few words the great benefit the union had been to them.

A large number present promised to go home and at once organize a union.

Perhaps the most interesting and novel portion of the programme was the illustrated talk given by Miss Julia Dimock, of Elizabeth, on "Little Children of Other Lands."

Miss Dimock used a blackboard and sand map. Her talk was chiefly along the lines of foreign missions. In the use of the sand map she illustrated the life of Christ from his birth to the resurrection, in an intensely interesting manner. Minature models of children were shown and bright, short stories were told of each. A small ship was also exhibited upon which were placed flags of all nations. The talk throughout was one of great profit.

State Secretary Rev. E. M. Ferguson followed with a helpful talk on the "Intermediate Department," after which Rev. E. B. Cobb, D. D., pastor of the Second Presbyterian church, of Elizabeth, conducted a consecration service, which closed the afternoon session.

Vice-President, Wm. D. Porter, of Summit, presided at the evening session which was called to order at 7:30. Rev. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of the Trinity Reformed church, had charge of the devotional exercises, which were given twenty minutes. The church choir assisted in the service. Rev. C. S. Converse, chairman of the nominating committee, then presented the following list of officers which were chosen to serve the Association for the coming year: President, Rev. J.A. Owen, Elizabeth; Vice-Presidents, Wm. D. Porter, Summit; D. E. Titsworth, Plainfield; Corresponding Secretary and Treasurer, Rev. C. S. Converse, Union; Recording Secretary; R. W. Woodward, Elizabeth; Member of State Executive Committee, W. D. Murray, Plainfield. Executive Committee, John M. Dudley, Elizabeth; Rev. W. A. L. Jett, Murray Hill; James H. Durand, Rahway; Joseph G. Coleman, Elizabeth; Rev. Wm. Hoppaugh, Springfield; Edward N. Brown, Westfield.

The treasurer, Rev. C. S. Converse, reported that there was a balance of $168.56 in the treasury, and George . Cornwall, chairman of the Enrollment Committee, stated that there were one hundred and forty-nine delegates present.

In the absence of Rev. William Hoppaugh, of Springfield, R. W. Woodword took charge of the "Question Box." Many of the delegates sent in questions regarding different branches of Sunday-school work and Mr. Woodword in an able manner answered the queries in the ten minutes alloted to the subject.

Rev. H. C. Cronin, pastor of the Third Presbyterian church of Jersey City, was introduced and made the address of the evening. His subject was "Importance of the Sunday-school to the Church and State." In part, he spoke as follows: The future of our State rests entirely on what our boys and girls make it.

Just now there is a considerable amount of earnestness shown on account of election. You come in contact with a Republican and he will tell you how his party is going to save the State. You meet a Democrat and he will tell you that unless his party is retained in office the State will go to the dogs. The Prohibitionist tells you that if his party gets the control everything will come out all right.

The fact is the desired result will come through neither of the three parties. There are lots of good things told voters before election that never mature after. It's all right when office is at stake. Let me train the children of the people and I care not what your laws are. Children are like clay ready to receive the impression we make on them. Teaching in a Sunday-school is no small thing, as some people think it is. Every good thing this country has today has come through Sunday-school politics. Train your children for Jesus Christ, and it will affect the whole country.

When I was living in the west I secured an annual pass on a railroad simply because I intended organizing Sunday-schools along the road, which was a desirable thing for the company. People will not live long in localities where there are no churches or Sunday-schools. It has been said that Ingersoll objects seriously to the use of the Bible. Why doesn't he go where there is no Bible. The best town in the world is the one where the Bible is freely used. The spirit of Plymouth Rock has placed America where she is today, not her natural beauty or cultured people.

More than half of the boys and girls of New Jersey are not in Sunday-school, and 11,000,000 of them in the United States are the same way. Satan has more boys and girls in his school than the Lord. There is a place in Jersey City where I would not let my daughter go for all the money in the Jersey City banks put together, because there is no religious observance and the Bible is never seen there. Shall we let our boys sow their wild oats and have a good time and then at the age of thirty get up a big revival for the purpose of seeking him and bringing him into the fold, or shall we train him in youth and carefully guard him? This question I leave for you mothers to decide.

The meeting was then brought to a close by the singing of a hymn and the pronouncing of the benediction.

The invitation from the Westfield Congregational church, extended by Edward N. Brown, was accepted and the convention will meet at that place next year.

The following will be of interest, showing the condition of the Plainfield Sunday-schools in the aggregate for the past year:

Number of schools, 18; officers and teachers, 424; scholars, 3,764; average attendance, 2,471; united with church, 153; benevolent contributions, $2,462.32; raised for County and State work, $35.83; total contributed for all purposes, $4,552.70.

In the county there are 17,218 scholare and 8,162 officers and teachers. $18,756.08 has been contributed for all purposes.

MRS. HALL ON SCHOOL SUFFRAGE.

A Paper Read at the State Federation of Women's Clubs.

Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, of this city, talked on the topic of "School Suffrage" at the annual meeting of the State Federation of Women's Clubs at Newark Thursday, and handled it in a manner that proved beyond dispute the wisdom of the choice which gave it to her. After reciting the history of the Suffrage act of 1887, which permitted women to vote at school elections, and was afterward declared unconstitutional, Mrs. Hall stated that in her opinion women were not only qualified, but entitled to vote for measures in which they were so greatly interested. A petition to re-establish the right of suffrage was presented to the last Legislature, and through the efforts of a hard-working coterie of noble women the tardy law-makers passed it almost at the hour when adjournment was taken. Similar efforts would be in order at the next meeting of the Legislature, and when the question is finally presented to the people for ratification the women of New Jersey should exert all their influence to secure its final adoption.

Mr. Williams Declines to Run.

Samuel Williams, the Elizabeth nominee on the Democratic Assembly ticket named at Wednesday's convention, positively declined yesterday to accept the honor, his business preventing him from entering politics.

The committee met last night and it was said had decided on James E. Febrey to fill the vacancy.

TICKLED THEIR RISIBILITIES.

HOPE CHAPEL PEOPLE ENTERTAINED BY A FUNNY MAN.

Emil Closs Was the Principal Entertainer, Though Several Local Ones Added Much to the Pleasure of the Evening.

Hope chapel was filled with an enthusiastic audience last Friday who turned out to hear Emil Closs, in his humorous selections, and such home talent as was present. The crowd came to laugh and they did laugh until their sides ached. Closs' great specialty is pantomime, and some of his representations took the house by storm.

The programme opened with a piano solo by Miss Firstbrook, after which Rev. Mr. Newell made a few remarks on the Young Men's League and the entertainer that was to come. Then Mr. Closs was introduced and kept his hearers in roars of laughter. Interspersed between his different selections were a violin solo by Hugh Gray, piano solos by Miss Helen Hall, a piccolo solo by Thomas Randall, vocal solos by Mrs. W. A. Westphal, and a recitation by George Leighs. The numbers were all excellently rendered and called forth loud applause.

The last of the first part consisted of a few remarks by Councilman W. A. Westphal which, on the programme, was headed "Comicalities." His sayings were bright and witty and some of his original jokes caused much laughter and applause. He made a few witty remarks about local characters and then came to the old subject of the mother-in-law. Politics and finances were spoken of and he ended with a rediculous story of a trip through France.

The entertainment was very successful from every point of view and the promoters estimate a clear profit of about $50. The energetic committee that arranged the programme, consisted of Arthur Leland, George E. Firstbrook, Benjamin E. Eddy.

BOWLING LEAGUE FORMED.

Players Along the Jersey Central to Contest for a Trophy.

The bowlers from along the line of the New Jersey Central Railroad met at Elizabeth last evening and the Central Journal Bowling League was organized. The clubs that were represented last evening were the Elizabeth Athletic Club, New Jersey Athletic Club, Cranford Country Club, and the Crescent Wheelmen, of this city. The Westfield Athletic Club may join before the games begin.

The tournament is for the trophy given by the Elizabeth Journal; the league itself will give several prizes for team and individual playing.

The following officers were elected: President, Charles Russ, of Elizabeth Athletic Club; Secretary and Treasurer, E. J. Darvell, of New Jersey Athletic Club.

Samuel P. T. Wilbur was present at the meeting as the representative of the Crescent Wheelmen.

Play will begin about the middle of November and each club will contest four games with each of their opponents, two at home and two abroad.

AN IMPORTANT DECISION.

Judge Rice Decides an Important Point Raised By Judge Coddington.

By a decision made by Judge Rice at New Brunswick Tuesday on a point raised by Judge W. A. Coddington, of this city, an important change has been made in the usual method of filing an appeal from a justice's court.

The case of W. H. Cole against Charles W. Johnson came up before Judge Rice, and W. A. Coddington moved to dismiss the appeal as the appeal bond and affidavit were not filed on the same day. He was opposed by C. T. Cowenhoven and Geo. W. DeMeza. The Judge denied the motion and gave a lengthy opinion in which he stated that the statute provided that before the appeal is granted the bond and affidavit must both be filed, but there are no requirements, as it was formerly, that they should both be filed on the same day.

Went On a Raid.

The famous cow belonging to Mrs. John Burke, of Plainfield avenue, broke loose Tuesday evening after a long period of captivity. She trampled down shrubbery and flowers and was finally seen by Officer Totten on her way up the steps of a West Seventh street residence after the plants on the piazza. Totten arrested her and placed her in a vacant lot opposite for safe keeping. Her owner took her home yesterday.

Was It Three Cents?

The News, with its characteristic disregard for truth, stated in its account of the Second ward Democratic primary Monday evening, that a collection of thirteen cents was taken up for Janitor Hope. At the time Mr. Hope remarked that the Republicans, though over twice in numbers, gave ten cents less, which would be, according to The News, the enormous amount of three cents.

PUNCHED ANNIE'S JAW.

Then Her Escort Objected and Carter Started to Lick Him.

The promoters of the dance of the Victor Wheelmen at T. A. B. Hall last evening almost had a fight on their hands, but they acted with promptness and fired the offending colored man out doors, when Officer Vanderweg saw that he had a lodging place for the night. Everyone that saw the scrap had a different story to tell, but the one told by those who took part was that Walter Carter and Annie Lee had words over something and Carter struck Annie in the jaw so that, as she told Sergeant Kiely this morning, she knew it. George Potter was with her and told Carter not to strike her, so Carter punched him and a lively fracas followed. Then Captain Israel Jones of the club appeared on the scene with his assistants and assisted them to the door.

UNIVERSITY EXTENSION.

Thoughtful People Consider Arranging a Series of Lectures.

The public meeting in the parish house of the Grace P. E. church last evening, called to consider the University Extension lectures, was held and the subject discussed. The general opinion was in favor of a course of lectures by Prof. Riggs, of Rutgers College, open to the public and to which all the public should be invited with only a small charge for admission. Another meeting will be held Tuesday evening.

It may not be generally known what University extension is. Following the examples set by the Universities of England, Rutgers' college, New Brunswick, inaugurated a similar system which has been gradually extended until now there are no less than thirty courses of lectures which the professors are prepared to deliver in any city in which even a few appreciative people can be found. These lectures are upon living questions that cannot fail to interest thoughtful persons.

THE ASSEMBLIES.

Names of the Ten Patronesses Who Will Add Grace and Dignity.

The list of patronesses for the assemblies this winter has been increased in number to ten, and is given below as announced today. The invitations are not as yet sent out, but will be issued very soon.

The first dance of the series will take place on December 16th and the second, as usual, will be on New Year's night. The other two dates are not yet definitely settled.

The following ladies will serve as patronesses for this season: Mrs. Robert L. Burnett, Mrs. Joseph W. Reinhart, Mrs. William L. Saunders, Mrs. Lewis G. Timpson, Mrs. Marion S. Ackerman, Mrs. Orville T. Waring, Mrs. Frederick H. Wills, Mrs. James T. Scott, Mrs. William J. Roome and Mrs. Albert H. Atterbury.

There will be only two weeks more of the big show at Madison Square Garden, where the food products, art exhibits and a thousand other things are to be seen from 10:30 in the morning until 10:30 at night, at 25 cents admission. Cooking lectures by Mrs. Sarah Tyson Rorer, are given in the Concert Hall every afternoon at 3 o'clock. There is music by a full band in the main hall, afternoon and evening. No exhibition with so much in it has been given in New York, for several years, and every exhibitor is willing to give something to the visitor.

Funeral of J. A. Briant.

The funeral services of J. A. Briant were held at his late residence, 417 West Fifth street, and were largely attended. The services were conducted by Rev. C. L. A quartette, composed of Miss M. G. Morse, Miss E. A. Whiting, Horace J. Martin and B. T. Barnes, rendered several selections.

Extension of Time Granted.

An extension of time for two weeks has been given to the executors of the estate of Mme. They have now had the matter in hand nearly two years.

THE DEMOCRATS NOMINATE.

THE COUNTY CONVENTION HELD AT ELIZABETH WEDNESDAY.

A Strong Ticket Named—The Delegates Enthusiastic and Harmonious—Synopsis of the Resolutions Offered and Adopted.

The Democratic county convention held at Elizabeth Wednesday was enthusiastic one. The organization was given in The Press of yesterday. Ex-Senator Marsh in assuming the chair said he did not propose to abuse Republicans or say of them, as their campaign speakers had said of Democrats, that one-third of them were either thieves or corruptionists. He was satisfied from the intelligent faces before him that Democrats were not quite as bad as painted by their political enemies. He reminded the convention that its duty was to nominate men whose record it would have no need to blush for. If this were done then Union county would be found in November where it formerly belonged—in the Democratic fold.

Jas. E. Martine, of Plainfield, chairman of the Resolutions Committee, presented the resolutions, which were unanimously adopted. They indorsed the Democratic principles, President Cleveland and Candidate McGill. The resolutions went on:

We arraign the Republican party of this State as having hampered by every means in its power the possibility of casting the full Democratic vote, through the repeal of the Werts law, and the enactment of a personal registration law.

We denounce the unnecessarily burdensome and annoying naturalization law, designed to hamper just naturalization.

We urge a pure and an unbiased ballot and the largest measure of personal liberty to the citizen consistent with good goverment.

We commend the Democratic minority of the last Legislature for its efforts in resisting the aggressions of the corporations that have assumed control of the Republican organization in New Jersey.

We denounce and condemn the effort of the Republican legislators to drag the judiciary of New Jersey through the mire of party politics as a menace to the orderly administration of justice.

We favor the enactment of legislation that will prove beneficial to the labor interests of the State, and point with pride to the record of the Democratic party on the question of enacting the laws demanded by organized labor, and pledge the support of the nominees of this convention to all such laws.

City Clerk Manning nominated ex-School Commissioner Samuel Williams, of Elizabeth, for Assemblyman; ex-Assemblyman Kelly nominated School Commissioner William D. Wolfeskeil, Elizabeth; W. J. Lansley nominated J. E. Febrey, of Elizabeth. Dr. Silvers, on behalf of Rahway's entire delegation, nominated Nathan E. Mead, jr., of that city. Westfield nominated John B. Green. The other townships and Plainfield made no nomination.

On motion of ex-City Attorney Connolly, of Elizabeth, the nominations of Samuel Williams, Nathan E. Mead and John B. Green were made unanimous.

Dr. Thomas E. Dolan, of Elizabeth, received the unanimous vote of the convention for Coroner.

The secretaries of the convention were City Clerk Manning, of Elizabeth, and Charles M. Carman, of Summit.

James E. Martine, of this city, made an address that was enthusiastically received. Mr. Martine commenced his address by saying that "the same old gang," and he was glad to be one of them, had nominated a grand patriot and a peerless statesman as their standard-bearer. That Alexander T. McGill would be elected Governor every fair-minded citizen must admit. The Republican candidate for Governor, John W. Griggs, was scored in a masterly manner for his connections with the race tracks, and his record while a paid servant of the people from Passaic county in the Legislature was shown not to be altogether in his favor.

Mr. Martine's speech was a spirited one.

This is a Fact.

It is surprising where all the good things come from. Twice a week Edsall fills his entire ad with a new list of goods, each list seeming more wonderful in its money-saving qualities than its predecessor. This house is worthy of the public's hearty support, as it is doing much for the advancement of public interest by keeping Plainfield among the first ranks as a business town.

Someone Borrowed It.

The police found a wheel lying in the middle of East Fourth street Friday evening and took it to the station house. Saturday evening Morgan Bird, of Park avenue, identified it and said that he had left it out and someone had probably borrowed it and deserted it in the middle of the street.

You Can Hunt Tomorrow.

Some Plainfield people took exception at the opinion of Judge W. A. Coddington on the game laws which was published in The Daily Press, but Judge Coddington received word this morning from the State game officers that his opinion was entirely correct.

COUNTY SUNDAY-SCHOOL ASSOCIATION IN SESSION TODAY.

Field Secretary Says There Is as Much Difference Between Temperance and Intemperance as Heaven and Hoboken.

The fifteenth annual convention of the Union County Sunday-school Association was called to order Friday morning at 10:30 in the Seventh-Day Baptist church by President Rev. J. A. Owens, of Elizabeth.

Fifteen minutes was then devoted to devotional exercises, conducted by Secretary J. H. Manning of the Y. M. C. A. Miss Carrie Dewey presided at the organ and D. E. Titsworth acted as precentor.

Following the devotional exercises Dr. Lewis, on behalf of the church and the Plainfield members, gave all a hearty welcome. The response was given by the president, who thanked the church on behalf of the association for its hospitality.

A conference on "Advance Movements in Our County" was then conducted by the president. Reports from various in the county gave evidence of much being done along the lines of Sunday-school work. At this point E. E. Anthony, of this city, was chosen secretary pro tem.

A most admirable address was then given by Rev. C. H. Mead, Field Secretary of the National Temperance Society, on the subject of "Temperance in the Sunday-school." Among other things he said that the best way to save a boy was not to ruin him, and the best way to save a man was not to knock him down.

The church must be alert to its duty in this work. There is as much difference between temperance and intemperance as there is between Heaven and Hoboken. The saloon is after your boy and the church and Sunday-school should be after him, too. In Syracuse one day 1,800 men were counted in five hours going into three saloons. This calls for concerted action on our part.

The reports of township secretaries was then called for, but out of thirteen secretaries only one responded, R. P. Greaves, of Westfield. The president then announced the following committees:

On Nominations—C. Converse, Union; W. Porter, Summit; D. E. Tisworth.

On Resolutions—Dr. Lewis, Plainfield; M. Clark, J. L. Clayton, Westfield.

On Secretaries Reports—R. P. Greaves, Edward V. Brown, Westfield; E. E. Anthony, Plainfield.

On Enrollment—George R. Cornwell, Miss Josephine Petrie, Plainfield.

A recess was then taken till two o'clock, for lunch.

WHERE SWEETS WILL BE SOLD.

But Best of All They Will be Served by Sweet Girls.

The ice-cream and soda water booth at the coming Kirmess for the benefit of Muhlenberg Hospital bids fair to be one of the most attractive of the many that are being planned by the ladies in charge of the affair. Mrs. Lapsley will be in charge of the booth, with Miss Edith Allen as an able assistant, and these two ladies have been able through the generosity of H. P. Reynolds and Caterer Stephenson to devise a plan by which an ample supply of good things in the soda and ice-cream line will be secured without running the chance of overstocking the booth. The prices will be moderate and the profits sure. Mrs. Lapsley and Miss Allen will be assisted by a large corps of young girls so that no one will have to wait long for his or her sweets.

White, $1,800; Andrew Lutkins et ux. to Alice Sutphen, $200; James F. Hubbard et ux. to Mary Wyckoff, $250; Justus H. Cooley et ux. to Horace Holcombe, $450.

Nominated a Coroner Over Again.

Union county Republicans blundered at their county convention when they nominated Dr. Charles B. Holmes, of Rahway, for Coroner. Dr. Holmes already held that office. He was elected last year, and his term does not expire for two years. The vacancy on the ticket will likely be filled by the appointment of Dr. F. M. Tiernan, of Roselle, who was Dr. Holmes's competitor at the convention.

Even Stole the Pillow.

While Warren P. Smalley and his family were asleep in their home at Piscatawaytown Wednesday night, burglars forced an entrance into the house and stole a quantity of jewelry. Mr. Smalley had a pair of trousers folded up and was using them for a pillow. They were taken from under his head by the robbers.

A BUSINESS SECRET.

HOW A CITY MERCHANT COMES ON "BARGAIN DAY."

Art of Cutting Prices So as to Draw Big Crowds and Make Big Profits—Hints to Storekeepers That Patrons Will Read With Interest.

The writer of this article recently made a trip from one city to another. The first city was one of what we call moderate enterprise. The merchants made no particular boast of setting the world afire, but were all supposed to be doing a fair amount of business at a good living profit. The city to which he went was one of unusual size, which has the reputation of being one of the most enterprising in the country. The stores have grown to enormous proportions and have the name the world over of being the cheapest and most liberal of any others. Yet when the writer came to the larger city and began to look into the inside workings of business and noticed the different prices at which goods were sold he found that, although the stores had the name of wonderful bargain givers and were known everywhere by the name of great price cutters, still, taking the stocks as a whole, these stores in the larger cities in nearly every instance sold goods at a higher price than they were sold in the smaller towns, and almost without exception the gross profits which the merchants made on the goods were from 15 to 25 per cent higher than the merchants in the smaller city could get. This set the writer to wondering how it was that these large stores should have the name everywhere for enterprise and low prices, while the stores in the smaller city, which sold the cheaper, were as a rule called high priced and old fogy.

As the subject was investigated a little more closely, however, he began to notice that there were some instances in which these large stores sold goods wonderfully cheap, much cheaper, in fact, than the goods could be even manufactured at. For instance, in one case, a certain store advertised the well known fiber chamois dress lining, which usually sells at 25 and 35 cents a yard, for 8 cents. These goods cost a great deal more than this selling price, and what could be the object in taking so popular an article and cutting it down with one blow to one-third and perhaps one-fourth of what it sells for in many stores? The writer thought he would see what information could be gained on the subject.

On inquiring of the manager how the business was he replied that it was splendid. "We are offering the people some bargains today which they cannot resist." "But," the writer asked, "how can you afford to sell these goods which you advertise at so much less than cost?" The reply was: "Oh, that is only done to bring the people in the store. They will not come unless there is some unusual inducement held out to them, but when they do come they buy enough goods at a regular profit to more than make up for the loss which we sustain on the linings."

A further careful examination into the matter and visits to several other stores where sales were being conducted in a similar manner showed that these larger stores drew almost their entire trade through holding out such inducements to the people. The merchants in this larger city make a totally different practice of price cutting from the merchants in the smaller place. The merchants in the latter city sell their goods all around at a reasonably cheap price. They make no very great profit on any line of goods and gain no particular reputation for selling cheaply, for the people naturally expect that everything should be at a moderately low price, and they are never startled by having any very remarkable bargain offered them. Just the opposite to this, the stores in the larger city make a good round profit on nearly everything they sell except those articles which they hold out as special inducements to buyers.

The people of this city are kept in constant excitement on account of the real sensations which these stores make week after week. They will select some well known and staple article and sell it for probably a half or a third of what it usually costs to make it. On the sales of these goods they, of course, calculate to lose a considerable sum, but they gain the attendance of enormous crowds at their store, and the liberal profits which they make on other goods far more than compensate for the loss on the bait which they hold out to the public. The thought, therefore, presented itself to the mind of the writer as to whether the small city was not making a mistake in its methods of doing business.

The larger city is day after day and year after year gaining a greater reputation as a business center simply because there is not a day in which some store is not practically giving something away to the public. These larger stores handle possibly from 10,000 to 50,000 different objects. Out of this whole number of objects there will be possibly from 10 to 20 which are sold at a loss, but these are at such a manifest loss the people are really surprised and are so pleased at getting these things cheap they overlook the fact that they are more than making up for the loss on other goods which they purchase. This is what may be called progressive merchandising. In the smaller town, if a merchant was getting up a sale of ladies' hosiery, and had, say, three or four different lines which he wished to mark down, he would probably mark each line with a 10 or 15 per cent reduction all around. This reduction, while it would make the goods all very cheap, would probably only draw a few buyers who were really in need of the goods and who knew the real value of the qualities offered. If the same sale was gotten up in the larger city which we have mentioned, the store would probably make only a very slight if any reduction on the majority of ladies' hosiery, but would take one kind and cut the price squarely in two, or perhaps even make it one-third of the usual selling price. For instance, if one line consisted of black hosiery which regularly sold for 35 cents a pair, it is very probable that the store would mark these down to 10 or 15 cents a pair, even though they may have cost as much as $8 a dozen. This kind of a reduction would create some excitement and bring a crowd of people to the store, and while the loss on the one article might be quite heavy the sales of the other goods at the regular price would make the average loss on the whole very much less than would be the case where the store in the smaller city made an all around reduction in price.—Dry Goods Chronicle.

GRIGGS ON WA[redacted]ER

The Record of the Man Who Says That He Is In Favor of Protecting the People From the Water Syndicates.

HE VOTED TO TAKE THE POWER FROM THE PEOPLE AND GIVE IT TO MUNICIPAL BOARDS.

A Bill That Will Prove a Burden to Every Municipality In New Jersey Put Through the Senate Notwithstanding the Protest of the Counties Most Deeply Interested. Why Jersey City Is Forced to Pay $125,000 Extra Each Year — Senator Griggs Voted to Postpone Indefinitely a Bill to Vest Control of the Watersheds of the State In the People.

Having read the plank in the Democratic platform on the water question, Senator Griggs announced that he was in full sympathy with the proposition that the watershed of New Jersey should be placed under the control of the state and not confiscated by private water companies. It must have hurt the feelings of Mr Hobart when he read this declaration, but the recollection of the record of his candidate probably dissipated any fears that John W. would deal doubly with the "vested interests" of Garret A. The head center of the water monopolists probably soothed himself with reasoning that if Mr. Griggs could, on his record, insist that he was in favor of equal taxation, against bookmaking on horseraces and an all night thinker in favor of organized labor, he could be trusted to see that there was not any loosening of the Hobart grip on the parched or polluted throats of New Jersey's municipalities. And Mr. Hobart is correct. The water companies of the state never had a better friend than Senator Griggs. His record on the water question shows that it was his desire to place the cities of the state at the mercy of those corporations.

In 1886 there was introduced in the senate a bill known as No. 78. It was introduced by Senator Fish, who represented Essex county. It was entitled "An act to provide the people of the state of New Jersey a supply of good and wholesome water for domestic and other purposes and to keep the watershed and the flow of water into, through and over the state forever under control of the same." The bill was a long one, but the first section expresses the object, the others being devoted to accomplishment. It reads:

1. Be it enacted by the senate and general assembly of the state of New Jersey that the watershed of this state, the flow of water into and over the same, as far as the same is necessary to provide the people of this state a supply of water for domestic purposes, shall be under the control of this state, any law, charter or right claimed by any public or private corporation to the contrary notwithstanding, and all acts or parts of acts inconsistent with this act be and the same are hereby repealed.

The bill was referred to the senate committee on municipal corporations, and as Mr. Fish was a member of the committee he managed to have the bill reported, but it was opposed by Senator Griggs, and two months after its introduction he won his fight, and the bill was indefinitely postponed. The motion to indefinitely postpone was a favorite one with Senator Griggs. It will be seen that the record of Senator Griggs does not agree with his pretense that he is in favor of preserving the watersheds for the benefit of the people. The record will be found on pages 138, 624 and 711 of the senate journal of 1886.

The record of 1886 was bad enough, but it was in 1888 that Senator Griggs rendered his most signal service to the water companies. It was then that he forged the chains that are today being placed on Jersey City and that will soon bind every municipality in the state. It was by the untiring efforts of Senator Griggs that the act under which an attempt is being made to extort $8,000,000 from Jersey City was placed on the statute book. That act will be found on page 356 of the laws of 1888. In order to comprehend its iniquity it would be necessary to refer to only one of its features. It gives the board having charge of the water department in any city or town of the state absolute, unrestricted power to enter into a contract for water. There is not a single restriction as to price, quality of water or anything else.

In the charter of every city of the state, in every general law passed for municipalities since 1875, there are restrictions directing competition when any considerable amount of public money is to be expended, but these are omitted from the act of 1888, which is the baldest delegation of power over given to a municipal body. Under it a municipal board is bound by neither rule nor reason, and if this act shall be eventually upheld by the courts the water department of Jersey City can and probably will bankrupt that city, while every municipality in the state will be at the mercy of combinations between its officials and water syndicates.

Now let us see who called for the act of 1888. Before its passage any city could contract for a supply of water under a law which will be found on page 654 of the supplement to the revised laws of New Jersey. There was a proviso in the law which did not suit the water companies. It read: "Provided, however, and it is expressly enacted, that no such agreement and contract shall be made for a period longer than ten years in any one term, AND THAT THE AMOUNT OF PAYMENT IN SUCH CONTRACT AGREED TO BE MADE IN ANY YEAR SHALL NOT EXCEED A SUM EQUAL TO ONE DOLLAR FOR EACH INHABITANT OF SUCH MUNICIPAL CORPORATION, UNLESS THE PROPOSITION BE APPROVED BY A MAJORITY OF THE LEGAL VOTERS IN SUCH MUNICIPAL CORPORATION AT AN ANNUAL OR SPECIAL ELECTION, TO WHICH THE SAME SHALL BE SUBMITTED."

THE OBJECT OF THE ACT OF 1888 WAS TO GET RID OF THIS PROVISO. Mr. Hobart was contemplating a philanthropic movement in the interest of the people of Jersey City and Newark particularly and other municipalities generally, and he did not want the people to bother with his plans. Under the law as it stood prior to the appearance of Senator Griggs' "fine Italian hand" the consumers of Jersey City could have been taxed only at the rate of $1 per head for a new supply of water unless they voted for a greater burden. So on every other municipality in the state. The population of Jersey City is now about 170,000. The present consumption of water there in 21,000,000 gallons per day. At $1 for each inhabitant, the cost of a new supply, based on this year's consumption, would have been, at the maximum figure, $170,000. This would have been the limit. Mr. Griggs, who never talks to Mr. Hobart on the water question, removed that limit, and the contract recently awarded by the "reform" government of Jersey City provides that the city shall pay for 21,000,000 gallons at the rate of $39 per million. Calculated on the basis of this year's consumption, the amount to be paid to the water company will be $298,935 as against $170,000, the highest amount payable before Mr. Griggs forced the price upward. In other words, Senator Griggs' action has imposed an additional burden of over $125,000 a year on the people of Jersey City. But Mr. Griggs insists that the people of that city should vote for him because Barney Ford paid too much for furniture.

The cause of this municipality is the cause of every city and town in the state. Under the law as it existed prior to 1888 Jersey City could make a contract for a supply of 21,000,000 gallons of water daily and have paid for the same not over $170,000 annually. As the water syndicates have controlled legislation for years it goes without saying that they consented to the restriction of $1 per head. But they had grown greedier in 1888. Now, who told Senator Griggs that the maximum price fixed in the old law was not enough? Before the cases now in the supreme court are finished it will be shown that a maximum of $1 for each inhabitant is ample compensation. Mr. Griggs says that he is not interested in the water companies. Yet he advocated a bill having the single purpose of forcing an immense sum of money from Newark and Jersey City and other municipalities. The people of Essex county did not want the bill. It was opposed by their senator, Mr. Martin. The people of Hudson county did not want the bill. It was opposed by their senator, Mr. Edwards. It was not desired by any community in Passaic county. Why, then, did Senator Griggs advocate that bill in 1888 and kill every amendment offered for the protection of the people? The rate of $1 per inhabitant was sufficient, for it was to cover only supply, and not distribution. Under the contracts authorized the cost of distribution falls on the municipalities. Did Senator Griggs vote for the bill because the water companies would not supply water at that rate? The old law provided for such a contingency. If the people of any municipality could not obtain water within that limit, the old law provided that they could vote for a higher rate. Why did Senator Griggs vote that the power to advance the price should be taken from the people and vested in "any municipal board?" At a recent taking of testimony in Jersey City, Mayor Wanser admitted that he was not and never had been a taxpayer in Jersey City. Why was the power to bankrupt that city taken from the people and reposed in an official who does not contribute a penny of its taxes? Was Senator Griggs a better judge of what was necessary in Essex and Hudson counties than Senators Martin and Edwards?

The bill was before the senate on the 28th of March, 1888. Senator Werts offered an amendment providing that the "amount of payment to be made under or by virtue of any such contract or agreement in any one year by any municipal corporation shall not exceed one-half per cent upon the assessed value of real and personal property liable to taxation in such municipality unless the proposition be approved by a majority of legal voters of each municipality." Senators Werts, Edwards and Martin advocated this amendment. It was opposed by Senator Griggs and was killed. Desiring to save the small municipalities, Senator Werts offered a further amendment "that this act shall not apply to any incorporated town or city having a population of less than 7,500 inhabitants." Mr. Griggs successfully spoke and voted against this amendment. The bill was fought at every step by Senators Werts, Edwards and Martin. They argued that the people should be allowed to vote on the contract. Mr. Griggs argued to the contrary and with the aid of Hobart & Co. forced the bill through the senate. The record of his vote will be found in the senate journal of 1888 on the pages headed "March 28, 1888."

In the face of this record Mr Griggs has the effrontery to tell the people of New Jersey that he is in favor of protecting them from the water syndicates who are today supplying the funds to conduct his campaign.

AS A STATE SENATOR MR. GRIGGS VOTED TO EXEMPT ONE HUNDRED MILLION DOLLARS OF RAILROAD PROPERTY FROM TAXATION. HE VOTED TO PLACE THE MUNICIPALITIES OF THE STATE IN THE GRASP OF THE WATER SYNDICATE. WHAT WOULD HE DO IF HE SHOULD BE ELECTED GOVERNOR?

LET THE PEOPLE REMEMBER.

Facts For Voters to Think About on the Fifth Day of November.

Let the people remember that while the Republican speakers are crying about the expense of the state government under Democratic rule the cost of running that government during the present year is the highest in the history of the state.

Let the people of New Jersey remember that the Democratic candidate for governor has been chancellor of the state over 11 years and is therefore free from all entangling alliances.

Let the people remember that the Republican legislature of 1895 passed a bill to take the power of appointing the common pleas judges from the governor and make these offices prizes of caucus and canvass.

Let the Democrats of New Jersey remember that Mr. Griggs is and always has been a bitter partisan. Let them remember the bitterness with which he has assailed every Democratic candidate for president or governor. Let them remember how he attacked Tilden, Hancock and Cleveland. Let them remember his bitter slurs against General McClellan when he was our candidate for governor.

Let the people remember that the Republicans promised to give Jersey City good government. Let them remember that those promises have not been kept. Let them remember that it costs more money to run the government of Jersey City this year than ever before in the history of that municipality, while the streets are uncleaned, the debt increasing, the atmosphere of the city hall redolent with "jobs" that have never been equaled in that misgoverned town. Let them look at the $1,000,000 city hall, which is a disgrace to the city, and remember that the cornerstone of the city hall was laid by the Republican "reform mayor." Let them listen to the cries of the outraged property owners, as they try to escape from the clutches of the water syndicates, with whom the city officers are scheming to force an $8,000,000 contract upon the city. This is the kind of "reform" the people of Jersey City have been treated to. Do the people of the state want a dose of the same sort?

Let the people remember that Chancellor McGill is the son of Professor McGill, who was loved by all who knew him as a professor in the Theological seminary of Princeton college.

Let the people remember that the "ballot box stuffers," against whom Mr. Griggs is crying out, were indicted by a Democratic grand jury, convicted by Democratic petit jurors, and that they were sentenced by a Democratic court, after being prosecuted by a Democratic district attorney. Then let the people recall the "Star Route" trials.

RATHER SLOW, WASN'T HE?

Mr. Griggs is fond of claiming. His age interferes with the advancement of any claim that he wrote the Declaration of Independence. But he is quite sure that he has always struggled for equal taxation in New Jersey. Let us see. Mr. Griggs was a member of the house of assembly in 1876. If he had any thoughts upon the subject of equal taxation, he forgot to utter them. Mr. Griggs was a member of the house of assembly in 1887. Again he overlooked the subject of taxing railroad and canal property. Mr. Griggs was a member of the state senate of 1888. The house of assembly passed a bill for equal taxation. Mr. Griggs killed it in the senate. In 1883 Mr. Griggs voted to limit the rate of taxation for municipal purposes on one-third of the railroad and canal property in the state to 1 per cent and to absolutely exempt the balance from all forms of municipal taxation, Mr. Griggs was a member of the senate in 1888, and he successfully fought an amendment to the tax laws providing that the property of corporations should be taxed at the same rates as the property of private owners. As an advocate of equal taxation, Assemblyman Griggs and Senator Griggs were not howling successes. After he left the legislature, the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad company recognized Mr. Griggs' pre-eminent ability and put his name on its pay roll. Mr. Griggs' record as an advocate of equal taxation seems on a par with his record as an opponent of race tracks. His opposition never reached the point where the "bookies" or the corporations would overlook him when they were searching for counsel. It is dawning upon the people of New Jersey that there is a very large element of humbug in the composition of Mr. Griggs.

SIMPLY A TRICK.

Senator Griggs insists that his election is necessary to correct evils which he charges upon Democratic legislatures. The Republican party has had absolute control of the legislature for two years. In New Jersey the same vote that will enact a bill will pass it over the governor's veto. If, then, there are any unfit laws on the statute books of this state, why did the Republicans not repeal them? If any legislation is needed, why was it not enacted? If Mr. Griggs is elected governor, what can he do that the Republican legislatures have left undone? The cry that a Republican governor is necessary to the enactment of laws is simply a trick to deceive those Republicans who are opposed to Mr. Griggs on his record.

The Body Identified.

The body of the man found near Somerville last Monday was this morning identified as Phillip Ryan, of East Orange. Some time ago he failed in business, left home in a despondent frame of mind and is supposed to have wandered to this isolated place and committed suicide. His body was identified by his wife and daughter, who will have it removed to their home for burial.

are doing all the business. Our stock is the largest, prices are the lowest, terms the easiest in the city. Just give it a passing thought that you can buy an antique oak bedroom suit, 8 pieces, for $15, $20, $25 and $30, including woven wire bed spring and a mixed mattress. No house in the city offers such inducements.

And then to think again that you can get tapestry Brussels carpet at 60, and 70 cents a yard, made and laid with paper, which is a saving of 10 cents a yard. Where is there a house in the city that will offer such bargains?

And then imagine and wonder how we can afford to give away a moquette rug or parlor table with a parlor suit for $20, $30, $40 or $50.

Some of our competitors say that our ads are too much sameness, and that this ad. is old. Well, we will admit it, but as long as it does the business and saves the people money we will continue to run it.

THE SON FOLLOWS FATHER.

DEATH OF ANDREW D. MELLICK, JR., WEDNESDAY MORNING.

Though an Invalid for Years His Mind Was Bright and Keen and He Gained a Wide Reputation in Literature.

Andrew D. Mellick, Jr., author of "The Story of an Old Farm" and of many brief historical brochures and newspaper articles, died at his residence on La Grande avenue about 11:20 o'clock Wednesday, aged fifty-one years. His illness ran over a period of about fifteen years, during twelve of which he was confined to an invalid's couch, and for about three months past he had not left his bed. It was during this period of invalidism that he prepared, wholly by dictation, the "Story" by which he is known in other lands than in America.

Mr. Mellick was born in New York city on October 23d, 1844, and was the second son and child of Andrew D. Mellick, Sr., of this place, who died in August last, aged eighty-four years. Of his eight children, Andrew D., Jr., was the second.

Early in life, the firm of A. D. Mellick Jr., & Brother, was formed and became the best known real-estate partnership operating in New Jersey. Their main office was in New York, but their development of real-estate was chiefly along the line of the Central Railroad.

After the panic of 1872, when business in land came to a sudden standstill, the firm dissolved and subsequently Andrew D. turned his attention to the law. He was admitted to the bar of New York, and became the manager of the real-estate and trust business of Coudert Brothers, lawyers, of 68 William street. This position he was filling at the time of an untoward accident, which made of him an invalid and compelled his withdrawal from active business life.

During the period from 1879 to 1880 he was an active member of the Third Brigade, First Division of the National Guard of the State of New York, and served as captain and major on the staff of Gen. J. M. Varian from 1872 to 1880.

He was in New Mexico in 1880 on business for the firm, inspecting a large tract of land near Las Vegas. While on a Comanche pony, the animal was violently thrown, by a misstep, and Mr. Mellick sustained injuries and a severe shock. Subsequently he was informed by his physician that he had the incurable spinal affection known as locomoter ataxia. And so it proved.

He went to Europe just previous to the accident and he made a second visit there in 1882. He returned at the latter date a confirmed invalid, unable to leave the house except as he was occasionally driven about in a carriage, without hope of final recovery.

Mr. Mellick contributed a large number of sketches of travel and historical notes to various newspapers, chiefly to The Evening Post, both previous and subsequent to his enforced retirement from business activities. About the year 1887 he turned his attention to some genealogical researches with a view to prepare a sketch of his German ancestor on his father's side, for private distribution. There was then no thought of any extensive literary work in connection therewith. But he found new materials abundant for a history of events in New Jersey preceding and during the Revolution, and there soon developed from his active and well-equipped mind a large volume which, when published in 1889, became at once recognized as the most facile, graceful and readable narrative of the events of which it treats ever published in his native State, and which secured high encomiums from British critics.

His treatment of the Hessians in the Revolutionary struggle was as creditable to his head and heart as to his family name, and the insight it gives into men and things, events and customs, of the pre-Revolutionary period in America led the Saturday Review of London to say: "We have had more than one good volume lately on life and manners in the last century in what are now the United States, but Mr. Mellick's 'Story of an Old Farm' is perhaps the most entertaining and instructive of all, as it is unquestionably the most exhaustive."

Every review, at home and abroad, paid tribute to the marvellous felicity of style and the great historical accuracy of the tale. It was a tale, because the foundation was a sketch, somewhat fanciful, of the emigration from Bendorf, on the Rhone, to New Jersey, of a few plain German folk in the middle of the Eighteenth Century, and of their homelife and surroundings in Bedminster, Somerset county, but thereby hung what was infinitely richer than the tale, a description of Colonial days, as faithful to fact as they are delightful to whoever loves to read a charming book.

Mr. Mellick's reading was extensive, his historical judgment true, and he was unremitting in ferreting out what other people would have given up in despair. Unable to write with his own hand a single word, after reading works by proxy, and trusting much to friends and relatives to pen down what his alert mind would dictate, it is astonishing how wide became his range of learning and how happy was his language.

At the time of his death, he had in preparation a history of Plainfield from the earliest times, and the first part of it relating to the Indian settlement was practically completed. The next part would have carried it to the close of the Revolution, and the third and last to the close of the Civil War.

Mr. Mellick was the Secretary of the Sons of the American Revolution in New Jersey, an energetic organization of which the Hon. John Whitehead, of Newark, is president. Of this society he was a most painstaking and efficient officer, although never able to attend a meeting.

The notice of date of his funeral will be announced hereafter.

PROF. RIGGS' LECTURE.

He Will Give an Interesting Talk on Constantinople.

One cannot always visit places of historic interest, but some people can, and among them are a few who have a knack of reproducing in words their travels and what they have seen. Such a person is Rev. James F. Riggs, professor of Greek and Latin at Rutgers College. Mr. Riggs was born in Constantinople and is thoroughly well versed and conversant with the place. Friday evening, November 8th, in Trinity Reformed church, Mr. Riggs will relate in his entertaining way all that's of interest about Constantinople. The lecture is under the auspices of the Ladies' Christian Work Society of the church, and those who attend will not be disappointed.

Appointed Auditor.

P. J. Ryan, ex-president of the City Council, has been appointed auditor by the Union County Court in the $300,000 attachment suit brought against Leonard Forbes Beckwith by Allan W. Evarts, receiver for the estate of Arthur Beckwith, deranged. Mr. Ryan will sell the five and one-half acres of land in Linden Township which party belongs to Leonard Beckwith, the absconding debtor, and will settle with the creditors, so far as the receipts from this sale will permit.

A Chair With a History.

Ex-Marshal William Pangborn, who was one of the judges of election at the first district in the borough occupied a chair that has a history. It was one of several made by the late William Squier many years ago, for the old railroad station on North avenue, and later was presented to Mr. Pangborn by Mrs. Squier. It is exceeding comfortable and the owner is very proud of it.

Accident Will Be Investigated.

County Physician O'Reilly has ordered an inquest for next Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock on the killing of Harry Vogel and Gustave Haefner, of Linden, who were run down by a train on the Pennsylvania railroad crossing last Thursday night. Dr. O'Reilly has investigated the accident and reached the conclusion that some one is to blame for the double fatality.

Building on Netherwood Heights.

Two fine residences are now in the process of construction on Nether-Heights. One is for J. C. Manning and the other for E. P. Rider. They are each valued at about $6,000, and contain all the modern improvements. The inside fittings are all of hardwood and both are built on the colonial style. Clum & Lancaster were the architects.

Riddle to Appear.

George Riddle, the greatest reader in the country, will entertain at the Y. M. C. A. hall on December 6th.

W. A. McGuire, a well known citizen of McKay, Ohio, is of the opinion that there is nothing as good for children troubled with colds or croup as Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He has used it in his family for several years with the best results and always keeps a bottle of it in the house. After having la grippe he was himself troubled with a severe cough. He used other remedies without benefit and then concluded to try the children's medicine and to his delight it soon effected a permanent cure. 25 and 50c bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

A DAY OF REPUBLICANISM.

NEW JERSEY AND EVERYWHERE ELSE GOES AGAINST DEMOCRACY.

Griggs Carries the State by an Immense Plurality—Codington and Reed Both Get There—The Vote in the City.

Tuesday was a day of Republicanism, not only in Plainfield where an uncommonly large majority was rolled up, but all over the State and country. The Democrats seemed to get out their vote in the city in pretty fair shape, but they were snowed under with the avalanche of adverse ballots.

The estimated comparative vote of this year and the election of three years ago is as follows:

DELIGHTFUL SOCIAL EVENT.

Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Carman Celebrate Their Wedding Anniversary.

The beautiful home of Dr. and Mrs. John H. Carman on Somerset street was the scene Tuesday afternoon of a charming social event.

The occasion was the tenth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Carman. The parlor was exquisitely arranged with a choice profusion of roses, yellow chrysanthemums and smilax. In the dining room the table was prettily decorated. Suspended from the chandelier to the corners of the table were streamers of yellow silk ribbon, while the sides were edged with smilax. Across the table were broad bands of yellow satin ribbon. The whole scene was one of rare beauty.

Mrs. Carman wore her wedding gown of white Ottoman silk, trimmed with Duchess lace, and was a charming hostess. She was assisted in receiving by Mrs. H. A. Garthwait, of Brooklyn, and Mrs. C. R. Thiers, of North Plainfield.

Those who poured chocolate and coffee were Mrs. Frank Rowley, of North Plainfield, and Mrs. Franklin Sackett, of Westfield. They were assisted by Miss Anna Smith, Miss Agnes Smith, Miss Edith Lane, Miss Marion Dryden, of Plainfield; Miss Margaret Purdue, of East Orange; Miss Lillian Hart of Brooklyn; and Merriam Carman, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Carman, who served the dainty refreshments. The reception was from four to seven o'clock, and at eight o'clock the hostess gave a progressive euchre party to those who assisted her. Miss Marion Dryden and Dr. C. R. Thiers won first prizes, while Franklin Sackett and Miss Anna Smith captured second prizes. The playing was excellent and thoroughly enjoyed.

Rang With a False Key.

About 11:30 last night an alarm was sent in from fire-alarm box 132, corner of Manning and Westervelt avenues. Andrew Kenney happened to be passing in that vicinity and saw a strange man attempting to open the box. Just at that moment the alarm sounded and the man started to run. Mr. Kenney called to him to stop, but he kept on running, the latter after him. The former finally stopped and Mr. Kenney had almost caught up to him when he started again. This time he disappeared.

Mr. Kenney went back and found a false key in the box. He was unable to catch the stranger and did not even know who he was. The key was then turned over to Chief Fairchild.

Lincoln Avenue Sounds Nice.

Freeholder L. E. Barkalew is circulating a petition among the residents of Emily street asking the Borough Council to change the name of that thoroughfare to Lincoln avenue, and is meeting with ready signers. The name will probably be changed by the Council.

The Plaster Fell.

A large piece of the ceiling in the law office of Lawyer C. L. Moffett, over Reynolds drug store, fell yesterday afternoon during Mr. Moffett's temporary absence. As it was directly over his head when he was at his desk he considers he had a very providential escape from serious injury.

Henry Wilson, the postmaster at Welshton, Florida, says he cured a case of diarrhoea of long standing in six hours, with one small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. What a pleasant surprise that must have been to the sufferer. Such cures are not unusual with this remedy. In many instances only one or two doses are required to give permanent relief. It can always be depended upon. When reduced with water it is pleasant to take. For sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. R. Armstrong, Manager.

STEPS PRECISE AND PRETTY.

ANOTHER LIST OF THE KIRMESS DANCE PARTICIPANTS.

The Affair Will Be One of Novelty and Picturesqueness, Bringing Forth All the Society Elements of the City.

The rehearsals for the Kirmess are still being held and the dancers are gradually learning the many difficult steps. From the improvement already made, there is no doubt but that the Kirmess will be well worth going to see.

The matinee dances are going to be a very important and pleasing feature of the Kirmess. The following is a list of the participants in the different dances:

Took the County Lumber.

The old lumber which was taken off the Farragut avenue bridge some time ago when the repairs were made by the Union and Somerset county Freeholders, and laid at the side of the road near the structure, has been taken by some unknown parties and evidently appropriated to their own use. Any information as to who the guilty parties are would be received by Freeholder L. E. Barkalew of the borough.

A West End Residence.

Henry Leffce has just started a new $6,000 residence in West End Park and J. E. Emmons is doing the mason work. The house, as planned by Clum & Lancaster, is a very handsome one with octagonal tower and large reception hall in front. The staircase is a handsome one of hard wood. The house is equipped with all the modern improvements. Pierson & Gayle will do the carpenter work.

Trying to Get His Child.

Mr. VanNest, of the borough, who has a child in the Children's Home, placed there because the father was unable to take care of it, has been attempting to get the child away from the home, but his efforts were in vain.

For a pain in the side or chest there is nothing so good as a piece of flannel dampened with Chamberlain's Pain Balm and bound on over the seat of pain. It affords prompt and permanent relief and if used in time will often prevent a cold from resulting in pneumonia. This same treatment is a sure cure for lame back. For sale at Reynolds' pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

ONLY A LITTLE MOLE.

BUT SEE WHAT WONDERFUL THINGS MAY BE TOLD ABOUT IT.

His Underground Home Shows That He Possesses Remarkable Skill as a Builder. He Has Some Characteristics That Are Not So Commendable.

There is a certain little friend of ours who builds his residence in very quiet and retired places, for he does not court attention. Indeed he rather seems to avoid it. He builds a fortress, but he is not a warrior. He drives long tunnels, but he is not a miner. He can calculate numbers and distances, but he is not a mathematician. He never makes a mistake in his angles, though he has not studied geometry. He sometimes digs wells, but he is not a professional well digger.

Nobody calls him the king of beasts, but he can fight with more than the ferocity of the lion or the tenacity of the bulldog.

The little friend to whom I allude is the mole.

Ever since farming came into fashion mankind has been the sworn enemy of molekind and has waged relentless warfare against the little genius of the dark. The traps that have been set, the poison that has been left in those underground highways, the cleverly contrived little houses that have been turned inside out by each speculator, it would take a volume to tell of them! And yet the little animal that runs his long tunnel straight down the potato ridges is well worth studying.

The round little body with its velvety fur, the long, elastic snout and the broad "paddles" armed with strong claws are familiar to every one by reason of the traps and snares above mentioned, but people who think that "blind as a mole" expresses total blindness reckon without their host. Deep under the sheltering fur are two tiny points of eyes, which are somewhat discomposed by the bright glare of day, but which are sharp and bright enough to see all that is to be seen in the dusky shadows underground.

It is much the fashion, too, to compare people to cats as moles and moleking with moles, but this is a manifest injustice. The mole lives underground because that is his horse. He drives his tunnels as men tunnel mines and build railroads into new countries, and he is full of courage, with nothing of the sneak in his disposition.

And such a little builder as he is, with only his nose for anger and his queer little paddles for shovel and spade. There is the mound of earth, for instance, in which he makes his fortress. The tunnels that he bores all over the farm lead back into the fortress, where he intrenches himself in time of danger. If you were underground, the him, and could follow him through those dark passages, you would find yourself all at once in a circular gallery. How did the little home builder ever manage to dig out that circle, I wonder!

And there are five passages from this gallery, leading upward in a slanting direction to another and a smaller gallery near the roof that the little architect has laid this off also with invisible compasses, for it is a circle like the lower gallery. Leading from the gallery are three passages, sloping downward into a large, domed room, and there is his moleship's stronghold, where he sits at ease, as though he were in a moated castle with the drawbridge up.

To reach his retreat you must follow along some tunnel that leads into the lower gallery, then you must turn and you must take one of the five passages to the upper gallery, and then you must take one of the three passages downward into the stronghold, and all that time he would have heard you coming, for his ears are of the sharpest, and before you could think he would be far away.

Who taught him to draw his fairy circles and hollow out his dome shaped roof and smooth those earthy walls without plaster or cement? Who taught him to make the five passages at equal distances apart? Who showed him how to make the three other passages at equal distances between? Who taught him to count at all, this tiny creature, shut out from the sunlight and working his laborious way through unknown regions beneath our feet?

But, after all, this many chambered castle is not the end of his resources. He provides a nursery for his little ones, too, and carpets it with soft, dried grasses for their repose, and he places the nursery at some point where two or three tunnels meet, so that the mother and the babies may have the more chances for escape if hard pressed by the enemy. What a ransom this little builder seems to be, with his plans that look so far into the future!

If you examine the skeleton of the little marvel, you will find that the shoulder blades are out of all proportion to the remainder of its anatomy, so large are they and strong, projecting above the backbone. The bones of the fore legs are short and curved and strong, and there were powerful muscles in the neck and shoulders which give those paddle feet their terrible tearing power.

Even when a mole is detected above ground he must be wary and swift of foot who can capture the little miner, for rapidly does he work those formidable paddles and sink out of sight. If one can get near enough to thrust a spade or a board beneath him, he must be caught, as given a "fair field and no favor" and the mole is sure to have the better of the race.

I am sorry to say that the manners of this underground householder are not up to the standard required by civilization, and that he is not at all versed in table etiquette. When he succeeds in running down a worm, he pounces upon his prey with a savage ferocity astonishing to see and tears it with teeth and claws and bemoans altogether a very disagreeable animal.

And when he meets another mole with whom he does not happen to be on friendly terms I am sorry to say that they fall upon one another with a vindictive fury impossible to describe. What terrible battles they have engaged in, those cruel and bloodthirsty little duelists, who shall say!

But we may congratulate ourselves that the mole is not very large as that. If he were and had strength and ferocity in proportion, he would devastate so much of the earth as a gun, insignificant man would be skulking in caves or housing in tree tops.—Julia Truitt Bishop in Philadelphia Times.

Water For Babies.

An infant should have all the water it will drink, provided the water has been boiled or sterilized. The vessel in it kept in should be subject to a good washing in scalding water every day, filled with the boiled water and set away in a cool place. It should be served to baby in a bright, shining silver spoon. Absolute cleanliness saves many a little life.

WILD FLOWERS OF THE MOUNTAINS.

Their Mysterious Growth In Scant Earth Among the Cliffs.

Those who toil up the slopes of the Blue Ridge are often surprised at the wealth of floral luxuriance to be found in bare and desolate places. The upland pastures and high cliff sides are starred with golden cinquefoil and wild rhododendron, with great, showy blossoms of violet purple, making gorgeous patches among the gray rocks. Red and white asters crowd in narrow crevices and border broad bands of gay ribbons close upon the snow line. Everywhere are brilliancy and beauty.

In these lonely haunts nature paints her richest colors, and the only things needful to give a touch of life and movement are the mountain butterflies. Limitless in hue and species, the gaudy foragers sip their dainty meals from a hundred upturned cups. The blossoms feed the butterflies and give honey to the frugal wild bee, but what feeds the flowers is a mystery, or would be if we did not know that there is sustenance in the rarefied air as well as in the earth. The tiniest fissure in the craggy rock will hold a seed vessel and hide the flower root while the sun and rain and air mature the plant to full perfection. Nor are the children of Flora famished by the dew, for in our high altitude, owing to continuous night winds and peculiar climatic influences, dew never falls—if indeed it "falls" anywhere.

There is another mystery of flowers. No one has yet been able to analyze or demonstrate the essential action of perfume. Gas can be weighed, but not scent. The smallest drop of water that lives in the heart of a rose can be caught by a microscope lens and made to give up the secret of its organization, but what is it that the summer breeze brings us from the wild flowers of the hillside or wafts to us from the choice exotics of the hothouse no man has ever been able to determine. So fine, so subtle, so imponderable, it eludes weights and measures.

Are flowers sensitive, and does it chill them to lie near unto their own kind in no love for them? It is a peculiar fact that some women kill flowers within 20 minutes after they are pinned to the corsage, others will wear them for hours, and they will look as fresh as when first gathered.—Afton (Va.) Letter to Richmond Dispatch.

A HORRIBLE BURIAL CUSTOM.

The Most Repulsive Method Known of Disposing of the Dead.

In Ching-che-Li, one of the most northern districts of Tibet, a burial custom exists which writers on such subjects say is the most repulsive manner of disposing of the dead that is known to be practiced by any civilized or savage tribe in existence.

The dying person is never permitted to pass away naturally, but is dispatched with a "sacred" club kept for that purpose as soon as he or she is announced as being in the throes of recovery. The corpse is immediately stripped and painted—red in the case of males, yellow if a female—and then the victim is squatted on the knees and firmly bound in that position. Next the corpse is carried to a corner of the room, where it is allowed to remain until the first full moon of the new month, odds if that date should be a full four weeks from the day of death. As soon as the new moon is seen in the west the corpse is removed to the outer wild with much ceremony and suspended in a rawhide bag from one of the rafters, or from a "corpse hook" in the ceiling. After being thus suspended for seven days and nights the remains are taken down and sent to the "corpse cutter," a sort of governmental "undertaker." This functionary individual ties the body to a post and removes the decaying flesh, which is fed to the countless swarms of wolves and wild dogs which infest that portion of the orient.

After the flesh has all been carefully removed the bones are macerated in limestone and then ground into a jelly by many mortar specially kept for that purpose. This horrid mass is then mixed with bits of rotten meat, grain, flour and vegetable oil and the dough kneaded into balls. In case the subject has lived past a certain limit—this standard varies among differ ent tribes—the head is not consigned to the bone mortar, but is carefully dried and worked up into sacred buttons and "charm disks." Finger and wrist bones, as well as teeth, also may also be preserved in special cases, in which event they are invariably made into necklaces, armlets and anklets and worn by sorrowing friends or relatives.—St. Louis Republic.

Bachelor Man Whittier.

In the earlier days of the fame of the poet Whittier, when already his name was widely known and honored, but did not yet command the almost universal veneration it had won in his old age, a visitor to Amesbury occasionally had difficulty in finding where he lived. The house was in an out of the way part of the town, and his name—pronounced by the country folk in two syllables instead of three—was not a common one to be remembered.

It is related that one admirer, after much search and many failures, made inquiries of a rural gentleman of venerable appearance, whom he took to be a likely interest in satisfying the querist, but suggested successively the dwellings of several Whittiers, who proved on further description not to be the one.

At length the old fellow remembered with sudden enlightenment that there was one Whittier more, and slapping his thigh he drawled with deliberate triumph:

"Now I've got him, sure. You mean that old bachelor man that lives with an old maid sister down by the mills—he's a Whitcher too."

Tricked the Professor.

Labouchere, while undergoing his little go examination at Cambridge, noticed a number of dons prowling about, in the hope of catching some one cheating. So he wrote out a Greek verse upon a sheet of paper, hid it away under his blotter and ostentatiously referred to it from time to time, with a great parade of looking further information. The trap was not long in taking effect. Argus thunderingly inquired what he had got there. "Oh, nothing—at least, only a piece of paper," stammered the ingenious youth provokingly. But the examiner was inexorable. He insisted on looking upon the blotter and was rewarded by reading, in a large round hand, the words, "You may be very clever, but you can't eat coke."—San Francisco Argonaut.

Proof.

"Do you really think there's any such thing as second sight?"

"Of course. Just ask Stingely for the loan of a quarter, and you may safely bet that he'll look at it twice before giving it to you!"—Detroit Free Press.

TWO PLEASANT PARTIES.

FRIENDS OF MRS. L. B. WOOLSTON ARRANGE A SURPRISE FOR HER.

A. C. LaBoyteaux Entertained His Sunday-School Class in a Hospitable Manner —Those Present at the Other Event.

One of the most delightful social events of the season was enjoyed at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Woolston on Fairview avenue Friday evening. The occasion was the anniversary of Mrs. Woolston's birthday, and Mrs. John Emmons and Mrs John Vetterlein very quietly arranged the event.

The party met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Peter A. Emmons on Jackson avenue and proceeded to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Woolston. Mr. Woolston was made aware of the coming party, but his wife was completely overcome with surprise.

The evening was passed in dancing, music for which was furnished by Miss Hasbrouck.

Mrs. Woolston was again surprised during the evening when she was served with a china chocolate set. She accepted the gift very gracefully.

Excellent refreshments were served during an interval in the dancing, and it was late when the happy party eft for their homes.

Those present included: Mr. and Mrs. John Whitenack, Mr. and Mrs. William Shotwell, Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Emmons, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Buckle, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. The company were entertained by P. Ludwig Conde on the violin. Those present joined heartily in singing several favorite selections.

A feature of the event was the presentation of a handsome arm chair to Mr. LaBoyteaux by the class, which was a complete surprise as was also the presentation of a very pretty stand by Mrs. LaBoyteaux's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph S. Powlison. At the close of the festivities refreshments were served.

Those present were Rev. C. L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph S. Powlison, and the following members of Mr. LaBoyteaux's Sunday-school class: H. J. Martin, J. A. Powlison, J. H. Allen, W. Buld, P. Ludwig Conde, F. Dean and Charles Belknap.

THIRTEEN YEARS OF GROWTH.

Special Anniversary Services at All Saints Church at Fanwood.

The thirteenth milestone in the history of All Saints P. E. church at Fanwood was appropriately celebrated yesterday. The communion service was largely attended in the morning, and in the afternoon a very large congregation listened with much pleasure to an address by Miss Silbi Carter, who has a worldwide reputation as a missionary and church worker among the Indians. Mrs. Harriet P. Taggart, of Sycamore avenue, North Plainfield, was also present and made an interesting address before the Woman's Auxiliary.

Among the other speakers were Mrs. White and Mrs. Clark, of Elizabeth, Mrs. Ryder and Miss Tweedy, of Plainfield, and Miss Mead, of Fanwood. The church was prettily decorated with roses, chrysanthemums and ferns.

The Woman's Auxiliary served tea at the home of George T. Kyte at the conclusion of the afternoon session.

In the evening the vested choir of Holly Cross church attended the service and rendered a musical service. The selections were appropriate to the festival of All Saints, from which the parish is named. Rev. E. M. Rodman and Rev. T. Logan Murphy were present and made addresses appropriate to the occasion.

BOROUGH COUNCIL WORK.

PROSECUTION OF GREEN BROOK POLLUTERS STILL TALKED OF.

The Board of Health Ask the Co-operation of the Other Borough Officials— Sidewalk Talk—Money to Be Borrowed.

The atmospheric condition of the Borough Council chamber was such last Friday that the members of the council were obliged to keep their overcoats on, though it was not believed that Mr. Spencer intended to freeze them out. The only member absent was Councilman Schutt.

After Clerk Arnold read the minutes of the last regular and adjourned meetings, and they were approved, he presented his monthly financial statement which was as follows:

	Balance.	Deficit.
Borough	$1,309.99
Fire Department		$ 695.97
Light	$ 2.30
Roads	$1,314.62
Poor		$ 363.86
	$1,619.31	$ 963.87
Total balance	$1,955.94

He also reported that $74.09 had been collected during the month. The reports were received and filed.

The Borough Board of Health communicated with the council in regard to the condition of Green brook, stating that as a result there were several cases of illness. They asked council to take steps towards prosecuting those who were emptying into the brook such matter as would polute the stream. It was referred to the laws, ordinances and elections committee.

George C. Evans petitioned council to lay a crosswalk from the corner of Mercer and Washington avenues to Chas. Lyman's property on Washington avenue. It was referred to the street committee. W. J. Buttfield in a communication stated that he had laid sidewalk in front of his property on Rockview avenue as he had agreed to and asked that the other property owners be made to comply with the law in this respect. This was also referred to the street committee.

A petition from C. W. McCutchen, George T. Rogers and W. J. Buttfield, asked Council to lay crosswalks at the following places:

Northwest side of Rockview avenue to southeast side of Magnolia avenue; northwest side of Rockview avenue to southeast corner of West End and Rockview avenues and across Maple and Willow avenues to northeast side of West End avenue. It was referred to the street committee, with power, on Mr. Howell's motion.

The usual batch of monthly bills were presented and later ordered paid. Mr. Lounsbury stated that a heater had been placed in the borough lockup and that the overcoats had been ordered. The latter at an expense of $17.55 each. The report was received and filed.

Mr. Smith, of the street committee, reported that the grading on Johnston's drive was about completed, and that two loads more would be needed to do the work as ordered. He reported favorably on the work on Harrison avenue. The report was received and filed.

Mr. Valiant spoke of Mr. Buttfield's request that property owners be compelled to lay their walks, and thought that Mr. Buttfield was worthy of all the support the Council could give him for the improvement he had made by laying walks. Mr. Peck said that the fire department needed money and offered a resolution that a loan of $1,000 be negotiated for and charged to the water account. It was not ordered. Mr. Smith offered a resolution that the crosswalk at Washington and Mercer avenues be laid. The resolution prevailed.

The ordinance regarding auctioneers was then taken from the table, and on Mr. Valiant's motion it was passed to a third reading and then passed as a whole, to take effect Nov. 15th.

After Mr. Howell made a motion that when Council adjourn it be to meet Friday evening, Nov. 8th, Council adjourned.

TAPPED THE TILL.

A Colored Waiter in the Revere House Makes a Small Haul.

George Scott is a colored waiter at the Hotel Revere and his desire for money was too great for him yesterday, which resulted in his taking some which did not belong to him. George tapped the till in the office at an opportune moment and gently lifted about $14 therefrom.

The clerk discovered the loss a little later and notified Sergeant Kiely. He, together, with Policemen Flannagan instituted a search at the young man's home on North avenue.

In the meantime George skipped and left no trace of his whereabouts. The impression seemed to be that he had boarded the Metuchen stage which was due about the time of the theft.

Children's Entertainment.

The children of St. Mary's and St. Joseph's churches are rehearsing for an entertainment to be held in Sangerbund Hall on November 13th and 14th.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher, That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria," and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

A New Brunswick Editor Assaulted.

Hugh Boyd, editor and proprietor of The New Brunswick Home News, was assaulted on Thursday by August Streitwolf, a liquor dealer, of New Brunswick, and one of the three Middlesex county candidates for Assembly on the Democratic ticket. The matter was kept quiet, Mr. Boyd not publishing a line about the assault in his paper, either on Thursday or yesterday, and, outside of a few people the affair was not known until last evening. Streitwolf was prominent on the stage of Allan's Theatre at the Democratic mass-meeting on Thursday evening, but not even his closest political friends knew of the occurrence. The assault was the outcome of an editorial which appeared in the Home News on Wednesday evening.

Not Used to Celebrating.

A horse ridden by John Coles, of Westfield, was frightened last night by the explosion of some fireworks at Newark avenue and Second street, Jersey City, where a political meeting was being held, and ran away. Coles was thrown over the horse's head. The runaway dashed through a crowd of men, women, and children who were looking at the fireworks, and created a panic. Several children were knocked down, and three of them severely injured.

CYCLE ACADEMY OPENED.

IMMENSE CROWD VISIT THE NEW ATTRACTION LAST NIGHT.

Guttman's Band Kept All in Good Humor, While the Trick Riding Astonished Many—The Floor Also Tried.

If the first year of the Columbia Cycle Academy is as successful as the opening night, there need be no doubt, but that it will be a pleasant one for all concerned.

The ponderous folding doors have been removed and a salesroom placed on the left and a smaller door on the right.

A number of wheels were arranged in the rocks in the salesroom, while palms added color to the scene. Bicycles artistically arranged in the show window and around the room. Others were placed in the rear of the long entrance hall.
